Where accused petitioned for writ of habeas corpus after issuance of governor's warrant for accused's extradition to another state, any issue arising out of any alleged wrongful detention preceding the service of the governor's warrant was moot. Crumrine v. Erickson, 186 Colo. 139, 526 P.2d 148 (1974).

Once the governor's warrant has been issued, the question of the validity of the initial arrest becomes moot and may not be raised in habeas corpus proceedings which test the validity of the detention under the governor's warrant. McCoy v. Cronin, 187 Colo. 364, 531 P.2d 379 (1975).

After a valid governor's warrant has been issued and served, any illegalities and irregularities which relate to the initial arrest of the fugitive become moot. Simmons v. Leach, 626 P.2d 164 (Colo. 1981).

Or violations of parole. In habeas corpus proceedings involving extradition the courts cannot consider the question of whether or not the petitioner has violated his parole. Travis v. People, 135 Colo. 141, 308 P.2d 997 (1957).

Or the constitutionality of statute charging crime in demanding state. Accused could not avoid extradition to another state on argument that statute charging him with crime in other state was unconstitutional. Rather, the principle of comity required the accused to test the statute's constitutionality in the courts of that state. Denton v. Cronin, 187 Colo. 247, 529 P.2d 644 (1974).

Or death penalty. Where accused proposes that Colorado ought not give aid and assistance to Oklahoma in enforcing its death penalty which he alleges is unconstitutional, this position presents no issue justiciable in the Colorado courts in an extradition proceeding. Pickinpaugh v. Lamm, 189 Colo. 143, 538 P.2d 113 (1975).

Defendant's claim that his federal constitutional rights were violated in the asylum state does not require habeas corpus relief, nor does it deprive the Colorado courts of jurisdiction over the defendant. Yellen v. Nelson, 680 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1984).

Alleged denial of speedy trial and due process by demanding state. Issues of whether petitioner has been denied his constitutional rights to a speedy trial and due process by demanding state's delay in proceeding with extradition are not justiciable in a habeas corpus action brought in Colorado grounded upon a demand for extradition. Simmons v. Leach, 626 P.2d 164 (Colo. 1981).

When prisoner released for state's failure to comply with constitutional requirements, he remains subject to extradition proceedings. When the prisoner is released because the demanding state or the asylum state has failed to comply with statutory or constitutional requirements, the prisoner remains a fugitive from the demanding state and subject to that state's constitutional right to demand his return. Massey v. Wilson, 199 Colo. 121, 605 P.2d 469 (1980).

Effect of writ on prosecution of underlying charge. Where New Mexico properly granted a writ of habeas corpus on the grounds of technical insufficiency of the extradition documents, Colorado is not estopped from prosecuting the defendant on the merits of the underlying charges. People v. Coyle, 654 P.2d 815 (Colo. 1982).

Courts of asylum state may not consider certain allegations. The courts of the asylum state in a habeas corpus proceeding under this article may not properly consider allegations that the fugitive's life would be endangered by return to the demanding state. The accused, in respect to this matter, must pursue his remedies in the demanding state or with the executive of the asylum state. Lomax v. Cronin, 194 Colo. 523, 575 P.2d 1285 (1978).

Identification testimony at extradition hearing is not tested by same standards applied at trial on the merits. Eathorne v. Nelson, 180 Colo. 288, 505 P.2d 1 (1973).

Sanity a question only if accused unable to assist counsel. The only conceivable situation in which a court in the asylum state might be required to consider sanity would be one in which the petitioner is so incompetent as to be totally unable to assist his counsel in a habeas corpus proceeding in connection with a pending extradition. Luker v. Koch, 176 Colo. 75, 489 P.2d 191 (1971).

"Total inability to assist counsel" test disavowed in favor of "sufficient present ability to consult with attorney" test. Pruett v. Barry, 696 P.2d 789 (Colo. 1985).

Issue is right of demanding state to defendant's return. Constitutional rights to limitations on the use of evidence on the issue of guilt or innocence are not at issue in the rendition proceeding. What is in issue is the constitutional right of the demanding state to have the defendant promptly returned to that state on a showing of probable cause. North v. Koch, 169 Colo. 508, 457 P.2d 915 (1969).

This involves narrow determination of compliance with statute. Habeas corpus, in the instance of interstate extradition, involves a narrow determination of whether there has been compliance with the statutory elements of whether the petitioner: (1) Was present in the demanding state at the time charged in the governor's warrant and the extradition proceedings; (2) was substantially charged with a crime; and (3) is a fugitive from justice. Petition of Harwell, 180 Colo. 144, 503 P.2d 618 (1972).

The scope of inquiry in habeas corpus proceedings is narrowly limited to the technical sufficiency of the papers and: (1) The identification of the accused; (2) whether the accused has been charged with a crime; and (3) whether the accused is a fugitive from justice. Luker v. Koch, 176 Colo. 75, 489 P.2d 191 (1971).

A habeas corpus proceeding has limited scope and is intended to resolve the issue of whether the person in custody is lawfully detained. Eathorne v. Nelson, 180 Colo. 288, 505 P.2d 1 (1973).

Evidence required to overcome presumption of validity. An accused who seeks to invalidate an extradition must overcome the presumption of validity afforded by the governor's warrant by clear and convincing evidence. Lomax v. Cronin, 194 Colo. 523, 575 P.2d 1285 (1978).

The warrant of arrest is prima facie evidence of the recitals therein in a habeas corpus proceeding. Capra v. Miller, 161 Colo. 448, 422 P.2d 636 (1967).

The warrant of the governor as to the status of the accused as a fugitive from justice of the demanding state is prima facie proof of such status which must be overcome to justify a discharge from custody. Krutka v. Bryer, 150 Colo. 293, 372 P.2d 83 (1962).

It places the burden upon the accused to show either that he is not a fugitive from justice or that he was not substantially charged with a crime in the demanding state. Capra v. Miller, 161 Colo. 448, 422 P.2d 636 (1967).

A petitioner who believes that the demanding state's requisition papers do not support the warrant of the governor of the asylum state has the responsibility of going forward with the matter and controvert the warrant by introducing the requisition papers into evidence. Mote v. Koch, 173 Colo. 82, 476 P.2d 255 (1970).

The burden is to show by clear and convincing evidence that defendant was absent at the time of the crime charged from Texas. Dressel v. Bianco, 168 Colo. 517, 452 P.2d 756 (1969).

The courts will not discharge a defendant arrested under a governor's warrant where there is merely contradictory evidence on the subject of presence in or absence from the state. Osborne v. Van Cleave, 173 Colo. 26, 475 P.2d 625 (1970); Eathorne v. Nelson, 180 Colo. 288, 505 P.2d 1 (1973).

The burden is upon the accused to come forward with clear and convincing proof that he was not in the demanding state at the time of the crime charged or that he was not the fugitive from justice named in the extradition papers, in order to overcome the presumption which attaches to the governor's warrant that the accused was in the demanding state at the time of the crime. Luker v. Koch, 176 Colo. 75, 489 P.2d 191 (1971).

Absence from the demanding state is a defense which may be raised and proven by a petitioner in order to defeat extradition. Luker v. Koch, 176 Colo. 75, 489 P.2d 191 (1971).

A habeas corpus petitioner charged as an out-of-state fugitive, not the sheriff-respondent, has the burden of going forward with clear and convincing evidence to prove that he was not in the demanding state at the time of the crime or that he is not the individual named in the extradition papers. Ede v. Bray, 178 Colo. 99, 495 P.2d 1139 (1972).

The burden is on the accused to show by clear and satisfactory evidence that he was not present if he is to overcome the presumption created by the warrant which governor of Colorado issues that the accused is in the demanding state at the time the offense was committed. Eathorne v. Nelson, 180 Colo. 288, 505 P.2d 1 (1973).

Or that he had not left the state. To demonstrate that he was not a fugitive from justice, the defendant would have to show either that he was not present in the state demanding extradition at the time that the crime allegedly was committed, or that he had not left the state. Fox v. People, 161 Colo. 163, 420 P.2d 412 (1966).

The presumption raised by a governor's warrant in an asylum state in a habeas corpus proceeding may be overcome either by a petitioner showing that he was not within the demanding state at the time the crime was committed or that he has not since left the state. Harding v. People, 161 Colo. 571, 423 P.2d 847 (1967); Luker v. Koch, 176 Colo. 75, 489 P.2d 191 (1971).

Burden shifted to petitioner to disprove identity. Where the petitioner's name in the requisition of governor of New Mexico was identical to the name appearing in the Colorado governor's warrant, this created a prima facie showing of identity and shifted the burden to petitioner to disprove the identity. Dilworth v. Leach, 183 Colo. 206, 515 P.2d 1130 (1973).

The introduction of the governor's warrant and the supporting requisition documents created a prima facie showing of identity and shifted the burden to appellant to show that the state did not properly identify him as the person sought by the requisitioning state. Dominguez v. Bray, 188 Colo. 72, 532 P.2d 950 (1975).

Photo competent evidence of identity. Where an authenticated prison photo of the petitioner accompanied the extradition documents from New Mexico, the photo was competent evidence of identity. Dilworth v. Leach, 183 Colo. 206, 515 P.2d 1130 (1973).

State allowed time to cure defective affidavit. In a habeas corpus proceeding a state should be permitted a reasonable time to cure a defective extradition affidavit, but if the affidavit is not cured within 15 days the writ of habeas corpus becomes absolute, and the accused is entitled to release from custody. People v. McFall, 175 Colo. 151, 486 P.2d 6 (1971).

It is within the trial court's discretion to allow a reasonable time for correction of defective extradition documents instead of causing the entire process to be repeated. Williams v. Leach, 194 Colo. 374, 572 P.2d 481 (1977).

Failure of sheriff to make formal return to writ not prejudicial. While the better and approved practice is for a sheriff to make a formal return to a writ of habeas corpus in an extradition matter, where all extradition documents were before the trial court and the validity of the detention was determined without objection that such formal return had not been filed, and the substantial rights of the petitioner were not adversely affected thereby, he cannot be heard to complain for the first time in the supreme court that no formal return was made. Bright v. Foster, 150 Colo. 559, 374 P.2d 865 (1962).

Nor was failure of district attorney to answer interrogatories. Where a district attorney failed to answer all interrogatories served upon him by a habeas corpus petitioner questioning extradition proceedings, which interrogatories involved matters entirely foreign to the rather limited issues involved in an extradition proceeding, any error arising out of such failure on the part of the district attorney could not have been prejudicial. Mote v. Koch, 173 Colo. 82, 476 P.2d 255 (1970).

Denial of petition for writ of habeas corpus held correct. People v. Jackson, 180 Colo. 134, 502 P.2d 1106 (1972); Boyd v. Van Cleave, 180 Colo. 403, 505 P.2d 1305 (1973).

Denial of petition for habeas corpus held error. Moog v. Williams, 195 Colo. 237, 577 P.2d 6 (1978).

Appellate review procedures for habeas corpus petitions contesting transfers of temporary custody under article IV of the Interstate Agreement on Detainers, § 24-60-501, shall be by petition for certiorari and not an appeal of right. Semendinger v. Brittain, 770 P.2d 1270 (Colo. 1989).

Applied in Dorador v. Cronin, 199 Colo. 85, 605 P.2d 53 (1980); Beals v. Wilson, 631 P.2d 1181 (Colo. App. 1981).

16-19-112. Penalty for noncompliance. Any person who delivers to the agent for extradition of the demanding state a person in his custody under the governor's warrant, in willful disobedience to section 16-19-111, is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Source: L. 53: p. 317, § 11. CSA: C. 72, § 56. CRS 53: § 60-1-11. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-11.

16-19-113. Confinement in jail. The officer or person executing the governor's warrant of arrest, or the agent of the demanding state to whom the prisoner has been delivered, when necessary, may confine the prisoner in the jail in any county or city through which he may pass. The keeper of the jail must receive and safely keep the prisoner until the officer or person having charge of him is ready to proceed on his route, such person being chargeable with the expense of keeping. The officer or agent of a demanding state to whom a prisoner has been delivered following extradition proceedings in another state, or to whom a prisoner has been delivered after waiving extradition in such other state, and who is passing through this state with the prisoner for the purpose of immediately returning the prisoner to the demanding state, when necessary, may confine the prisoner in the jail of any county or city through which he may pass. The keeper of the jail must receive and safely keep the prisoner until the officer or agent having charge of him is ready to proceed on his route, such officer or agent, however, being chargeable with the expense of keeping; but the officer or agent shall produce and show to the keeper of the jail satisfactory written evidence of the fact that he is actually transporting such prisoner to the demanding state after a requisition by the executive authority of the demanding state. The prisoner shall not be entitled to demand a new requisition while in this state.

Source: L. 53: p. 317, § 12. CSA: C. 72, § 57. CRS 53: § 60-1-12. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-12.

16-19-114. Arrest prior to requisition. When any person within this state is charged on the oath of any credible person before any judge of this state with the commission of any crime in any other state and, except in cases arising under section 16-19-107, with having fled from justice, or with having been convicted of a crime in that state and having escaped from confinement, or having broken the terms of his bail, probation, or parole, or whenever complaint has been made before any judge in this state setting forth on the affidavit of any credible person in another state that a crime has been committed in the other state and that the accused has been charged in such state with the commission of the crime, and, except in cases arising under section 16-19-107, has fled from justice or with having been convicted of a crime in that state and having escaped from confinement, or having broken the terms of his bail, probation, or parole, and is believed to be in this state, the judge shall issue a warrant directed to any peace officer commanding him to apprehend the person named therein, wherever he may be found in this state, and to bring him before the same or any other judge or court which may be available in or convenient of access to the place where the arrest may be made, to answer the charge or complaint and affidavit, and a certified copy of the sworn charge or complaint and affidavit upon which the warrant is issued shall be attached to the warrant.

Source: L. 53: p. 317, § 13. CSA: C. 72, § 58. CRS 53: § 60-1-13. L. 57: p. 379, § 2. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-13.

ANNOTATION

Extradition proceedings need not be instituted by formal requisition from the executive authority of the demanding state and warrant from the executive authority of the asylum state, but such a requisition and warrant must issue at some point in the proceedings. Capra v. Miller, 161 Colo. 448, 422 P.2d 636 (1967).

And issuance of governor's warrant renders question of prior arrest moot. The governor's warrant for defendant's arrest for extradition having issued and having been filed, the issue as to whether he was lawfully arrested by an unverified information in the first instance is not just academic but moot. Velasquez v. People, 154 Colo. 284, 389 P.2d 849 (1964); McClearn v. Jones, 162 Colo. 354, 426 P.2d 192 (1967); Dilworth v. Leach, 183 Colo. 206, 515 P.2d 1130 (1973).

The indictment or criminal complaint is controlling when determining whether a crime has been charged. Fox v. People, 161 Colo. 163, 420 P.2d 412 (1966).

It is sufficient if the language used fully states an offense denounced by the statutes; even a mistake in stating the number of a statute is immaterial. Fox v. People, 161 Colo. 163, 420 P.2d 412 (1966).

Charge of desertion and nonsupport sufficient to support extradition. Fox v. People, 161 Colo. 163, 420 P.2d 412 (1966).

Complaint and affidavit established probable cause crime of escape committed. Where the complaint and affidavit was based upon the personal information and knowledge of the chief records officer of the Kentucky state reformatory, stating under oath that appellant had been confined in the Kentucky state reformatory under a sentence of 10 years for armed robbery, pursuant to a judgment of conviction from the Jefferson circuit court of Louisville, Kentucky; that affiant had been the chief records officer of the reformatory for 16 years and was in charge of the official custody and control records of the appellant at the reformatory; and that he knew, from these records and his own personal knowledge, that appellant did escape from the reformatory, leaving while on a hospital trip to Louisville, Kentucky, the complaint and affidavit is sufficient to establish probable cause that appellant had committed the substantive crime of escape under the Kentucky statute. Norrod v. Bower, 187 Colo. 421, 532 P.2d 330 (1975).

Right to certified copy of complaint waived. Although a photostatic copy of the complaint and affidavit upon which the warrant issued was served, rather than a certified copy as required by this section, the defendant made no objection to this during the proceedings in the trial court when it could have been corrected. He cannot now raise that issue on appeal and must be deemed to have waived his right to receive a certified copy when he proceeded to trial on the merits. Fox v. People, 161 Colo. 163, 420 P.2d 412 (1966).

Testimony of prosecution witness was admissible. Eathorne v. Nelson, 180 Colo. 288, 505 P.2d 1 (1973).

Applied in Lucero v. Martin, 660 P.2d 902 (Colo. 1983); People v. Schneckloth, 660 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1983); Roy v. Simonet, 696 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1985); Moore v. Simonet, 696 P.2d 823 (Colo. 1985); Evans v. Simonet, 699 P.2d 1337 (Colo. 1985).

16-19-115. Arrest without warrant. The arrest of a person may be lawfully made also by any peace officer or a private person without a warrant upon reasonable information that the accused stands charged in the courts of a state with a crime punishable by death or imprisonment for a term exceeding one year. When so arrested the accused must be taken before a judge with all practicable speed, and complaint must be made against him under oath setting forth the ground for arrest as in section 16-19-114; and thereafter his answer shall be heard as if he had been arrested on a warrant.

Source: L. 53: p. 318, § 14. CSA: C. 72, § 59. CRS 53: § 60-1-14. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-14.

ANNOTATION

Statute as basis for jurisdiction. See Crumrine v. Erickson, 186 Colo. 139, 526 P.2d 148 (1974).

Outstanding arrest warrant from another jurisdiction constituted sufficient probable cause for warrantless arrest even though arrest warrant contained "no extradition" provision. People v. Thompson, 793 P.2d 1173 (Colo. 1990).

Applied in Evans v. Simonet, 699 P.2d 1337 (Colo. 1985).

16-19-116. Commitment to await requisition - bail. If from the examination before the judge it appears that the person held is the person charged with having committed the crime alleged and, except in cases arising under section 16-19-107, that he or she has fled from justice, the judge shall, by a warrant reciting the accusation, commit him or her to the county jail for such a time not exceeding thirty-five days and as specified in the warrant as will enable the arrest of the accused to be made under a warrant of the governor on a requisition of the executive authority of the state having jurisdiction of the offense, unless the accused gives bail as provided in section 16-19-117, or until he or she is legally discharged.

Source: L. 53: p. 318, § 15. CSA: C. 72, § 60. CRS 53: § 60-1-15. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-15. L. 2012: Entire section amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 861, § 98, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending this section applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Requisition and warrant must issue. Although extradition proceedings need not necessarily be instituted by formal requisition from the executive authority of the demanding state and warrant from the executive authority of the asylum state, such a requisition and warrant must issue at some point in the proceedings. Capra v. Miller, 161 Colo. 448, 422 P.2d 636 (1967).

Once valid governor's warrant is issued, illegalities and irregularities relating to detention of fugitive are moot. Whittington v. Bray, 200 Colo. 17, 612 P.2d 72 (1980); Casler v. Nelson, 661 P.2d 1166 (Colo. 1983).

This section, together with § 16-19-118, imposes an outside limit of ninety days during which a person may be committed to the county jail while awaiting the execution of the governor's warrant issued in accordance with the requisition of the executive authority of the demanding state. Garcia v. Cooper, 711 P.2d 1255 (Colo. 1986).

Second extradition proceeding not precluded by expiration of ninety days. Garcia v. Cooper, 711 P.2d 1255 (Colo. 1986).

Extension of time was within court's discretion. Where the governor's warrant was issued on the same day the district attorney applied for and was granted the extension of time, and the defendant had shown no prejudice, the extension of time was clearly within the court's discretion. Norrod v. Bower, 187 Colo. 421, 532 P.2d 330 (1975).

Although appellant was held in jail thirty-nine days before continuance was requested, the court did have the authority to grant a continuance under § 16-19-118 and the extension granted was within the court's discretion, where the appellant was not prejudiced by the detention. Whittington v. Bray, 200 Colo. 17, 612 P.2d 72 (1980); Alliey v. Lamm, 711 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1986).

Res judicata may not be invoked to bar a second extradition proceeding. An initial discharge and dismissal of an extradition proceeding does not constitute an adjudication on the merits that the defendant was not wanted by the state of Florida for violating the terms of his probation. Garcia v. Cooper, 711 P.2d 1255 (Colo. 1986); Morris v. McGoff, 728 P.2d 720 (Colo. 1986).

Applied in Gerard v. Ossola, 649 P.2d 1110 (Colo. 1982); Schumm v. Nelson, 659 P.2d 1389 (Colo. 1983); Dawson v. Nelson, 661 P.2d 683 (Colo. 1983).

16-19-117. Bail pending extradition. (1) Unless the offense with which the prisoner is charged is shown to be an offense punishable by death or life imprisonment under the laws of the state or territory or country in which it is alleged to have been committed, or having been convicted of a crime in the demanding state, the fugitive is alleged to have escaped from custody or confinement in the demanding state or to have violated the terms of his or her bail, probation, parole, or sentence, or the fugitive has executed a written waiver of extradition pursuant to section 16-19-126, the judge of any district court within the state of Colorado may admit any person arrested, held, or detained for extradition or interstate rendition to another state or territory of the United States or to any foreign country, to bail by bond or undertaking, with such sufficient sureties and in such sum as such judge deems proper, conditioned upon the appearance of such person before the court at a time specified in the bond or undertaking and for such person's surrender upon the warrant of the governor of this state for such person's extradition or interstate rendition to another state or territory of the United States or to any foreign country. When any such person has been served with a governor's warrant, such person shall no longer be eligible to be admitted to bail.

(2) Before granting the bond provided for in subsection (1) of this section, the judge of the district court within the state of Colorado to whom such application for bail is made shall cause reasonable notice to be served upon the district attorney of the judicial district within which an application is made and also upon the person or authority holding or detaining the person.

Source: L. 53: p. 319, § 16. CSA: C. 72, § 61. CRS 53: § 60-1-16. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-16. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 1729, § 9, effective July 1. L. 2005: (1) amended, p. 620, § 1, effective May 27.

ANNOTATION

This section exclusively governs questions of bail for defendants awaiting extradition prior to service of a governor's warrant. Fullerton v. County Court, 124 P.3d 866 (Colo. App. 2005).

Bond conditioned upon surrender under governor's warrant. When a person has been arrested prior to requisition for a crime in another state and thereafter is admitted to bail, such bond shall be conditioned upon his appearance at the time specified for his surrender upon the warrant of the governor of this state for his extradition or interstate rendition to another state. McClearn v. Jones, 162 Colo. 354, 426 P.2d 192 (1967).

Prior to service of a governor's warrant, a trial court is authorized to require bond for a defendant pending extradition in any type necessary, including a "cash only" bond, to secure the defendant's appearance. Fullerton v. County Court, 124 P.3d 866 (Colo. App. 2005).

Unnecessary to rearrest upon filing of governor's warrant. The clear meaning and purport of this section is that when a person has been arrested prior to requisition in accordance with § 16-19-114 and is thereafter admitted to bail, the bond being returnable on a specified date, it is unnecessary to rearrest such person upon the issuance and filing in court of the governor's warrant. Appearance on the day specified constitutes surrender upon the governor's warrant. McClearn v. Jones, 162 Colo. 354, 426 P.2d 192 (1967).

No right to bail exists after governor's warrant has been served and pending decision on a habeas corpus petition in the trial court because, where the fugitive is being held for another state, he should be readily available to be turned over to those who arrive to return him. A special obligation to deliver a fugitive is owed to a sister state — an obligation which makes bail inappropriate after the stage when issuance of the governor's warrant is reached. Johnson v. District Court, 199 Colo. 458, 610 P.2d 1064 (1980).

Legislative intent to deny bail after service of warrant. The lack of an absolute right to bail after service of the governor's warrant does not mean that the court has lost its inherent power to grant bail after that time, but simply reflects a determination that the legislative intent to deny bail after service of the governor's warrant is a reasonable and appropriate limitation on that power absent the most extraordinary circumstances. Johnson v. District Court, 199 Colo. 458, 610 P.2d 1064 (1980).

Facts insufficient to permit bail after service of warrant. That, at the time of his arrest, the defendant was employed as a welder, and could return to that work if bail were granted, that the defendant was a union and church member, and that his petition for bail was supported by many members of his church are facts which fall far short of establishing the extraordinary circumstances which must be shown to permit bail to be granted after service of a governor's warrant. Johnson v. District Court, 199 Colo. 458, 610 P.2d 1064 (1980).

The process involved in the arrest in the first instance becomes moot and academic, when replaced and supplanted by the governor's warrant. McClearn v. Jones, 162 Colo. 354, 426 P.2d 192 (1967).

Extension of time was within court's discretion. Where the governor's warrant was issued on the same day the district attorney applied for and was granted the extension of time, and the defendant had shown no prejudice, the extension of time was clearly within the court's discretion. Norrod v. Bower, 187 Colo. 421, 532 P.2d 330 (1975).

16-19-118. Extension of time. If the accused is not arrested under warrant of the governor by the expiration of the time specified in the warrant or bond, a judge of a district court shall either recommit him or her for a further period not to exceed sixty days or again take bail for his or her appearance and surrender, as provided in section 16-19-117, but within a period not to exceed sixty days after the date of the new bond.

Source: L. 53: p. 319, § 17. CSA: C. 72, § 62. CRS 53: § 60-1-17. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-17. L. 2004: Entire section amended, p. 353, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

The only requirement for the continuance authorized by this section is that more time is needed for the issuance and execution of the governor's warrant. Alliey v. Lamm, 711 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1986).

90-day statutory limit begins to run on the date the person first appears in court and is advised of the extradition proceedings. Alliey v. Lamm, 711 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1986).

This section, together with § 16-19-116, imposes an outside limit of 90 days during which a person may be committed to the county jail while awaiting the execution of the governor's warrant issued in accordance with the requisition of the executive authority of the demanding state. Garcia v. Cooper, 711 P.2d 1255 (Colo. 1986).

Although appellant was held in jail thirty-nine days before continuance was requested, the court did have the authority to grant a continuance under § 16-19-118 and the extension granted was within the court's discretion, where the appellant was not prejudiced by the detention. Whittington v. Bray, 200 Colo. 17, 612 P.2d 72 (1980); Alliey v. Lamm, 711 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1986).

Second extradition proceeding not precluded by expiration of ninety days. Garcia v. Cooper, 711 P.2d 1255 (Colo. 1986).

Res judicata may not be invoked to bar a second extradition proceeding. An initial discharge and dismissal of an extradition proceeding does not constitute an adjudication on the merits that the defendant was not wanted by the state of Florida for violating the terms of his probation. Garcia v. Cooper, 711 P.2d 1255 (Colo. 1986).

Procedure of continuing bond without recommitment satisfied section. When defendant was already on bond, it would be a useless thing to recommit the defendant, then require a new bond, and then release him under the new bond for the extended or continued period of time. Defendant has shown no prejudice by the procedure followed in extending the time for hearing of the extradition proceeding, and continuing bond and permitting him to remain at large, which substantially complied with this section.

Dressel v. Bianco, 168 Colo. 517, 452 P.2d 756 (1969).

Applied in Gerard v. Ossola, 649 P.2d 1110 (Colo. 1982); Schumm v. Nelson, 659 P.2d 1389 (Colo. 1983).

16-19-119. Forfeiture of bail. If the person so held is admitted to bail as provided for in section 16-19-117 and fails to appear and surrender himself according to the conditions of his bond, the judge of the district court, by proper order, shall declare the bond forfeited and order his immediate arrest without warrant if he is within this state. Recovery may be had on such bond in the name of the people of the state of Colorado as in the case of other bonds or undertakings given by a defendant in criminal proceedings.

Source: L. 53: p. 319, § 18. CSA: C. 72, § 63. CRS 53: § 60-1-18. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-18.

16-19-119.5. Custody pending arrival of agent of the demanding state. Upon ordering the delivery of a fugitive forthwith to the agent of a demanding state, a judge shall allow the agent of the demanding state a period of not less than fifteen days and not more than thirty days from the date of the order within which to complete transportation arrangements, travel to this state, and appear to take custody of the fugitive. During this period, pending the arrival of the agent of the demanding state, the fugitive shall remain in custody in this state without bail and shall not be discharged.

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 340, § 1, effective July 1.

16-19-120. Persons under prosecution when demanded. If a criminal prosecution has been instituted against a person under the laws of this state and is still pending, the governor, in his discretion, subject to such criminal prosecution, either may surrender him on demand of the executive authority of another state or hold him until he has been tried and discharged or convicted and punished in this state.

Source: L. 53: p. 319, § 19. CSA: C. 72, § 64. CRS 53: § 60-1-19. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-19.

ANNOTATION

Applied in People v. Wimer, 43 Colo. App. 237, 604 P.2d 1183 (1979).

16-19-121. When guilt inquired into. The guilt or innocence of the accused as to the crime of which he is charged may not be inquired into by the governor or in any proceedings after the demand for extradition accompanied by a charge of crime in legal form has been presented to the governor, except as it may be involved in identifying the person held as the person charged with the crime.

Source: L. 53: p. 320, § 20. CSA: C. 72, § 65. CRS 53: § 60-1-20. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-20.

ANNOTATION

The guilt or innocence of the alleged fugitive may not be considered in extradition matters. Self v. People, 133 Colo. 524, 297 P.2d 887 (1956).

Guilt or innocence of the crime charged has no bearing on the issue of extradition but will be determined on the trial of the case once he is returned to the demanding state. Fox v. People, 161 Colo. 163, 420 P.2d 412 (1966); Osborne v. Van Cleave, 173 Colo. 26, 475 P.2d 625 (1970).

When the court in Kansas forfeited the petitioner's bond, he became a fugitive within the meaning of the extradition laws. Whether it was wrongfully revoked is an issue between the petitioner and the state of Kansas, over which the courts of Colorado have no jurisdiction. Davis v. People, 172 Colo. 486, 474 P.2d 206 (1970).

Extradition is but one step in securing the presence of the defendant in the court in which he may be tried, and in no manner determines the question of guilt or innocence. Eathorne v. Nelson, 180 Colo. 288, 505 P.2d 1 (1973).

Colorado courts cannot determine the accused's guilt or innocence under the laws of the demanding state in resolving the extradition issue. Rush v. Baker, 188 Colo. 136, 533 P.2d 36 (1975).

Neither are constitutional rights justiciable. Petitioner's allegations concerning a violation of his constitutional rights present no issue justiciable in the Colorado courts. His remedy for violation of such rights in Mississippi lies in the post conviction procedures provided by Mississippi in its state courts, and in the appropriate federal courts. Holmes v. People, 169 Colo. 371, 456 P.2d 731 (1969).

And criminal procedure is not applicable. Being a summary proceeding of a civil nature, not involving the guilt or innocence of the accused, there is no compelling reason to apply the strict rules of criminal procedure in determining factual issues that may arise at extradition hearings on a petition of habeas corpus. North v. Koch, 169 Colo. 508, 457 P.2d 915 (1969).

Statute as basis for jurisdiction. See Crumrine v. Erickson, 186 Colo. 139, 526 P.2d 148 (1974).

Applied in Wilkerson v. Vogt, 167 Colo. 109, 445 P.2d 715 (1968).

16-19-122. Governor may recall warrant. The governor may recall his warrant of arrest or may issue another warrant whenever he deems proper.

Source: L. 53: p. 320, § 21. CSA: C. 72, § 66. CRS 53: § 60-1-21. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-21.

ANNOTATION

Courts of asylum state may not consider certain allegations. The courts of the asylum state in a habeas corpus proceeding under this article may not properly consider allegations that the fugitive's life would be endangered by return to the demanding state. The accused, in respect to this matter, must pursue his remedies in the demanding state or with the executive of the asylum state. Lomax v. Cronin, 194 Colo. 523, 575 P.2d 1285 (1978).

Demanding state may reinstate extradition demand after having withdrawn it. Massey v. Wilson, 199 Colo. 121, 605 P.2d 469 (1980).

Jurisdiction retained where warrant recalled because complaint amended. Where the governor of the asylum state recalled his warrant of arrest and issued another warrant because the complaints against the defendants was amended, Colorado court clearly retained jurisdiction over the defendants during this procedure. Allen v. Leach, 626 P.2d 1141 (Colo. 1981).

Governor may reactivate warrant. When considered in conjunction with § 16-19-120, the authority granted to the governor by this section, includes the authority to temporarily withhold and conditionally reactivate a previously issued warrant. Jacobson v. Sullivan, 703 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1985).

16-19-123. Fugitives from this state. When the governor of this state demands a person charged with crime or with escaping from confinement or breaking the terms of his bail, probation, or parole in this state from the executive authority of any other state or from the chief justice or an associate justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia authorized to receive such demand under the laws of the United States, he shall issue a warrant under the seal of this state, to some agent, commanding him to receive the person so charged if delivered to him and convey him to the proper officer of the county in this state in which the offense was committed.

Source: L. 53: p. 320, § 22. CSA: C. 72, § 67. CRS 53: § 60-1-22. L. 57: p. 380, § 3. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-22.

ANNOTATION

Duty as agent distinguished from official status. Although the agent selected by the governor to receive an alleged fugitive from justice from another state may be a sheriff or his deputy, his duties, as such agent, are wholly apart from, and have nothing to do with, his official status.

Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Hershey, 93 Colo. 215, 25 P.2d 178 (1933).

Interstate agreement on detainers is inapplicable to a defendant whose custody is sought by traditional extradition procedures. People v. Quackenbush, 687 P.2d 448 (Colo. 1984).

16-19-124. Application for requisition. (1) When the return to this state of a person charged with crime in this state is required, the district attorney shall present to the governor his written application for a requisition for the return of the person charged, in which application shall be stated the name of the person so charged, the crime charged against him, the approximate time, place, and circumstances of its commission, and the state in which he is believed to be, including the location of the accused therein at the time the application is made, and certifying that, in the opinion of the said district attorney, the ends of justice require the arrest and return of the accused to this state for trial and that the proceeding is not instituted to enforce a private claim.

(2) When the return to this state is required of a person who has been convicted of a crime in this state and has escaped from confinement or broken the terms of his bail, probation, or parole, the prosecuting attorney of the county in which the offense was committed, the state board of parole, or the superintendent of the institution or sheriff of the county from which escape was made shall present to the governor a written application for a requisition for the return of such person, in which application shall be stated the name of the person, the crime of which he was convicted, the circumstances of his escape from confinement or of the breach of the terms of his bail, probation, or parole, and the state in which he is believed to be, including the location of the person therein at the time application is made.

(3) The application shall be verified by affidavit, shall be executed in duplicate, and shall be accompanied by two certified copies of the indictment returned, or information and affidavit filed, or of the complaint made to the judge, stating the offense with which the accused is charged, or of the judgment of conviction or of the sentence. The prosecuting officer, state board of parole, superintendent, or sheriff may also attach such further affidavits and other documents in duplicate as he deems proper to be submitted with such application. One copy of the application, with the action of the governor indicated by endorsement thereon, and one of the certified copies of the indictment, complaint, information, and affidavits or of the judgment of conviction or of the sentence shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state to remain of record in that office. The other copies of all papers shall be forwarded with the governor's requisition.

Source: L. 53: p. 320, § 23. CSA: C. 72, § 68. CRS 53: § 60-1-23. L. 57: p. 380, § 4. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-23. L. 76: (2) and (3) amended, p. 533, § 13, effective April 9.

16-19-125. Immunity from civil process. A person brought into this state by, or after waiver of, extradition based on a criminal charge shall not be subject to service of personal process in civil actions arising out of the same facts as the criminal proceeding to answer which he is being or has been returned, until he has been convicted in the criminal proceeding, or, if acquitted, until he has had reasonable opportunity to return to the state from which he was extradited.

Source: L. 53: p. 321, § 24. CSA: C. 72, § 69. CRS 53: § 60-1-24. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-24.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Poss v. District Court, 158 Colo. 474, 408 P.2d 69 (1965).

16-19-126. Written waiver of extradition. (1) Any person arrested in this state charged with having committed any crime in another state or alleged to have escaped from confinement or broken the terms of his or her bail, probation, or parole may waive the issuance and service of the warrant provided for in sections 16-19-108 and 16-19-109 and all other procedure incidental to extradition proceedings by executing or subscribing in the presence of a judge of any court of record within this state a writing which states that he or she consents to return to the demanding state and acknowledging that he or she shall not be admitted to bail; but, before the waiver is executed or subscribed by such person, it is the duty of the judge to inform such person of his or her rights to the issuance and service of a warrant of extradition and to obtain a writ of habeas corpus as provided for in section 16-19-111.

(2) If and when a consent has been duly executed, it shall forthwith be forwarded to the office of the governor of this state and filed therein. The judge shall direct the officer having the person in custody to deliver such person forthwith to the duly accredited agent or agents of the demanding state and shall deliver or cause to be delivered to that agent or those agents a copy of the consent. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to limit the rights of the accused person to return voluntarily and without formality to the demanding state, nor shall this waiver procedure be deemed to be an exclusive procedure or to limit the powers, rights, or duties of the officers of the demanding state or of this state.

(3) A fugitive shall not be permitted to withdraw a waiver of extradition unless the fugitive makes a showing of good cause for the withdrawal of the waiver of extradition. The fugitive shall provide the court, governor, and district attorney with the request to withdraw the waiver of extradition stating the reasons for withdrawing the waiver. If the court grants the withdrawal, it shall provide the governor with an order permitting the withdrawal of the waiver of extradition. A judge shall commit a fugitive who is permitted to withdraw his or her waiver of extradition to the county jail without bond for a specified period of time, of not less than thirty days and not more than ninety days, as will enable the arrest of the accused to be made under warrant of the governor or on a requisition of the executive authority of the state having jurisdiction of the offense.

Source: L. 53: p. 321, § 24-A. CSA: C. 72, § 70. CRS 53: § 60-1-25. L. 57: p. 381, § 5. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-25. L. 2005: (1) amended and (3) added, p. 620, § 2, effective May 27.

ANNOTATION

State waives right to extradition only upon clear manifestation of intent. A state waives its right to extradition of an accused only when there has been a clear manifestation of an intent to do so. When the charge is first-degree murder, the requirement for a clear manifestation means that the intent to waive the right must be expressly stated. Massey v. Wilson, 199 Colo. 121, 605 P.2d 469 (1980).

A prisoner must personally execute a waiver of extradition before a formal request for final disposition to Interstate Agreement on Detainer Act can be triggered. Gardner v. Gambatz, 719 P.2d 329 (Colo. App. 1985).

Applied in People v. Wimer, 43 Colo. App. 237, 604 P.2d 1183 (1979).

16-19-126.5. Prior waiver of extradition. (1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a law enforcement agency in the state of Colorado holding a person who is alleged to have broken the terms of such person's probation, parole, bail, or any other conditional release in the demanding state shall immediately deliver the person to the duly authorized agent of the demanding state without the requirement of a demand by the executive authority of the demanding state, and without the requirement of a governor's warrant issued by the governor of the state of Colorado, if such person has signed a prior waiver of extradition as a condition of such person's current probation, parole, bail, or other conditional release in the demanding state.

(2) The law enforcement agency shall immediately deliver any person pursuant to subsection (1) of this section upon the receipt of the following documents, which shall be accepted as conclusive proof of the contents of such documents and of the validity of the waiver set forth therein:

(a) A certified copy of the prior waiver of extradition signed by the person being held by the law enforcement agency, or an electronically or electromagnetically transmitted facsimile thereof;

(b) A certified copy of an order or warrant from the demanding state directing the return of the person for violating the conditions of such person's probation, parole, bail, or other conditional release, or an electronically or electromagnetically transmitted facsimile thereof; and

(c) A photograph, fingerprints, or other evidence which identifies the person held by the law enforcement agency as the person who signed the waiver of extradition and who is named in the order or warrant, or an electronically or electromagnetically transmitted facsimile thereof.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to limit the right, power, or privilege of the state of Colorado to hold, try, and punish any person demanded by another state for any crime committed in the state of Colorado before delivering such person to the demanding state.

Source: L. 93: Entire section added, p. 1729, § 10, effective July 1.

16-19-127. Nonwaiver by this state. Nothing contained in this article shall be deemed to constitute a waiver by this state of its right, power, or privilege to try such demanded person for any crime committed within this state, or of its right, power, or privilege to regain custody of such person by extradition proceedings or otherwise for the purpose of trial, sentence, or punishment for any crime committed within this state, nor shall any proceedings had under this article which result in, or fail to result in, extradition be deemed a waiver by this state of any of its rights, privileges, or jurisdiction in any way whatsoever.

Source: L. 53: p. 322, § 24-B. CSA: C. 72, § 71. CRS 53: § 60-1-26. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-26.

ANNOTATION

A waiver of jurisdiction should be found only in circumstances where the waiver is manifestly intended. Gottfried v. Cronin, 192 Colo. 25, 555 P.2d 969 (1976).

No transfer of prisoners between states pursuant to statute shall be regarded as waiver of its jurisdiction. Gottfried v. Cronin, 192 Colo. 25, 555 P.2d 969 (1976).

Applied in People v. Wimer, 43 Colo. App. 237, 604 P.2d 1183 (1979).

16-19-128. Prosecution of other charges. After a person has been brought back to this state by, or after waiver of, extradition proceedings, he may be tried in this state for other crimes which he may be charged with committing here as well as that specified in the requisition for his extradition.

Source: L. 53: p. 322, § 25. CSA: C. 72, § 72. CRS 53: § 60-1-27. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-27.

16-19-129. Security for costs - default - fees. (1) In all cases where complaint is made against any fugitive from justice, the judge or justice in his discretion may require from complainant good and sufficient security for the payment of all costs which may accrue from the arrest and detention of such fugitive, which security shall be by bond to the clerk of the district court, conditioned for the payment of costs, which bond, together with a statement of the costs which have accrued on the examination, shall be returned to the office of the clerk of the district court. Upon the determination of the proceedings against the fugitive within that county, the clerk shall issue a fee bill as in other cases, to be served on the persons named in the bond, or any of them, which fee bill shall be served and returned by the sheriff, for which he shall be allowed the same fees as are given him for serving notices. If the fees are not paid on or before the first day of the next district court to be held in and for that county, nor any cause then shown why they should not be paid, the clerk may issue an execution for the same against those parties on whom the fee bill has been served and when the fees are collected shall pay over the same to the persons respectively entitled thereto. The clerk shall be entitled to one dollar for his trouble in each case, besides the usual taxed fees which are allowed in other cases for like services. Nothing contained in this section shall prevent the clerk from instituting suits on said bonds in the ordinary mode of judicial proceedings, if he deems it proper. The costs which may accrue from the arrest and detention of such fugitive, as described in this section, shall include any reasonable and necessary costs incurred by the district attorney which are directly the result of the prosecution of such fugitive from justice. When such costs are recovered by the clerk, such costs shall be remitted to the office of the district attorney which incurred such costs.

(2) For purposes of this section, reasonable costs incurred by the district attorney include but are not limited to those in section 18-1.3-701, C.R.S., as well as attorney fees and support staff costs.

Source: L. 53: p. 323, § 30. CSA: C. 72, § 75. CRS 53: § 60-2-1. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-28. L. 91: Entire section amended, p. 430, § 8, effective May 24. L. 2002: (2) amended, p. 1499, § 155, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (2), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

16-19-130. Rewards - how audited - paid. When the governor is satisfied that the crime of murder or arson or kidnapping has been committed within the state, and that the person charged therewith has not been arrested or has escaped therefrom, he may in his discretion offer a reward not exceeding one thousand dollars for the arrest and delivery to the proper authorities of the person so charged, which reward, upon the certificate of the governor that the same has been earned, shall be audited and paid by the state out of any funds appropriated for that purpose.

Source: L. 53: p. 323, § 31. CSA: C. 72, § 76. CRS 53: § 60-2-2. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-29.

16-19-131. Escape - reward. If any person charged with or convicted of a felony breaks prison or escapes or flees from justice or absconds and secretes himself, it shall be lawful for the governor, if he judges it necessary, to offer any reward not exceeding two hundred dollars for apprehending and delivering such person into custody of the sheriff or other officer as he may direct. Upon the person or persons so apprehending and delivering any such person and producing the sheriff's or justice's receipt for the body to the governor, it shall be lawful for the governor to certify the amount of the claim to the controller, who shall issue his warrant on the treasury for the same.

Source: L. 53: p. 323, § 32. CSA: C. 72, § 77. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-30. L. 72: p. 560, § 23.

Cross references: For definitions of "escape", see § 18-8-208.

16-19-132. Interpretation. The provisions of this article shall be so interpreted and construed as to effectuate its general purposes to make uniform the laws of those states which enact it.

Source: L. 53: p. 322, § 26. CSA: C. 72, § 73. CRS 53: § 60-1-28. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-31.

ANNOTATION

Statutes strictly construed. Statutes providing for the arrest and extradition of fugitives, being in derogation of constitutional guaranties of immunity from arrest, must be strictly construed. Matthews v. People, 136 Colo. 102, 314 P.2d 906 (1957).

Under Colorado law the extradition statutes must be strictly construed as they are in derogation of the common law. Davis v. People, 172 Colo. 486, 474 P.2d 206 (1970).

But not interpreted to allow asylum to offenders. Extradition provisions should not be so narrowly interpreted as to enable offenders against the laws of a state to find a permanent asylum in the territory of another state. Travis v. People, 135 Colo. 141, 308 P.2d 997 (1957); Tinsley v. Woods, 135 Colo. 590, 313 P.2d 1006 (1957); Capra v. Ballarby, 158 Colo. 91, 405 P.2d 205 (1965); Dressel v. Bianco, 168 Colo. 517, 452 P.2d 756 (1969); Boyd v. Van Cleave, 180 Colo. 403, 505 P.2d 1305 (1973).

16-19-133. Concealment of fugitives - penalty. (Repealed)

Source: L. 63: p. 497, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 60-1-34. L. 77: (2) amended, p. 878, § 44, effective July 1, 1979. L. 85: (2) amended, p. 709, § 1, effective March 30. L. 86: Entire section repealed, p. 772, § 15, effective July 1.

Editor's note: The effective date for amendments made to this section by chapter 216, L. 77, was changed from July 1, 1978, to April 1, 1979, by chapter 1, First Extraordinary Session, L. 78, and was subsequently changed to July 1, 1979, by chapter 157, § 23, L. 79. See People v. McKenna, 199 Colo. 452, 611 P.2d 574 (1980).

16-19-134. Securing the attendance of a defendant who is outside the United States. (1) When a criminal action for an offense committed in this state is pending in a criminal court of this state against a defendant who is in a foreign country with which the United States has an extradition treaty, and when the accusatory instrument charges an offense that is declared in the treaty to be an extraditable offense, and when the district attorney of the judicial district in which the offense was allegedly committed desires the international extradition of the defendant, the district attorney shall apply to the governor, requesting the governor to apply to the president of the United States, to institute extradition proceedings for the return of the defendant to this country and state for the purpose of prosecution of the action. The district attorney's application shall comply with the rules, regulations, and guidelines established by the governor for such applications and shall be accompanied by all of the accusatory instruments, affidavits, and other documents required by the governor's rules, regulations, and guidelines.

(2) Upon receipt of the district attorney's application, the governor, if satisfied that the defendant is in the foreign country in question, that the offense charged is an extraditable offense pursuant to the treaty in question, and that there are no factors or impediments which in law may preclude such an extradition, may in his or her discretion submit an application, addressed to the secretary of state of the United States, requesting that the president of the United States institute extradition proceedings for the return of the defendant from the foreign country. The governor's application shall comply with the rules, regulations, and guidelines established by the secretary of state of the United States for such applications and shall be accompanied by all of the accusatory instruments, affidavits, and other documents required by such rules, regulations, and guidelines.

(3) Nothing in this section shall preclude prosecution in another country of a fugitive from justice charged with committing a crime in Colorado, if the other country offers domestic prosecution of such fugitives as an alternative to extradition. This includes, but is not limited to, prosecution in Mexico pursuant to the Mexican federal penal code.

(4) The provisions of this section also apply equally to extradition or attempted extradition of a person who is a fugitive following the entry of a judgment of conviction against him or her in a criminal court of this state.

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 353, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2006: (1) amended, p. 342, § 7, effective July 1.

ARTICLE 20

Extradition of Persons of Unsound Mind

16-20-101.	Short title.	16-20-104.	Executive authority - proce-
16-20-102.	Definitions.		dure.
16-20-103.	Persons subject to extradition.	16-20-105.	Limitation. (Repealed)

16-20-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the “Colorado Extradition of Persons of Unsound Mind Act”.

Source: L. 75: Entire article added, p. 639, § 2, effective June 29.

16-20-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

- (1) “Executive authority” means the executive authority of any state; and, when used in connection with a request to return any person, pursuant to the provisions of this article, to or from the District of Columbia, “executive authority” includes a justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia and any other authority.
- (2) “Flight” or “fled” means any voluntary or involuntary departure from the jurisdiction of the court where proceedings for determination as a person of unsound mind have been instituted and are still pending with the effect of avoiding, impeding, or delaying the action of the court in which such proceedings have been instituted or are pending or any such departure from the state where the person demanded then was, if he was then under detention by law as a person of unsound mind and subject to detention.
- (3) “Person of unsound mind” includes the terms “insane person”, “mentally ill person”, “person with a mental illness”, “mentally incompetent person”, and “lunatic”.

Source: L. 75: Entire article added, p. 639, § 2, effective June 29. L. 2006: (3) amended, p. 1397, § 43, effective August 7.

- 16-20-103. Persons subject to extradition. (1) A person alleged to be of unsound mind found in this state who has fled from another state shall be extradited from this state on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled if, at the time of his flight:
- (a) He was under detention by law in a hospital, asylum, or other institution for the insane as a person of unsound mind;
 - (b) He had been determined by a legal proceeding to be of unsound mind prior to his flight, the finding being unreversed and in full force and effect and the control of his person having been acquired by a court of competent jurisdiction of the state from which he fled; or
 - (c) He was subject to detention in such state, being then his legal domicile (personal process having been made), based on legal proceedings to have him declared of unsound mind.

Source: L. 75: Entire article added, p. 639, § 2, effective June 29.

16-20-104. Executive authority - procedure. (1) When the executive authority of any state demands of the executive authority of this state any fugitive pursuant to this article and produces a copy of commitment, decree, or other process and proceedings certified as authentic by the executive authority of the state from which the person so charged has fled, with an affidavit made before a proper officer showing the person to be such fugitive, it is the duty of the executive authority of this state to cause immediate notice of the apprehension to be given to the executive authority making such demand or to the agent of such executive authority appointed to receive the fugitive and to cause the fugitive to be delivered to such agent when he appears. If no such agent appears within thirty days from the time of the apprehension, the fugitive may be discharged. Any agent so appointed who receives the fugitive into his custody shall transmit him to the state from which he has fled.

(2) All costs and expenses incurred in apprehending, securing, maintaining, and transmitting such fugitive to the state making such demand shall be paid by such state.

(3) The executive authority of this state has the power, on the application of any person interested, to demand the return of any fugitive from this state in accordance with this article.

Source: L. 75: Entire article added, p. 639, § 2, effective June 29.

16-20-105. Limitation. (Repealed)

Source: L. 75: Entire article added, p. 640, § 2, effective June 29. L. 2004: Entire section repealed, p. 353, § 2, effective July 1.

OFFENDERS - REGISTRATION

ARTICLE 20.5

Integrated Criminal Justice Information System

16-20.5-101.	Short title.		nal justice information sys-
16-20.5-101.5.	Legislative declaration.		tem. (Repealed)
16-20.5-102.	Definitions.	16-20.5-106.	Approval - funding. (Re-
16-20.5-103.	Colorado integrated criminal justice information system program - executive board.	16-20.5-107.	pealed)
16-20.5-104.	Repeal of article. (Repealed)	16-20.5-108.	Future modifications and pur-
16-20.5-105.	Task force plan for imple-		chases.
	mentation - integrated crimi-		Local criminal justice agencies pilot program. (Repealed)

16-20.5-101. Short title. This article and article 21 of this title shall be known and may be cited as the “Criminal Justice Information System Act”.

Source: L. 95: Entire article added, p. 598, § 1, effective May 22.

16-20.5-101.5. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and determines that, since 1974, there have been proposals for an automated criminal justice information system that shares and tracks data concerning offenders among the various criminal justice agencies. Because each of the criminal justice agencies in the state has developed independent information systems to address each agency’s own management and planning needs, the status of criminal justice information in the state has been fragmented.

(2) The general assembly hereby declares that this article is enacted for the purpose of developing, operating, supporting, maintaining, and enhancing, in a cost-effective manner, a seamless, integrated criminal justice information system that maximizes standardization of data and communications technology among law enforcement agencies, district attorneys, the courts, and state-funded corrections for adult and youth offenders and other agencies as approved by the general assembly or by the executive board pursuant to this article. Such a system will improve:

(a) Public safety by making more timely, accurate, and complete information concerning offenders available statewide to all criminal justice agencies and to individual decision-makers in the criminal justice system, including but not limited to police officers, prosecutors, judges, probation officers, and corrections officers;

(b) Decision-making by increasing the availability of statistical measures for evaluating public policy;

(c) Productivity of existing staff by continually working toward eliminating redundant data collection and input efforts among the agencies and by reducing or eliminating paper-based processing;

(d) Access to timely, accurate, and complete information by both staff from all criminal justice agencies and the public when permitted by article 72 of title 24, C.R.S.

(3) Because information about offenders collected by local law enforcement agencies may be the most current, the general assembly directs criminal justice agencies, where practical, to cooperate with and to encourage local law enforcement agencies to participate in the Colorado integrated criminal justice information system program developed under this article.

(4) The general assembly hereby finds that the Colorado integrated criminal justice information system program has been successfully implemented and that the sharing of criminal justice information is being enhanced as a result. The general assembly further finds that there is a need to provide ongoing maintenance, support, and leadership for the continued operation and enhancement of the Colorado integrated criminal justice information system program.

(5) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the operation of the integrated criminal justice information system established by this article is critical to the accurate, complete, and timely performance of criminal background checks and to the effective communications between and among law enforcement, the state judicial department, and executive agencies and political subdivisions of the state. The general assembly further finds and declares that it is in the best interests of the citizens of the state and for the enhancement of public safety that the collaborative effort surrounding the integrated criminal justice information system be maintained, supported, and enhanced.

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 1030, § 1, effective May 23. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 941, § 1, effective May 27. L. 2001: (5) added, p. 613, § 2, effective May 30. L. 2005: IP(2), (2)(a), (2)(c), (4), and (5) amended, p. 84, § 1, effective March 25.

16-20.5-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Action” means the district attorneys’ case management system.

(2) “CCIC” means the Colorado crime information center.

(3) “Chief information officer” means the chief information officer who reports to the executive board and who is selected pursuant to section 16-20.5-103 and who is responsible for coordinating the implementation of a strategic plan for and operating, supporting, maintaining, and enhancing the integrated criminal justice information system.

(4) “CICJIS” means the automated system of the Colorado integrated criminal justice information system program that integrates agency systems.

(5) Repealed.

(6) “Criminal justice agency” means any of the following: The department of public safety, department of corrections, department of human services, judicial department, Colorado district attorneys council, and other approved agencies.

(7) “DCIS” means the department of corrections information system.

(8) “ICON” or “eclipse” means the integrated Colorado online network that is the judicial department’s case management system.

(9) “Integrated criminal justice information system” or “system” means an automated information system capable of tracking the complete life cycle of a criminal case throughout its various stages involving different criminal justice agencies through potentially separate and individual systems and without unnecessary duplication of data collection, data storage, or data entry.

(10) “TRAILS” means the case management system of the division of youth corrections of the department of human services.

Source: L. 95: Entire article added, p. 598, § 1, effective May 22. L. 96: (2) amended and (2.3) and (2.5) added, p. 1031, § 2, effective May 23. L. 98: (2) amended, p. 942, § 2, effective May 27. L. 99: (2.3) amended, p. 872, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2005: Entire section amended, p. 85, § 2, effective March 25. L. 2007: (5) repealed, p. 918, § 22, effective May 17.

16-20.5-103. Colorado integrated criminal justice information system program - executive board. (1) There is hereby established the Colorado integrated criminal justice information system program, referred to in this article as the “program”. The program shall be a joint effort of the criminal justice agencies and other approved agencies. The program shall be implemented, maintained, supported, and enhanced by the criminal justice information program executive board, which is hereby created and referred to in this article as the “executive board”. Membership of the executive board shall be comprised initially of the executive directors of the department of public safety, department of corrections, department of human services, and Colorado district attorneys council and the state court administrator. The executive board shall unanimously designate a chief information officer. Upon unanimous agreement, the executive board may approve the addition of either voting or nonvoting members.

(2) The executive board shall be responsible and accountable for the program. The program shall include mechanisms to enable the criminal justice agencies to share data stored in each agency’s information system. Initially, the program shall maximize the use of existing data bases and platforms through the use of a virtual data base created by a network linking existing data bases and platforms among the various departments. The program shall also develop plans for new interoperable system platforms when the existing platforms become obsolete.

Source: L. 95: Entire article added, p. 599, § 1, effective May 22. L. 96: Entire section R&RE, p. 1031, § 3, effective May 23. L. 2005: Entire section amended, p. 86, § 3, effective March 25.

16-20.5-104. Repeal of article. (Repealed)

Source: L. 95: Entire article added, p. 600, § 1, effective May 22. L. 96: Entire section repealed, p. 1032, § 4, effective May 23.

16-20.5-105. Task force plan for implementation - integrated criminal justice information system. (Repealed)

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 1032, § 5, effective May 23. L. 98: Entire section repealed, p. 942, § 3, effective May 27.

16-20.5-106. Approval - funding. (Repealed)

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 1033, § 5, effective May 23. L. 98: Entire section repealed, p. 943, § 4, effective May 27.

16-20.5-107. Future modifications and purchases. (1) The executive board shall develop and maintain a process to determine if and how changes to existing criminal justice applications impact the integrated network. Changes to criminal justice applications, databases, platforms, or business processes that have an impact on the integrated network must be coordinated through and approved by the executive board.

(2) Any state-funded expenditures by a criminal justice agency for computer platforms, databases, or applications in support of criminal justice applications shall be reviewed and approved by the executive board. The executive board shall make recommendations concerning such purchases to all appropriate budgetary approval agencies.

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 1033, § 5, effective May 23. L. 2005: Entire section amended, p. 86, § 4, effective March 25.

16-20.5-108. Local criminal justice agencies pilot program. (Repealed)

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 1034, § 5, effective May 23. L. 98: Entire section repealed, p. 944, § 5, effective May 27.

ARTICLE 21Offender-based Tracking System

16-21-101.	Legislative declaration.		court.
16-21-102.	"Offender" defined.	16-21-104.5.	Electronic signatures - validity.
16-21-103.	Information on offenders required - duties of law enforcement agencies - court.	16-21-105.	Applicability of article to municipal courts - local law enforcement.
16-21-104.	Fingerprinting - ordered by

16-21-101. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the creation of an offender-based tracking system is necessary in order to improve the consistency of data shared by the different elements of the criminal justice system and to allow for the tracking of offenders through the criminal justice system. The general assembly further finds and declares that the offender-based tracking system should be operated through the Colorado integrated criminal justice information system program.

Source: L. 87: Entire article added, p. 647, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2005: Entire section amended, p. 87, § 5, effective March 25.

16-21-102. "Offender" defined. Except as otherwise provided in section 16-21-103, for the purposes of this article, "offender" means any person charged as an adult with a felony, a class 1 misdemeanor, or a misdemeanor pursuant to section 42-4-1301, C.R.S., or a crime, the underlying factual basis of which included an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S.

Source: L. 87: Entire article added, p. 647, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 2039, § 19, effective July 1; entire section amended, p. 2551, § 39, effective January 1, 1995.

Editor's note: Amendments to this section in House Bill 94-1253 and Senate Bill 94-1 were harmonized.

16-21-103. Information on offenders required - duties of law enforcement agencies - court. (1) (a) For purposes of this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(I) "Act of domestic violence" has the same meaning as set forth in section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S.

(II) "Arrest number" means a number that shall be assigned by the arresting agency to an arrest of the arrestee.

(III) "Bureau" means the Colorado bureau of investigation.

(III.3) "CICJIS" means the Colorado integrated criminal justice information system program, as defined in section 16-20.5-102.

(III.5) "Electronic signature" means information transferred from one agency to another through CICJIS, including but not limited to warrants, mittimus, judgments, and plea agreements.

(III.7) "ICON" means the integrated Colorado online network, as defined in section 16-20.5-102.

(IV) "Sexual offense" means crimes described in article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., and crimes described in articles 6 and 7 of title 18, C.R.S.

(V) "State identification number" means the number assigned to an offender by the bureau based on fingerprint identification.

(b) The requirements of this section are intended to complement the rules of criminal procedure and shall not be interpreted to conflict with or supersede any such rules.

(2) (a) A law enforcement agency that requests the filing of any criminal case shall submit to the district attorney the arresting agency's name, the offender's full name and date of birth, the charge or charges being requested, the investigating agency's case number, and the date of arrest and the arrest number. In addition, the law enforcement agency shall submit to the district attorney any relevant information about the offender's affiliation or association with gangs or gang activities.

(b) In addition to the information described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), a law enforcement agency shall comply with the following procedures:

(I) When requesting the filing of any felony, misdemeanor, or petty offense, criminal charge, or a violation of a municipal ordinance, the factual basis of which includes an act of domestic violence or a sexual offense, the law enforcement agency shall submit to the prosecuting attorney the information set forth in this subsection (2).

(II) If a law enforcement agency directly issues a complaint, summons, or summons and complaint for the charges described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b), the agency shall identify on the face of such document whether the factual basis for the charge or charges includes an act of domestic violence or a sexual offense.

(3) A district attorney who files any criminal case with the court or who reports to the bureau a final disposition occurring in the district attorney's office shall submit the arresting agency's name, the offender's full name and date of birth, the investigating agency's case number, the date of arrest and the arrest number, and any other information that a law enforcement agency is required to submit in accordance with subsection (2) of this section.

(4) (a) Upon the issuance of a warrant of arrest, the court shall notify the sheriff of the county in which the court is located of the issuance of such warrant. When the court withdraws, cancels, quashes, or otherwise renders a warrant of arrest invalid, the court shall immediately notify the bureau of such action in a manner that is consistent with procedures established jointly by the state court administrator and the director of the bureau.

(b) When the court creates a new criminal case in ICON, the court shall electronically notify the bureau of such action and shall provide the bureau with the arresting agency's name, the arrest date, and the arrest number provided to the court in accordance with subsection (3) of this section. Thereafter, the bureau shall electronically notify the court of the state identification number, if any, assigned to the offender.

(c) The court shall report the final disposition concerning an offender to the bureau in a form that is electronically consistent with applicable law. The report shall be made within seventy-two hours after the final disposition; except that the time period shall not include Saturdays, Sundays, or legal holidays. The report shall include the information provided to the court in accordance with subsection (3) of this section, the disposition of each charge, and the court case number, and, with respect to any charge, the factual basis of which includes an act of domestic violence or a sexual offense, the court and the bureau shall comply with the following procedures:

(I) The court shall advise the bureau to reflect the change of the status of domestic violence or sexual offense if the defendant is found not guilty of the alleged crime or if the case is dismissed.

(II) The court shall specify that there is a change in the status of the charge originally submitted to the bureau in accordance with paragraph (b) of this subsection (4), based upon the court's findings.

(III) The bureau shall reflect the change of status but shall not delete or eliminate information concerning the original charge.

(5) (a) The bureau shall maintain the information it receives pursuant to this article and shall make such information immediately available electronically to the department of corrections and to any other criminal justice agency upon request.

(b) Upon receipt of the fingerprints required pursuant to this article, the bureau shall perform a complete search of the bureau's files to identify any prior criminal record that the offender may have. Upon the association of a unique state identification number with any such offender, the bureau shall report such number electronically to CICJIS, the submitting agency, and the district attorney with jurisdiction over the offense. Upon nonassociation, the bureau shall create a new state identification number and electronically report the number to CICJIS and the submitting agency. Upon receipt of the number, CICJIS shall electronically report the number to the court and the district attorney with jurisdiction over the offense.

(6) The information received by the bureau pursuant to this article shall be made available to any sentencing court, probation office, or other pretrial services agency preparing a report on domestic violence or sexual offense cases.

Source: L. 87: Entire article added, p. 647, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89: (1) and (2) amended, p. 874, § 6, effective June 5. L. 92: Entire section amended, p. 256, § 2, effective June 3. L. 94: (1) and (3) amended and (6) added, p. 2039, § 20, effective July 1. L. 95: (3) and (6) amended, p. 600, § 2, effective May 22; entire section R&RE, p. 945, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2005: (1)(a)(III.3), (1)(a)(III.5), and (1)(a)(III.7) added and (4)(b), (5)(a), (5)(b), and (6) amended, p. 87, §§ 6, 7, effective March 25.

Editor's note: Subsections (3) and (6) were amended in House Bill 95-1101. Those amendments were superseded by the repeal and reenactment of the section in Senate Bill 95-153.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1995 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 198, Session Laws of Colorado 1995.

16-21-104. Fingerprinting - ordered by court. (1) If the offender has not been fingerprinted and photographed for the charges pending before the court, the court at the first appearance of the offender after the filing of charges shall order the offender to report to the investigating agency within fourteen days for fingerprinting and photographing. The investigating agency shall endorse upon a copy of the order the completion of the fingerprinting and photographing and return the same to the court. At least one set of fingerprints and one set of photographs ordered pursuant to this section shall be forwarded by the investigating agency to the Colorado bureau of investigation in a form and manner prescribed by such bureau.

(2) Any fingerprints required by this section to be forwarded shall be forwarded within twenty-four hours after completion; except that such time period shall not include Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays.

Source: L. 87: Entire article added, p. 648, § 1, effective July 1. L. 91: (1) amended, p. 442, § 10, effective May 29. L. 92: Entire section amended, p. 257, § 3, effective June 3. L. 2012: (1) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 861, § 99, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (1) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

16-21-104.5. Electronic signatures - validity. The information contained in an electronic signature, as defined in section 16-21-103 (1) (a) (III.5), sent between agencies using CICJIS, as defined in section 16-20.5-102, shall be presumed to be valid on its face without signed hard copy.

Source: L. 2005: Entire section added p. 88, § 8, effective March 25.

16-21-105. Applicability of article to municipal courts - local law enforcement. (1) The provisions of this article concerning the duty of a law enforcement agency to identify on the face of a complaint, summons, or summons and complaint whether the factual basis of the charge or charges being filed include an act of domestic violence shall apply to local law enforcement agencies.

(2) The provisions of this article concerning the duty of a court to notify the bureau concerning actions involving crimes in which the charge or charges include an act of domestic violence shall apply to municipal courts.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 2040, § 21, effective July 1. L. 95: (2) amended, p. 600, § 3, effective May 22.

ARTICLE 22

Colorado Sex Offender Registration Act

16-22-101.	Short title.	16-22-108.	Registration - procedure - frequency - place - change of address - fee.
16-22-102.	Definitions.	16-22-109.	Registration forms - local law enforcement agencies - duties.
16-22-103.	Sex offender registration - required - applicability - exception.	16-22-110.	Colorado sex offender registry - creation - maintenance - release of information.
16-22-104.	Initial registration - effective date.	16-22-111.	Internet posting of sex offenders - procedure.
16-22-105.	Notice - requirements - residence - presumption.	16-22-112.	Release of information - law enforcement agencies.
16-22-106.	Duties - probation department - community corrections administrator - court personnel - jail personnel - notice.	16-22-113.	Petition for removal from registry.
16-22-107.	Duties - department of corrections - department of human services - confirmation of registration - notice - address verification.	16-22-114.	Immunity.
		16-22-115.	CBI assistance in apprehending sex offenders who fail to register.

16-22-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the “Colorado Sex Offender Registration Act”.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1157, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Constitutional Challenges to Sex Offender Registration and Community Notification Laws”, see 30 Colo. Law. 51 (February 2001).

16-22-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Birthday” means a person’s birthday as reflected on the notice provided to the person pursuant to section 16-22-106 or 16-22-107 or the person’s actual date of birth if the notice does not reflect the person’s birthday.

(2) “CBI” means the Colorado bureau of investigation established pursuant to part 4 of article 33.5 of title 24, C.R.S.

(3) “Convicted” or “conviction” means having received a verdict of guilty by a judge or jury, having pleaded guilty or nolo contendere, having received a disposition as a juvenile, having been adjudicated a juvenile delinquent, or having received a deferred judgment and sentence or a deferred adjudication.

(3.5) “Employed at an institution of postsecondary education” means a person:

(a) Is employed by or is an independent contractor with an institution of postsecondary education or is employed by or is an independent contractor with an entity that contracts with an institution of postsecondary education; and

(b) Spends any period of time in furtherance of the employment or independent contractor relationship on the campus of the postsecondary institution or at a site that is owned or leased by the postsecondary institution.

(4) “Immediate family” means a person’s spouse, parent, grandparent, sibling, or child.

(4.3) (a) “Lacks a fixed residence” means that a person does not have a living situation that meets the definition of “residence” pursuant to subsection (5.7) of this section. “Lacks a fixed residence” may include, but need not be limited to, outdoor sleeping locations or any public or private locations not designed as traditional living accommodations. “Lacks a fixed residence” may also include temporary public or private housing or temporary shelter facilities, residential treatment facilities, or any other residential program or facility if the person remains at the location for less than fourteen days.

(b) “Lacks a fixed residence” also includes a person who is registered in any jurisdiction if the person:

(I) Ceases to reside at an address in that jurisdiction; and

(II) Fails to register:

(A) A change of address in the same jurisdiction; or

(B) In a new jurisdiction pursuant to section 16-22-108 (4); or

(C) Pursuant to section 16-22-108 (3).

(4.5) “Local law enforcement agency” means the law enforcement agency, including but not limited to a campus police agency, that has jurisdiction over a certain geographic area.

(5) “Register” and “registration” include initial registration pursuant to section 16-22-104, and registration, confirmation of registration, and reregistration, as required in section 16-22-108.

(5.5) “Registrant” means a person who is required to register in accordance with this article.

(5.7) “Residence” means a place or dwelling that is used, intended to be used, or usually used for habitation by a person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103. “Residence” may include, but need not be limited to, a temporary shelter or institution, if the person resides at the temporary shelter or institution for fourteen consecutive days or longer, if the owner of the shelter or institution consents to the person utilizing the shelter or institution as his or her registered address as required by section 16-22-106 (4) or 16-22-107 (4) (a), and if the residence of the person at the shelter or institution can be verified as required by section 16-22-109 (3.5). A person may establish multiple residences by residing in more than one place or dwelling.

(5.8) “Resides” includes residence and lacks a fixed residence.

(6) “Sex offender registry” means the Colorado sex offender registry created and maintained by the CBI pursuant to section 16-22-110.

(7) “Sexually violent predator” means a person who is found to be a sexually violent predator pursuant to section 18-3-414.5, C.R.S.

(8) “Temporary resident” means a person who is a resident of another state but in Colorado temporarily because the person is:

(a) Employed in this state on a full-time or part-time basis, with or without compensation, for more than fourteen consecutive business days or for an aggregate period of more than thirty days in any calendar year; or

(b) Enrolled in any type of educational institution in this state on a full-time or part-time basis; or

(c) Present in Colorado for more than fourteen consecutive business days or for an aggregate period of more than thirty days in a calendar year for any purpose, including but not limited to vacation, travel, or retirement.

(9) “Unlawful sexual behavior” means any of the following offenses or criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit any of the following offenses:

(a) (I) Sexual assault, in violation of section 18-3-402, C.R.S.; or

(II) Sexual assault in the first degree, in violation of section 18-3-402, C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;

(b) Sexual assault in the second degree, in violation of section 18-3-403, C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;

(c) (I) Unlawful sexual contact, in violation of section 18-3-404, C.R.S.; or

(II) Sexual assault in the third degree, in violation of section 18-3-404, C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;

(d) Sexual assault on a child, in violation of section 18-3-405, C.R.S.;

(e) Sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, in violation of section 18-3-405.3, C.R.S.;

(f) Sexual assault on a client by a psychotherapist, in violation of section 18-3-405.5, C.R.S.;

- (g) Enticement of a child, in violation of section 18-3-305, C.R.S.;
- (h) Incest, in violation of section 18-6-301, C.R.S.;
- (i) Aggravated incest, in violation of section 18-6-302, C.R.S.;
- (j) Trafficking in children, in violation of section 18-3-502, C.R.S.;
- (k) Sexual exploitation of children, in violation of section 18-6-403, C.R.S.;
- (l) Procurement of a child for sexual exploitation, in violation of section 18-6-404, C.R.S.;
- (m) Indecent exposure, in violation of section 18-7-302, C.R.S.;
- (n) Soliciting for child prostitution, in violation of section 18-7-402, C.R.S.;
- (o) Pandering of a child, in violation of section 18-7-403, C.R.S.;
- (p) Procurement of a child, in violation of section 18-7-403.5, C.R.S.;
- (q) Keeping a place of child prostitution, in violation of section 18-7-404, C.R.S.;
- (r) Pimping of a child, in violation of section 18-7-405, C.R.S.;
- (s) Inducement of child prostitution, in violation of section 18-7-405.5, C.R.S.;
- (t) Patronizing a prostituted child, in violation of section 18-7-406, C.R.S.;
- (u) Engaging in sexual conduct in a correctional institution, in violation of section 18-7-701, C.R.S.;
- (v) Wholesale promotion of obscenity to a minor, in violation of section 18-7-102 (1.5), C.R.S.;
- (w) Promotion of obscenity to a minor, in violation of section 18-7-102 (2.5), C.R.S.;
- (x) Class 4 felony internet luring of a child, in violation of section 18-3-306 (3), C.R.S.;
- (y) Internet sexual exploitation of a child, in violation of section 18-3-405.4, C.R.S.;
- (z) Public indecency, committed in violation of section 18-7-301 (2) (b), C.R.S., if a second offense is committed within five years of the previous offense or a third or subsequent offense is committed;
 - (aa) Invasion of privacy for sexual gratification, in violation of section 18-3-405.6, C.R.S.; or
 - (bb) Second degree kidnapping, if committed in violation of section 18-3-302 (3) (a), C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1157, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2004: (9)(v) and (9)(w) added, p. 800, § 1, effective May 21; (3.5), (4.5), (5.5), and (5.7) added and (8) amended, p. 1107, § 1, effective May 27. L. 2006: (5.7) amended, p. 1006, § 3, effective July 1; (9)(x) and (9)(y) added, p. 2054, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2010: (9)(j) amended, (SB 10-140), ch. 156, p. 537, § 6, effective April 21; (9)(u) amended, (HB 10-1277), ch. 262, p. 1190, § 2, effective July 1; (9)(x) and (9)(y) amended and (9)(z) added, (HB 10-1334), ch. 359, p. 1708, § 3, effective August 11; (9)(x) and (9)(y) amended and (9)(aa) added, (SB 10-128), ch. 415, p. 2047, § 8, effective July 1, 2012. L. 2011: (9)(bb) added, (HB 11-1278), ch. 224, p. 960, § 3, effective May 27. L. 2012: (4.3) and (5.8) added and (5.7) amended, (HB 12-1346), ch. 220, p. 940, § 1, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Subsections (9)(x) and (9)(y), as amended by House Bill 10-1334 and Senate Bill 10-128, are identical; except that subsections (9)(x) and (9)(y), as amended by Senate Bill 10-128, are effective July 1, 2012.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 16-22-102 is similar to § 18-3-412.5 as it existed prior to its 2002 repeal and reenactment, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

In reference to the term "convicted" in subsection (3), the phrase "having received a deferred judgment and sentence" does not mean the same as "completing the terms of a deferred sentencing agreement". Defendant must register as a sex offender pursuant to § 16-

22-103 (1)(a) despite completion of a deferred sentencing agreement. Dubois v. Abrahamson, 214 P.3d 586 (Colo. App. 2009).

The trial court properly ordered the defendant to register as a sex offender pursuant to this section even though defendant plead guilty to an offense not specifically listed in the definition of "unlawful sexual behavior" in subsection (1)(b). Although defendant plead guilty to contributing to the delinquency of a minor, she had engaged in soliciting for child prostitution, pandering of a child, procurement of a child for sexual exploitation, and inducement of child prostitution. Thus, the factual basis for the plea involved unlawful sexual behavior, and defendant was appropriately required to register as a sex offender. People v. Meidinger, 987 P.2d 937 (Colo. App. 1999).

To establish a residence under subsection (5.7) requires a physical presence or occupancy at a location. An offender under the Colorado Sex Offender Registration Act is required to give notice of where he or she intends to reside upon release from custody, but is not required to register at an address solely based upon that intent. People v. Griffin, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

16-22-103. Sex offender registration - required - applicability - exception. (1) Effective July 1, 1998, the following persons shall be required to register pursuant to the provisions of section 16-22-108 and shall be subject to the requirements and other provisions specified in this article:

(a) Any person who was convicted on or after July 1, 1991, in the state of Colorado, of an unlawful sexual offense, as defined in section 18-3-411 (1), C.R.S., enticement of a child, as described in section 18-3-305, C.R.S., or internet luring of a child, as described in section 18-3-306, C.R.S.;

(b) Any person who was convicted on or after July 1, 1991, in another state or jurisdiction, including but not limited to a military, tribal, territorial, or federal jurisdiction, of an offense that, if committed in Colorado, would constitute an unlawful sexual offense, as defined in section 18-3-411 (1), C.R.S., enticement of a child, as described in section 18-3-305, C.R.S., or internet luring of a child, as described in section 18-3-306, C.R.S.; and

(c) Any person who was released on or after July 1, 1991, from the custody of the department of corrections of this state or any other state, having served a sentence for an unlawful sexual offense, as defined in section 18-3-411 (1), C.R.S., enticement of a child, as described in section 18-3-305, C.R.S., or internet luring of a child, as described in section 18-3-306, C.R.S.

(2) (a) On and after July 1, 1994, any person who is convicted in the state of Colorado of unlawful sexual behavior or of another offense, the underlying factual basis of which involves unlawful sexual behavior, or any person who is released from the custody of the department of corrections having completed serving a sentence for unlawful sexual behavior or for another offense, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior, shall be required to register in the manner prescribed in section 16-22-104, section 16-22-106 or 16-22-107, whichever is applicable, and section 16-22-108.

(b) A person shall be deemed to have been convicted of unlawful sexual behavior if he or she is convicted of one or more of the offenses specified in section 16-22-102 (9), or of attempt, solicitation, or conspiracy to commit one or more of the offenses specified in said section.

(c) (I) For convictions entered on or after July 1, 2002, a person shall be deemed to be convicted of an offense, the underlying factual basis of which involves unlawful sexual behavior, if:

(A) The person is convicted of an offense that requires proof of unlawful sexual behavior as an element of the offense; or

(B) The person is convicted of an offense and is eligible for and receives an enhanced sentence based on a circumstance that requires proof of unlawful sexual behavior; or

(C) The person was originally charged with unlawful sexual behavior or with an offense that meets the description in sub-subparagraph (A) or (B) of this subparagraph (I), the person pleads guilty to an offense that does not constitute unlawful sexual behavior, and, as part of the plea agreement, the person admits, after advisement as provided in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (c), that the underlying factual basis of the offense to which he or she is pleading guilty involves unlawful sexual behavior; or

(D) The person was charged with and convicted of an offense that does not constitute unlawful sexual behavior and the person admits on the record, after advisement as provided in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (c), that the underlying factual basis of the offense involved unlawful sexual behavior.

(II) If a person is originally charged with unlawful sexual behavior or with an offense that meets the description in sub-subparagraph (A) or (B) of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c), the court may accept a plea agreement to an offense that does not constitute unlawful sexual behavior only if:

(A) The district attorney stipulates that the underlying factual basis of the offense to which the person is pleading guilty does not involve unlawful sexual behavior; or

(B) The person admits, after advisement as provided in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (c), that the underlying factual basis of the offense to which he or she is pleading guilty involves unlawful sexual behavior.

(III) The advisement provided for purposes of this paragraph (c), in addition to meeting the requirements of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure, shall advise the person that admitting that the underlying factual basis of the offense to which the person is pleading or of which the person is convicted involves unlawful sexual behavior will have the collateral result of making the person subject to the requirements of this article. Notwithstanding any provision of this paragraph (c) to the contrary, failure to advise a person pursuant to the provisions of this subparagraph (III) shall not constitute a defense to the offense of failure to register as a sex offender if there is evidence that the defendant had actual notice of the duty to register.

(IV) In any case in which a person is deemed to have been convicted of an offense, the underlying factual basis of which involves unlawful sexual behavior, as provided in this paragraph (c), the judgment of conviction shall specify that the person is convicted of such an offense and specify the particular crime of unlawful sexual behavior involved.

(V) The provisions of this paragraph (c) shall apply to juveniles for purposes of determining whether a juvenile is convicted of an offense, the underlying factual basis of which involves unlawful sexual behavior.

(d) (I) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, any stipulation by a district attorney and any finding by the court with regard to whether the offense of which the person is convicted includes an underlying factual basis involving unlawful sexual behavior, as defined in section 16-22-102, shall be binding on the department of corrections for purposes of classification. On or after July 1, 2008, if the department of corrections receives a mittimus that does not indicate the necessary findings as required by section 16-22-103 (2) (c) (II), the department shall notify the court and request that the court enter the necessary findings pursuant to section 16-22-103 (2) (c) (II).

(II) The department of corrections shall have the authority to make a determination that a person is a sex offender, as defined in section 16-11.7-102 (2) (a), for the purposes of classification and treatment if:

(A) The person has one or more prior convictions for a sex offense as defined in section 16-11.7-102 (3);

(B) The person has a prior offense for which a determination has been made by the court that the underlying factual basis involved a sex offense as defined in section 16-11.7-102 (3); or

(C) The person has been classified as a sex offender in accordance with procedures established by the department of corrections.

(III) The procedures established by the department of corrections to classify a person as a sex offender shall require that:

(A) The classification proceeding be conducted by a licensed attorney who shall serve as an administrative hearing officer;

(B) The offender's attorney be permitted to attend, represent, and assist the offender at the classification proceeding; and

(C) The offender be entitled to written notice of the reason for the proceeding, disclosure of the evidence to be presented against him or her, an opportunity to be heard in person and to present witnesses and documentary evidence, the right to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses, unless the administrative hearing officer finds good cause for not allowing confrontation, and written findings and conclusions indicating the evidence and reasons relied upon for the classification as a sex offender.

(IV) Notwithstanding any statutory provisions to the contrary, the department of corrections shall ensure that all procedures and policies comply with the federal "Prison Rape Elimination Act of 2003", Pub.L. 108-79, as amended.

(3) In addition to the persons specified in subsections (1) and (2) of this section, any person convicted of an offense in any other state or jurisdiction, including but not limited to a military or federal jurisdiction, for which the person, as a result of the conviction, is, was, has been, or would be required to register if he or she resided in the state or jurisdiction of conviction, or for which such person would be required to register if convicted in Colorado, shall be required to register in the manner specified in section 16-22-108, so long as such person is a temporary or permanent resident of Colorado. Such person may petition the court for an order that discontinues the requirement for registration in this state at the times specified in section 16-22-113 for offense classifications that are comparable to the classification of the offense for which the person was convicted in the other state or jurisdiction.

(4) The provisions of this article shall apply to any person who receives a disposition or is adjudicated a juvenile delinquent based on the commission of any act that may constitute unlawful sexual behavior or who receives a deferred adjudication based on commission of any act that may constitute unlawful sexual behavior; except that, with respect to section 16-22-113 (1) (a) to (1) (e), a person may petition the court for an order to discontinue the duty to register as provided in those paragraphs, but only if the person has not subsequently received a disposition for, been adjudicated a juvenile delinquent for, or been otherwise convicted of any offense involving unlawful sexual behavior. In addition, the duty to provide notice to a person of the duty to register, as set forth in sections 16-22-105 to 16-22-107, shall apply to juvenile parole and probation officers and appropriate personnel of the division of youth corrections in the department of human services.

(5) (a) Notwithstanding any provision of this article to the contrary, if, pursuant to a motion filed by a person described in this subsection (5) or on its own motion, a court determines that the registration requirement specified in this section would be unfairly punitive and that exempting the person from the registration requirement would not pose a significant risk to the community, the court, upon consideration of the totality of the circumstances, may exempt the person from the registration requirements imposed pursuant to this section if:

(I) The person was younger than eighteen years of age at the time of the commission of the offense; and

(II) The person has not been previously charged with unlawful sexual behavior; and

(III) The offense, as charged in the first petition filed with the court, is a first offense of either misdemeanor unlawful sexual contact, as described in section 18-3-404, C.R.S., or indecent exposure, as described in section 18-7-302, C.R.S.; and

(IV) The person has received a sex offender evaluation that conforms with the standards developed pursuant to section 16-11.7-103 (4) (i), from an evaluator who meets the standards established by the sex offender management board, and the evaluator recommends exempting the person from the registration requirements based upon the best interests of that person and the community; and

(V) The court makes written findings of fact specifying the grounds for granting such exemption.

(b) Any defendant who files a motion pursuant to this subsection (5) or the court, if considering its own motion, shall provide notice of the motion to the prosecuting district attorney. In addition, the court shall provide notice of the motion to the victim of the offense. Prior to deciding the motion, the court shall conduct a hearing on the motion at which both the district attorney and the victim shall have opportunity to be heard.

(6) Any person who is required to register pursuant to this section and fails to do so or otherwise fails to comply with the provisions of this article may be subject to prosecution for the offense of failure to register as a sex offender, as described in section 18-3-412.5, C.R.S. Failure of any governmental entity or any employee of any governmental entity to comply with any requirement of this article shall not constitute a defense to the offense of failure to register as a sex offender if there is evidence that the defendant had actual notice of the duty to register.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1159, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2004: (1)(b), (1)(c), (3), and (5)(a) amended, p. 1108, § 2, effective May 27. L. 2007: (1) amended, p.

1687, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2008: (3) amended, p. 849, § 1, effective May 14; (2)(d) amended, p. 1754, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2011: (1)(b) amended, (HB 11-1278), ch. 224, p. 960, § 4, effective May 27; (5)(a)(IV) amended, (HB 11-1138), ch. 236, p. 1027, § 9, effective May 27.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 16-22-103 is similar to § 18-3-412.5 as it existed prior to its 2002 repeal and reenactment, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Prior to the 2004 amendment, subsection (1)(c) referred to the department of corrections in Colorado not that of any other state. Fendley v. People, 107 P.3d 1122 (Colo. App. 2004).

Use of present tense in subsection (3) refers to any person currently required to register in the state of conviction of the sexual offense and not to a person who “was” or “has been” required to register. Fendley v. People, 107 P.3d 1122 (Colo. App. 2004).

Although application of subsection (1) relates back to convicted sexual offenders released on or after July 1, 1991, it does not violate the prohibition against ex post facto laws, because the statute does not disadvantage the offender. The registration requirement is intended to assist law enforcement officials in investigating future sex crimes and to protect the public safety. As such, it is remedial, not punitive, and does not unconstitutionally enhance the offender's punishment. Jamison v. People, 988 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1999); People v. Sowell, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

The 2008 amendments to subsection (2)(d)(I) were substantive and cannot be applied retroactively. A retroactive application would modify vested rights and liabilities. Vondra v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 226 P.3d 1165 (Colo. App. 2009).

Procedural due process does not entitle a sex offender to a hearing on the sex offender's dangerousness before requiring the sex offender to register. Due process does not guarantee the right to a hearing to establish a fact that is not material under the statute. Dangerousness is not material under the registration statute, the duty to register is triggered by a conviction of a sex offense. The statute even states the crime for which the registrant was convicted may not reflect the current level of dangerousness. People ex rel. C.B.B., 75 P.3d 1148 (Colo. App. 2003).

This section does not violate the offender's right to equal protection even though this section does not apply to persons who may have been convicted the same date as the offender, but were eligible for release prior to 1991. The offender is not similarly situated to persons released prior to 1991 because the offender was not eligible for release as of said date. Jamison v. People, 988 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1999).

The duty to register as a sex offender is not a direct consequence of the entry of a guilty plea and therefore need not be included in the advisement. The statutory duty to register as a sex offender in Colorado is only a collateral consequence of a defendant's guilty plea. Failure to advise defendant of the duty to register as a sex offender does not invalidate his guilty plea. People v. Montaine, 7 P.3d 1065 (Colo. App. 1999).

The requirement that a juvenile register as a sex offender pursuant to this section does not give rise to a constitutional right to a jury trial in a juvenile adjudication because the statutory duty to register as a sex offender is not a criminal punishment. People ex rel. J.T., 13 P.3d 321 (Colo. App. 2000).

A person convicted of violating 18 U.S.C. § 2252 (a)(2) has engaged in conduct that, if committed in Colorado, would constitute sexual exploitation of a child in violation of § 18-6-403 (3)(b.5) and is, therefore, subject to the registration requirement of subsection (1)(b) of this section. Fabiano v. Armstrong, 141 P.3d 907 (Colo. App. 2006).

Based upon defendant's civil commitment in another state for a sex offense, defendant is required to register as a sex offender in this state. Defendant is a person “required to register in the state of conviction” and a person who would be “required to register if convicted in this state”. The civil commitment proceedings in the other state were equivalent of a deferred judgment and sentencing in this state, thus satisfying the “convicted” requirement of the statute. The other state's commitment procedures included sufficient due process protections. The crime that was the subject of the civil commitment would essentially have been sexual assault on a child in this state. Mayo v. People, 181 P.3d 1207 (Colo. App. 2008).

Defendant must register as a sex offender pursuant to subsection (1)(a) despite completion of a deferred sentencing agreement based on the plain language of the definition of “convicted”, as defined in § 16-22-102 (3) and as used in subsection (1)(a) of this section. Dubois v. Abrahamson, 214 P.3d 586 (Colo. App. 2009).

Sufficient competent evidence for department of corrections' hearing panel to determine defendant to be a sex offender. The panel relied on police reports and the victim's statements to determine that defendant had subjected a victim to unwanted sexual contact through threats, intimidation, and physical force. Vondra

v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 226 P.3d 1165 (Colo. App. 2009).

16-22-104. Initial registration - effective date. (1) (a) (I) Beginning January 1, 2005, for any person required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103, the court, within the later of twenty-four hours or the next business day after sentencing the person, shall electronically file with the CBI the initial registration of the person, providing the information required by the CBI.

(II) Beginning May 27, 2004, the court shall specify on the judgment of conviction the person's duty to register as required in section 16-22-108, including but not limited to the duty to confirm registration if the person is sentenced on or after January 1, 2005, and the person's duty to reregister.

(b) Any person who is sentenced prior to January 1, 2005, and who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 shall initially register in the manner provided and within the times specified in section 16-22-108 (1) (a) for registration.

(c) The state court administrator is hereby authorized to receive and expend any public or private gifts, grants, or donations that may be available to offset the costs incurred in implementing the provisions of this subsection (1).

(2) Repealed.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1163, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2003: (1)(a) amended, p. 759, § 1, effective March 25. L. 2004: Entire section amended, p. 1109, § 3, effective May 27.

Editor's note: Subsection (2)(c) provided for the repeal of subsection (2), effective July 1, 2005. (See L. 2004, p. 1109.)

16-22-105. Notice - requirements - residence - presumption. (1) Any person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 shall receive notice of the duty to register as provided in section 16-22-106 or 16-22-107, whichever is applicable. Such notice shall inform the person of the duty to register, in the manner provided in section 16-22-108, with the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides. The notice shall inform the person that he or she has a duty to register with local law enforcement agencies in any state or other jurisdiction to which the person may move and that the CBI shall notify the agency responsible for registration in the new state as provided in section 16-22-108 (4). The notice shall also inform the person that, at the time the person registers, he or she must provide his or her date of birth, a current photograph, and a complete set of fingerprints.

(2) Failure of any person to sign the notice of duty to register, as required in sections 16-22-106 and 16-22-107, shall not constitute a defense to the offense of failure to register as a sex offender if there is evidence that the person had actual notice of the duty to register.

(3) For purposes of this article, any person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 shall register in all jurisdictions in which he or she establishes a residence. A person establishes a residence through an intent to make any place or dwelling his or her residence. The prosecution may prove intent to establish residence by reference to hotel or motel receipts or a lease of real property, ownership of real property, proof the person accepted responsibility for utility bills, proof the person established a mailing address, or any other action demonstrating such intent. Notwithstanding the existence of any other evidence of intent, occupying or inhabiting any dwelling for more than fourteen days in any thirty-day period shall constitute the establishment of residence.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1163, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2004: (3) amended, p. 1110, § 4, effective May 27.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 16-22-105 is similar to § 18-3-412.5 as it existed prior to its 2002 repeal and reenactment, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

The duty to register as a sex offender is not a direct consequence of the entry of a guilty plea and therefore need not be included in the advisement. The statutory duty to register as a sex offender in Colorado is only a collateral consequence of a defendant's guilty plea. Failure to advise defendant of the duty to register as a sex offender does not invalidate his guilty plea. People v. Montaine, 7 P.3d 1065 (Colo. App. 1999).

To establish a residence under subsection (3) requires a physical presence or occupancy at a location. An offender under the Colorado Sex Offender Registration Act is required to give notice of where he or she intends to reside upon release from custody, but is not required to register at an address solely based upon that intent. People v. Griffin, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

16-22-106. Duties - probation department - community corrections administrator - court personnel - jail personnel - notice. (1) (a) If a person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 is sentenced to probation, the probation department, as soon as possible following sentencing, shall provide notice, as described in section 16-22-105, to the person of his or her duty to register in accordance with the provisions of this article with the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides, and the notice shall include the requirements for a person who registers as "lacks a fixed residence". The person shall be required to sign the notice as confirmation of receipt and to provide the person's date of birth and the address or addresses at which the person resides or a statement that the person lacks a fixed residence. Beginning on May 27, 2004, the court shall specify on the judgment of conviction the duty to register as required in section 16-22-108, including but not limited to the duty to confirm registration if sentenced on or after January 1, 2005, and to reregister.

(b) The probation department shall electronically notify the CBI of the date on which the person's probation is terminated, and the probation department shall notify the CBI if the person absconds or dies prior to the probation termination date. The CBI shall electronically notify the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides of the occurrence of any of the events specified in this paragraph (b).

(2) (a) If a person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 receives a direct sentence to community corrections, the administrator for the community corrections program, or his or her designee, as soon as possible following sentencing, shall provide notice, as described in section 16-22-105, to the person of the duty to register in accordance with the provisions of this article with the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides. The person shall be required to sign the notice as confirmation of receipt and to provide the person's date of birth and the address or addresses at which the person resides. The court shall specify on the judgment of conviction the duty to register as required in section 16-22-108, including but not limited to the duty to confirm registration, if sentenced on or after January 1, 2005, and to reregister.

(b) The administrator of the community corrections program, or his or her designee, shall electronically notify the CBI of the date on which the sentence to community corrections is terminated, and the administrator of the community corrections program shall notify the CBI if the person escapes or dies prior to the sentence termination date. The CBI shall electronically notify the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides of the occurrence of any of the events specified in this paragraph (b).

(3) (a) (I) If a person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 is held for more than five business days in a county jail pending court disposition for any offense, the sheriff of the county in which the county jail is located, or his or her designee, shall transmit to the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which the person was last registered and to the CBI confirmation of the person's registration. The confirmation shall be transmitted on a standardized form provided by the CBI and shall include the address or addresses at which the person will reside while in custody of the county jail, the person's date of birth, a current photograph of the person, and the person's fingerprints.

(II) If a person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 is sentenced to a county jail for any offense, the sheriff of the county in which the county jail is located, or his or her designee, as soon as possible following sentencing, shall transmit to the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which the person was last registered and to the CBI confirmation of the person's registration. The confirmation shall be transmitted on a standardized form provided by the CBI and shall include the address or addresses at which the person will reside while in custody of the county jail, the person's date of birth, a current photograph of the person, and the person's fingerprints.

(III) The provisions of this paragraph (a) shall apply to persons sentenced on or after January 1, 2005.

(b) At least five days prior to the discharge of the person from custody, the sheriff, or his or her designee, shall provide notice, as described in section 16-22-105, to the person of the duty to register in accordance with the provisions of this article with the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides. The person shall be required to sign the notice as confirmation of receipt and to provide the person's date of birth and the address at which the person intends to reside upon discharge.

(c) Within five days, but not fewer than two days, prior to the discharge of the person from custody, the sheriff, or his or her designee, shall notify the CBI and the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which the person intends to reside of the date of the person's discharge. Such notice, at a minimum, shall include the address at which the person plans to reside upon discharge, provided by the person pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (3), and the person's date of birth, fingerprints, and current photograph.

(3.5) With regard to a person who is required to register within a state, military, or federal jurisdiction other than Colorado, the chief local law enforcement officer, or his or her designee, of the Colorado jurisdiction in which the person resides shall provide notice, as described in section 16-22-105, to the person as soon as possible after discovering the person's presence in the jurisdiction, of the duty to register in accordance with the provisions of this article with the local law enforcement agency of each Colorado jurisdiction in which the person resides. The person shall be required to sign the notice as confirmation of receipt and to provide the person's date of birth and the address or addresses at which the person resides.

(4) For any person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103, who is not committed to the department of human services, and who is not sentenced to probation, community corrections, county jail, or the department of corrections, the judge or magistrate who has jurisdiction over the person shall, at sentencing, provide notice, as described in section 16-22-105, to the person of the duty to register in accordance with the provisions of this article with the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides, and the notice shall include the requirements for a person who registers as "lacks a fixed residence". The person shall be required to sign the notice as confirmation of receipt and to provide the person's date of birth and the address or addresses at which the person resides or a statement that the person lacks a fixed residence.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1164, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2003: (3)(a)(II) amended, p. 759, § 2, effective March 25. L. 2004: (1), (2), and (3)(a)(II) amended and (3.5) added, pp. 1110, 1111, §§ 5, 6, effective May 27. L. 2008: (3)(c) amended, p. 1885, § 25, effective August 5. L. 2011: (3)(a) amended, (HB 11-1278), ch. 224, p. 960, § 5, effective May 27. L. 2012: (1)(a) and (4) amended, (HB 12-1346), ch. 220, p. 941, § 2, effective July 1.

16-22-107. Duties - department of corrections - department of human services - confirmation of registration - notice - address verification. (1) (a) If a person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 is sentenced to the department of corrections, the department of corrections shall transmit to the CBI confirmation of the person's registration on a standardized form provided by the CBI, including the person's date of birth and the person's fingerprints. The department of corrections shall also transmit a photograph of the person if requested by the CBI.

(b) The provisions of this subsection (1) shall apply to persons sentenced on or after January 1, 2005.

(2) At least ten business days prior to the release or discharge of any person who has been sentenced to the department of corrections and is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103, the department of corrections shall provide notice, as described in section 16-22-105, to the person of the duty to register in accordance with the provisions of this article with the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides, and the notice shall include the requirements for a person who registers as "lacks a fixed residence". The person shall be required to sign the notice as confirmation of receipt and to provide the person's date of birth and the address at which the person intends to reside upon release or discharge or a statement that the person lacks a fixed residence.

(3) Within five days, but not fewer than two days, prior to the release or discharge of any person who has been sentenced to the department of corrections and is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103, the department shall notify the CBI and the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which the person intends to reside of the date of the person's release or discharge. Such notice shall include the address at which the person intends to reside upon release or discharge, provided by the person pursuant to subsection (2) of this section, and the person's date of birth and the person's current photograph if requested by the CBI. In addition, such notice may include additional information concerning the person, including but not limited to any information obtained in conducting the assessment to determine whether the person may be subject to community notification pursuant to section 16-13-903.

(4) (a) Prior to the release or discharge of any person who has been sentenced to the department of corrections and is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103, department of corrections personnel, if the person is being released on parole, or the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which the person intends to reside, if the person is being discharged, shall verify that:

(I) The address provided by the person pursuant to subsection (2) of this section is a residence;

(II) The occupants or owners of the residence know of the person's history of unlawful sexual behavior;

(III) The occupants or owners of the residence have agreed to allow the person to reside at the address; and

(IV) If the person is being released on parole, the address complies with any conditions imposed by the parole board.

(b) If, in attempting to verify the address provided by the person, department of corrections personnel or local law enforcement officers determine that any of the information specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (4) is not true, the person shall be deemed to have provided false information to department personnel concerning the address at which the person intends to reside upon release.

(4.5) With regard to a person who has been sentenced to the department of corrections, is released on parole, and is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103, the department shall electronically notify the CBI of the date on which the person's parole is terminated, and the department shall notify the CBI if the person absconds or dies prior to the parole termination date. The CBI shall electronically notify the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides of the occurrence of any of the events specified in this subsection (4.5).

(5) In the case of a juvenile who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 and is committed to the department of human services, said department shall have and carry out the duties specified in this section for the department of corrections with regard to said juvenile.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1165, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2003: (1)(b) amended, p. 759, § 3, effective March 25. L. 2004: (1), (2), and (3) amended and (4.5) added, p. 1111, § 7, effective May 27. L. 2012: (2) amended, (HB 12-1346), ch. 220, p. 942, § 3, effective July 1.

16-22-108. Registration - procedure - frequency - place - change of address - fee.

(1) (a) (I) Each person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 shall register with the local law enforcement agency in each jurisdiction in which the person resides. A local law enforcement agency shall accept the registration of a person who lacks a fixed residence; except that the law enforcement agency is not required to accept the person's registration if it includes a residence or location that would violate state law or local ordinance. If the residence or location with which the person attempts to register constitutes such a violation, the law enforcement agency shall so advise the person and give the person an opportunity to secure an alternate location within five days.

(II) Each person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 shall initially register or, if sentenced on or after January 1, 2005, confirm his or her initial registration within five business days after release from incarceration for commission of the offense requiring registration or within five business days after receiving notice of the duty to register, if the person was not incarcerated. The person shall register with the local law enforcement agency during business hours by completing a standardized registration form provided to the person by the local law enforcement agency and paying the registration fee imposed by the local law enforcement agency as provided in subsection (7) of this section. The CBI shall provide standardized registration forms to the local law enforcement agencies pursuant to section 16-22-109.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (d) of this subsection (1), each person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 shall reregister within five business days before or after the person's first birthday following initial registration and annually within five business days before or after the person's birthday thereafter. Such person shall reregister pursuant to this paragraph (b) with the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides within five business days before or after his or her birthday, in the manner provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1).

(c) Each person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 and who establishes an additional residence shall, within five business days after establishing an additional residence in any city, town, county, or city and county within Colorado, register with the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which he or she establishes the additional residence. The person shall register in said jurisdiction in the manner provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) and shall reregister as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (1) or paragraph (d) of this subsection (1), whichever is applicable, in said jurisdiction so long as the person resides in said jurisdiction. For purposes of this paragraph (c), "additional residence" shall include, when the person's residence is a trailer or motor home, an address at which the person's trailer or motor home is lawfully located.

(d) (I) Any person who is a sexually violent predator and any person who is convicted as an adult of any of the offenses specified in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (d) has a duty to register for the remainder of his or her natural life; except that, if the person receives a deferred judgment and sentence for one of the offenses specified in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (d), the person may petition the court for discontinuation of the duty to register as provided in section 16-22-113 (1) (d). In addition to registering as required in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), the person shall reregister within five business days before or after the date that is three months after the date on which the person was released from incarceration for commission of the offense requiring registration or, if the person was not incarcerated, after the date on which he or she received notice of the duty to register. The person shall register within five business days before or after that date every three months thereafter until the person's birthday. The person shall reregister within five business days before or after his or her next birthday and shall reregister within five business days before or after that date every three months thereafter. The person shall reregister pursuant to this paragraph (d) with the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the person resides or in any jurisdiction if the person lacks a fixed residence on the reregistration date, in the manner provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1).

(I.5) (A) A person convicted of an offense in another state or jurisdiction, including but not limited to a military or federal jurisdiction, who, as a result of the conviction, is required to register quarterly as a sex offender in the state or jurisdiction of conviction is required to register as provided in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (d) so long as the person is a temporary or permanent resident of Colorado.

(B) A person convicted of an offense in another state or jurisdiction, including but not limited to a military or federal jurisdiction, which conviction would require the person to register as provided in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (d) if the conviction occurred in Colorado, is required to register as provided in said subparagraph (I) so long as the person is a temporary or permanent resident of Colorado.

(II) The provisions of this paragraph (d) shall apply to persons convicted of one or more of the following offenses:

(A) Felony sexual assault, in violation of section 18-3-402, C.R.S., or sexual assault in the first degree, in violation of section 18-3-402, C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, or felony sexual assault in the second degree, in violation of section 18-3-403, C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000; or

(B) Sexual assault on a child in violation of section 18-3-405, C.R.S.; or

(C) Sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, in violation of section 18-3-405.3, C.R.S.; or

(D) Sexual assault on a client by a psychotherapist, in violation of section 18-3-405.5, C.R.S.; or

(E) Incest, in violation of section 18-6-301, C.R.S.; or

(F) Aggravated incest, in violation of section 18-6-302, C.R.S.

(e) Notwithstanding the time period for registration specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), any person who is discharged from the department of corrections of this state or another state without supervision shall register in the manner provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) no later than the next business day following discharge.

(2) Persons who reside within the corporate limits of any city, town, or city and county shall register at the office of the chief law enforcement officer of such city, town, or city and county; except that, if there is no chief law enforcement officer of the city, town, or city and county in which a person resides, the person shall register at the office of the county sheriff of the county in which the person resides. Persons who reside outside of the corporate limits of any city, town, or city and county shall register at the office of the county sheriff of the county where such person resides.

(2.5) (a) Any person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 and who has been convicted of a child sex crime shall be required to register all e-mail addresses, instant-messaging identities, or chat room identities prior to using the address or identity. The entity that accepts the registration of a person required to register all e-mail addresses shall make a reasonable effort to verify all e-mail addresses provided by the person.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2.5), a person shall not be required to register an employment e-mail address if:

(I) The person's employer provided the e-mail address for use primarily in the course of the person's employment;

(II) The e-mail address identifies the employer by name, initials, or other commonly recognized identifier; and

(III) The person required to register is not an owner or operator of the employing entity that provided the e-mail address.

(c) For purposes of this section, "child sex crime" means sexual assault on a child, as described in section 18-3-405, C.R.S.; sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, as described in section 18-3-405.3, C.R.S.; unlawful sexual contact, as described in section 18-3-404 (1.5), C.R.S.; enticement of a child, as described in section 18-3-305, C.R.S.; aggravated incest, as described in section 18-6-302 (1) (b), C.R.S.; trafficking in children, as described in section 18-3-502, C.R.S.; sexual exploitation of children, as described in section 18-6-403, C.R.S.; procurement of a child for sexual exploitation, as described in section 18-6-404, C.R.S.; soliciting for child prostitution, as described in section 18-7-402, C.R.S.; pandering of a child, as described in section 18-7-403, C.R.S.; procurement of a child, as described in section 18-7-403.5, C.R.S.; keeping a place of child prostitution, as described in section 18-7-404, C.R.S.; pimping of a child, as described in section 18-7-405, C.R.S.; inducement of child prostitution, as described in section 18-7-405.5, C.R.S.; patronizing a prostituted child, as described in section 18-7-406, C.R.S.; internet luring of a child, as described in section 18-3-306, C.R.S.; internet sexual exploitation of a child, as described in section 18-3-405.4, C.R.S.; wholesale promotion of obscenity to a minor, as described in section 18-7-102 (1.5), C.R.S.; promotion of obscenity to a minor, as described in section 18-7-102 (2.5), C.R.S.; sexual assault, as described in section 18-3-402 (1) (d) and (1) (e), C.R.S.; sexual assault in the second degree as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, as described in section 18-3-403 (1) (e) and (1) (e.5), C.R.S.; or criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit any of the acts specified in this paragraph (c).

(d) The entity that accepts the registration of a person required to register all e-mail addresses, instant-messaging identities, or chat room identities pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2.5) shall require the person to sign a statement that the e-mail addresses, instant-messaging identities, or chat room identities provided on the registration form are e-mail addresses, instant-messaging identities, or chat room identities that the person has the authority to use. The statement shall also state that providing false information related to the person's e-mail addresses, instant-messaging identities, or chat room identities may constitute a misdemeanor or felony criminal offense. This signed statement constitutes a reasonable effort to verify all e-mail addresses provided by the person as required by paragraph (a) of this subsection (2.5), but does not preclude additional verification efforts.

(3) Any person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 shall be required to register within five business days before or after each time the person:

(a) Changes such person's address, regardless of whether such person has moved to a new address within the jurisdiction of the law enforcement agency with which such person previously registered:

(a.5) Changes the address at which a vehicle, trailer, or motor home is located, if the vehicle, trailer, or motor home is the person's place of residence, regardless of whether the new address is within the jurisdiction of the law enforcement agency with which such person previously registered;

(b) Legally changes such person's name;

(c) Establishes an additional residence in another jurisdiction or an additional residence in the same jurisdiction;

(d) Becomes employed or changes employment or employment location, if employed at an institution of postsecondary education;

(e) Becomes enrolled or changes enrollment in an institution of postsecondary education, or changes the location of enrollment;

(f) Becomes a volunteer or changes the volunteer work location, if volunteering at an institution of postsecondary education;

(g) Changes his or her e-mail address, instant-messaging identity, or chat room identity, if the person is required to register that information pursuant to subsection (2.5) of this section. The person shall register the e-mail address, instant-messaging identity, or chat room identity prior to using it.

(h) Ceases to lack a fixed residence and establishes a residence; or

(i) Ceases to reside at an address and lacks a fixed residence.

(4) (a) (I) Any time a person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 ceases to reside at an address, the person shall register with the local law enforcement agency for his or her new address and include the address at which the person will no longer reside and all addresses at which the person will reside. The person shall file the new registration form within five business days after ceasing to reside at an address. The local law enforcement agency that receives the new registration form shall inform the previous jurisdiction of the cancellation of that registration and shall electronically notify the CBI of the registration cancellation.

(II) Any time a person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 ceases to reside at an address and moves to another state, the person shall notify the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which said address is located by completing a written registration cancellation form, available from the local law enforcement agency. At a minimum, the registration cancellation form shall indicate the address at which the person will no longer reside and all addresses at which the person will reside. The person shall file the registration cancellation form within five business days after ceasing to reside at an address. A local law enforcement agency that receives a registration cancellation form shall electronically notify the CBI of the registration cancellation. If the person moves to another state, the CBI shall promptly notify the agency responsible for registration in the other state.

(b) If a person fails to submit the new registration form or registration cancellation form as required in paragraph (a) of this subsection (4) and the address at which the person is no longer residing is a group facility, officials at such facility may provide information concerning the person's cessation of residency to the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which the address is located. If the person is a juvenile or developmentally disabled and fails to submit the registration cancellation form as required in paragraph (a) of this subsection (4) and the address at which the person is no longer residing is the residence of his or her parent or legal guardian, the person's parent or legal guardian may provide information concerning the person's cessation of residency to the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which the address is located. Any law enforcement agency that receives such information shall reflect in its records that the person no longer resides at said group facility or the parent's or legal guardian's residence and shall transmit such information to the CBI. Provision of information by a group facility or a person's parent or legal guardian pursuant to this paragraph (b) shall not constitute a defense to a charge of failure to register as a sex offender.

(5) During the initial registration process for a temporary resident, the local law enforcement agency with which the temporary resident is registering shall provide the temporary resident with the registration information specified in section 16-22-105. A temporary resident who is required to register pursuant to the provisions of section 16-22-103 shall, within five business days after arrival in Colorado, register with the local law enforcement agency of each jurisdiction in which the temporary resident resides.

(6) Any person required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103, at the time the person registers with any local law enforcement agency in this state, and thereafter when annually reregistering on the person's birthday or the first business day following the birthday as required in paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section, shall sit for a current photograph or image of himself or herself and shall supply a set of fingerprints to verify the person's identity. The person shall bear the cost of the photograph or image and fingerprints.

(7) (a) A local law enforcement agency may establish a registration fee to be paid by persons registering and reregistering annually or quarterly with the local law enforcement agency pursuant to the provisions of this section. The amount of the fee shall reflect the actual direct costs incurred by the local law enforcement agency in implementing the provisions of this article but shall not exceed seventy-five dollars for the initial registration with the local law enforcement agency and twenty-five dollars for any subsequent annual or quarterly registration.

(b) The local law enforcement agency may waive the fee for an indigent person. For all other persons, the local law enforcement agency may pursue payment of the fee through a civil collection process or any other lawful means if the person is unable to pay at the time of registration. A local law enforcement agency shall accept a timely registration in all circumstances even if the person is unable to pay the fee at the time of registration.

(c) A local law enforcement agency may not charge a fee to a person who provides an update to his or her information pursuant to subsection (3) of this section.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1167, § 1, effective July 1; (3) amended, p. 1201, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2004: (1)(a), (1)(b), (1)(d)(I), (1)(d)(II)(A), (1)(e), (3)(d), (5), and (6) amended and (1)(d)(I.5) and (7) added, pp. 1112, 1114, §§ 8, 9, effective May 27. L. 2007: (1)(c) amended and (3)(a.5) added, p. 211, §§ 2, 3, effective March 26; (2.5) and (3)(g) added and (3)(e) and (3)(f) amended, pp. 1680, 1681, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 2010: (2.5)(c) amended, (SB 10-140), ch. 156, p. 537, § 7, effective April 21. L. 2011: (1)(b), IP(3), (3)(a.5), (4), and (7) amended, (HB 11-1278), ch. 224, p. 961, § 6, effective May 27. L. 2012: (1)(a), (1)(d)(I), IP(3), and (3)(f) amended and (3)(h) and (3)(i) added, (HB12-1346), ch. 220, p. 942, § 4, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Defendant charged under former version of registration statute is properly registered if he or she registers either on his or her birth-day or the first business day thereafter. Court may not infer the intent of the general assembly by review of a subsequent amendment to the statute, and plain meaning of prior statute allowed for registration on either day. People v. Duncan, 109 P.3d 1044 (Colo. App. 2004) (decided under former § 18-3-412.5 (3)(a)(I)).

16-22-109. Registration forms - local law enforcement agencies - duties. (1) The director of the CBI shall prescribe standardized forms to be used to comply with this article, and the CBI shall provide copies of the standardized forms to the courts, probation departments, community corrections programs, the department of corrections, the department of human services, and local law enforcement agencies. The standardized forms may be provided in electronic form. The standardized forms shall be used to register persons pursuant to this article and to enable persons to cancel registration, as necessary. The standardized forms shall provide that the persons required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 disclose such information as is required on the standardized forms. The information required on the standardized forms shall include, but need not be limited to:

(a) The name, date of birth, address, and place of employment of the person required to register, and, if the place of employment is at an institution of postsecondary education, all addresses and locations of the institution of postsecondary education at which the person may be physically located;

(a.3) If the person's place of residence is a trailer or motor home, the address at which the trailer or motor home is lawfully located and the vehicle identification number, license tag number, registration number, and description, including color scheme, of the trailer or motor home;

(a.5) If the person is volunteering at an institution of postsecondary education, all addresses and locations of the institution of postsecondary education at which the person may be physically located;

(a.7) If the person enrolls or is enrolled in an institution of a postsecondary education, all addresses and locations of the institution of postsecondary education at which the person attends classes or otherwise participates in required activities;

(a.9) If a person lacks a fixed residence, any public or private locations where the person may be found or habitually sleeps, which information may include, but need not be limited to, cross-streets, intersections, directions to or identifiable landmarks of the locations, or any other information necessary to accurately identify the locations;

(b) All names used at any time by the person required to register, including both aliases and legal names;

(c) For any person who is a temporary resident of the state, the person's address in his or her state of permanent residence and the person's place of employment in this state or the educational institution in which he or she is enrolled in this state and, if the temporary resident of the state is enrolled in, employed by, or volunteers at an institution of postsecondary education, all addresses and locations of the institution of postsecondary education at which the temporary resident attends classes or otherwise participates in required activities or works or performs volunteer activities;

(d) The name, address, and location of any institution of postsecondary education where the person required to register is enrolled;

(e) The name, address, and location of any institution of postsecondary education where the person required to register volunteers;

(f) The vehicle identification number, license tag number, registration number, and description, including color scheme, of any motor vehicle owned or leased by the person;

(g) All e-mail addresses, instant-messaging identities, and chat room identities to be used by the person if the person is required to register that information pursuant to section 16-22-108 (2.5).

(2) The standardized forms prepared by the CBI pursuant to this section, including electronic versions of said forms, shall be admissible in court without exclusion on hearsay or other evidentiary grounds and shall be self-authenticating as a public record pursuant to the Colorado rules of evidence.

(3) Upon receipt of any completed registration form pursuant to this article, the local law enforcement agency shall retain a copy of such form and shall report the registration to the CBI in the manner and on the standardized form prescribed by the director of the CBI. The local law enforcement agency shall, within three business days after the date on which a person is required to register, report to the CBI such registration and, if it is the registrant's first registration with the local law enforcement agency, transmit the registrant's fingerprints to the CBI. The local law enforcement agency shall transfer additional sets of fingerprints only when requesting CBI to conduct a comparison. The local law enforcement agency shall transmit a photograph of a registrant only upon request of the CBI.

(3.5) (a) The local law enforcement agency with which a person registers pursuant to this article shall, as soon as possible following the registrant's first registration with the local law enforcement agency and at least annually thereafter, verify the residential address reported by the registrant on the standardized form; except that, if the registrant is a sexually violent predator, the local law enforcement agency shall verify the registrant's residential address quarterly.

(b) If a person registers as "lacks a fixed residence", verification of the location or locations reported by the person shall be accomplished by the self-verification enhanced reporting process as described in paragraph (c) of this subsection (3.5). A local law enforcement agency shall not be required to verify the physical location of a person who is required to comply with the self-verification enhanced reporting process.

(c) (I) In addition to any other requirements pursuant to this article, a person who is subject to annual registration and who lacks a fixed residence shall, at least every three months, report to the local law enforcement agency in whose jurisdiction or jurisdictions the person is registered for the self-verification enhancement reporting of the location or locations where the person remains without a fixed residence. The self-verification process shall be accomplished consistent with any time schedule established by the local jurisdiction, which may include a time schedule that is within five business days before or after the person's birthday. The person shall be required to verify his or her location or locations and verify any and all information required to be reported pursuant to this section.

(II) In addition to any other requirements pursuant to this article, a person who is subject to quarterly registration or registration every three months and who lacks a fixed residence shall, at least every month, report to each local law enforcement agency in whose jurisdiction the person is registered for the self-verification enhanced reporting of the location or locations where the person remains without a fixed residence. The self-verification process shall be accomplished consistent with any time schedule established by the local jurisdiction, which may include a time schedule that is within five business days before or after the person's birthday. The person shall be required to verify his or her location or locations and verify any and all information required to be reported pursuant to section 16-22-109.

(III) A person required to register pursuant to this article who lacks a fixed residence and who fails to comply with the provisions of subparagraphs (I) and (II) of this paragraph (c) is subject to prosecution for the crime of failure to verify location as defined in section 18-3-412.6, C.R.S.

(d) Beginning on July 1, 2012, and ending January 1, 2015, the Colorado bureau of investigation and each local law enforcement agency, subject to available resources, shall report every six months to the department of public safety the number of persons who registered without a fixed residence. The department may require additional information to be reported. By March 31, 2015, the department shall assess the effectiveness of the registration for offenders who lack a fixed residence.

(4) The forms completed by persons required to register pursuant to this article shall be confidential and shall not be open to inspection by the public or any person other than law enforcement personnel, except as provided in sections 16-22-110 (6), 16-22-111, and 16-22-112 and section 25-1-124.5, C.R.S.

(5) Notwithstanding any provision of this article to the contrary, a requirement for electronic notification or electronic transmission of information specified in this article shall be effective on and after January 1, 2005. Prior to said date, or if an agency does not have access to electronic means of transmitting information, the notification and information requirements shall be met by providing the required notification or information by a standard means of transmittal.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1170, § 1, effective July 1; (1) amended, p. 1201, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2003: (5) RC&RE, p. 760, § 4, effective March 25. L. 2004: (1)(a), (1)(a.5), and (3) amended, (3.5) added, and (5) RC&RE, p. 1115, §§ 10, 11, effective May 27. L. 2006: (1)(a.3) added, p. 1005, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2007: IP(1) and (1)(a.3) amended and (1)(f) added, p. 210, § 1, effective March 26; IP(1) amended and (1)(g) added, p. 1682, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2012: (1)(a.9) added and (3.5) amended, (HB 12-1346), ch. 220, p. 943, § 5, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) Subsection (5)(b) provided for the repeal of subsection (5), effective January 1, 2003. (See L. 2002, p. 1170.)

(2) Subsection (5)(b) provided for the repeal of subsection (5), effective January 1, 2004. (See L. 2003, p. 760.)

16-22-110. Colorado sex offender registry - creation - maintenance - release of information. (1) The director of the Colorado bureau of investigation shall establish a statewide central registry of persons required to register pursuant to section 16-8-115 or 16-8-118 or as a condition of parole or pursuant to this article, to be known as the Colorado sex offender registry. The CBI shall create and maintain the sex offender registry as provided in this section. In addition, the CBI shall be the official custodian of all registration forms completed pursuant to this article and other documents associated with sex offender registration created pursuant to this article.

(2) The sex offender registry shall provide, at a minimum, the following information to all criminal justice agencies with regard to registered persons:

- (a) Identification of a person's registration status;
- (b) A person's date of birth;
- (c) Descriptions of the offenses of unlawful sexual behavior of which a person has been convicted;
- (d) Identification of persons who are identified as sexually violent predators;
- (e) Notification to local law enforcement agencies when a person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 fails to register, when a person is required to reregister as provided in section 16-22-108, or when a person reregisters with another jurisdiction in accordance with the provisions of section 16-22-108;
- (f) Specification of modus operandi information concerning any person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103.

(3) (a) In addition to the sex offender registry, the CBI shall maintain one or more interactive data base systems to provide, at a minimum, cross validation of a registrant's known names and known addresses with information maintained by the department of revenue concerning driver's licenses and identification cards issued under article 2 of title 42, C.R.S. Discrepancies between the known names or known addresses listed in the sex offender registry and information maintained by the department of revenue shall be reported through the Colorado crime information center to each local law enforcement agency that has jurisdiction over the location of the person's last-known residences.

(b) The Colorado integrated criminal justice information system established pursuant to article 20.5 of this title shall be used to facilitate the exchange of information among agencies as required in this subsection (3) whenever practicable.

(3.5) The Colorado bureau of investigation shall develop an interactive database within the sex offender registry to provide, at a minimum, the following information to all criminal justice agencies in whose jurisdictions an institution of postsecondary education is located:

- (a) Identification of all persons required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 who volunteer or are employed or enrolled at an institution of postsecondary education and the institution at which each such person volunteers, is employed, or is enrolled;

(b) Identification of all persons who are sexually violent predators who volunteer or are employed or enrolled at an institution of postsecondary education and the institution at which each such person volunteers, is employed, or is enrolled.

(4) Upon development of the interactive databases pursuant to subsection (3) of this section, personnel in the judicial department, the department of corrections, and the department of human services shall be responsible for entering and maintaining in the databases the information specified in subsection (2) of this section for persons in those departments' legal or physical custody. Each local law enforcement agency shall be responsible for entering and maintaining in the databases the information for persons registered with the agency who are not in the physical or legal custody of the judicial department, the department of corrections, or the department of human services.

(5) The CBI, upon receipt of fingerprints and conviction data concerning a person convicted of unlawful sexual behavior, shall transmit promptly such fingerprints and conviction data to the federal bureau of investigation.

(6) (a) The general assembly hereby recognizes the need to balance the expectations of persons convicted of offenses involving unlawful sexual behavior and the public's need to adequately protect themselves and their children from these persons, as expressed in section 16-22-112 (1). The general assembly declares, however, that, in making information concerning persons convicted of offenses involving unlawful sexual behavior available to the public, it is not the general assembly's intent that the information be used to inflict retribution or additional punishment on any person convicted of unlawful sexual behavior or of another offense, the underlying factual basis of which involves unlawful sexual behavior.

(b) Pursuant to a request for a criminal history check under the provisions of part 3 of article 72 of title 24, C.R.S., the CBI may inform the requesting party as to whether the person who is the subject of the criminal history check is on the sex offender registry.

(c) 'A person may request from the CBI a list of persons on the sex offender registry.

(d) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2005, p. 611, § 1, effective May 27, 2005.)

(e) Any person requesting information pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (6) shall show proper identification.

(f) Information released pursuant to this subsection (6), at a minimum, shall include the name, address or addresses, and aliases of the registrant; the registrant's date of birth; a photograph of the registrant, if requested and readily available; and the conviction resulting in the registrant being required to register pursuant to this article. Information concerning victims shall not be released pursuant to this section.

(7) The CBI may assess reasonable fees for the search, retrieval, and copying of information requested pursuant to subsection (6) of this section. The amount of such fees shall reflect the actual costs, including but not limited to personnel and equipment, incurred in operating and maintaining the sex offender registry. Any such fees received shall be credited to the sex offender registry fund, which fund is hereby created in the state treasury. The moneys in the sex offender registry fund shall be subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly for the costs, including but not limited to personnel and equipment, incurred in operating and maintaining the sex offender registry. The sex offender registry fund shall consist of the moneys credited thereto pursuant to this subsection (7) and subsection (9) of this section and any additional moneys that may be appropriated thereto by the general assembly. All interest derived from the deposit and investment of moneys in the sex offender registry fund shall be credited to the fund. At the end of any fiscal year, all unexpended and unencumbered moneys in the sex offender registry fund shall remain therein and shall not be credited or transferred to the general fund or any other fund.

(8) Any information released pursuant to this section shall include in writing the following statement:

The Colorado sex offender registry includes only those persons who have been required by law to register and who are in compliance with the sex offender registration laws. Persons should not rely solely on the sex offender registry as a safeguard against perpetrators of sexual assault in their communities. The crime for which a person is convicted may not accurately reflect the level of risk.

(9) The CBI shall seek and is hereby authorized to receive and expend any public or private gifts, grants, or donations that may be available to implement the provisions of this article pertaining to establishment and maintenance of the sex offender registry, including but not limited to provisions pertaining to the initial registration of persons pursuant to section 16-22-104 and the transmittal of information between and among local law enforcement agencies, community corrections programs, the judicial department, the department of corrections, the department of human services, and the CBI. Any moneys received pursuant to this subsection (9), except federal moneys that are custodial funds, shall be transmitted to the state treasurer for deposit in the sex offender registry fund created in subsection (7) of this section.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1171, § 1, effective July 1; (1) amended, p. 500, § 5, effective July 1; (3.5) added, p. 1202, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2004: (2)(c), (3)(a), (6)(d), (6)(f), (7), and (9) amended, p. 1116, § 12, effective May 27. L. 2005: (6) amended, p. 611, § 1, effective May 27.

16-22-111. Internet posting of sex offenders - procedure. (1) The CBI shall post a link on the state of Colorado homepage on the internet to a list containing the names, addresses, and physical descriptions of certain persons and descriptions of the offenses committed by said persons. A person's physical description shall include, but need not be limited to, the person's sex, height, and weight, any identifying characteristics of the person, and a digitized photograph or image of the person. The list shall specifically exclude any reference to any victims of the offenses. The list shall include the following persons:

- (a) Any person who is a sexually violent predator;
- (b) Any person sentenced as or found to be a sexually violent predator under the laws of another state or jurisdiction;
- (c) Any person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 and who has been convicted as an adult of two or more of the following offenses:
 - (I) A felony offense involving unlawful sexual behavior; or
 - (II) A crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S.; and
- (d) Any person who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 because the person was convicted of a felony as an adult and who fails to register as required by section 16-22-108.

(1.5) In addition to the posting required by subsection (1) of this section, the CBI may post a link on the state of Colorado homepage on the internet to a list, including but not limited to the names, addresses, and physical descriptions of any person required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103, as a result of a conviction for a felony. A person's physical description shall include, but need not be limited to, the person's sex, height, weight, and any other identifying characteristics of the person. The list shall specifically exclude any reference to any victims of the offenses.

(2) (a) For purposes of paragraph (d) of subsection (1) of this section, a person's failure to register shall be determined by the CBI. Whenever the CBI's records show that a person has failed to register as required by this article, the CBI shall forward to each law enforcement agency with which the person is required to register notice of the person's failure to register by the required date. Each law enforcement agency, within three business days after receiving the notice, shall submit to the CBI written confirmation of the person's failure to register. Upon receipt of the written confirmation from the law enforcement agency, the CBI shall post the information concerning the person on the internet as required in this section.

(b) If a local law enforcement agency files criminal charges against a person for failure to register as a sex offender, as described in section 18-3-412.5, C.R.S., the local law enforcement agency shall notify the CBI. On receipt of the notification, the CBI shall post the information concerning the person on the internet, as specified in subsection (1) of this section.

(3) The internet posting required by this section shall be in addition to any other release of information authorized pursuant to this article or pursuant to part 9 of article 13 of this title, or any other provision of law.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1174, § 1, effective July 1; (1)(c)(II) amended, p. 1567, § 394, effective October 1. L. 2004: (1)(b) and (2) amended, p. 1117, § 13, effective May 27. L. 2005: (1.5) added, p. 615, § 3, effective May 27.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1)(c)(II), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Posting of defendant's personal information on the internet does not constitute additional punishment. People v. Stead, 66 P.3d 117 (Colo. App. 2002) (decided under § 18-3-412.5).

16-22-112. Release of information - law enforcement agencies. (1) The general assembly finds that persons convicted of offenses involving unlawful sexual behavior have a reduced expectation of privacy because of the public's interest in public safety. The general assembly further finds that the public must have access to information concerning persons convicted of offenses involving unlawful sexual behavior that is collected pursuant to this article to allow them to adequately protect themselves and their children from these persons. The general assembly declares, however, that, in making this information available to the public, as provided in this section and section 16-22-110 (6), it is not the general assembly's intent that the information be used to inflict retribution or additional punishment on any person convicted of unlawful sexual behavior or of another offense, the underlying factual basis of which involves unlawful sexual behavior.

(2) (a) A local law enforcement agency shall release information regarding any person registered with the local law enforcement agency pursuant to this article to any person residing within the local law enforcement agency's jurisdiction. In addition, the local law enforcement agency may post the information specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2) on the law enforcement agency's web site.

(b) A local law enforcement agency may post on its web site sex offender registration information of a person from its registration list only if the person is:

(I) An adult convicted of a felony requiring the adult to register pursuant to section 16-22-103;

(II) An adult convicted of a second or subsequent offense of any of the following misdemeanors:

(A) Sexual assault as described in section 18-3-402 (1) (e), C.R.S.;

(B) Unlawful sexual contact as described in section 18-3-404, C.R.S.;

(C) Sexual assault on a client as described in section 18-3-405.5 (2), C.R.S.;

(D) Sexual exploitation of a child by possession of sexually exploitive material as described in section 18-6-403, C.R.S.;

(E) Indecent exposure as described in section 18-7-302, C.R.S.; or

(F) Sexual conduct in a correctional institution as described in section 18-7-701, C.R.S.;

(III) A juvenile with a second or subsequent adjudication involving unlawful sexual behavior or for a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S.; or

(IV) A juvenile who is required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 because he or she was adjudicated for an offense that would have been a felony if committed by an adult and has failed to register as required by section 16-22-103.

(3) (a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2005, p. 612, § 2, effective May 27, 2005.)

(b) At its discretion, a local law enforcement agency may release information regarding any person registered with the local law enforcement agency pursuant to this article to any person who does not reside within the local law enforcement agency's jurisdiction or may post the information specified in paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section on the law enforcement agency's web site. If a local law enforcement agency does not elect to release information regarding any person registered with the local law enforcement agency to a person not residing within the local law enforcement agency's jurisdiction, the local law enforcement agency may submit a request from the person to the CBI.

(c) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2005, p. 612, § 2, effective May 27, 2005.)

(d) Upon receipt of a request for information from a law enforcement agency pursuant to this subsection (3), the CBI shall mail the requested information to the person making the request.

(e) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 648, § 1, effective April 26, 2007.)

(3.5) To assist members of the public in protecting themselves from persons who commit offenses involving unlawful sexual behavior, a local law enforcement agency that chooses to post sex offender registration information on its web site shall either post educational information concerning protection from sex offenders on its web site or provide a link to the educational information included on the CBI web site maintained pursuant to section 16-22-111. A local law enforcement agency that posts the educational information shall work with the sex offender management board created pursuant to section 16-11.7-103 and sexual assault victims' advocacy groups in preparing the educational information.

(4) Information released pursuant to this section, at a minimum, shall include the name, address or addresses, and aliases of the registrant; the registrant's date of birth; a photograph of the registrant, if requested and readily available; and a history of the convictions of unlawful sexual behavior resulting in the registrant being required to register pursuant to this article. Information concerning victims shall not be released pursuant to this section.

(5) Any information released pursuant to this section shall include in writing the following statement:

The Colorado sex offender registry includes only those persons who have been required by law to register and who are in compliance with the sex offender registration laws. Persons should not rely solely on the sex offender registry as a safeguard against perpetrators of sexual assault in their communities. The crime for which a person is convicted may not accurately reflect the level of risk.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1174, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2004: (4) amended, p. 1118, § 14, effective May 27. L. 2005: Entire section amended, p. 612, § 2, effective May 27. L. 2006: (2)(b)(III) and (3)(e)(III) amended, p. 421, § 2, effective April 13; (2)(b)(II)(D) amended, p. 2043, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2007: (3)(b) and (3)(e) amended and (3.5) added, p. 648, § 1, effective April 26. L. 2010: (2)(b)(II)(F) amended, (HB 10-1277), ch. 262, p. 1190, § 3, effective July 1.

16-22-113. Petition for removal from registry. (1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (3) of this section, any person required to register pursuant to section 16-22-103 or whose information is required to be posted on the internet pursuant to section 16-22-111 may file a petition with the court that issued the order of judgment for the conviction that requires the person to register for an order to discontinue the requirement for such registration or internet posting, or both, as follows:

(a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraphs (d), (e), and (f) of this subsection (1), if the offense that required such person to register constituted or would constitute a class 1, 2, or 3 felony, after a period of twenty years from the date of such person's discharge from the department of corrections, if such person was sentenced to incarceration, or discharge from the department of human services, if such person was committed, or final release from the jurisdiction of the court for such offense, if such person has not subsequently been convicted of unlawful sexual behavior or of any other offense, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior;

(b) Except as otherwise provided in paragraphs (d), (e), and (f) of this subsection (1), if the offense that required such person to register constituted or would constitute a class 4, 5, or 6 felony or the class 1 misdemeanor of unlawful sexual contact, as described in section 18-3-404, C.R.S., or sexual assault in the third degree as described in section 18-3-404, C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, after a period of ten years from the date of such person's discharge from the department of corrections, if such person was sentenced to incarceration, or discharge from the department of human services, if such person was committed, or final release from the jurisdiction of the court for such offense, if such person has not subsequently been convicted of unlawful sexual behavior or of any other offense, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior;

(c) Except as otherwise provided in paragraphs (d), (e), and (f) of this subsection (1), if the offense that required such person to register constituted or would constitute a misdemeanor other than the class 1 misdemeanor of unlawful sexual contact, as described in section 18-3-404, C.R.S., or sexual assault in the third degree as described in section 18-3-404, C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, after a period of five years from the date of such person's final release from the jurisdiction of the court for such offense, if such person has not subsequently been convicted of unlawful sexual behavior or of any other offense, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior;

(d) If the person was required to register due to being placed on a deferred judgment and sentence or a deferred adjudication for an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior, after the successful completion of the deferred judgment and sentence or deferred adjudication and dismissal of the case, if the person prior to such time has not been subsequently convicted of unlawful sexual behavior or of any other offense, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior and the court did not issue an order either continuing the duty to register or discontinuing the duty to register pursuant to paragraph (a) of subsection (1.3) of this section;

(e) If the person was younger than eighteen years of age at the time of disposition or adjudication, after the successful completion of and discharge from the sentence, if the person prior to such time has not been subsequently convicted of unlawful sexual behavior or of any other offense, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior and the court did not issue an order either continuing the duty to register or discontinuing the duty to register pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (1.3) of this section. Any person petitioning pursuant to this paragraph (e) may also petition for an order removing his or her name from the sex offender registry. In determining whether to grant the order, the court shall consider whether the person is likely to commit a subsequent offense of or involving unlawful sexual behavior. The court shall base its determination on recommendations from the person's probation or community parole officer, the person's treatment provider, and the prosecuting attorney for the jurisdiction in which the person was tried and on the recommendations included in the person's presentence investigation report. In addition, the court shall consider any written or oral testimony submitted by the victim of the offense for which the petitioner was required to register. Notwithstanding the provisions of this subsection (1), a juvenile who files a petition pursuant to this section may file the petition with the court to which venue is transferred pursuant to section 19-2-105, C.R.S., if any.

(f) If the information about the person was required to be posted on the internet pursuant to section 16-22-111 (1) (d) only for failure to register, if the person has fully complied with all registration requirements for a period of not less than one year and if the person, prior to such time, has not been subsequently convicted of unlawful sexual behavior or of any other offense, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior; except that the provisions of this paragraph (f) shall apply only to a petition to discontinue the requirement for internet posting.

(1.3) (a) If a person is eligible to petition to discontinue his or her duty to register pursuant to paragraph (d) of subsection (1) of this section, the court, at least sixty-three days before dismissing the case, shall notify each of the parties described in paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section, the person, and the victim of the offense for which the person was required to register, if the victim has requested notice and has provided current contact information, that the court will consider whether to order that the person may discontinue his or her duty to register when the court dismisses the case as a result of the person's successful completion of the deferred judgment and sentence or deferred adjudication. The court shall set the matter for hearing if any of the parties described in paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section or the victim of the offense objects or if the person requests a hearing. If the court enters an order discontinuing the person's duty to register, the person shall send a copy of the order to each local law enforcement agency with which the person is registered and to the CBI. If the victim of the offense has requested notice, the court shall notify the victim of its decision either to continue or discontinue the person's duty to register.

(b) (I) If a juvenile is eligible to petition to discontinue his or her duty to register pursuant to paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section, the court, at least sixty-three days before discharging the juvenile's sentence, shall notify each of the parties described in paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section, the juvenile, and the victim of the offense for which the juvenile was required to register, if the victim has requested notice and has provided current contact information, that the court shall consider whether to order that the juvenile may discontinue his or her duty to register when the court discharges the juvenile's sentence. The court shall set the matter for hearing if any of the parties described in paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section or the victim of the offense objects, or if the juvenile requests a hearing, and shall consider the criteria in paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section in determining whether to continue or discontinue the duty to register. If the court enters an order discontinuing the juvenile's duty to register, the department of human services shall send a copy of the order to each local law enforcement agency with which the juvenile is registered, the juvenile parole board, and to the CBI. If the victim of the offense has requested notice, the court shall notify the victim of its decision either to continue or discontinue the juvenile's duty to register.

(II) If a juvenile is eligible to petition to discontinue his or her registration pursuant to paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section and is under the custody of the department of human services and yet to be released on parole by the juvenile parole board, the department of human services may petition the court to set a hearing pursuant to paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section at least sixty-three days before the juvenile is scheduled to appear before the juvenile parole board.

(III) If a juvenile is eligible to petition to discontinue his or her registration pursuant to paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section and is under the custody of the department of human services and yet to be released on parole by the juvenile parole board, the department of human services, prior to setting the matter for hearing, shall modify the juvenile's parole plan or parole hearing to acknowledge the court order or petition unless it is already incorporated in the parole plan.

(1.5) If the conviction that requires a person to register pursuant to the provisions of section 16-22-103 was not obtained from a Colorado court, the person seeking to discontinue registration or internet posting or both may file a civil case with the district court of the judicial district in which the person resides and seek a civil order to discontinue the requirement to register or internet posting or both under the circumstances specified in subsection (1) of this section.

(2) (a) Prior to filing a petition pursuant to this section, the petitioner shall notify each of the following parties by certified mail of the petitioner's intent to file a request pursuant to this section:

(I) Each local law enforcement agency with which the petitioner is required to register;

(II) The prosecuting attorney for the jurisdiction in which each such local law enforcement agency is located; and

(III) The prosecuting attorney who obtained the conviction for which the petitioner is required to register.

(b) When filing the petition, the petitioner shall attach to the petition copies of the return receipts received from each party notified pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2).

(c) Upon the filing of the petition, the court shall set a date for a hearing and shall notify the victim of the offense for which the petitioner was required to register, if the victim of the offense has requested notice and has provided current contact information. If the court enters an order discontinuing the petitioner's duty to register, the petitioner shall send a copy of the order to each local law enforcement agency with which the petitioner is registered and the CBI. If the victim of the offense has requested notice, the court shall notify the victim of the offense of its decision either to continue or discontinue the petitioner's duty to register.

(d) On receipt of a copy of an order discontinuing a petitioner's duty to register:

(I) The CBI shall remove the petitioner's sex offender registration information from the sex offender registry; and

(II) If the local law enforcement agency maintains a local registry of sex offenders who are registered with the local law enforcement agency, the local law enforcement agency shall remove the petitioner's sex offender registration information from the local sex offender registry.

(3) The following persons shall not be eligible for relief pursuant to this section, but shall be subject for the remainder of their natural lives to the registration requirements specified in this article or to the comparable requirements of any other jurisdictions in which they may reside:

(a) Any person who is a sexually violent predator;

(b) Any person who is convicted as an adult of:

(I) Sexual assault, in violation of section 18-3-402, C.R.S., or sexual assault in the first degree, in violation of section 18-3-402, C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, or sexual assault in the second degree, in violation of section 18-3-403, C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000; or

(II) Sexual assault on a child, in violation of section 18-3-405, C.R.S.; or

(III) Sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, in violation of section 18-3-405.3, C.R.S.; or

(IV) Sexual assault on a client by a psychotherapist, in violation of section 18-3-405.5, C.R.S.; or

(V) Incest, in violation of section 18-6-301, C.R.S.; or

(VI) Aggravated incest, in violation of section 18-6-302, C.R.S.;

(c) Any adult who has more than one conviction or adjudication for unlawful sexual behavior in this state or any other jurisdiction.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1176, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2004: IP(1) and (2)(c) amended and (1.5) and (2)(d) added, p. 1118, §§ 15, 16, effective May 27. L. 2008: (1)(e) amended, p. 654, § 2, effective April 25; (1)(e) amended, p. 1755, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2011: IP(1), (1)(d), (1)(e), and IP(2)(d) amended and (1.3) added, (HB 11-1278), ch. 224, p. 962, § 7, effective May 27. L. 2012: (1.3)(a), (1.3)(b)(I), and (1.3)(b)(II) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 861, § 100, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) Amendments to subsection (1)(e) by Senate Bill 08-172 and House Bill 08-1382 were harmonized.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (1.3)(a), (1.3)(b)(I), and (1.3)(b)(II) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Individual who successfully completes a deferred judgment and sentence for sexual assault on a child is eligible to petition the court for removal from the sex offender registry. People v. Perry, 252 P.3d 45 (Colo. App. 2010).

Conviction on more than one charge of unlawful sexual behavior, whether adjudicated in the same case or in separate cases, renders defendant ineligible for relief from status as a sex offender and for removal from sex offender registry. Statute contains no explicit limiting language that would require "multiple convictions" to be the result of more than one proceeding. People v. Atencio, 219 P.3d 1080 (Colo. App. 2009).

16-22-114. Immunity. State agencies and their employees and local law enforcement agencies and their employees are immune from civil or criminal liability for the good faith implementation of this article.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1178, § 1, effective July 1.

16-22-115. CBI assistance in apprehending sex offenders who fail to register. In an effort to ensure that a sexual offender who fails to respond to address-verification attempts or who otherwise absconds from registration is located in a timely manner, the Colorado bureau of investigation shall share information with local law enforcement agencies. The Colorado bureau of investigation shall use analytical resources to assist local law enforcement agencies to determine the potential whereabouts of sex offenders who fail to respond to address-verification attempts or who otherwise abscond from registration. The Colorado bureau of investigation shall review and analyze all available information concerning a sex offender who fails to respond to address-verification attempts or otherwise absconds from registration and provide the information to local law enforcement agencies in order to assist in locating and apprehending the sex offender.

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 1005, § 1, effective July 1.

ARTICLE 23

DNA Crime Prevention and Exoneration of the Innocent Act

16-23-101.	Short title.		rested for or charged with felonies.
16-23-102.	Legislative declaration.
16-23-103.	Collection of biological samples from persons ar-	16-23-104.	Collection and testing.
		16-23-105.	Expungement.

16-23-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as “Katie’s Law”.

Source: L. 2009: Entire article added, (SB 09-241), ch. 295, p. 1573 § 1, effective September 30, 2010.

16-23-102. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that:

- (a) The collection and use of DNA by law enforcement agencies is a valuable tool in preventing crime;
- (b) The analysis of DNA has been used numerous times in the exoneration of innocent individuals charged with or convicted of crimes; and
- (c) The implementation of this article will result in preventing a significant number of violent crimes in Colorado and in solving a number of unsolved crimes in Colorado.

Source: L. 2009: Entire article added, (SB 09-241), ch. 295, p. 1573, § 1, effective September 30, 2010.

16-23-103. Collection of biological samples from persons arrested for or charged with felonies. (1) The following persons shall submit to collection of a biological substance sample for testing to determine the genetic markers thereof, unless the person has previously provided a biological substance sample for such testing pursuant to a statute of this state and the Colorado bureau of investigation has that sample:

- (a) Every adult arrested on or after September 30, 2010, for a felony offense or for the investigation of a felony offense. The arresting law enforcement agency shall collect the biological substance sample from the arrested person as part of the booking process.
- (b) (I) Every adult who is charged with a felony by an indictment, information, or felony complaint filed on or after September 30, 2010, and who is not arrested in connection with the felony charge on or after September 30, 2010, whether because the person’s arrest occurred before that date, because the person’s appearance is procured by summons rather than arrest, or for other reasons.
- (II) In cases where a booking process occurs on or after September 30, 2010, the law enforcement agency conducting the booking process shall collect the biological substance sample from the charged adult as part of the booking process.
- (III) In all other cases, upon the adult’s first appearance in court following the filing of charges, the court shall require the adult to submit to collection of a biological substance sample by the investigating agency responsible for fingerprinting pursuant to section 16-21-104, and that agency shall collect the sample.

(2) (a) At the person's first appearance in court following the filing of charges, the court shall advise the person that the biological substance sample collected pursuant to this section shall be destroyed and the results of the testing of the sample shall be expunged from the federal combined DNA index system and any state index system pursuant to the circumstances described in section 16-23-105.

(b) When an action occurs that qualifies an adult for expungement pursuant to section 16-23-105 (1), the court or district attorney shall advise the adult that the adult may make a request to the Colorado bureau of investigation to have the biological substance sample collected pursuant to this section destroyed and results of the testing of the sample expunged from the federal combined DNA index system and any state index system pursuant to the process described in section 16-23-105.

(3) If collection of a biological substance sample is impractical at the time specified in subsection (1) of this section, an appropriate agency may collect a sample at any other time during the adult's detention or during the pendency of charges.

(4) An agency collecting a biological substance sample pursuant to this section shall make reasonable efforts to determine if the Colorado bureau of investigation already holds a biological substance sample from the adult. If, but only if, the agency determines that the Colorado bureau of investigation already holds a sample from the adult, then the agency need not collect a sample.

(5) A law enforcement agency may use reasonable force to collect biological substance samples in accordance with this article using medically recognized procedures.

(6) Each law enforcement agency that collects a biological substance sample shall submit the sample to the Colorado bureau of investigation for testing.

Source: L. 2009: Entire article added, (SB 09-241), ch. 295, p. 1574, § 1, effective September 30, 2010.

16-23-104. Collection and testing. (1) The Colorado bureau of investigation shall provide all specimen vials, mailing tubes, labels, and other materials and instructions necessary for the collection of biological substance samples required pursuant to this article.

(2) The Colorado bureau of investigation shall chemically test the biological substance samples collected pursuant to this article. The Colorado bureau of investigation shall file and maintain the testing results in the state index system after receiving confirmation from the arresting or charging agency that the adult was charged with a felony. If the Colorado bureau of investigation does not receive confirmation of a felony charge within a year after receiving the sample for testing, the Colorado bureau of investigation shall destroy the biological sample and any results from the testing of the sample. The Colorado bureau of investigation shall furnish the results to a law enforcement agency upon request. The Colorado bureau of investigation shall store and preserve all biological substance samples obtained pursuant to this article.

Source: L. 2009: Entire article added, (SB 09-241), ch. 295, p. 1575, § 1, effective September 30, 2010.

16-23-105. Expungement. (1) Except as provided in subsection (7) of this section, a person whose biological substance sample is collected pursuant to section 16-23-103 qualifies for expungement if:

(a) In the case of a sample collected based upon the filing of a charge or based upon a final court order, each felony charge stemming from the charges has, by final court order, been dismissed, resulted in an acquittal, or resulted in a conviction for an offense other than a felony offense;

(b) In the case of a sample collected based upon an arrest:

(I) A felony charge was not filed within ninety days after the arrest; or

(II) Each felony charge stemming from the arrest has, by final court order, been dismissed, resulted in an acquittal, or resulted in a conviction for an offense other than a felony offense.

(2) A person who qualifies for expungement under subsection (1) of this section may submit a written request for expungement to the Colorado bureau of investigation. The request shall include the items listed in this subsection (2) and may include any additional information that may assist the bureau in locating the records of arrest or charges or the biological substance sample or testing results. The following information shall be included in the submitted request:

- (a) The person's name, date of birth, and mailing address;
- (b) The name of the agency that collected the biological substance sample;
- (c) The date of arrest or other date when the sample was taken;
- (d) Whether any charges were filed stemming from the arrest for which a biological substance sample was collected, the identity of the court, and the case number of each case in which charges were filed; and
- (e) A declaration that, to the best of the person's knowledge, he or she qualifies for expungement.

(3) Upon receipt of a request satisfying the requirements of subsection (2) of this section, the Colorado bureau of investigation shall promptly submit a written inquiry to the district attorney in the jurisdiction in which the person's biological substance sample was collected concerning the outcome of the arrest or charges.

(4) Within ninety days after receiving the request submitted pursuant to subsection (2) of this section, the Colorado bureau of investigation shall destroy the biological substance sample collected pursuant to section 16-23-103 and expunge the results of the testing of the sample from the federal combined DNA index system and any state index system, unless the bureau receives written notification from the applicable district attorney that the person does not qualify for expungement and the reasons that the person does not qualify.

(5) Within thirty days after receiving a notice from a district attorney pursuant to subsection (4) of this section, or at the end of the ninety-day period identified in subsection (4) of this section, whichever is earlier, the Colorado bureau of investigation shall send notification by first class mail to the person arrested or charged, either stating that the bureau has destroyed the biological substance sample and expunged the results of the testing of the sample or stating why the bureau has not destroyed the sample and expunged the test results.

(6) A data bank or database match shall not be admitted as evidence against a person in a criminal prosecution and shall not be used as a basis to identify a person if the match is:

(a) Derived from a biological substance sample that is required to be destroyed or expunged pursuant to this section; and

(b) Obtained after the required date of destruction or expungement.

(7) This section shall not apply if the person has been arrested for, charged with, or convicted of some other offense on the basis of which a biological substance sample was or could have been collected under state statute.

(8) For purposes of this section, a court order shall not be deemed final if time remains for an appeal or application for discretionary review with respect to the order.

Source: L. 2009: Entire article added, (SB 09-241), ch. 295, p. 1575 § 1, effective September 30, 2010. L. 2011: (1)(a) amended, (HB 11-1051), ch. 17, p. 45, § 1, effective March 11.

TITLE 17
CORRECTIONS

TITLE 17

CORRECTIONS

Editor's note: This title was numbered as articles 17 and 18 of chapter 39, C.R.S. 1963. The substantive provisions of this title were repealed and reenacted in 1977, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For amendments to this title prior to 1977, consult Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume. Former C.R.S. section numbers are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated.

DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS

Organization

Art. 1. Department of Corrections, 17-1-101 to 17-1-207.

Parole and Probation

Art. 2. Correctional Services, 17-2-100.2 to 17-2-405.

Care and Custody - Reimbursement

Art. 10. Cost of Care Reimbursement, 17-10-101 to 17-10-106.

CORRECTIONAL FACILITIES AND PROGRAMS

Facilities

Art. 18. Correctional Facilities - Statutory Appropriations, 17-18-101 to 17-18-107.

Art. 19. Correctional Facilities - Visitors and Employees, 17-19-101 and 17-19-102.

Art. 20. Correctional Facilities, 17-20-101 to 17-20-128.

Art. 21. Women's Correctional Institution (Repealed).

Art. 22. Reformatory (Repealed).

Art. 22.5. Inmate and Parole Time Computation, 17-22.5-101 to 17-22.5-407.

Art. 23. Inmates with Mental Illness or a Developmental Disability - Transfer, 17-23-101 to 17-23-103.

Art. 24. Correctional Industries, 17-24-101 to 17-24-126.

Art. 25. Minimum Security Facilities, 17-25-101 to 17-25-103.

Art. 26. Jails, 17-26-101 to 17-26-208.

Art. 26.5. Multijurisdictional Jails, 17-26.5-101 and 17-26.5-102.

Programs

Art. 27. Community Corrections Programs, 17-27-101 to 17-27-108.

Art. 27.1. Nongovernmental Facilities - Notice Requirements, 17-27.1-101.

Art. 27.5. Intensive Supervision Programs, 17-27.5-101 to 17-27.5-106.

Art. 27.7. Regimented Inmate Discipline and Treatment Program, 17-27.7-101 to 17-27.7-105.

Art. 27.8. Home Detention Programs, 17-27.8-101 to 17-27.8-106.

Art. 27.9. Specialized Restitution and Community Service Programs, 17-27.9-101 to 17-27.9-106.

Art. 28. Restitution to Victims of Crime, 17-28-101 and 17-28-102.

Art. 29. Physical Labor by Inmates, 17-29-101 to 17-29-105.

Art. 30. Interdepartmental Cooperation Concerning Offenders (Repealed).

- Art. 30.5. Interdepartmental Agreements to Consolidate Parole and Probation Offices (Repealed).
- Art. 31. Volunteerism in the Juvenile and Adult Criminal Justice System, 17-31-101 to 17-31-104.
- Art. 32. Correctional Education Program, 17-32-101 to 17-32-107.
- Art. 33. Reentry Program, 17-33-101.

DIAGNOSTIC PROGRAMS

- Art. 40. Colorado Diagnostic Program, 17-40-101 to 17-40-107.
- Art. 41. Colorado Prerelease Program (Repealed).

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

- Art. 42. Miscellaneous Provisions, 17-42-101 and 17-42-102.

DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS

Organization

ARTICLE 1

Department of Corrections

Editor's note: For historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor's note at the beginning of this title.

PART 1

CORRECTIONS ADMINISTRATION

- | | | | |
|-------------|--|-------------|--|
| | | 17-1-104.8. | Legislative review of facilities program plans for correctional facilities. |
| | | 17-1-104.9. | Custody levels for state inmates at private prisons - correctional emergency - definition. |
| 17-1-101. | Executive director - creation - division heads - medical personnel. | 17-1-105. | Powers of executive director. |
| 17-1-102. | Definitions. | 17-1-105.1. | Accreditation of private contract prisons. |
| 17-1-103. | Duties of the executive director. | 17-1-105.5. | Contract rates. |
| 17-1-103.5. | Literacy corrections program - legislative declaration - repeal. (Repealed) | 17-1-106. | Transfer of functions. (Repealed) |
| 17-1-103.7. | Duties of executive director - emergency response time - legislative declaration. (Repealed) | 17-1-107. | Department may accept gifts, donations, and grants. |
| | | 17-1-107.5. | State criminal alien assistance program cash fund - creation. |
| 17-1-103.8. | Duties of executive director - inspector general - investigators - duties. | 17-1-108. | Transfer of inmates. |
| | | 17-1-109. | Duties and functions of the warden. |
| 17-1-104. | Facilities managed, supervised, and controlled. (Repealed) | 17-1-109.5. | Correctional facility employees - rules. |
| 17-1-104.3. | Correctional facilities - locations - security level. | 17-1-110. | Joint review committee on corrections. (Repealed) |
| 17-1-104.4. | Future correctional facility needs. (Repealed) | 17-1-111. | Certain provisions of the administrative procedure act not to apply. |
| 17-1-104.5. | Incarceration of inmates from other states - private contract prison facilities. | 17-1-112. | Expenses - reimbursement by department. |
| 17-1-104.6. | Planning and review requirements - legislative intent. | 17-1-112.5. | Annual audit by state auditor. (Repealed) |
| 17-1-104.7. | Management plan for housing of juveniles - report. (Repealed) | 17-1-113. | Medical visits - charge to inmates - legislative declaration. |
| | | 17-1-113.1. | Administration or monitoring |

	of medications to persons in correctional facilities.		section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1158. (Repealed)
17-1-113.3.	Telemedicine - study - report - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-128.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1111. (Repealed)
17-1-113.5.	Inmates held in correctional facilities - medical benefits application assistance - county of residence.	17-1-129.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1214. (Repealed)
17-1-113.7.	Prohibition against the use of restraints on pregnant inmates in the custody of correctional facilities and private contract prisons.	17-1-130.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1201. (Repealed)
17-1-113.9.	Use of administrative segregation for state inmates - reporting.	17-1-131.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1317. (Repealed)
17-1-114.	Pool of funds - continuance of community supervision.	17-1-132.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1107. (Repealed)
17-1-115.	Investigators employed by the department - notification to local law enforcement agencies. (Repealed)	17-1-133.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 01-1205. (Repealed)
17-1-115.5.	Prison sexual assault prevention program.	17-1-134.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 01-046. (Repealed)
17-1-116.	Corrections expansion reserve fund.	17-1-135.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 01-1204. (Repealed)
17-1-117.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 94-1052. (Repealed)	17-1-136.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 01-210. (Repealed)
17-1-118.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 96-1361. (Repealed)	17-1-137.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 01-1242. (Repealed)
17-1-119.	Lethal perimeter security systems for correctional facilities - governmental immunity - limitations.	17-1-138.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 01-1344. (Repealed)
17-1-119.5.	Compilation of data related to inmates with children attending school.	17-1-139.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02-1301. (Repealed)
17-1-120.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 97-1077 and HB 97-1060. (Repealed)	17-1-140.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02-1283. (Repealed)
17-1-121.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 97-1186. (Repealed)	17-1-141.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02-1396. (Repealed)
17-1-122.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 98-1160. (Repealed)	17-1-142.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 02-050. (Repealed)
17-1-123.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 98-1156. (Repealed)	17-1-143.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02-1038. (Repealed)
17-1-124.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 98-021. (Repealed)	17-1-144.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02S-1006. (Repealed)
17-1-125.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 99-1068. (Repealed)	17-1-145.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02S-1006. (Repealed)
17-1-126.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1247. (Repealed)	17-1-146.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 03-1004 - repeal. (Repealed)
17-1-127.	Appropriation to comply with	17-1-147.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 03-1138 - repeal. (Repealed)
		17-1-148.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 03-1213 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-161.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06S-005 - repeal. (Repealed)

17-1-149.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 03-1317 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-162.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06S-007 - repeal. (Repealed)
17-1-150.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 04-1016 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-163.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 07-1040 - repeal. (Repealed)
17-1-151.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 04-1003 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-164.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 07-096 - repeal. (Repealed)
17-1-152.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 04-1021 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-165.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 07-1326 - repeal. (Repealed)
17-1-153.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06-207 - repeal. (Repealed)
17-1-154.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1151 - repeal. (Repealed)		PART 2
17-1-155.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1011 - repeal. (Repealed)		CORRECTIONS PRIVATIZATION - REQUESTS FOR PROPOSALS PROCESS
17-1-156.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1145 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-201.	Duties of department.
17-1-157.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1326 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-202.	Requests for competitive proposals and contract requirements.
17-1-158.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06-206 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-202.5.	Private prison planning process.
17-1-159.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1092 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-203.	Powers and duties not delegable to contractor.
17-1-160.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06S-004 - repeal. (Repealed)	17-1-204.	Background checks.
		17-1-205.	Contract termination - control of a correctional facility by the department.
		17-1-206.	Inmates in custody of the department.
		17-1-206.5.	Parole release and revocation facility - community return-to-custody facility.
		17-1-207.	Applicability of part.

PART 1

CORRECTIONS ADMINISTRATION

17-1-101. Executive director - creation - division heads - medical personnel.

(1) The governor, with the consent of the senate, shall appoint an executive director of the department of corrections, who shall serve at the pleasure of the governor. The reappointment of an executive director after initial election of a governor shall be subject to the provisions of section 24-20-109, C.R.S.

(2) There is hereby created, within the department of corrections, the division of correctional industries, the division of adult parole, and such other divisions and programs as are deemed necessary by the executive director for the safe and efficient operation of the department. The executive director shall organize such divisions and programs in an appropriate manner. Subject to the provisions of section 13 of article XII of the state constitution, the executive director shall appoint the heads of such divisions, and the heads of such divisions shall appoint such personnel as are necessary to carry out the functions of the divisions.

(3) (a) Medical personnel employed at any of the institutions subject to the control of the executive director, the medical director of which is licensed to practice medicine in this state, shall be exempt from the provisions of the "Colorado Medical Practice Act", article 36 of title 12, C.R.S., with respect to service rendered to bona fide patients or inmates at said institutions, if such personnel are licensed to practice medicine in any other state of the United States or any province of Canada, have satisfactorily completed an internship of not less than one year in the United States, Canada, or Puerto Rico in a hospital approved for that purpose by the American medical association, have satisfactorily completed three years of postgraduate residency training, or its equivalent, in their particular specialty in a hospital approved for that purpose by the American medical association, and can read, write, speak, and understand the English language. Proof of said requirements shall be submitted to and approved or disapproved by the executive director.

(b) All such personnel as cannot satisfy all of the requirements set forth in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3) shall be exempt from the "Colorado Medical Practice Act", article 36 of title 12, C.R.S., with respect to services rendered to bona fide patients or inmates at said institutions, if such personnel are of good moral character, are graduates of an approved medical college as defined in section 12-36-102.5, C.R.S., have completed an approved internship of at least one year as defined in section 12-36-102.5, C.R.S., and, within nine months after first being employed, pass the examinations approved by the Colorado medical board under the provisions of the "Colorado Medical Practice Act" and the national board of medical examiners, the national board of examiners for osteopathic physicians and surgeons, or the federation of state medical boards, or their successor organizations, on subjects relating to the basic sciences, are able to read, write, speak, and understand the English language, and, in the case of personnel who are not citizens of the United States, become citizens within the minimum period of time within which the particular individual can become a citizen according to the laws of the United States and the regulations of the immigration and naturalization service of the United States, or any successor agency, or within such additional time as may be granted by said boards.

(c) Medical personnel granted exemption under paragraphs (a) and (b) of this subsection (3) may not practice medicine except as described in this subsection (3) without first complying with all of the provisions of said "Colorado Medical Practice Act".

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 903, § 10, effective August 1. L. 78: (3) added, p. 354, § 1, effective April 27. L. 79: (3) amended, p. 522, § 26, effective July 1. L. 86: (1) amended, p. 884, § 2, effective May 23. L. 2000: (2) amended, p. 829, § 1, effective May 24. L. 2010: (3)(b) amended, (HB 10-1260), ch. 403, p. 1986, § 73, effective July 1. L. 2011: (3)(b) amended, (HB 11-1303), ch. 264, p. 1155, § 27, effective August 10.

17-1-102. Definitions. As used in this title, unless the context otherwise requires:

- (1) and (1.3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 93, p. 404, § 1, effective April 19, 1993.)
- (1.7) "Correctional facility" means any facility under the supervision of the department in which persons are or may be lawfully held in custody as a result of conviction of a crime.
- (2) "Department" means the department of corrections.
- (3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 94, p. 602, § 2, effective July 1, 1994.)
- (4) "Executive director" means the executive director of the department of corrections.
- (5) and (6) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 829, § 2, effective May 24, 2000.)
- (6.5) "Inmate" means any person who is sentenced to a term of imprisonment for a violation of the laws of this state, any other state, or the United States.
- (7) "Local jail" means a jail or an adult detention center of a county or city and county.
- (7.3) "Private contract prison" means any private prison facility operated by a county, city and county, or private corporation located in this state; except that "private contract prison" does not include any local jail, multijurisdictional jail, or community corrections center.
- (7.5) (a) "Special needs offender" means a person in the custody of the department:
 - (I) Who is sixty years of age or older and has been diagnosed by a licensed health care provider who is employed by or under contract with the department as suffering from a chronic infirmity, illness, condition, disease, or mental illness and the department or the state board of parole determines that the person is incapacitated to the extent that he or she is not likely to pose a risk to public safety; or
 - (II) Who, as determined by a licensed health care provider who is employed by or under contract with the department, suffers from a chronic, permanent, terminal, or irreversible physical or mental illness, condition, disease, or mental illness that requires costly care or treatment and who is determined by the department or the state board of parole to be incapacitated to the extent that he or she is not likely to pose a risk to public safety.

(III) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2011, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, p. 831, § 1, effective May 23, 2011.)

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (7.5), "special needs offender" does not include a person who:

(I) Was convicted of a class 1 felony, unless the offense was committed before July 1, 1990, and the offender has served at least twenty years in a department of corrections facility for the offense; or

(II) Was convicted of a class 2 felony crime of violence as described in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., and the offender has served fewer than ten years in a department of corrections facility for the offense.

(III) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2011, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, p. 831, § 1, effective May 23, 2011.)

(8) "State inmate" means any person who is sentenced by the state to a term of imprisonment in a correctional facility or who is sentenced to a term of imprisonment pursuant to section 16-11-308.5, C.R.S.

(9) "Warden" means the administrative head of a correctional facility.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 904, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section R&RE, p. 685, § 21, effective July 1. L. 91: (1) amended and (1.3), (1.7), and (5) to (8) added, p. 336, § 1, effective May 24. L. 93: (1), (1.3), and (7) amended, p. 404, § 1, effective April 19. L. 94: (3) amended and (9) added, p. 602, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2000: (5), (6), (8), and (9) amended and (6.5) and (7.3) added, p. 829, § 2, effective May 24; (7.5) added, p. 1495, § 1, effective July 1, 2001. L. 2002: (7.5)(b)(II) and (7.5)(b)(III) amended, p. 1499, § 156, effective October 1. L. 2003: (7.5)(a) amended, p. 1910, § 1, effective August 6. L. 2006: (7.5)(a)(I) amended, p. 1398, § 44, effective August 7. L. 2011: (7.5) amended, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, p. 831, § 1, effective May 23.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (7.5)(b)(II) and (7.5)(b)(III), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-1-103. Duties of the executive director. (1) The duties of the executive director shall be:

(a) To manage, supervise, and control the correctional institutions operated and supported by the state; to monitor and supervise the activities of private contract prisons; to manage and supervise the divisions, agencies, boards, and commissions that are or may be transferred to or established within the department by law or by the executive director pursuant to section 17-1-101 (2); to provide work and self-improvement opportunities; and to establish an environment that promotes habilitation for successful reentry into society;

(a.5) To develop policies and procedures governing the operation of the department;

(b) To supervise the business, fiscal, budget, personnel, and financial operations of the department and the institutions and activities under his or her control;

(c) In consultation with the division directors and the wardens, to develop a systematic building program providing for the projected, long-range needs of the institutions under his or her control;

(d) To efficiently manage the lands associated with or owned by the department;

(e) To the extent practical, to utilize the staff and services of other state agencies and departments, within their respective statutory functions, to carry out the purposes of this title;

(f) To the extent practical, to develop within the correctional institutions industries that develop work skills for inmates and that also will serve the purpose of supplying necessary products for state institutions and other public purposes as provided by law;

(g) Repealed.

(h) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 830, § 3, effective May 24, 2000.)

(i) Repealed.

- (j) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 830, § 3, effective May 24, 2000.)
- (k) To carry out the duties prescribed in article 11.5 of title 16, C.R.S.;
- (l) To carry out the duties prescribed in article 11.7 of title 16, C.R.S.;
- (m) To provide information to the director of research of the legislative council concerning population projections, research data, and the projected long-range needs of the institutions under the control of the executive director and any other related data requested by the director;
- (n) To contract with the department of human services to house in a facility operated by the department of human services any juvenile under the age of fourteen years who is sentenced as an adult to the department of corrections and to provide services for the juvenile, as provided in section 19-2-518 (1) (e), C.R.S.;
- (o) To appoint an inspector general and investigators as provided in section 17-1-103.8;
- (p) Notwithstanding the provisions of the "Colorado Open Records Act", part 2 of article 72 of title 24, C.R.S., and part 3 of said article 72, to adopt such policies and guidelines as may be necessary concerning the release of records to inmates.
- (2) The executive director shall have such other duties and functions as are prescribed for heads of principal departments in the "Administrative Organization Act of 1968", article 1 of title 24, C.R.S.
- (3) (a) (I) The executive director shall, upon the recommendation of the department's chief medical officer, appoint a panel of medical consultants.
- (II) The executive director shall, upon the recommendation of the department's chief medical officer, determine the membership of the panel based on the medical and surgical needs of the department.
- (III) The executive director shall determine the qualifications for appointment to the panel of medical consultants; except that all members of the panel shall be licensed by the Colorado medical board pursuant to article 36 of title 12, C.R.S., or the state board of dental examiners pursuant to article 35 of title 12, C.R.S.
- (b) Members of the panel of medical consultants shall be compensated at a rate which shall be approved by the executive director. Compensation shall be paid from available funds of the department.
- (c) The panel members shall act as medical consultants to the department with respect to persons receiving services from any correctional facility as defined in section 17-1-102 (1.7).
- (d) A member of the panel of medical consultants, for all activities performed within the course and scope of said member's responsibilities to the department, shall be entitled to all of the protections of the "Colorado Governmental Immunity Act", article 10 of title 24, C.R.S., as if the panel member were a "public employee" as defined in section 24-10-103 (4), C.R.S. This provision shall not be construed to afford independent contractors hired as panel members any of the protections of the state personnel system, article 50 of title 24, C.R.S.
- (e) For purposes of this subsection (3), "panel of medical consultants" means a panel of medical physicians, dentists, or oral surgeons whose duty is to deliver medical services or services related to oral surgery.
- (4) For an inmate who was convicted as an adult of a class 1 felony following direct filing of an information or indictment in the district court pursuant to section 19-2-517, C.R.S., or transfer of proceedings to the district court pursuant to section 19-2-518, C.R.S., the executive director shall ensure that the inmate has the opportunity to participate in treatment, programs, and services that is equal to the opportunities granted to other inmates who will be eligible for parole or discharge.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 904, § 10, effective August 1. L. 83: (1)(g) and (1)(h) amended, p. 832, § 30, effective July 1. L. 88: (1)(a) amended, p. 696, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89, 1st Ex. Sess.: (1)(i) added, p. 77, § 3, effective July 1. L. 90: (1)(j) added, p. 941, § 5, effective June 7; (1)(a) amended, p. 976, § 2, effective July 1. L. 91: (1)(k) added, p. 441, § 4, effective May 29. L. 92: (1)(l) added, p. 461, § 4, effective June 2. L. 94: (2) added, p. 563, § 3, effective April 6; (3) added, p. 772, § 1, effective April 20; (1)(m) added, p. 1097, § 8, effective May 9; (1)(i) repealed, p. 1362, § 5, effective July 1.

L. 95: (3)(a) and (3)(e) amended, p. 879, § 16, effective May 24. L. 96: (1)(n) added, p. 1683, § 10, effective January 1, 1997. L. 98: (1)(g) amended, p. 726, § 7, effective May 18. L. 99: (1)(o) added, p. 424, § 2, effective April 30. L. 2000: (1)(a) to (1)(d), (1)(f), (1)(g), (1)(h), (1)(j), and (3)(e) amended and (1)(a.5) and (1)(p) added, p. 830, § 3, effective May 24. L. 2001: (1)(g) repealed, p. 1176, § 3, effective August 8. L. 2006: (4) added, p. 1055, § 8, effective May 25. L. 2009: (1)(p) amended, (SB 09-292), ch. 369, p. 1948, § 31, effective August 5. L. 2010: (3)(a)(III) amended, (HB 10-1260), ch. 403, p. 1986, § 74, effective July 1.

Cross references: (1) For additional authority for the executive director to enter into multi-jurisdictional jail agreements, see section 6 of chapter 120, Session Laws of Colorado 1990.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2006 act enacting subsection (4), see section 1 of chapter 228, Session Laws of Colorado 2006.

ANNOTATION

The department of corrections has the discretion to use a code of penal discipline conviction of a sexual nature to reclassify an inmate on the sexual violence scale. Reeves v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 155 P.3d 648 (Colo. App. 2007).

17-1-103.5. Literacy corrections program - legislative declaration - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 88: Entire section added, p. 696, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Subsection (5) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 1991. (See L. 88, p. 696.)

Cross references: For current provisions concerning the correctional education program, see article 32 of this title.

17-1-103.7. Duties of executive director - emergency response time - legislative declaration. (Repealed)

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 870, § 1, effective June 10. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 602, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 831, § 4, effective May 24.

17-1-103.8. Duties of executive director - inspector general - investigators - duties.

(1) The executive director, pursuant to section 13 of article XII of the state constitution, shall appoint a person to the position of inspector general. The person appointed to the position shall report to the executive director and shall have the powers of a peace officer, as described in sections 16-2.5-101 and 16-2.5-134, C.R.S.

(1.5) The executive director, in consultation with the inspector general, shall appoint investigators who shall operate under the inspector general's direct authority. Investigators appointed pursuant to this section shall have the powers of a peace officer, as described in sections 16-2.5-101 and 16-2.5-134, C.R.S.

(2) The inspector general and the investigators under his or her direction shall have the following duties:

(a) To investigate, detect, and prevent any crimes, criminal enterprises, or conspiracies originating within the department and any crimes, criminal enterprises, or conspiracies originating outside correctional facilities if the crimes, criminal enterprises, or conspiracies are related to the safety and security of correctional facilities, public or private. Evidence obtained by the inspector general or an investigator of any crimes so investigated shall be:

(I) Reported to the applicable local law enforcement agency; or

(II) With the consent of the district attorney, reported directly to the district attorney, attorney general, or United States attorney having jurisdiction over the issue; or

(III) In the case of a city and county, reported immediately to the local law enforcement agency, and the agency may complete the investigation and report the findings to the district attorney having jurisdiction over the city and county.

(b) To investigate, detect, and prevent any violations of administrative regulations or state policy and procedure and any waste or mismanagement of departmental resources and corruption that may occur within the department and any other violation that may be committed by department staff where the violation could affect the performance of staff duties or tend to erode public confidence in the performance of the department;

(c) and (d) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2008, p. 464, § 1, effective April 14, 2008.)

(e) To conduct preemployment investigations and integrity interviews of all persons who apply for employment with the department, including employment as contractors and subcontractors. The preemployment investigations and integrity interviews shall ensure that department employees meet the minimum standards set forth by state personnel rules, executive orders, and department policies.

(3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2008, p. 464, § 1, effective April 14, 2008.)

(4) For purposes of this section, "correctional facilities" includes but is not limited to any facility with which the department has contracted to house offenders who are in the legal custody of the department.

(5) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2008, p. 464, § 1, effective April 14, 2008.)

Source: L. 99: Entire section added, p. 422, § 1, effective April 30. L. 2003: (1) and (5)(a) amended, p. 1625, § 49, effective August 6. L. 2008: Entire section amended, p. 464, § 1, effective April 14.

17-1-104. Facilities managed, supervised, and controlled. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 905, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section R&RE, p. 685, § 22, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 831, § 5, effective May 24.

17-1-104.3. Correctional facilities - locations - security level. (1) (a) Each facility operated by or under contract with the department shall have a designated security level. Designation of security levels shall be as follows:

(I) Level I facilities shall have designated boundaries, but need not have perimeter fencing. Inmates classified as minimum may be incarcerated in level I facilities, but generally inmates of higher classifications shall not be incarcerated in level I facilities.

(II) Level II facilities shall have designated boundaries with a single or double perimeter fencing. The perimeter of level II facilities shall be patrolled periodically. Inmates classified as minimum restrictive and minimum may be incarcerated in level II facilities, but generally inmates of higher classifications shall not be incarcerated in level II facilities.

(III) Level III facilities generally shall have towers, a wall or double perimeter fencing with razor wire, and detection devices. The perimeter of level III facilities shall be continuously patrolled. Appropriately designated close classified inmates, medium classified inmates, and inmates of lower classification levels may be incarcerated in level III facilities, but generally inmates of higher classifications shall not be incarcerated in level III facilities.

(IV) Level IV facilities shall generally have towers, a wall or double perimeter fencing with razor wire, and detection devices. The perimeter of level IV facilities shall be continuously patrolled. Close classified inmates and inmates of lower classification levels may be incarcerated in level IV facilities, but generally inmates of higher classifications shall not be incarcerated in level IV facilities on a long-term basis.

(V) Level V facilities comprise the highest security level and are capable of incarcerating all classification levels. The facilities shall have double perimeter fencing with razor wire and detection devices or equivalent security architecture. These facilities generally shall use towers or stun-lethal fencing as well as controlled sally ports. The perimeter of level V facilities shall be continuously patrolled.

(b) The correctional facilities operated by the department, the location of such facilities, and the designated security level of such facilities shall be as follows:

Correctional facility	Location	Security level
Colorado state penitentiary	Fremont county	Level V
Centennial correctional facility	Fremont county	Level V
Limon correctional facility	Lincoln county	Level IV
Arkansas Valley correctional facility	Crowley county	Level III
Buena Vista correctional complex	Chaffee county	Level III
Colorado Territorial correctional facility	Fremont county	Level III
Fremont correctional facility	Fremont county	Level III
Arrowhead correctional center	Fremont county	Level II
Four Mile correctional center	Fremont county	Level II
Skyline correctional center	Fremont county	Level I
Colorado correctional center	Jefferson county	Level I
Delta correctional center	Delta county	Level I
Rifle correctional center	Garfield county	Level I
Colorado correctional alternative program	Chaffee county	Level I
Colorado women's correctional facility	Fremont county	Level IV
Denver reception and diagnostic center of Denver	City and county	Level V
La Vista correctional facility	Pueblo county	Level III
San Carlos correctional facility	Pueblo county	Level V
Sterling correctional facility	Logan county	Level V
Trinidad correctional facility	Las Animas county	Level II
Denver women's correctional facility of Denver	City and county	Level V
Youthful offender system	Pueblo county	Level III

(b.5) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (b) of this subsection (1), beginning February 1, 2013, the Centennial south campus of the Centennial correctional facility shall not be operated by the department for the purpose of housing inmates in the housing units but, if necessary, may be maintained to provide support and other services to the Centennial correctional facility. The department shall actively pursue options to sell or lease the Centennial south campus of the Centennial correctional facility, which is also known as

Colorado state penitentiary II or CSP II. Any proceeds received as a result of a sale or lease of Centennial south campus of the Centennial correctional facility shall be first applied to the payment of the certificates of participation.

(c) For the purposes of retrofitting the Pueblo minimum center from a level II facility to a level III facility, the department shall expend moneys received from the federal "Jobs and Growth Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2003", as amended, Pub.L. 108-27, and shall not request additional capital construction dollars for this purpose.

(2) Subsection (1) of this section shall be construed to set forth the features and general operation status of the facilities described in that subsection. Nothing in subsection (1) of this section shall be construed to define or restrict the custody level of inmates placed in the facilities described in that subsection.

(3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 831, § 6, effective May 24, 2000.)

(4) Repealed.

(5) Monthly the department shall submit a project status report on construction and monthly population and capacity report to the office of state planning and budgeting, the joint budget committee, the capital development committee, and legislative council. The monthly population and capacity report shall include information on state and private contract facilities including but not limited to operational capacity for the previous month, the month just ending and capacity changes, on grounds population, and operational capacity for this period in the previous year. The department shall include total beds occupied in each facility, state or private contract, by custody level and by gender. The report shall itemize operational capacities for jail backlog, community corrections, parole, youthful offenders, escapees, and revocations.

Source: L. 93: Entire section added, p. 1976, § 2, effective July 1. L. 95: Entire section amended, p. 873, § 7, effective May 24; (3)(a) amended, p. 1273, § 6, effective June 5. L. 97: (1) amended, p. 1586, § 2, effective June 4. L. 98: (4) amended, p. 727, § 8, effective May 18. L. 2000: (1), (3), and (4) amended and (5) added, p. 831, § 6, effective May 24. L. 2001: IP(1)(b) amended, p. 1271, § 21, effective June 5; (4) repealed, p. 1176, § 4, effective August 8. L. 2004: (1)(b) amended, p. 244, § 5, effective April 5; (1)(b) amended, p. 192, § 5, effective August 4. L. 2005: (1)(b) amended and (1)(c) added, p. 229, § 1, effective August 8. L. 2009: (1)(b) amended, (SB 09-034), ch. 55, p. 195, § 1, effective August 5. L. 2011: (1)(b) amended, (SB 11-214), ch. 147, p. 511, § 2, effective March 1, 2012. L. 2012: (1)(b.5) added, (HB 12-1337), ch. 144, p. 522, § 1, effective August 8.

Editor's note: Amendments to subsection (1)(b) by Senate Bill 04-123 and Senate Bill 04-067 were harmonized.

17-1-104.4. Future correctional facility needs. (Repealed)

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 1091, § 1, effective May 9; (3)(b) amended, p. 2615, § 24, effective July 1. L. 95: (2)(b) and (3) amended and (4), (5), (6), and (7) added, pp. 1277, 1274, §§ 15, 8, effective June 5; (3)(b) amended, p. 638, § 25, effective July 1. L. 96: (2)(a)(I) amended, p. 1150, § 14, effective July 1. L. 97: (3)(b) amended and (8) to (10) added, p. 1584, § 1, effective June 4. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 834, § 7, effective May 24.

17-1-104.5. Incarceration of inmates from other states - private contract prison facilities. (1) The general assembly finds and declares that the importation of prisoners from other states into correctional facilities not operated by the department of corrections is a matter of statewide concern.

(2) No inmate from a state other than Colorado may be received into the state of Colorado and be housed in a private contract prison facility or a prison facility operated by a political subdivision of the state:

(a) Without the express approval of the executive director, which approval shall not be unreasonably withheld; and

(b) Unless the private contract prison facility or a prison facility operated by a political subdivision is designed to meet or exceed the appropriate security level for the inmate.

Source: L. 88: Entire section added, p. 711, § 13, effective July 1. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 1147, § 3, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 1237, § 2, effective August 5.

ANNOTATION

This section applies to transfers of out-of-state prisoners to a private prison facility in Colorado and habeas corpus petition by inmate is subject to this section. The Interstate Corrections Compact, §§ 24-60-1601 to 24-60-1603 and the Western Interstate Corrections Compact, §§ 24-60-801 to 24-60-805, do not apply to transfers to private correctional facilities in this state. Slater v. McKinna, 997 P.2d 1196 (Colo. 2000).

Insofar as the provisions of the Interstate Corrections Compact, §§ 24-60-1601 to 24-

60-1603, and the Western Interstate Corrections Compact, §§ 24-60-801 to 24-60-805, are inconsistent with this section, this section prevails since it is the more specific. Slater v. McKinna, 997 P.2d 1196 (Colo. 2000).

Agreement authorizing transfer of out-of-state inmate to private prison in Colorado complies with this section and inmate is not entitled to habeas corpus relief. Slater v. McKinna, 997 P.2d 1196 (Colo. 2000).

17-1-104.6. Planning and review requirements - legislative intent. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the construction, expansion, renovation, or improvement of state-built and operated department of corrections facilities is a matter of statewide and not local concern. Therefore, the department, in authorizing and financing the construction, expansion, renovation, or improvement of its facilities, is exempt from regional, county, and local planning requirements, including those specified in section 30-28-110, C.R.S., and those authorized by section 29-20-104, C.R.S.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, whenever the department plans to locate a new corrections facility or expand an existing corrections facility, the department shall submit facility program plans to the governing body of the county or municipality in which the facility is proposed to be located or expanded and afford the governing body an opportunity for advisory review of such plans.

(3) The intent of the general assembly in enacting this section is to clarify the meaning of current law concerning regional, county, and local planning requirements and to clarify that the general assembly never intended to require the department to submit plans to authorize or construct its facilities for approval by local, county, or regional planning authorities. Accordingly, this section is intended to apply to causes of action pending on or filed on or after July 1, 1996.

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 1147, § 4, effective July 1.

17-1-104.7. Management plan for housing of juveniles - report. (Repealed)

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 1681, § 5, effective January 1, 1997. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 834, § 7, effective May 24.

17-1-104.8. Legislative review of facilities program plans for correctional facilities. (1) Prior to any appropriation by the general assembly for the construction of a new, expanded, renovated, or improved correctional facility, and no later than November 1 prior to the beginning of the budget year for which the appropriation is made, the department shall submit a proposed facility program plan for each proposed new, expanded, renovated, or improved correctional facility to the capital development committee. The capital development committee shall make a recommendation regarding the facility program plan to the joint budget committee. The general assembly may contract with a consultant to provide assistance to the capital development committee and the joint budget committee in the review of facilities program plans submitted by the department.

(2) For the purposes of this section, "facility program plan" means a pre-architectural design program, as that term is understood in the architectural profession. A facility program plan shall include but need not be limited to the number of beds proposed to be included in the new correctional facility or the addition to an existing correctional facility, the primary security level of the proposed facility or addition, the staffing plan of the proposed facility or addition, and a description of any educational or ancillary support facilities required for the proposed facility or addition.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 1091, § 1, effective May 9. L. 95: Entire section amended, p. 1273, § 7, effective June 5. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 1147, § 5, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1995 act amending this section, see section 23 of chapter 243, Session Laws of Colorado 1995.

17-1-104.9. Custody levels for state inmates at private prisons - correctional emergency - definition. (1) Based upon available appropriations and based upon an annual review by the general assembly, the department is authorized to permanently place state inmates classified as medium custody and below in private contract prisons. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2) of this section, the department may not place state inmates classified higher than medium custody in private contract prisons or in private prison facilities located outside the state of Colorado. This section does not prevent a private contract prison from incarcerating an inmate who has been reclassified to a higher custody designation as a result of an offense committed within the private contract prison. However, it is the intent of the general assembly that the department move any inmate of a higher custody designation out of the private contract prison as soon as space is available at a state-operated correctional facility.

(2) (a) At the request of the executive director, the governor may, in his or her discretion, declare a correctional emergency and by proclamation authorize the department to place state inmates classified higher than medium custody in private contract prisons or in private prison facilities located outside the state of Colorado. A proclamation issued under this subsection (2) shall remain in effect for thirty days.

(b) At the request of the executive director, the governor may, in his or her discretion, renew a declaration of correctional emergency and reissue a proclamation in accordance with paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) for one or more additional thirty-day periods as the governor deems appropriate.

(c) For purposes of this section, "correctional emergency" means a riot, a disturbance, a homicide, or inmate violence occurring in a correctional facility or in transit to or from a correctional facility, or a situation involving inmates that presents a clear and immediate danger to the safety, security, and control of the department. "Correctional emergency" does not include inmate overcrowding.

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 834, § 8, effective May 24. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 658, § 1, effective August 7.

17-1-105. Powers of executive director. (1) The executive director shall have and exercise:

(a) All the right and power to transfer an inmate between correctional facilities.

(b) Repealed.

(c) The authority to enter into contracts and agreements with other jurisdictions, including other states, the federal government, and political subdivisions of this state, for the confinement and maintenance in state correctional facilities of inmates sentenced to imprisonment by the courts of such other jurisdictions. The executive director shall notify the appropriate authorities of other jurisdictions, as the executive director deems appropriate, of the availability of space in state correctional facilities for the confinement and maintenance of inmates from other jurisdictions.

(d) The authority to lease real property and personal property of the department and any interest therein pursuant to law;

(e) The authority to enter into contracts with any county for the placement of inmates pursuant to section 16-11-308.5, C.R.S.;

(f) The authority to enter into contracts and agreements with other jurisdictions, including other states, the federal government, and political subdivisions of this state, for the confinement and maintenance of offenders sentenced to imprisonment by the courts of this state and the authority to reimburse such jurisdictions for the expenses incurred by such jurisdictions in the confinement and maintenance of said offenders;

(g) The authority to issue administrative warrants, solely for the purpose of returning to a correctional facility, jail, or community corrections center, offenders who have escaped from the custody and care of the department, community corrections, the parole board, or the division of adult parole, containing notice to appropriate law enforcement agencies that there is probable cause to believe that an offender has escaped from custody;

(h) The authority to enter into written agreements with any local, state, regional, or federal law enforcement agency operating within the state to allow such agencies and the department to provide personnel or operational support to one another, if deemed available by the executive director, in support of emergency law enforcement operations in Colorado;

(i) The authority to enter into written agreements with any local, state, regional, or federal law enforcement agency operating within the state to permit department personnel to assist in apprehending offenders who have escaped from the custody of the department.

(1.5) The executive director shall have such other powers and functions as are prescribed for heads of principal departments in the "Administrative Organization Act of 1968", article 1 of title 24, C.R.S.

(2) (a) The executive director shall, subject to approval by the capital development committee and subject to annual appropriation, be authorized to enter into agreements under which the state may acquire title to correctional facilities developed and constructed with private funds upon payment of the stipulated aggregate annual payments within a period of time not to exceed thirty years. The executive director shall also consider all costs associated with the agreement, including indirect costs for administration and monitoring of the agreement and total costs of the agreement including principal and interest.

(b) The executive director shall establish design standards and specifications which shall be met by any facility which is to be occupied pursuant to this subsection (2).

(c) Any proposal which meets such design standards and specifications and which has been approved by the capital development committee shall be specifically authorized, prior to its execution, by a separate bill enacted by the general assembly. Subsequent to such authorization by the general assembly in such manner, payments by the state may be made from moneys appropriated by the general assembly without the necessity of a separate bill.

(d) Payments under such agreements shall be included in the capital construction fund, subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly, and shall be certified, audited, and paid in the same manner as all other accounts and expenditures are paid out of such funds appropriated to the capital construction fund. Such obligations shall not create an indebtedness of the state within the meaning of any provisions of the state constitution or laws of the state concerning or limiting the creation of indebtedness of the state.

(e) Each agreement entered into pursuant to this subsection (2) may contain such terms, provisions, and conditions as the executive director deems appropriate, including provisions by which the state may receive fee title to the real and personal property which is the subject of each agreement on or prior to the expiration of the terms thereof, including all optional terms.

(f) Property acquired or occupied pursuant to this subsection (2) shall be exempt from taxation so long as it is used for a public purpose connected with any authorized work or programs of the department.

(g) Subject to annual appropriations by the general assembly, agreements entered into pursuant to this subsection (2) shall be enforceable in any court of competent jurisdiction in the state.

(3) The entity with which the department enters into an agreement pursuant to subsection (2) of this section shall submit a detailed plan for the department of corrections to assume responsibility for a correctional facility when the contract between the state and the entity terminates. The state, through the executive director of the department of corrections, may terminate the agreement for cause after written notice of material deficiencies and after sixty workdays have been provided to the entity to correct the material deficiencies. If any event occurs involving the noncompliance with or violation of contract terms and presents a serious threat to the safety, health, or security of the inmates, employees, or the public, the department of corrections may temporarily assume responsibility for the correctional facility. In addition, the entity shall submit a plan for the temporary assumption of operations of a correctional facility by the department of corrections in the event of bankruptcy or the financial insolvency of the entity. The entity shall provide an emergency plan to address inmate disturbances, employee work stoppages, strikes, or other serious events. The plan shall comply with applicable national correctional standards. The state may assume responsibility for the operation of a facility upon approval by the general assembly through the enactment of legislation.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 905, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (1)(a) and (1)(c) amended and (1)(b) repealed, pp. 685, 705, §§ 23, 88, effective July 1. L. 85: (1)(c) amended, p. 1360, § 12, effective June 28. L. 86: (1)(d) added, p. 751, § 1, effective April 24. L. 88: (2) added, p. 699, § 1, effective May 17; (1)(e) added, p. 677, § 2, effective July 1; (1)(e) and (1)(f) added, p. 710, § 8, effective July 1. L. 93: (1)(c) amended, p. 53, § 16, effective July 1. L. 94: (1.5) added, p. 563, § 4, effective April 6. L. 95: (3) added, p. 1271, § 3, effective June 5. L. 96: (1)(f) amended, p. 1149, § 6, effective July 1. L. 97: (1)(g) to (1)(i) added, p. 27, § 2, effective March 20. L. 2000: (1)(a), (1)(c), and (1)(g) amended, p. 834, § 9, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-1-105 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

This section allowing for contracts to confine inmates in out-of-state facilities does not violate compact clause nor commerce clause. People v. Wood, 999 P.2d 227 (Colo. App. 2000).

"Other jurisdictions" as defined in this section includes political subdivisions of other states and thus the executive director has authority to enter into contracts with counties of other states. Arnold v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 978 P.2d 149 (Colo. App. 1999).

Applied in People v. West, 42 Colo. App. 217, 603 P.2d 967 (1979).

17-1-105.1. Accreditation of private contract prisons.

(1) Repealed.

(2) Prior to submitting building plans to any county, municipality, city and county, or other local governmental agency any company proposing to construct a private prison within the state shall conduct at least one hearing in the county where the facility is proposed to be constructed for public input following at least twenty days' notice published in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the private prison is to be located.

(3) (a) A private prison shall not contract to house any inmate, except on a temporary basis, unless within two years of the date that it accepts its first inmate it holds a current accreditation by the American correctional association.

(b) The executive director may extend the time period for a private prison to obtain the accreditation required by paragraph (a) of this subsection (3) upon a showing of good cause.

Source: L. 98: Entire section added, p. 1236, § 1, effective August 5. L. 2000: (1) repealed, p. 835, § 10, effective May 24.

17-1-105.5. Contract rates. (1) Contracts for the confinement and maintenance of state inmates in private contract facilities or facilities operated by a political subdivision of the state entered into pursuant to this article shall be at rates that are negotiated by the department; except that the rate shall not exceed the maximum rate that is provided in the annual general appropriation bill.

(2) Repealed.

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 1149, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section amended, p. 375, § 1, effective April 10.

Editor's note: Subsection (2)(d) provided for the repeal of subsection (2), effective June 30, 2009. (See L. 2008, p. 375.)

17-1-106. Transfer of functions. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 905, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 835, § 11, effective May 24.

17-1-107. Department may accept gifts, donations, and grants. The department may accept, or refuse to accept, on behalf of and in the name of the state, gifts, donations, and grants, including grants of federal funds, for any purpose connected with the work or programs of the department. The executive director, with the approval of the governor, shall have the power to direct the disposition of any such gift, donation, or grant so accepted for any purpose consistent with the terms and conditions under which given.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 906, § 10, effective August 1.

17-1-107.5. State criminal alien assistance program cash fund - creation. (1) There is hereby created in the state treasury the state criminal alien assistance program cash fund. The fund shall consist of moneys received by the state under the federal state criminal alien assistance program of the federal "Immigration and Nationality Act", 8 U.S.C. sec. 1231 (i). All such moneys shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the fund. The moneys in the fund shall be subject to appropriation by the general assembly to the department of corrections for the 2004-05 state fiscal year and each fiscal year thereafter for the purposes of defraying the costs of incarcerating undocumented criminal aliens sentenced to a term of imprisonment with the department. All investment earnings derived from the deposit and investment of moneys in the fund shall remain in the fund. Any unexpended and unencumbered moneys remaining in the fund at the end of the fiscal year shall remain in the fund and shall not be transferred or credited to the general fund or another fund.

(2) For the purpose of maximizing revenues in the state criminal alien assistance program cash fund, the governor shall, in connection with an annual request for compensation to the state for incarcerating undocumented criminal aliens pursuant to the federal "Immigration and Nationality Act", 8 U.S.C. sec. 1231 (i), submit to the United States attorney general the average per-inmate cost and the total cost of incarcerating such undocumented criminal aliens for the state fiscal year for which the request is made.

Source: L. 2005: Entire section added, p. 726, § 1, effective June 1.

17-1-108. Transfer of inmates. (1) A person committed to the care and custody of the department as an inmate who is transferred to another institution, agency, or person for care and keeping, or who is transferred from a jail to the department, shall be transferred with medical records and any other record necessary and relevant to the nature and length of the transfer. Such records shall be provided to the person or agency who will receive the inmate, and the receiving person or agency shall acknowledge receipt of the records and approve of the transfer.

(2) (Deleted by amendment, L. 94, p. 603, § 4, effective July 1, 1994.)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 906, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (1) amended, p. 686, § 24, effective July 1. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 828, § 38, effective July 1. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 603, § 4, effective July 1; (1) amended, p. 1650, § 94, effective May 31.

Cross references: For transfer of inmates with mental illness or a developmental disability, see article 23 of this title.

17-1-109. Duties and functions of the warden. (1) The warden of each correctional facility shall exercise the powers and perform the duties and functions assigned to the warden by this article under the supervision and control of the executive director or the executive director's designee.

(2) (a) The warden of each correctional facility should, wherever possible, take such measures as are reasonably necessary to restrict the confinement of any person who actively participates in disruptive security-threat group behavior, as defined in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2), so as to prevent contact with other inmates at such facility. The warden should, wherever possible, also take such measures as are reasonably necessary to prevent recruitment of new security-threat group members from among the general inmate population. Association with an inmate gang or security-threat group alone shall not be sufficient to meet the requirements of this paragraph (a).

(b) For the purposes of this subsection (2), unless the context otherwise requires, "security-threat group" means a group of three or more individuals acting in concert or individually in an activity that is characterized by criminal conduct or conduct that violates the department's code of penal discipline for the purpose of disrupting prison operations, recruiting new members, damaging property, or inflicting or threatening to inflict harm to employees, contract workers, volunteers, or other state inmates.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 906, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 686, § 25, effective July 1. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 872, § 1, effective June 5. L. 97: (2) amended, p. 29, § 7, effective March 20. L. 2000: (1) and (2)(a) amended, p. 835, § 12, effective May 24. L. 2011: (2) amended, (SB 11-176), ch. 289, p. 1342, § 2, effective July 1.

17-1-109.5. Correctional facility employees - rules. (1) On and after April 1, 2004, the department shall not hire a person who is required to register as a sex offender pursuant to the provisions of the "Colorado Sex Offender Registration Act", article 22 of title 16, C.R.S., to work at a correctional facility.

(2) The department shall ensure that any person who is employed to work at a correctional facility as of April 1, 2004, and who is required to register as a sex offender pursuant to the provisions of the "Colorado Sex Offender Registration Act", article 22 of title 16, C.R.S., does not have unsupervised contact with an inmate on and after April 1, 2004.

(3) If a person, while employed by the department, is convicted of an offense that requires the employee to register as a sex offender pursuant to the provisions of the "Colorado Sex Offender Registration Act", article 22 of title 16, C.R.S., the employee shall immediately notify the department of the conviction and the registration requirement. The department shall ensure that the employee does not have unsupervised contact with an inmate on and after the date it receives notice pursuant to this subsection (3).

(4) The executive director shall adopt such rules as may be necessary to ensure compliance with the requirements of this section.

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 230, § 1, effective April 1.

17-1-110. Joint review committee on corrections. (Repealed)

Source: L. 78: Entire section added, p. 124, § 2, effective April 18.

Editor's note: When this section was enacted in 1978, the general assembly provided for the repeal of this section upon occupancy of the maximum security facility. Because the facility has been occupied since December 24, 1980, the repeal date for this section is also December 24, 1980.

17-1-111. Certain provisions of the administrative procedure act not to apply. The provisions of this title relating to the placement, assignment, management, discipline, and classification of inmates shall not be subject to section 24-4-103, 24-4-105, or 24-4-106, C.R.S.

Source: L. 83: Entire section added, p. 687, § 1, effective May 20. L. 90: Entire section amended, p. 954, § 22, effective June 7. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 836, § 13, effective May 24. L. 2004: Entire section amended, p. 1197, § 49, effective August 4.

ANNOTATION

Any right that may have existed to obtain review of a prison disciplinary action under the APA was eliminated by the enactment of this section. Crawford v. State Dept. of Corr., 895 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section precludes review of prison disciplinary actions under § 24-4-106 of the APA. Crawford v. State Dept. of Corr., 895 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1995).

17-1-112. Expenses - reimbursement by department. (1) Subject to available appropriations the department shall reimburse any county or city and county for a portion of the expenses and costs incurred by that county or city and county in the confinement and maintenance in a local jail of any person who is sentenced to a term of imprisonment in a correctional facility. The general assembly shall annually establish the amount of reimbursement in the general appropriations bill. Such reimbursement shall be for each day following seventy-two hours after such sentence is imposed but prior to the transmittal of the sentenced inmate to a department facility. Subject to available appropriations, the department may contract with any county or city and county for the expenses incurred by that county or city and county in the confinement and maintenance of any person who is sentenced to a term of imprisonment pursuant to section 16-11-308.5, C.R.S.

(1.5) In no event shall any agreement to reimburse any city and county or county affect or reduce any city and county's or county's duty to exercise reasonable care and use its best efforts to supervise and use reasonable precautions to assure the adequate care of any state inmate.

(1.7) On or after April 19, 1993, each city and county or county shall send an invoice to the executive director within three months after the expenses and costs for the confinement and maintenance of inmates in local jails are incurred; however, each city and county or county is encouraged to send such invoice on a monthly basis, when possible. Failure by a city and county or county to send an invoice to the executive director within three months after such expenses and costs are incurred shall result in a forfeiture of any reimbursement by the state for such expenses and costs.

(2) Any moneys to which a county or city and county may be entitled pursuant to the provisions of this section shall be paid to the treasurer of the county or the manager of revenue of the city and county, who shall credit the same to the general fund of the county or city and county or such other fund as the board of county commissioners of the county or the city council of the city and county may direct and who shall account for such moneys as provided by law.

(3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 88, p. 710, § 9, effective July 1, 1988.)

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 1339, § 1, effective July 1. L. 88: Entire section amended, p. 710, § 9, effective July 1. L. 89: (1.5) added, p. 879, § 1, effective June 5. L. 89, 1st Ex. Sess.: (1) amended, p. 20, § 4, effective July 1. L. 91: (1) and (1.5) amended, p. 337, § 2, effective July 1, 1992. L. 93: (1) and (1.5) amended and (1.7) added, p. 405, § 2, effective April 19. L. 95: (2) amended, p. 880, § 17, effective May 24. L. 2000: (1), (1.5), and (1.7) amended, p. 836, § 14, effective May 24.

ANNOTATION

“Subject to appropriation”, as seen in subsection (1), limits a remedy and not a legal right. Local municipalities have the right to receive reimbursement from the department of corrections for incurred expenses, but the implementation of that right is subject to available appropriations. It expresses the intent of the legislature that the satisfaction of state obligations to local governments for housing state prisoners shall be dependent on future appropriations. State for Use of Dept. of Corr. v. Pena, 855 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to 1988 amendment).

To the extent appropriations are insufficient to cover expenses incurred by the department of corrections, that department cannot order and implement full relief. The department does have the obligation to bring to the legislature’s attention the inadequacy of funding. State for Use of Dept. of Corr. v. Pena, 855 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to 1988 amendment).

The department of correction’s liability pursuant to this section is not dependent upon the availability of funds. Therefore, the city and county of Denver’s entitlement to judgment is not affected by lack of sufficient appropriations. State for Use of Dept. of Corr. v. Pena, 837 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1992), aff’d 855 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to the 1988 amendment).

17-1-112.5. Annual audit by state auditor. (Repealed)

Source: L. 91: Entire section added, p. 338, § 3, effective May 24. L. 93: Entire section repealed, p. 406, § 3, effective April 19.

17-1-113. Medical visits - charge to inmates - legislative declaration. (1) (a) The general assembly hereby finds that the procedures for charging inmates a copayment for medical services are confusing to department personnel and, as a result, are inconsistently applied.

(b) The general assembly therefore finds and determines that the department should establish clear and consistent written procedures concerning copayments for medical, dental, mental health, and optometric services rendered to or on behalf of inmates and should require the facilities rendering the services to comply with the procedures, including the maintenance of detailed records regarding the assessment of copayments.

(2) The department shall assess a copayment, in an amount established by written procedures of the executive director pursuant to subsection (4) of this section, not to exceed five dollars per visit, against an inmate’s account for every inmate-initiated request for medical or mental health services provided to the inmate by a physician, physician’s assistant, nurse practitioner, registered nurse, or licensed practical nurse. The department shall assess a copayment, in an amount established by written procedures of the executive director pursuant to subsection (4) of this section, against an inmate’s account for every inmate-initiated visit by the inmate to a dentist or optometrist. The amount of the copayment for the dental or optometric services need not be the same as the copayment for medical or mental health services.

(3) The department shall communicate the copayment procedures to every correctional facility that provides medical, dental, mental health, and optometric services to or on behalf of inmates to ensure that all department personnel consistently and regularly assess the required copayment.

(4) The executive director shall establish written procedures relating to medical, dental, mental health, and optometric service copayments, which procedures shall address, but need not be limited to, the following:

(a) The amount of the copayment to be assessed against an inmate’s account for inmate-initiated medical services, including but not limited to mental health services, which copayment shall not exceed the direct and indirect costs associated with any type of medical or mental health service that may be rendered;

(b) The amount of the copayment to be assessed against an inmate's account for inmate-initiated dental and optometric services, which copayment shall not exceed the direct and indirect costs associated with any dental or optometric service that may be rendered;

(c) The detailed procedures that department personnel are to follow in assessing the copayments;

(d) The specific services for which a copayment will be assessed, waived, or reduced, as well as the specific and exclusive bases upon which a copayment may be waived by department personnel, including but not limited to the inmate's inability to pay the copayment, the health needs of the inmate and the public health and safety needs of the institution;

(e) The information to be obtained by department personnel at the time of the inmate's medical, dental, mental health, or optometric visit on a standardized department form, including the inmate's name, the inmate's identification number, the amount of the copayment assessed, if any, the reason for the visit, the type of service rendered, and the basis for any waiver of the copayment; and

(f) The appropriate action that will be taken, consistent with state personnel rules, against department personnel who fail to comply with the copayment procedures.

(5) The department shall monitor the information collected pursuant to paragraph (e) of subsection (4) of this section to ensure that the copayment procedures are being applied consistently to all inmates.

(6) Repealed.

Source: L. 87: Entire section added, p. 649, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 880, § 1, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 202, § 1, effective April 10. L. 2000: (6) repealed, p. 836, § 15, effective May 24; (6) repealed, p. 1545, § 2, effective August 2. L. 2008: Entire section amended, p. 294, § 1, effective August 5.

ANNOTATION

A state may establish reasonable inmate copayments for the provision of medical care as long as the state meets an inmate's serious medical needs and may determine whether a governmental entity or the inmate must pay the cost of any medical services provided. Negron v. Gillespie, 111 P.3d 556 (Colo. App. 2005).

17-1-113.1. Administration or monitoring of medications to persons in correctional facilities. (1) The executive director has the power to direct the administration or monitoring of medications to persons in correctional facilities, as described in section 25-1.5-301 (2) (a), C.R.S., under the executive director's control, in a manner consistent with part 3 of article 1.5 of title 25, C.R.S.

(2) The executive director may authorize the transfer, delivery, or distribution to a corporation, individual, or other entity, other than a consumer, entitled to possess prescription drugs in an amount that is less than, equal to, or in excess of five percent of the total number of dosage units or drugs dispensed and distributed on an annual basis.

Source: L. 92: Entire section added, p. 1149, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 837, § 16, effective May 24. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 704, § 24, effective July 1; entire section amended, p. 957, § 17, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Amendments to this section by Senate Bill 03-002 and Senate Bill 03-119 were harmonized.

17-1-113.3. Telemedicine - study - report - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 1553, § 1, effective August 7.

Editor's note: Subsection (3) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2007. (See L. 2006, p. 1553.)

17-1-113.5. Inmates held in correctional facilities - medical benefits application assistance - county of residence. (1) (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (1), on and after January 1, 2003, any person who is sentenced to a term of imprisonment in a correctional facility who was receiving medical assistance pursuant to section 25.5-5-101 (1) (f) or 25.5-5-201 (1) (j), C.R.S., immediately prior to entering the correctional facility, or who is reasonably expected to meet eligibility criteria pursuant to section 25.5-5-101 (1) (f) or 25.5-5-201 (1) (j), C.R.S., upon release, shall receive assistance from correctional facility personnel in applying for such medical assistance at least ninety days prior to release.

(b) On and after January 1, 2003, any person who is sentenced to a term of imprisonment in a correctional facility who was eligible for supplemental security income benefits under Title II of the federal "Social Security Act" immediately prior to entering the correctional facility, or who is reasonably expected to meet eligibility criteria for supplemental security income benefits upon release, shall receive assistance from the correctional facility personnel in applying for such supplemental security income benefits at least ninety days prior to release or sooner, if possible.

(2) The department of health care policy and financing shall provide information and training on medical assistance eligibility requirements and assistance to each correctional facility to assist in and expedite the application process for medical assistance for any inmate held in custody who meets the requirements of paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section.

(3) The department of human services shall provide information and education regarding the supplemental security income systems and processes to each correctional facility.

(4) (a) For purposes of determining eligibility pursuant to section 25.5-4-205, C.R.S., the county of residence of the inmate held in custody shall be the county specified by the inmate as his or her county of residence upon release.

(b) The department of health care policy and financing shall promulgate rules to simplify the processing of applications for medical assistance pursuant to paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section and to allow inmates determined to be eligible for such medical assistance to access the medical assistance upon release and thereafter. If a county department of social services determines that an inmate is eligible for medical assistance, the county shall enroll the inmate in medicaid effective upon release of the inmate. At the time of the inmate's release, the correctional facility shall give the inmate information and paperwork necessary for the inmate to access medical assistance. Such information shall be provided by the applicable county department of social services.

(c) The department of corrections shall attempt to enter into prerelease agreements with local social security administration offices, and, if appropriate, the county departments of social services, the department of human services, or the department of health care policy and financing to simplify the processing of applications for medicaid or for supplemental security income to enroll inmates who are eligible for medical assistance pursuant to section 25.5-5-101 (1) (f) or 25.5-5-201 (1) (j), C.R.S., effective upon release and to provide such inmates with the information and paperwork necessary to access medical assistance immediately upon release.

(5) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 1991, § 1, effective June 1, 2007.)

Source: L. 2002: Entire section added, p. 805, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2003: (1)(a) and (4)(c) amended, p. 415, § 4, effective March 5. L. 2005: (1)(a) and (4)(c) amended, p. 4, § 7, effective January 1; (5) amended, p. 250, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2006: (1)(a), (4)(a), and (4)(c) amended, p. 2004, § 57, effective July 1. L. 2007: (2), (3), (4)(b), (4)(c), and (5) amended, p. 1991, § 1, effective June 1.

17-1-113.7. Prohibition against the use of restraints on pregnant inmates in the custody of correctional facilities and private contract prisons. (1) The staff of a correctional facility or private contract prison, when restraining a female inmate, shall use the least restrictive restraints necessary to ensure safety if the staff of the correctional facility or private contract prison have actual knowledge or a reasonable belief that the inmate is pregnant. The requirement that staff use the least restrictive restraints necessary to ensure safety shall continue during postpartum recovery and transport to or from a correctional facility and private contract prison.

(2) (a) (I) Staff of a correctional facility, private contract prison, or medical facility shall not use restraints of any kind on a pregnant inmate during labor and delivery of the child; except that staff may use restraints if:

(A) The medical staff determine that restraints are medically necessary for safe childbirth;

(B) The prison staff or medical staff determine that the inmate presents an immediate and serious risk of harm to herself, to other patients, or to medical staff; or

(C) The warden or his or her designee determines that the inmate poses a substantial risk of escape that cannot reasonably be reduced by the use of other existing means.

(II) Notwithstanding any provision of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) to the contrary, under no circumstances shall staff use leg shackles or waist restraints on an inmate during labor and delivery of the child, postpartum recovery while in a medical facility, or transport to or from a medical facility for childbirth.

(b) The correctional facility, private contract prison, or medical facility staff authorizing the use of restraints on a pregnant inmate during labor or delivery of the child shall make a written record of the use of the restraints, which record shall include, at a minimum, the type of restraint used, the circumstances that necessitated the use of the restraint, and the length of time the restraint was used. The staff of the correctional facility or private contract prison shall retain the record for a minimum of five years and shall make the record available for public inspection with individually identifying information redacted from the record unless the inmate who is the subject of the record gives prior written consent for the public release of the record. The written record of the use of restraint shall not constitute a medical record under state or federal law.

(3) Upon return to a correctional facility or private contract prison after childbirth, the inmate shall be entitled to have a member of the correctional facility's or private contract prison's medical staff present during any strip search.

(4) When an inmate's pregnancy is determined, the staff of a correctional facility or private contract prison shall inform a pregnant inmate in writing in a language and in a manner understandable to the inmate of the provisions of this section concerning the use of restraints and the presence of medical staff during a strip search.

(5) The executive director of the department of corrections shall ensure that the staff of the department of corrections and of private contract prisons receive adequate training concerning the provisions of this section.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (SB 10-193), ch. 312, p. 1463, § 1, effective January 1, 2011.

17-1-113.9. Use of administrative segregation for state inmates - reporting.

(1) On or before January 1, 2012, and each January 1 thereafter, the executive director shall provide a written report to the judiciary committees of the senate and house of representatives, or any successor committees, concerning the status of administrative segregation; reclassification efforts for offenders with mental illnesses or developmental disabilities, including duration of stay, reason for placement, and number and percentage discharged; and any internal reform efforts since July 1, 2011.

(2) Any cost savings achieved as a result of the implementation of sections 17-22.5-302 (1.3) and 17-22.5-405 (8) shall be appropriated and redirected to the department to support behavior-modification programs, incentive programs, mental health services or programs, or similar efforts designed as viable alternatives to administrative segregation.

Source: L. 2011: Entire section added, (SB 11-176), ch. 289, p. 1342, § 1, effective July 1.

17-1-114. Pool of funds - continuance of community supervision. There is hereby created in the state treasury a fund to be known as the community supervision supplemental fund, which shall consist of moneys appropriated by the general assembly. All moneys in the fund shall be subject to withdrawal by the department of corrections, the judicial department, or the department of public safety for the purpose of continuing community supervision, such as parole supervision, probation supervision, community corrections programs, or home electronic monitoring over offenders who would otherwise be removed to secure custody due to lack of resources. Such moneys may be withdrawn upon a request by the department of corrections, the judicial department, or the department of public safety which is made to the director of the office of state planning and budgeting. The director of the office of state planning and budgeting, in consultation with the joint budget committee, shall approve or disapprove the request made by each department and budget the amount of such request. Any withdrawal approved by the director of the office of state planning and budgeting shall be dispersed to the department making the request.

Source: L. 90: Entire section added, p. 944, § 13, effective June 7.

17-1-115. Investigators employed by the department - notification to local law enforcement agencies. (Repealed)

Source: L. 92: Entire section added, p. 432, § 2, effective April 23. L. 99: Entire section repealed, p. 424, § 3, effective April 30.

17-1-115.5. Prison sexual assault prevention program. (1) The department shall develop, with respect to sexual assaults that occur in correctional facilities operated by or pursuant to a contract with the department, policies and procedures to:

(a) Require disciplinary action for employees who fail to report incidences of sexual assault to the inspector general appointed pursuant to section 17-1-103.8;

(b) Require the inspector general or the department of corrections investigator, whichever is appropriate, after completing an investigation for sexual assault, to submit the findings to the district attorney with jurisdiction over the facility in which the alleged sexual assault occurred;

(c) Prohibit retaliation and disincentives for reporting sexual assaults;

(d) Provide, in situations in which there is reason to believe that a sexual assault has occurred, reasonable and appropriate measures to ensure victim safety by separating the victim from the assailant, if known;

(e) Ensure the confidentiality of prison rape complaints and protection of inmates who make complaints of prison rape;

(f) Provide acute trauma care for sexual assault victims, including but not limited to treatment of injuries, HIV/AIDS prophylactic measures, and testing for sexually transmitted diseases;

(g) Provide, at intake and periodically thereafter, department-approved, easy-to-understand information developed by the department on sexual assault prevention, treatment, reporting, and counseling in consultation with community groups with expertise in sexual assault prevention, treatment, reporting, and counseling;

(h) Provide sexual-assault-specific training to department mental health professionals and all employees who have direct contact with inmates regarding treatment and methods of prevention and investigation;

(i) Provide confidential mental health counseling for victims of sexual assault;

(j) Monitor victims of sexual assault for suicidal impulses, post-traumatic stress disorder, depression, and other mental health consequences resulting from the sexual assault; and

(k) Require termination of an employee who engages in a sexual assault on or sexual conduct with an inmate consistent with constitutional due process protections and state personnel laws and rules.

(2) Investigation of a sexual assault shall be conducted by investigators trained in the investigation of sex crimes. The investigation shall include, but need not be limited to, use of forensic rape kits, questioning of suspects and witnesses, and gathering and preserving relevant evidence.

(3) The department shall annually report the data that it is required to compile and report to the federal bureau of justice statistics as required by the federal "Prison Rape Elimination Act of 2003", Pub.L. 108-79, as amended, to the judiciary committees of the house of representatives and the senate, or any successor committees.

Source: L. 2007: Entire section added, p. 1545, § 1, effective May 31. L. 2008: (1)(b) amended, p. 466, § 2, effective April 14; (3) amended, p. 1885, § 26, effective August 5.

17-1-116. Corrections expansion reserve fund. There is hereby created in the state treasury the corrections expansion reserve fund. Moneys in the fund shall be subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly for the purpose of complying with the provisions of section 2-2-703, C.R.S., which requires that any bill which results in a net increase in periods of imprisonment in state correctional facilities provide for the funding of any increased capital construction costs or increased operating costs associated therewith. Any unexpended or unencumbered moneys remaining in the fund at the end of any fiscal year shall remain in the fund and shall not revert to or be transferred to the general fund or any other fund of the state.

Source: L. 93, 1st Ex. Sess.: Entire section added, p. 8, § 10, effective September 13.

17-1-117. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 94-1052. (Repealed)

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 1345, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 837, § 17, effective May 24.

17-1-118. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 96-1361. (Repealed)

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 1335, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-119. Lethal perimeter security systems for correctional facilities - governmental immunity - limitations. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the installation and operation of electrified, lethal perimeter security systems at certain state correctional facilities will enhance the safety of the citizens of this state and will result in reduced costs for operating such correctional facilities.

(2) The department is authorized, through its agents and contractors, to design and construct electrified, lethal perimeter security systems at correctional facilities to be managed, operated, supervised, and controlled by the department if the department determines the use of such security systems to be necessary and appropriate.

(3) The department, any agent of the department, or contractor hired by the department for the design and construction of an electrified, lethal perimeter security system at a state correctional facility shall be provided all protections of governmental immunity provided to public employees by article 10 of title 24, C.R.S., including but not limited to the payment of judgments and settlements, the provision of legal defense, and the payment of costs incurred in court actions in regard to any and all claims arising from the design and construction, consistent with the design approved by the department, of the lethal aspect of such security system.

(4) The provisions of subsection (3) of this section shall be construed as a specific exception for independent contractors hired to design and construct electrified, lethal perimeter security systems at state correctional facilities from the general exclusion of independent contractors from the protections of governmental immunity provided in article 10 of title 24, C.R.S.

Source: L. 97: Entire section added, p. 1587, § 3, effective June 4.

17-1-119.5. Compilation of data related to inmates with children attending school.

(1) The department of corrections shall obtain information from each inmate concerning whether the inmate is the parent of a child who is under the age of eighteen in the state of Colorado and, if so, whether the child is enrolled in a school in the state and the school district or state charter school in which the child is enrolled. In the process of obtaining the information from the inmate, the department shall not provide the inmate with information that would pose a safety threat to the child or child's family.

(2) The department shall collect and compile information related to programs that assist students whose parents are incarcerated.

Source: L. 2005: Entire section added, p. 951, § 1, effective June 2.

17-1-120. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 97-1077 and HB 97-1060. (Repealed)

Source: L. 97: Entire section added, p. 1549, § 26, effective July 1; entire section added, p. 992, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-121. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 97-1186. (Repealed)

Source: L. 97: Entire section added, p. 1592, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-122. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 98-1160. (Repealed)

Source: L. 98: Entire section added, p. 1448, § 42, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1)(c)(I) repealed, p. 675, § 2, effective May 28. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-123. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 98-1156. (Repealed)

Source: L. 98: Entire section added, p. 1294, § 16, effective November 1. L. 2002: (1)(e) repealed, p. 675, § 3, effective May 28. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-124 in House Bill 98-1156 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-124. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 98-021. (Repealed)

Source: L. 98: Entire section added, p. 1265, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1)(d)(I) repealed, p. 675, § 4, effective May 28. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-128 in Senate Bill 98-21 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-125. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 99-1068. (Repealed)

Source: L. 99: Entire section added, p. 661, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-126. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1247. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 643, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1)(c)(I) repealed, p. 676, § 5, effective May 28. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-127. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1158. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 1014, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-128. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1111. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 648, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-129. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1214. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 638, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1)(c)(I) repealed, p. 676, § 6, effective May 28. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-130. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1201. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 635, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1)(c)(I) repealed, p. 676, § 7, effective May 28. L. 2004: (1)(e)(I) repealed, p. 686, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-131. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1317. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 928, § 23, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-132. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 00-1107. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 712, § 50, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1)(c)(I) repealed, p. 677, § 8, effective May 28. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-133. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 01-1205. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 527, § 3, effective May 22. L. 2002: (1)(a) repealed, p. 677, § 9, effective May 28. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-134. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 01-046. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 606, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-133 in Senate Bill 01-046 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-135. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 01-1204. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 1010, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2003: (1)(a) repealed, p. 1470, § 3, effective May 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-133 in House Bill 01-1204 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-136. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 01-210. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 568, § 6, effective May 29. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-133 in Senate Bill 01-210 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-137. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 01-1242. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 860, § 10, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1)(b)(I) repealed, p. 677, § 10, effective May 28. L. 2003: (1)(c)(I) repealed, p. 1470, § 4, effective May 1. L. 2004: (1)(d)(I) repealed, p. 686, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-133 in House Bill 01-1242 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-138. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 01-1344. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 1058, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-133 in House Bill 01-1344 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-139. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02-1301. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2002: Entire section added, p. 811, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-140. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02-1283. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2002: Entire section added, p. 1196, § 3, effective June 3. L. 2003: (1)(a) repealed, p. 327, § 3, effective March 5. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-139 in House Bill 02-1283 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-141. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02-1396. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2002: Entire section added, p. 1128, § 3, effective June 3. L. 2003: (1)(a) repealed, p. 327, § 4, effective March 5. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-139 in House Bill 02-1396 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-142. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 02-050. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2002: Entire section added, p. 1265, § 2, effective August 7. L. 2003: (1)(a) repealed, p. 328, § 5, effective March 5; (1)(b)(I) repealed, p. 1470, § 5, effective May 1. L. 2004: (1)(c)(I) and (1)(d)(I) repealed, p. 686, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-139 in Senate Bill 02-050 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-143. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02-1038. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2002: Entire section added, p. 1270, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2003: (1)(a) repealed, p. 328, § 6, effective March 5; (1)(b)(I) repealed, p. 1471, § 6, effective May 1. L. 2004: (1)(c)(I) repealed, p. 687, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-139 in House Bill 02-1038 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-144. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02S-1006. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: Entire section added, p. 40, § 9, effective July 17. L. 2003: (1)(a) repealed, p. 328, § 7, effective March 5. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

17-1-145. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 02S-1006. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: Entire section added, p. 41, § 11, effective July 17. L. 2004: (1)(a) repealed, p. 687, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section repealed, p. 1885, § 27, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-144 in section 11 of House Bill 02S-1006 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-1-146. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 03-1004 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 2383, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1885, § 28, effective August 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2008. (See L. 2008, p. 1885.)

17-1-147. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 03-1138 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 2164, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2004: (1)(a) repealed, p. 687, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1885, § 29, effective August 5.

Editor's note: (1) This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-146 in House Bill 03-1138 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

(2) Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2008. (See L. 2008, p. 1885.)

17-1-148. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 03-1213 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 1883, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1885, § 30, effective August 5.

Editor's note: (1) This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-146 in House Bill 03-1213 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

(2) Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2008. (See L. 2008, p. 1885.)

17-1-149. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 03-1317 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 2388, § 5, effective July 1, 2004. L. 2004: (1)(a) and (1)(b)(I) repealed, p. 688, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1885, § 31, effective August 5.

Editor's note: (1) This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-146 in House Bill 03-1317 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

(2) Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2008. (See L. 2008, p. 1885.)

17-1-150. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 04-1016 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 800, § 2, effective May 21. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1886, § 32, effective August 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2009. (See L. 2008, p. 1886.)

17-1-151. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 04-1003 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 1082, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1886, § 33, effective August 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2009. (See L. 2008, p. 1886.)

17-1-152. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 04-1021 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 789, § 14, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1886, § 34, effective August 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2009. (See L. 2008, p. 1886.)

17-1-153. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06-207 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 1308, § 3, effective May 30. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1886, § 35, effective August 5. L. 2010: (1)(d)(I) repealed, (HB 10-1389), ch. 206, p. 895, § 2, effective May 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1886.)

17-1-154. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1151 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 2048, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1886, § 36, effective August 5.

Editor's note: (1) This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-153 in House Bill 06-1151 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

(2) Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1886.)

17-1-155. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1011 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 2059, § 10, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1886, § 37, effective August 5. L. 2010: (1)(d)(I) repealed, (HB 10-1389), ch. 206, p. 895, § 3, effective May 5.

Editor's note: (1) This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-153 in House Bill 06-1011 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

(2) Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1886.)

17-1-156. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1145 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 1706, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1886, § 38, effective August 5.

Editor's note: (1) This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-153 in House Bill 06-1145 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

(2) Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1886.)

17-1-157. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1326 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 1324, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1886, § 39, effective August 5.

Editor's note: (1) This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-153 in House Bill 06-1326 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

(2) Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1886.)

17-1-158. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06-206 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 1302, § 2, effective May 30. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1887, § 40, effective August 5. L. 2010: (1)(d)(I) repealed, (HB 10-1389), ch. 206, p. 896, § 4, effective May 5.

Editor's note: (1) This section was originally numbered as § 17-1-153 in Senate Bill 06-206 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

(2) Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1887.)

17-1-159. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 06-1092 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 2044, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1887, § 41, effective August 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1887.)

17-1-160. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06S-004 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006, 1st Ex. Sess.: Entire section added, p. 11, § 2, effective July 31. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1887, § 42, effective August 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1887.)

17-1-161. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06S-005 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006, 1st Ex. Sess.: Entire section added, p. 15, § 2, effective July 31. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1887, § 43, effective August 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1887.)

17-1-162. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 06S-007 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006, 1st Ex. Sess.: Entire section added, p. 19, § 2, effective July 31. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1887, § 44, effective August 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2011. (See L. 2008, p. 1887.)

17-1-163. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 07-1040 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2007: Entire section added, p. 1773, § 3, effective June 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1887, § 45, effective August 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2012. (See L. 2008, p. 1887.)

17-1-164. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 07-096 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2007: Entire section added, p. 2006, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1887, § 46, effective August 5. L. 2010: (1)(c)(I) repealed, (HB 10-1389), ch. 206, p. 896, § 5, effective May 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal this section, effective July 1, 2012. (See L. 2008, p. 1887.)

17-1-165. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 07-1326 - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2007: Entire section added, p. 1682, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) added, p. 1887, § 47, effective August 5. L. 2010: (1)(c)(I) repealed, (HB 10-1389), ch. 206, p. 896, § 6, effective May 5.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2012. (See L. 2008, p. 1887.)

PART 2

CORRECTIONS PRIVATIZATION - REQUESTS FOR PROPOSALS PROCESS

17-1-201. Duties of department. (1) The department shall adopt rules and implement a process to issue requests for competitive proposals for the use and development of private contract prisons.

(2) No later than December 1 of each fiscal year, beginning with the 1996-97 fiscal year, the executive director shall submit a report to the speaker of the house of representatives and the president of the senate concerning the status of contracts in effect, and, with respect to completed prisons, the effectiveness of each private contract prison governed by a contract with the department.

Source: L. 95: Entire part added, p. 1267, § 1, effective June 5. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 837, § 18, effective May 24. L. 2004: (1) amended, p. 127, § 1, effective August 4.

17-1-202. Requests for competitive proposals and contract requirements. (1) Before entering into any contract for designing, financing, acquiring, constructing, or operating a private contract prison or any contract for any combination of these functions, the department may issue a request for competitive proposals. Prior to issuing a request for competitive proposals requiring new construction under this section, the department shall notify the capital development committee, established pursuant to section 2-3-1302, C.R.S. The department's rules, at a minimum, shall require that any contract proposed and awarded by the executive director pursuant to this part 2 shall be governed by the following principles:

(a) A contract shall be negotiated with the contractor which, in the determination of the department, is found to be the most qualified and the most competitive under the circumstances; except that a contract for private correctional facilities shall not be executed unless the executive director of the department of corrections determines that the contractor has demonstrated compliance with the following standards:

(I) The qualifications, experience, and management personnel necessary to carry out the terms of the contract. At a minimum, this standard shall prohibit the contractor from employing a person who is required to register pursuant to the provisions of the "Colorado Sex Offender Registration Act", article 22 of title 16, C.R.S., to work in the private correctional facility. In connection with this standard, the contractor shall require applicants for employment to submit a set of fingerprints to the Colorado bureau of investigation for a criminal background check as provided in section 17-1-204.

(II) The ability to expedite the location, design, and construction of a private correctional facility; and

(III) The ability to comply with applicable laws, court orders, and national correctional standards.

(b) A contractor shall agree to indemnify the state and the department of corrections, including their officials and agents, against any and all liability including but not limited to any civil rights claims. The department of corrections shall require proof of satisfactory insurance, the amount to be determined by the department of corrections following consultation with the division of insurance in the department of regulatory agencies.

(c) The contractor shall seek, obtain, and maintain accreditation by the association responsible for adopting national correctional standards. In addition, the contractor shall comply with the association's amendments to the accreditation standards upon approval of the amendments by the department of corrections.

(d) The proposed private contract prisons and the management plans for inmates shall meet applicable national correctional standards and the requirements of applicable court orders and state law.

(e) The contractor shall agree to abide by operations standards for correctional facilities adopted by the executive director of the department of corrections.

(f) The contractor shall be responsible for a range of dental, medical, and psychological services and diet, education, and work programs at least equal to those services and programs provided by the department of corrections at comparable state correctional facilities. The work and education programs shall be designed to reduce recidivism.

(g) The executive director shall monitor all private contract prisons. Each contractor shall bear the costs of monitoring associated with out-of-state inmates and shall reimburse the department on a per-inmate basis for out-of-state inmates, but shall not bear the costs of monitoring associated with Colorado inmates.

(1.5) For the purposes of a contract in existence as of April 1, 2004, if a contractor employs a person in a private correctional facility who is required to register as a sex offender pursuant to the provisions of the "Colorado Sex Offender Registration Act", article 22 of title 16, C.R.S., the contractor shall ensure that the person does not have unsupervised contact with an inmate on and after April 1, 2004. Failure to comply with the provisions of this subsection (1.5) shall constitute a breach and grounds for termination of the contract.

(2) A contract entered into under this part 2 does not accord third-party beneficiary status to any inmate or to any member of the general public.

(3) Each contract shall include any other requirements the department considers necessary and appropriate for carrying out the purposes of this part 2.

Source: L. 95: Entire part added, p. 1268, § 1, effective June 5. L. 2000: IP(1), (1)(d), and (1)(g) amended, p. 837, § 19, effective May 24. L. 2004: (1)(a)(I) amended and (1.5) added, p. 231, § 2, effective April 1; (1)(g) amended, p. 753, § 1, effective May 12; IP(1) and IP(1)(a) amended, p. 127, § 2, effective August 4. L. 2006: IP(1) amended, p. 1059, § 1, effective May 25.

17-1-202.5. Private prison planning process. (1) In any fiscal year, if the general assembly determines that the amount of moneys credited to the capital construction fund, created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., is not sufficient to pay for the design and construction of a correctional facility for adult offenders that is deemed necessary to satisfy future prison bed projections and needs, the department may request competitive proposals from private prison providers three years before desired occupancy of the correctional facility. Prior to issuing a request for competitive proposals requiring new construction under this section, the department shall notify the capital development committee, established pursuant to section 2-3-1302, C.R.S.

(2) (a) The department, during the request for competitive proposals process described in subsection (1) of this section, shall determine the level of security, the desired location, and the number of beds necessary for the facility, as well as other criteria applicable to the appropriate conditions of confinement to be maintained at the facility. The department shall be under no obligation or duty to place offenders in a facility covered by this section.

(b) The department in all instances shall ensure that requests for competitive proposals adequately inform prospective contractors that the department will give priority to proposals that satisfy the requirements of section 17-1-202 and that are competitive to the extent they contain terms that are most favorable to the department. The department shall, to the extent possible, also take steps to provide a competitive market environment for prospective contractors and to avoid decreased competition and the creation of a monopoly in the market.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed to require or permit the department to lend or pledge the credit or faith of the department or of the state in any manner that would violate section 1 of article XI of the Colorado constitution.

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 127, § 3, effective August 4. L. 2006: (1) amended, p. 1059, § 2, effective May 25.

17-1-203. Powers and duties not delegable to contractor. (1) A contract executed pursuant to this part 2 shall not be construed as authorizing, allowing, or delegating authority to the contractor to:

(a) Choose the correctional facility to which an inmate is initially assigned or subsequently transferred. The contractor may request, in writing, that an inmate be transferred to a facility operated by the department. The executive director and the contractor shall develop and implement a cooperative agreement for transferring inmates between a correctional facility operated by the department and a private contract prison. The department and the contractor must comply with the cooperative agreement.

(b) Develop or adopt disciplinary rules or penalties that differ from the disciplinary rules and penalties that apply to inmates housed in correctional facilities operated by the department of corrections;

(c) Make a final determination on a disciplinary action that affects the liberty of an inmate. The contractor may remove an inmate from the general prison population during an emergency, before final resolution of a disciplinary hearing, or in response to an inmate's request for assigned housing in protective custody.

(d) Make a decision that affects the sentence imposed upon or the time served by an inmate, including a decision to award, deny, or forfeit earned time;

(e) Make recommendations to the state board of parole with respect to the denial or granting of parole or release; however, the contractor may submit written reports to the state board of parole and shall respond to any written request by the state board of parole for information;

(f) Develop and implement requirements that inmates engage in any type of work, except to the extent that those requirements are accepted by the department;

(g) Determine inmate eligibility for any form of release from a correctional facility.

Source: L. 95: Entire part added, p. 1269, § 1, effective June 5. L. 2000: (1)(a) amended, p. 838, § 20, effective May 24.

ANNOTATION

Subsection (1)(c) sets forth three separate circumstances in which a contractor may remove a prison inmate from the general prison population. The clause "before final resolution of a disciplinary hearing" is a separate category and does not modify the phrase "during an emergency". Gatrell v. Kurtz, 207 P.3d 916 (Colo. App. 2009).

Because private prison lacks authority to make a final determination on a disciplinary action that affects the liberty of an inmate, timely filing of an appeal is measured from the date of the private prison's monitoring unit's decision and not the date of the warden's decision. Geerdes v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 226 P.3d 1261 (Colo. App. 2010).

17-1-204. Background checks. (1) The Colorado bureau of investigation may accept fingerprints of individuals who apply for employment at a private correctional facility and who shall be subject to background checks in accordance with section 17-1-202 (1) (a) (I).

(2) For the purpose of conducting background checks, to the extent provided for by federal law, the Colorado bureau of investigation may exchange with the department state, multistate, and federal criminal history records of individuals who apply for employment at a private correctional facility.

Source: L. 95: Entire part added, p. 1270, § 1, effective June 5.

17-1-205. Contract termination - control of a correctional facility by the department. A contractor shall submit a detailed plan for the department to assume temporary responsibility for a private contract prison when the contract between the state and the contractor terminates. The state, through the executive director, may terminate the contract for cause, including but not limited to failure to obtain or maintain facility accreditation, after written notice of material deficiencies and after sixty workdays have been provided to the contractor to correct the material deficiencies. If any event occurs involving the noncompliance with or violation of contract terms and presents a serious threat to the safety, health, or security of the inmates, employees, or the public, the department may temporarily assume responsibility for the private contract prison. In addition, a contractor shall submit a plan for the temporary assumption of operations and purchase of a private contract prison by the department in the event of bankruptcy or the financial insolvency of the contractor. The contractor shall provide an emergency plan to address inmate disturbances, employee work stoppages, strikes, or other serious events. The plan shall comply with applicable national correctional standards. Nothing in this section shall be construed to require the state to assume the responsibility for the operation of private contract prisons and costs associated with contractual termination described in this section. If the state chooses, it may assume responsibility upon approval by the general assembly through the enactment of legislation.

Source: L. 95: Entire part added, p. 1270, § 1, effective June 5. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 838, § 21, effective May 24.

17-1-206. Inmates in custody of the department. The provisions of section 16-11-308, C.R.S., shall apply to inmates placed in a private contract prison pursuant to this part 2.

Source: L. 95: Entire part added, p. 1271, § 1, effective June 5. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 838, § 22, effective May 24.

17-1-206.5. Preparole release and revocation facility - community return-to-custody facility. (1) On or before December 1, 2001, the department shall issue a request for proposal for the construction and operation of a private contract prison to serve as a parole and revocation center, that shall be a level III facility, as described in section 17-1-104.3 (1) (a) (III).

(2) The prison described in subsection (1) of this section shall contain at least three hundred beds and incarcerate any of the following:

(a) Inmates who have not been convicted of a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., and who have no more than nineteen months remaining until such inmate's parole eligibility date;

(b) Inmates who have been convicted of a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., and who have no more than nine months remaining until such inmate's parole eligibility date; or

(c) Offenders whose parole has been revoked; except that such incarceration shall be for no more than one hundred eighty days.

(3) In addition to the parole release and revocation facility described in subsections (1) and (2) of this section, the department has the authority to operate community return-to-custody facilities and provide other support and monitoring services as a revocation facility for the placement of nonviolent parolees whose parole is revoked pursuant to section 17-2-103 (11) (b) (III) under the following conditions:

(a) The facilities shall be limited to the placement of nonviolent parolees whose parole is revoked pursuant to section 17-2-103 (11) (b) (III);

(b) The scope of the facilities' programming shall be limited to services and monitoring that address the failure of a nonviolent parolee whose parole is revoked pursuant to section 17-2-103 (11) (b) (III) and will allow for limited performance-based access to the community. A request for proposals for such services and monitoring shall be issued by the department on or before August 31, 2003, and the contracts awarded by November 2003.

(c) The department may assess and collect fees from parolees placed in the facility pursuant to section 17-2-103 (11) (b) (III).

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 501, § 1, effective May 16. L. 2002: (2)(a) and (2)(b) amended, p. 1499, § 157, effective October 1. L. 2003: (3) added, p. 2679, § 6, effective July 1.

Editor's note: The provisions of this section as enacted by House Bill 01-1370 were renumbered on revision to conform to statutory format.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (2)(a) and (2)(b), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-1-207. Applicability of part. This part 2 shall not apply to the contracts between counties and the department of corrections under which the county agrees to house the backlog of inmates as provided by section 16-11-308.5, C.R.S., which contracts shall be governed by said section. In addition, this part 2 shall not apply to any contract entered into by the department under circumstances where the contract has been reviewed in accordance with section 17-1-105 (2).

Source: L. 95: Entire part added, p. 1271, § 1, effective June 5.

Parole and Probation

ARTICLE 2

Correctional Services

Editor’s note: (1) Prior to the repeal and reenactment of this title in 1977, the substantive provisions of this article were contained in article 1 of this title.
(2) For additional historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor’s note at the beginning of this title.

Cross references: For the “Uniform Act for Out-of-State Parolee Supervision”, see part 3 of article 60 of title 24.

PART 1		17-2-205.	Time of parole not considered when convict is reincarcerated. (Repealed)
DIVISION OF ADULT PAROLE		17-2-206.	Parole not to be construed as discharge. (Repealed)
17-2-100.2.	Legislative intent regarding parole.	17-2-207.	Parole - regulations.
17-2-101.	Division of adult parole.	17-2-208.	Effective date and application. (Repealed)
17-2-102.	Division of adult parole - general powers, duties, and functions - definitions.	17-2-209.	Civil proceedings - inmate subject to parole.
17-2-103.	Arrest of parolee - revocation proceedings.	17-2-210.	Duties of board.
17-2-103.5.	Revocation proceedings - parolee arrested for certain offenses.	17-2-211.	Jurisdiction of courts.
17-2-104.	Records - reports - publications.	17-2-212.	Duty of warden.
17-2-105.	Appropriation. (Repealed)	17-2-213.	Application of part.
17-2-106.	Branch parole offices - acquisition - duty to inform public.	17-2-214.	Right to attend parole hearings.
		17-2-215.	Notification of parole proceeding.
		17-2-216.	Application of sections 17-2-214 and 17-2-215.
		17-2-217.	Release hearing officers - pilot program.
PART 2		PART 3
STATE BOARD OF PAROLE		COOPERATIVE RETURN OF PAROLE AND PROBATION VIOLATORS
17-2-201.	State board of parole.	17-2-301.	Short title.
17-2-201.5.	Study of parole system. (Repealed)	17-2-302.	Director - powers.
17-2-202.	Request for transfer - penitentiary to reformatory. (Repealed)	17-2-303.	Deputization.
17-2-202.5.	Administrative hearing officers and release hearing officers - qualifications - duties.	17-2-304.	Interstate agreements.
17-2-203.	Request for transfer - reformatory to penitentiary. (Repealed)	PART 4
17-2-204.	Parole may issue - when.	PREPAROLE FACILITIES AND PROGRAMS
		17-2-401 to
		17-2-405.	(Repealed)

PART 1

DIVISION OF ADULT PAROLE

Cross references: For home detention programs for parolees, see § 17-27.8-105.

17-2-100.2. Legislative intent regarding parole. The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the primary consideration for any decision to grant parole shall be the public safety. The general assembly further finds and declares that, since parole is a privilege granted by the general assembly and not a right guaranteed under the state or federal constitutions, if the parolee violates the conditions of his parole, that privilege may be revoked.

Source: L. 87: Entire section added, p. 650, § 1, effective July 1.

17-2-101. Division of adult parole. In order to promote the maximum efficiency, economy, and continuity of services in carrying out the purposes of this part 1, the division of administration created by the "State Parole Reorganization Act of 1951", formerly transferred to the department of institutions and identified as the division of parole, and the director thereof are hereby transferred by a type 3 transfer to the department of corrections as the division of adult parole and the director thereof, and the division of parole is abolished. The division shall be organized as directed by the executive director.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 906, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 839, § 23, effective May 24.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 17-1-101 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) The "State Parole Reorganization Act of 1951" was originally entitled the "State Department of Parole, Reorganization Act of 1951" (see L. 51, p. 333, § 1 and § 17-1-101, C.R.S. 1973, as that section existed prior to August 1, 1977).

Cross references: For type 3 transfers, see § 24-1-105 (3).

17-2-102. Division of adult parole - general powers, duties, and functions - definitions. (1) The division of adult parole in the department shall administer the adult parole program. The division shall keep a complete record in respect to all domestic as well as interstate parolees. The director of the division of adult parole shall exercise the power of suspension of paroles in the interim of the meetings of the state board of parole, referred to in this part 1 as the "board", and in connection therewith the director may arrest such suspended parolee without warrant and return such suspended parolee to an appropriately secure facility to await the further action of the board. In case of such suspension of parole, the director shall send to the board, at its first session thereafter, a transcript of all proceedings taken in connection with such suspension and the reasons for his or her action.

(2) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 839, § 24, effective May 24, 2000.)

(3) The director of the division of adult parole, pursuant to the provisions of section 13 of article XII of the state constitution, shall appoint such other officers and employees as may be necessary to properly supervise all adult parolees released from any state correctional institution or private contract prison together with such other persons as are accepted for supervision under the interstate compact.

(4) and (5) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 839, § 24, effective May 24, 2000.)

(6) Repealed.

(7) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 839, § 24, effective May 24, 2000.)

(8) The division of adult parole shall establish and administer appropriate programs of education and treatment and other productive activities, which programs and activities are designed to assist in the rehabilitation of an offender.

(8.5) (a) Any parolee, on parole as a result of a conviction of any felony, who is under the supervision of the division of adult parole pursuant to this part 1 and who is initially tested for the illegal or unauthorized use of a controlled substance and the result of such test is positive shall be subject to any or all of the following actions:

(I) An immediate warrantless arrest;

(II) An immediate increase in the level of supervision, including but not limited to intensive supervision;

(III) Random screenings for the detection of the illegal or unauthorized use of a controlled substance, which use may serve as the basis for any other community placement;

(IV) Referral to a substance abuse treatment program.

(b) If any parolee described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (8.5) is subjected to a second or subsequent test for the illegal or unauthorized use of a controlled substance and the result of the test is positive, the community parole officer shall take one or more of the following actions:

- (I) Make an immediate warrantless arrest;
 - (II) Seek a parole revocation in accordance with section 17-2-103;
 - (III) Immediately increase the level of supervision, including but not limited to intensive supervision;
 - (IV) Increase the number of drug screenings for the illegal or unauthorized use of controlled substances;
 - (V) Refer the parolee to a substance abuse treatment program.
- (c) This subsection (8.5) shall not apply to any parolee to whom article 11.5 of title 16, C.R.S., applies.

(9) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 839, § 24, effective May 24, 2000.)

(10) (a) The division of adult parole shall, in accordance with section 17-2-106:

(I) Notify a municipality of any site within such municipality that the division has selected to become a branch parole office; or

(II) Notify a county of any site within such county that the division has selected to become a branch parole office if the site is not within a municipality located in the county.

(b) For purposes of this subsection (10) and section 17-2-106, “branch parole office” means any real estate in this state that the division of adult parole, on behalf of the department of corrections, may acquire by purchase, leasehold, or other method for the purpose of operating an office to perform any function required or permitted by this title concerning parolee interview, reporting, testing, screening, and supervision.

(11) The division of adult parole shall provide to the judiciary committees of the senate and the house of representatives, or any successor committees, a status report on the effect on parole outcomes and use of any moneys allocated pursuant to House Bill 10-1360, enacted in 2010.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 907, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (6) repealed, p. 705, § 88, effective July 1. L. 80: (7) and (8) added, p. 525, § 1, effective March 25. L. 82: (2) amended, p. 352, § 7, effective April 30. L. 87: (9) added, p. 650, § 2, effective July 1. L. 89: (8.5) added, p. 877, § 13, effective June 5. L. 91: (8.5)(c) added, p. 442, § 5, effective May 29. L. 2000: (1) to (5), (7), (8), IP(8.5)(a), and (9) amended, p. 839, § 24, effective May 24. L. 2001: (10) added, p. 662, § 1, effective August 8. L. 2008: IP(8.5)(b) amended, p. 655, § 3, effective April 25. L. 2010: (11) added, (HB 10-1360), ch. 263, p. 1196, § 7, effective May 25.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 17-1-102 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For the interstate compact referred to in subsection (3) of this section, see part 3 of article 60 of title 24.

ANNOTATION

The plain language of subsection (8.5)(c) of this section and § 17-2-201 (5.5)(g) prohibits the application of either subsection (8.5) of this section or § 17-2-201 (5.5) to any parolee to whom the Substance Abuse Act, article 11.5 of title 16, applies. Whidden v. People, 78 P.3d 1092 (Colo. 2003).

Subsection (8.5), when read together with § 17-2-201 (5.5)(d), prohibits parole revocation upon initial drug or alcohol testing even if the result is positive, but does allow revocation upon any subsequent positive test even if the initial test was not positive. People v. Whidden, 56 P.3d 1201 (Colo. App. 2002), aff’d on other grounds, 78 P.3d 1092 (Colo. 2003).

Court rejected the contention that subsection (8.5) restricts the parole board’s authority to revoke defendant’s parole for a single violation based on a positive test for use of illegal drugs. People v. Whidden, 56 P.3d 1201 (Colo. App. 2002), aff’d on other grounds, 78 P.3d 1092 (Colo. 2003).

17-2-103. Arrest of parolee - revocation proceedings. (1) The director of the division of adult parole or any community parole officer may arrest any parolee when:

- (a) He has a warrant commanding that such parolee be arrested; or
- (b) He has probable cause to believe that a warrant for the parolee's arrest has been issued in this state or another state for any criminal offense or for violation of a condition of parole; or
- (c) Any offense under the laws of this state has been or is being committed by the parolee in his presence; or
- (d) He has probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and that the parolee has committed such crime; or
- (e) He has probable cause to believe that the parolee has violated a condition of his parole or probable cause to believe that the parolee is leaving or about to leave the state, or that the parolee will fail or refuse to appear before the board to answer charges of violations of one or more conditions of parole, or that the arrest of the parolee is necessary to prevent physical harm to the parolee or another person or to prevent the commission of a crime; or
- (f) The parolee, who is on parole as a result of a conviction of any felony, has been tested for the illegal or unauthorized use of a controlled substance and the result of such test is positive.

(2) (a) A board hearing relating to the revocation of parole shall be held, at the discretion of the board, in the courthouse or other facility that is acceptable to the board in the county in which the alleged violation occurred, the county of the parolee's confinement, or the county of the parolee's residence if not confined.

(b) In all hearings relating to revocation of parole, one member of the board shall hear the case to a conclusion, unless the chairperson of the board assigns another board member due to the illness or unavailability of the first board member. The parolee may appeal to two members of the board. Such appeal shall be on the record.

(c) At evidentiary hearings concerning revocation of parole, the district attorney of the county in which the hearing is held may be in attendance to present the case.

(d) At all hearings before the board which are held outside of the institution to which the parolee is sentenced, it is the duty of the county sheriff to provide for the safety of all persons present. All counties shall make sufficient room available to conduct parole revocation proceedings in their respective courthouses or other facilities that are acceptable to the board.

(e) All votes of the board at any hearing or appeal held pursuant to this section shall be recorded by member and shall be a public record open to inspection and shall be subject to the provisions of part 3 of article 72 of title 24, C.R.S.

(3) (a) Whenever a community parole officer has reasonable grounds to believe that a condition of parole has been violated by any parolee, he or she may issue a summons requiring the parolee to appear before the board at a specified time and place to answer charges of violation of one or more conditions of parole. The summons shall be accompanied by a copy of the complaint filed before the board seeking revocation of parole. Willful failure of the parolee to appear before the board as required by the summons is a violation of a condition of parole.

(b) A community parole officer may request that the board issue a warrant for the arrest of a parolee for violation of the conditions of his or her parole by filing a complaint with the board showing probable cause to believe that the parolee has violated a condition of his or her parole. The warrant may be executed by a peace officer, as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S.

(4) (a) If, rather than issuing a summons, a community parole officer makes an arrest of a parolee, with or without a warrant, or the parolee is otherwise arrested, the parolee shall be held in a county jail or a preparole facility or program pending action by the community parole officer pursuant to subsection (5) of this section.

(b) Repealed.

(5) Not later than ten working days after the arrest of any parolee, as provided in subsection (4) of this section, the community parole officer shall complete his or her investigation and either:

(a) File a complaint before the board in which the facts are alleged upon which a revocation of parole is sought; or

(b) Order the release of the parolee and request that any warrant be quashed and that any complaint be dismissed, and parole shall be restored; or

(c) Order the release of the parolee and issue a summons requiring the parolee to appear before the board at a specified time and place to answer charges of violation of one or more conditions of parole.

(6) (a) Any complaint filed by the community parole officer in which revocation of parole is sought shall contain the name of the parolee and his or her department of corrections number, identify the nature of the charges that are alleged to justify revocation of his or her parole, the substance of the evidence sustaining the charges, and the condition of parole alleged to have been violated, including the date and approximate location thereof, together with the signature of the community parole officer. A copy thereof shall be given to the parolee a reasonable length of time before any parole board hearing.

(b) At any time after the filing of a complaint, the director of the division of adult parole may cause the revocation proceedings to be dismissed by giving written notification of the decision for the dismissal to the board, the community parole officer, and the parolee. Upon receipt of the notification by the director, the community parole officer shall order the release of the parolee pursuant to subsection (5) of this section, and parole shall be restored.

(c) The filing of a complaint by the community parole officer tolls the expiration of the parolee's parole.

(7) If the parolee is in custody pursuant to subsection (4) of this section, or the parolee was arrested and then released pursuant to paragraph (c) of subsection (5) of this section, the hearing on revocation shall be held within a reasonable time, not to exceed thirty days after the parolee was arrested; except that the board may grant a delay when it finds good cause to exist therefor. If the parolee was issued a summons, the final hearing shall be held within thirty working days from the date the summons was issued; except that the board may grant a delay when it finds good cause to exist therefor. The board shall notify the sheriff, the community parole officer, and the parolee of the date, time, and place of the hearing. It shall be the responsibility of the sheriff to assure the presence of the parolee being held in custody at the time and place of the hearing and to provide for the safety of all present.

(8) Prior to appearance before the board, a parolee shall be advised in writing by the director of the division of adult parole concerning the nature of the charges that are alleged to justify revocation of parole and the substance of the evidence sustaining the charges; the parolee shall be given a copy of the complaint unless he or she has already received one; the parolee shall be informed of the consequences which may follow in the event parole is revoked; the parolee shall then be advised that a full and final hearing will be held before the board at which hearing the parolee will be required to plead guilty or not guilty to the charges contained in the complaint; and the parolee shall be further advised that at the hearing before the board he or she may be represented by an attorney and that he or she may testify and present witnesses and documentary evidence in defense of the charges or in mitigation or explanation thereof. The hearing may be continued by the board upon a showing of good cause.

(9) (a) In the event of a plea of not guilty, the division of adult parole, at the final hearing before the board, shall have the burden of establishing by a preponderance of the evidence the violation of a condition of parole; except that the commission of a criminal offense must be established beyond a reasonable doubt, unless the parolee has been convicted thereof in a criminal proceeding. When it appears that the alleged violation of a condition or conditions of parole consists of an offense with which the parolee is charged in a criminal case then pending, testimony given before the board in a parole revocation proceeding shall not be admissible in such criminal proceeding before a court. When, in a parole revocation hearing, the alleged violation of a condition of parole is the parolee's failure to pay court-ordered compensation to appointed counsel, probation fees, court costs, restitution, or reparations, evidence of the failure to pay shall constitute prima facie evidence of a violation. The board may revoke the parole if requested to do so by the parolee. Any evidence having probative value shall be admissible in all proceedings related to a parole violation complaint, regardless of its admissibility under the exclusionary rules of evidence, if the parolee is accorded a fair opportunity to rebut hearsay evidence. The parolee shall have the right to confront and to cross-examine adverse witnesses unless the board specifically finds good cause for not allowing confrontation of an informer.

(b) If the parolee has been convicted of a criminal offense while on parole, the board shall accept said conviction as conclusive proof of a violation and shall conduct a hearing as to the disposition of the parole only.

(10) Repealed.

(11) (a) If the board determines that a violation of a condition or conditions of parole has been committed, the board shall, within five working days after the completion of the final hearing, either revoke the parole, as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (11), or continue it in effect, or modify the conditions of parole if circumstances then shown to exist require such modifications. If parole is revoked, the board shall serve upon the parolee a written statement as to the evidence relied on and the reasons for revoking parole.

(b) (I) If the board determines that the parolee has violated parole through commission of a crime, the board may revoke parole and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to a place of confinement designated by the executive director.

(II) If the board determines that the parolee has violated any condition of parole other than commission of a crime and is not subject to the provisions of subparagraph (III), (III.5), (IV), or (VI) of this paragraph (b), the board may:

(A) Revoke parole and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to a place of confinement designated by the executive director; or

(B) Revoke parole for a period not to exceed one hundred eighty days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to a community corrections program pursuant to section 18-1.3-301 (3), C.R.S., a place of confinement within the department of corrections, or any private facility that is under contract to the department of corrections; or

(C) Revoke parole for a period not to exceed ninety days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to the county jail of such county or to any private facility that is under contract to the department of corrections; or

(D) Revoke parole for a period not to exceed one hundred eighty days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is heard to transport the parolee to the facility described in section 17-1-206.5.

(II.5) The board may extend a period of parole revocation imposed pursuant to sub-subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) of subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b) beyond the specified maximum if the parolee violates a condition of the parolee's placement pursuant to the notice and hearing procedures in this section.

(III) If the board determines that the parolee has violated any condition of parole that does not involve the commission of a crime, the parolee has no active felony warrant, felony detainer, or pending felony criminal charge, and the parolee was on parole for an offense that was a class 5 or class 6 nonviolent felony as defined in section 17-22.5-405 (5) (b), except for menacing as defined in section 18-3-206, C.R.S., or any unlawful sexual behavior contained in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., or unless the parolee was subject to article 6.5 of title 18, C.R.S., or section 18-6-801, C.R.S., the board may revoke parole for a period not to exceed one hundred eighty days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to the facility described in section 17-1-206.5 (3).

(III.5) If the board determines that the parolee has violated any condition of parole that does not involve the commission of a crime, the parolee has no active felony warrant, felony detainer, or pending felony criminal charge, and the parolee was on parole for an offense that was a class 4 nonviolent felony as defined in section 17-22.5-405 (5) (b), except for stalking as described in section 18-9-111 (4), C.R.S., as it existed prior to August 11, 2010, or section 18-3-602, C.R.S., or any unlawful sexual behavior described in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., or unless the parolee was subject to article 6.5 of title 18, C.R.S., or section 18-6-801, C.R.S., and the board revokes parole, the board may request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to the facility described in section 17-1-206.5 (3) for a period not to exceed one hundred eighty days.

(IV) If the board determines that the parolee has violated any condition of parole other than commission of a new crime and the parolee was not on parole for a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406 (2), C.R.S., the board may:

(A) Revoke parole for a period not to exceed ninety days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to a place of confinement designated by the executive director if, at the time of the revocation hearing, the inmate is assessed as below high risk based upon a research-based risk assessment instrument approved by the department of corrections and the state board of parole; or

(B) Revoke parole for a period not to exceed one hundred eighty days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to a place of confinement designated by the executive director if, at the time of the revocation hearing, the inmate is assessed as high risk or greater based upon a research-based risk assessment instrument approved by the department of corrections and the state board of parole; or

(C) Revoke parole for a period not to exceed one hundred eighty days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to a community corrections program; or

(D) Revoke parole for a period not to exceed one hundred eighty days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to the facility described in section 17-1-206.5.

(V) The board may extend a period of parole revocation imposed pursuant to subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) of subparagraph (IV) of this paragraph (b) beyond the specified maximum if the parolee violates a condition of the parolee's placement pursuant to the notice and hearing procedures in this section.

(VI) If the board determines that a parolee who has been designated as a sexually violent predator pursuant to section 18-3-414.5, C.R.S., or found to be a sexually violent predator or its equivalent in any other state or jurisdiction, including but not limited to a military or federal jurisdiction, has violated any condition of parole, the board may revoke parole and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to a place of confinement designated by the executive director.

(c) If the board determines that the parolee is in need of treatment and is amenable to treatment, the board shall consider placing the parolee in one of the following treatment options and, if appropriate, may modify the conditions of parole to include:

(I) Participation in an outpatient program for the treatment of substance abuse, mental illness, or co-occurring disorders; or

(II) (A) Placement in a residential treatment program for the treatment of substance abuse, mental illness, or co-occurring disorders, which program is under contract with the department of public safety and may include, but need not be limited to, intensive residential treatment, therapeutic community, and mental health programs.

(B) A parolee may be placed in a residential treatment program only upon acceptance by the residential treatment program and any community corrections board with jurisdiction over the residential treatment program. Residential treatment programs and community corrections boards are encouraged to develop an expedited review process to facilitate decision-making and placement of the parolee, if accepted.

(d) If the parole board orders the parolee to participate in a treatment program as a condition of parole pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (11), the level of treatment ordered shall be consistent with the treatment level need of the parolee based upon an assessment instrument approved for use by the unit within the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse.

(e) If the parolee is unsuccessful in participating in a treatment program ordered pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (11) and his or her participation is terminated, the board may consider placement of the parolee in additional treatment, as appropriate, including a higher level of treatment.

(11.5) Each fiscal year, the general assembly shall appropriate a portion of the savings generated by House Bill 10-1360, enacted in 2010. This appropriation shall be used only for re-entry support services for parolees related to obtaining employment, housing, transportation, substance abuse treatment, mental health treatment, mental health medication, or offender-specific services. The appropriation shall be made after consideration of the division of adult parole's status report required pursuant to section 17-2-102 (11).

(12) If the community parole officer is informed by any law enforcement agency that a parolee has been arrested for a criminal offense and is being detained in the county jail, the community parole officer shall file a complaint alleging the criminal offense as a violation of parole. The community parole officer shall advise the board of any pending criminal proceeding and shall request that a parole revocation proceeding be deferred pending a disposition of the criminal charge.

(13) (a) The board may revoke the parole if requested to do so by the parolee. If a parolee requests to have his or her parole revoked, the parolee shall provide the board a justifiable reason for requesting revocation of parole.

(b) Prior to revoking parole upon the request of a parolee, the board may recommend or implement appropriate interventions in order to assist in the parolee with reintegration and prevent a return to incarceration.

(c) If the board revokes the parole upon the request of the parolee, the board shall proceed pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (11) of this section.

(14) If the board revokes parole and places the parolee in custody, completion of the term of custody shall not constitute discharge of the parolee's remaining period of parole unless the term of custody is equal to the parolee's remaining period of parole.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 908, § 10, effective August 1. L. 78: (11) amended, p. 356, § 2, effective April 27. L. 79: (2)(a), (2)(d), (4), (5)(a), (6)(b), and (9)(a) amended, p. 686, § 26, effective July 1. L. 83: (9)(a) amended, p. 665, § 6, effective July 1. L. 85: (1)(e), (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(d), (3), (4)(a), (5), (6), (7), (8), (9), and (11) amended and (2)(c), (4)(b), and (10) repealed, pp. 633, 641, §§ 1, 11, effective July 1; (2)(e) added, p. 643, § 1, effective July 1. L. 87: (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(d), (6)(b), (7) to (9), and (11) amended, p. 952, § 55, effective March 13; (2)(b) amended, (2)(c) RC&RE, and (6)(c) added, p. 651, §§ 3, 4, 5, effective July 1. L. 89: (12) added, p. 863, § 5, effective April 12; (1)(f) added, p. 877, § 14, effective June 5. L. 90: (4)(a) amended, p. 944, § 15, effective June 7. L. 94: (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(d), (6)(b), (7), (8), (9), and (11) amended, pp. 2600, 2594, §§ 13, 1, effective June 3. L. 95: (11)(b)(II)(B) amended, p. 1097, § 16, effective May 31. L. 2000: IP(1), (6)(b), (8), and (9)(a) amended, p. 840, § 25, effective May 24. L. 2001: (11)(b)(II)(C) amended and (11)(b)(II)(D) added, p. 502, § 2, effective May 16. L. 2002: (11)(b)(II)(B) amended, p. 1499, § 158, effective October 1. L. 2003: (9)(a) and (11)(b) amended and (13) and (14) added, p. 2674, § 1, effective July 1; (3)(b) amended, p. 1614, § 9, effective August 6. L. 2008: IP(1), (3), (4)(a), IP(5), (6), (7), and (12) amended, p. 655, § 4, effective April 25; (11)(b)(III) amended, p. 1035, § 1, effective August 5. L. 2010: IP(11)(b)(II) amended and (11)(b)(VI) added, (HB 10-1089), ch. 56, p. 204, § 1, effective March 31; IP(11)(b)(II), (11)(b)(IV), and (11)(b)(V) amended and (11)(b)(III.5), (11)(c), (11)(d), (11)(e), and (11.5) added, (HB 10-1360), ch. 263, pp. 1193, 1194, 1196, § 2, 4, 5, effective May 25; IP(11)(b)(II) amended and (11)(b)(III.5) added, (HB 10-1360), ch. 263, p. 1194, § 3, effective August 11. L. 2011: (11)(d) amended, (HB 11-1303), ch. 264, p. 1156, § 28, effective August 10.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 17-1-103 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) Amendments to subsection (11) in sections 1 and 13 of Senate Bill 94-172 were harmonized.

(3) Amendments to IP(11)(b)(II) by House Bill 10-1089 and House Bill 10-1360 were harmonized.

Cross references: (1) For other provisions concerning parole revocation proceedings, see § 17-2-201.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (11)(b)(II)(B), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Arrest and Investigation of Parolee.
- III. Revocation Proceedings.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Procedure in Colorado — A Summary and Recommendations for Improvement", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 221 (1950). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For note, "The Evolution of the Police Officer's Right to Arrest Without a Warrant in Colorado", see 43 Den. L.J. 366 (1966). For comment on Williams v. Patterson (389 F.2d 374 (10th Cir. 1968)), see 40 U. Colo. L. Rev. 617 (1968). For article, "Due Process, Equal Protection and State Parole Revocation Proceedings", see 42 U. Colo. L. Rev. 197 (1970).

Annotator's note. Since § 17-2-103 is similar to § 17-1-103 as it existed prior to the 1977 repeal and reenactment of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

No violation of ex post facto clause of federal constitution when provisions which were in existence when a prisoner is sentenced are deleted prior to prisoner's arrest for violation of parole. Turman v. Romer, 729 F. Supp. 1276 (D. Colo. 1990).

For purposes of determining when the thirty-day time limitation for a parole revocation hearing begins to run, the parolee is not considered "arrested" until he is delivered into the custody of Colorado authorities. Turman v. Buckallew, 784 P.2d 774 (Colo. 1989).

Parole officer's decision to hold the plaintiff pending a parole revocation hearing is protected by qualified immunity, not absolute immunity, by virtue of the distance of the decision from the judicial process. Mee v. Ortega, 967 F.2d 423 (10th Cir. 1992).

Whereas, damage resulting from parole officer's testimony at state habeas proceeding was protected by absolute immunity, because as a witness, the parole officer directly serves the court. Mee v. Ortega, 967 F.2d 423 (10th Cir. 1992).

Subsection (6)(c) of this section does not negate or change the general rule for applying presentence confinement credit set forth in § 18-1.3-405, which provides that a defendant receive presentence confinement credit on his or her original sentence and not on the new sentence. Rather, the filing of a parole revocation complaint merely provides jurisdiction to the parole board, but once the parole board makes its decision, the time starts running again from the date of the complaint whether the complaint is dismissed or parole is revoked.

People v. Wallin, 167 P.3d 183 (Colo. App. 2007).

II. ARREST AND INVESTIGATION OF PAROLEE.

Parolees, as a class, pose a greater threat of criminal activity to law enforcement authorities than ordinary citizens. People v. Anderson, 189 Colo. 34, 536 P.2d 302 (1975).

The parole authority must be vested with the power to investigate a parolee to ascertain whether a parole violation has occurred if it is to fulfill its statutory function. People v. Anderson, 189 Colo. 34, 536 P.2d 302 (1975).

The police officer does not have the broad power to supervise parolees that is granted to parole officers. People v. Anderson, 189 Colo. 34, 536 P.2d 302 (1975).

A parole officer may cause a police officer to accompany him when a search is being made. People v. Anderson, 189 Colo. 34, 536 P.2d 302 (1975).

The fact that a person is on parole does not justify a search without a warrant by any law enforcement officer, other than a parole officer. People v. Anderson, 189 Colo. 34, 536 P.2d 302 (1975).

Presence of reasonable cause eliminates need for warrant. A parole officer who is investigating a parole violation is required to have reasonable grounds to believe that a parole violation has occurred. Under these circumstances, when he conducts his search in connection with that investigation, the need for a search warrant is eliminated. People v. Anderson, 189 Colo. 34, 536 P.2d 302 (1975) (decided prior to the enactment of § 17-2-201 (5)(f)(I)(D)).

Unrelated evidence admissible in prosecution of another crime. Evidence seized within the scope of a reasonable search by a parole officer, even though unrelated to the parole violation, is admissible in the prosecution of another crime. People v. Anderson, 189 Colo. 34, 536 P.2d 302 (1975).

Arrest ends constructive custody. The arrest of a parolee for an alleged violation of the conditions of his parole results in a transposition from constructive to physical custody of such parolee. Schooley v. Wilson, 150 Colo. 483, 374 P.2d 353 (1962).

Section limits period of imprisonment, not authority of board to act. The time limitations contained in this section do not limit or prescribe the time within which the parole board must act in order to properly suspend or revoke one's parole. Such time limitations only fix the maximum period of time a suspected parole violator may be held in jail by the parole authorities while they investigate his activities and determine what action should be taken. Folks v.

Patterson, 159 Colo. 403, 412 P.2d 214 (1966); Mora v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 923 (10th Cir. 1967); Goetz v. Gunter, 830 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1992).

Thus, board may revoke parole after 15 [now 30] days. The contention that the parole board was deprived of any power to revoke parole once the 15-day [now 30-day] period had passed has been decided adversely, and the supreme court adheres to this ruling. Williams v. Patterson, 161 Colo. 259, 421 P.2d 474 (1966).

Actions prior to revocation are moot. Once the parole board has revoked one's parole, the fact that such person prior to such revocation may have been held for more than the period permitted by this section is of no moment. Folks v. Patterson, 159 Colo. 403, 412 P.2d 214 (1966).

Questions with respect to matters transpiring prior to the time a parolee is transferred to the state penitentiary are not justiciable after the transfer. Mora v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 923 (10th Cir. 1967).

Habeas corpus is the remedy for an unlawful restraint of one's liberty under this section as well as for an unlawful imprisonment, and a person on parole can resort to the remedy of habeas corpus where parole officers are not following the mandate of this section in regard to revocatory proceedings. Schooley v. Wilson, 150 Colo. 483, 374 P.2d 353 (1962).

Where a parolee was arrested and held in actual custody more than 15 [now 30] days without release or revocation of his parole in violation of this section, habeas corpus was the proper remedy. Schooley v. Wilson, 150 Colo. 483, 374 P.2d 353 (1962).

Habeas corpus will lie where a parolee was being detained by the authorities for a time longer than that permitted by this section prior to the parole board's alternative action of either releasing him or revoking his parole. Johnson v. Tinsley, 157 Colo. 539, 404 P.2d 159 (1965).

Relief is discharge only prior to revocation. The proviso now appearing in this section that no parolee shall be kept in jail by the division of parole for a period of more than 15 [now 30] days means that a suspected parole violator who is held in jail for more than 15 [now 30] days while his activities are being investigated is entitled to relief by way of habeas corpus, the relief being discharge-not from the penitentiary or institution following revocation-but from the institution to which confined prior to revocation. People ex rel. Patterson v. District Court, 159 Colo. 142, 410 P.2d 630 (1966).

Since subsection (4)(a) does not expressly require the county to accept "technical" parole violators and evidence existed to show the county jail was overcrowded, the county had no obligation to accept such parole violators. State for Use of Dept. of Corr. v. Pena, 837 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1992).

Subsection (1)(e) does not define a city or county's obligation to accept technical parole violators. The State of Colorado, for the Use of the Dept. of Corr. v. Pena, 855 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993).

Subsection (4)(a) does not mandate that a county or city accept all alleged parole violators who are arrested. The right to arrest and take a parolee to jail for detention does not entail a duty on the part of jails to accept, without discretion, such parolees. The State of Colorado, for the Use of the Dept. of Corr. v. Pena, 855 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to 1990 amendment).

Subsection (11), read in conjunction with §§ 17-2-201 (5.5)(d) and 17-2-102 (8.5), does not require revocation of parole upon an initial positive drug or alcohol testing. But parole board had authority to revoke defendant's parole based on a single drug or alcohol violation when it occurred in a subsequent test. People v. Whidden, 56 P.3d 1201 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 78 P.3d 1092 (Colo. 2003).

The substance abuse in the criminal justice system statutes, article 11.5 of title 16, and this section authorize, but do not require, the board to revoke parole and return a parolee to the department of corrections based upon a single positive drug test that occurs after the baseline test. People v. Whidden, 78 P.3d 1092 (Colo. 2003).

III. REVOCATION PROCEEDINGS.

Probable cause hearing required as promptly as convenient. Although this section is silent regarding a time limitation within which the probable cause hearing required by subsection (4) must be held, due process requires only that a hearing be conducted as "promptly as convenient". Mijares v. Shipley, 197 Colo. 282, 592 P.2d 414 (1979).

Due process requires fairness in revocation hearings. Parolees in parole revocation hearings are not entitled to the specifics of due process available to an accused in the first instance, but this in no way negates their right to enjoy due process as that mandate reflects the right of all persons to inherent fairness in all compulsive processes. Martinez v. Patterson, 429 F.2d 844 (10th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 934, 91 S. Ct. 1528, 28 L. Ed.2d 868 (1971).

While the parolee's liberty cannot be terminated without reason, it does not follow that he is entitled to all of the federal constitutional procedures and safeguards guaranteed by the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. Thus, he is not entitled to a speedy public trial pursuant to the sixth amendment, but is entitled to a fair hearing for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not he has violated his parole. Hutchison v. Patterson, 267 F. Supp. 433 (D. Colo. 1967).

The due process clause of the fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution does not generate rights to confrontation, to cross-examination, or to compulsory process at parole revocation hearings. Due process does not comprehend the dual rights to witnesses under oath and evidence in conditional release hearings. Firkins v. Colo., 434 F.2d 1232 (10th Cir. 1970).

This includes right to know charges and hearing free of caprice. The right of a prisoner to be heard at a revocation hearing is inviolative; so, too, is the right to know and be specifically informed of the charges and the nature of the evidence against him; and, finally, the right to be free from pure caprice on the part of the discretionary authority before whom the proceedings occur. The right to gather and file written statements before the board is an empty right unless parole violators are given notice of the charges prior to their hearing before the parole board. Martinez v. Patterson, 429 F.2d 844 (10th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 934, 91 S. Ct. 1528, 28 L. Ed.2d 868 (1971).

There is no federal constitutional right to counsel at a parole revocation proceeding. Wilkerson v. Patterson, 303 F. Supp. 665 (D. Colo. 1969).

There is no constitutional right to counsel at parole revocation hearings. Firkins v. Colo., 434 F.2d 1232 (10th Cir. 1970).

The denial of the assistance of counsel at a parole revocation hearing was no ground for federal habeas corpus relief. Williams v. Patterson, 389 F.2d 374 (10th Cir. 1968); Martinez v. Patterson, 429 F.2d 844 (10th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 934, 91 S. Ct. 1528, 28 L. Ed.2d 868 (1971).

Failure to appoint counsel under former section did not deny equal protection. The argument for a federal constitutional right to appointed counsel under the equal protection clause does not apply where the services rendered by a retained counsel are slight and not dependent on unique capabilities with which the attorney is endowed by virtue of his legal training. An indigent defendant suffers no substantial disadvantage because an attorney is not made available to him to write letters to the state parole board. No invidious discrimination is present and no violation of the equal protection clause has occurred. Wilkerson v. Patterson, 303 F. Supp. 665 (D. Colo. 1969); Martinez v. Patterson, 429 F.2d 844 (10th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 934, 91 S. Ct. 1528, 28 L. Ed.2d 868 (1971).

Parole revocation reincarceration is not a new sentence. Since the sentencing power of the judiciary is not implicated, there is no separation of powers or due process violation. People v. Barber, 74 P.3d 444 (Colo. App. 2003).

No statutory duty to preserve testimony in parole revocation hearing. Neither the state parole board nor an administrative law judge conducting a parole revocation hearing has a statutory duty to preserve the testimony at a parole revocation hearing. In fact, such testimony is inadmissible in a criminal proceeding against the parolee based on the offense giving rise to the parole violation. People v. Schrecongost, 796 P.2d 45 (Colo. App. 1990), aff'd, 810 P.2d 1068 (Colo. 1991).

If a parolee pleads not guilty to a parole violation complaint alleging the commission of a crime for which he has not been convicted, the authority seeking parole revocation has the burden of establishing beyond a reasonable doubt that the parolee committed the alleged offense. People v. White, 804 P.2d 247 (Colo. App. 1990).

Retroactive application of subsection (12) denied under Crim. P. 35(c)(1) because Crim. P. 35(c)(1) provides a remedy to an offender whose conviction or sentence is affected by a change in the law during the pendency of a direct appeal of such conviction or sentence, but not to an offender claiming the benefit of changes in the law that occur during the pendency of other postconviction proceedings. People v. White, 804 P.2d 247 (Colo. App. 1990).

This section does not limit the amount of time within which the parole board must act on the issue of revocation of parole. Goetz v. Gunter, 830 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1992).

The tolling provisions in subsection (6) do not impose additional punishment on the parolee. If the board determines there was no parole violation, the parolee's status should be reinstated as if no complaint had been filed. Goetz v. Gunter, 830 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where a complaint was filed against the parolee near the end of the parole term and the board dismissed the first complaint and brought a second complaint after the parolee's term had expired, the board was without jurisdiction to revoke the parolee's parole based on the second complaint. Goetz v. Gunter, 830 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1992).

Tolling of expiration of parole upon the filing of a parole violation complaint does not impose additional punishment and does not violate the prohibition against ex post facto laws. Goetz v. Gunter, 830 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1992).

Rather, it allows the parole board to maintain its jurisdiction over parolee while authorities investigate the alleged parole violations and to hold a revocation hearing. Goetz v. Gunter, 830 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1992).

Tolling of expiration of parole upon filing of a parole violation complaint by parole officer applies to all offenders, including those who committed crimes before the statute was enacted. Duran v. Price, 868 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1994).

The plain meaning of subsection (7) provides that, upon finding good cause by the parole board, a parole revocation hearing can be delayed beyond 30 days after the parolee's arrest and a parolee can be held in custody for a reasonable time pending a revocation hearing.

The section does not convey automatic good cause to delay a parole hearing for pending resolution of an underlying criminal case, nor does the statute require a parolee to be released from custody after 30 days. Colo. Dept. of Corr. v. Madison, 85 P.3d 542 (Colo. 2004).

17-2-103.5. Revocation proceedings - parolee arrested for certain offenses.

(1) (a) Notwithstanding any provision of section 17-2-103, a community parole officer shall file a complaint seeking revocation of the parole of any parolee who:

(I) Is found in possession of a deadly weapon as defined in section 18-1-901, C.R.S.;

(II) Is arrested and charged with:

(A) A felony;

(B) A crime of violence as defined in section 16-1-104 (8.5), C.R.S.;

(C) A misdemeanor assault involving a deadly weapon or resulting in bodily injury to the victim;

(D) Sexual assault in the third degree as defined in section 18-3-404 (2), C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 2000; or

(E) Unlawful sexual contact as defined in section 18-3-404 (2), C.R.S.

(b) A community parole officer shall present to the district attorney of the proper judicial district for the purpose of prosecution all the facts ascertained by the community parole officer and all other papers, documents, or evidence pertaining thereto that the community parole officer has in his or her possession for any parolee found in possession of a weapon pursuant to section 18-12-108, C.R.S.

(c) A hearing relating to such revocation shall be held, unless a board member is advised that a criminal charge is still pending and no technical violations are alleged, or where the parolee does not request revocation, in which case the hearing shall be delayed until a disposition concerning the criminal charge is reached.

(2) If the hearing officer or board member conducting the hearing pursuant to subsection (1) of this section finds the parolee guilty of the conduct charged but decides against revoking the parole of the parolee, the record of such hearing shall be reviewed within fifteen days of the decision by two members of the board, exclusive of the board member who conducted the hearing, who may overturn the decision and order the parole to be revoked.

Source: L. 87: Entire section added, p. 651, § 6, effective July 1. L. 89: (1) amended, p. 863, § 6, effective April 12. L. 94: (1) amended, p. 2602, § 14, effective June 3. L. 2000: (1) amended, p. 633, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2008: IP(1)(a) and (1)(b) amended, p. 656, § 5, effective April 25; (1)(a)(II)(C) and (1)(a)(II)(D) amended and (1)(a)(II)(E) added, p. 1887, § 48, effective August 5.

17-2-104. Records - reports - publications. (1) The office of director of the division of adult parole shall be maintained as a clearing house for all information on domestic as well as interstate parolees, and the director shall prescribe, prepare, and furnish such forms, records, and reports as the executive director may require from time to time. Such data and information so compiled shall not be considered to be public records but shall be held to be confidential in character.

(2) The director shall report to the executive director at such times and on such matters as the executive director may require; except that confidential information shall not be made public. Publications of the director circulated in quantity outside the division shall be subject to the approval and control of the executive director.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 911, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: (1) amended, p. 841, § 26, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-1-104 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

Confidential records subject to subpoena and court inspection. Although the parole board's records may be considered to be confidential and not accessible to the public, this should not insulate the records from subpoena and inspection by the court when a prisoner makes out a prima facie case of abuse of discretion or caprice on the part of the board in parole revocation proceedings. Martinez v. Patterson, 429 F.2d 844 (10th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 934, 91 S. Ct. 1528, 28 L. Ed.2d 868 (1971) (decided under former § 17-1-104 as it existed prior to the 1977 repeal and reenactment of this title).

17-2-105. Appropriation. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 911, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 841, § 27, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 17-1-105 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-2-106. Branch parole offices - acquisition - duty to inform public. (1) (a) The director of the division of adult parole shall contemporaneously send written notice to the chief executive officer of the municipality and the city council or board of trustees of the municipality in which the division intends to operate the branch parole office.

(b) If the site of the branch parole office that the division intends to operate is not located within a municipality, the director of the division shall send written notice to the board of county commissioners of the county in which the division intends to operate the branch parole office.

(c) For purposes of this section:

(I) "Actual acquisition" means the legal process necessary to vest the department of corrections with fee title or a new leasehold interest in real estate that the division of adult parole intends to operate as a branch parole office in a new location.

(II) "Branch parole office" means any real estate in this state that the division of adult parole, on behalf of the department of corrections, may acquire by purchase, leasehold, or other method for the purpose of operating an office to perform any function required or permitted by this title concerning parolee interview, reporting, testing, screening, and supervision.

(2) A municipality or county notified pursuant to subsection (1) of this section may notify its residents and invite public review and comment on the division's selection of the branch parole office site through public meeting, public hearing, or any other public forum deemed appropriate by the municipality or county.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed to hinder or prohibit the department of corrections, division of adult parole, from engaging in the selection or the actual acquisition of any site to operate as a branch parole office that the department or division determines will best enable the division to perform and exercise its duties and powers under this title.

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 662, § 2, effective August 8. L. 2002: (3) amended, p. 1016, § 21, effective June 1.

Cross references: For the definition of "branch parole office" as it applies to this section, see also § 17-2-102 (10)(b).

PART 2

STATE BOARD OF PAROLE

17-2-201. State board of parole. (1) (a) There is hereby created a state board of parole, referred to in this part 2 as the "board", which shall consist of seven members. The members of the board shall be appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate, and they shall devote their full time to their duties as members of the board. The members shall be appointed for three-year terms and may serve consecutive terms. The governor may remove a board member for incompetency, neglect of duty, malfeasance in office, continued failure to use the risk assessment guidelines as required by section 17-22.5-404, or failure to regularly attend meetings as determined by the governor. Final conviction of a felony during the term of office of a board member shall automatically result in the disqualification of the member from further service on the board. The board shall be composed of representatives from multidisciplinary areas of expertise. Two members shall have experience in law enforcement and one member shall have experience in offender supervision, including parole, probation, or community corrections. Four members shall have experience in other relevant fields. Each member of the board shall have a minimum of five years of experience in a relevant field, and knowledge of parole laws and guidelines, rehabilitation, correctional administration, the functioning of the criminal justice system, issues associated with victims of crime, the duties of parole board members, and actuarial risk assessment instruments and other offender assessment instruments used by the board and the department of corrections. A person who has been convicted of a felony or of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude or who has any financial interests which conflict with the duties of a member of the parole board shall not be eligible for appointment.

(b) The parole board in existence prior to July 1, 1987, is abolished on July 1, 1987. The governor shall appoint a new parole board pursuant to this section, two members of which shall be appointed for terms of three years, two members of which shall be appointed for terms of two years, and one member of which shall be appointed for a term of one year. Thereafter, members shall be appointed for terms of three years. If a member is appointed during a period of time in which the general assembly is not in session, that member shall serve on a temporary basis until the general assembly next convenes.

(c) The parole board in existence prior to July 1, 1990, shall be expanded to seven members on July 1, 1990. The governor shall appoint an additional law enforcement representative and an additional citizen representative to the board, one for a term of two years to expire on July 1, 1992, and one for a term of three years to expire on July 30, 1993. Thereafter, such members shall be appointed for terms of three years.

(d) The governor may appoint a temporary member to replace any member of the board who becomes temporarily incapacitated. Such temporary member shall not require senate confirmation unless he serves for a period longer than ninety days and shall serve at the pleasure of the governor or until the incapacitated member of the parole board is able to resume his duties. Any temporary member shall assume all the powers and duties of the incapacitated member. Any such temporary member shall have the same qualifications as a permanent member as defined in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1). The board may not have more than two temporary members at any time.

(e) Each board member shall complete a minimum of twenty hours of continuing education or training every year in order to maintain proficiency and to remain current on changes in parole laws and developments in the field. Each parole board member shall submit to the chairperson proof of attendance and details regarding any continuing education or training attended including the date, place, topic, the length of the training, the trainer's name, and any agency or organizational affiliation. Members may attend trainings individually or as part of a specific training offered to the parole board as a whole. The sole remedy for failure to comply with training and data collection requirements shall be removal of the board member by the governor, and the failure to comply with training and data collection requirements shall not create any right for any offender.

(2) The governor shall appoint one of the members of the board as the chairperson of the board and shall also appoint one of the members as the vice-chairperson. Such appointments are subject to change by the governor. The chairperson shall be the administrative head of the board. The chairperson shall assure that board policy and rules and regulations are enforced. The chairperson shall also assure that proper calendars for hearings are compiled and that members are assigned to conduct such hearings. The vice-chairperson shall act in the absence of the chairperson and may fulfill such administrative duties as are delegated by the chairperson.

(3) The chairperson, in addition to other provisions of law, has the following powers and duties:

(a) To promulgate rules governing the granting and revocation of parole, including special needs parole pursuant to section 17-22.5-403.5, from correctional facilities where adult offenders are confined and the fixing of terms of parole and release dates. All rules governing the granting and revocation of parole promulgated by the chairperson shall be subject to the approval of a majority of the board and shall be promulgated pursuant to the provisions of section 24-4-103, C.R.S.

(b) To promulgate rules for the conduct of board members, the procedures for board hearings, and procedures for the board to comply with state fiscal and procurement regulations. All administrative rules and regulations promulgated by the chairperson shall be promulgated pursuant to the provisions of section 24-4-103, C.R.S.

(c) To develop and update a written operational manual for parole board members, release hearing officers, and administrative hearing officers under contract with the board by December 31, 2012. The operational manual shall include, but need not be limited to, board policies and rules, a summary of state laws governing the board, and all administrative release and revocation guidelines that the parole board is required to use. The chairperson will ensure that all new parole board members receive training and orientation on the operational manual.

(c.5) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2011, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, p. 833, § 3, effective May 23, 2011.)

(d) To adopt a policy pursuant to which the board may conduct parole hearings, parole revocation hearings, and board meetings using video conferencing technology. At a minimum, the policy shall identify:

(I) The agenda items, if any, that the board may not consider during video conferences of hearings or meetings;

(II) The correctional facilities that the chairperson determines will be accessible via video teleconferencing for purposes of conducting hearings or meetings. In identifying such correctional facilities, the chairperson may include the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo for purposes of hearings held at the institute pursuant to subsection (10) of this section.

(e) To ensure that parole board members, release hearing officers, and administrative hearing officers under contract with the board fulfill the annual training requirements described in paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section and in section 17-2-202.5. The chairperson shall notify the governor if any board member, release hearing officer, or administrative hearing officer fails to comply with the training requirements.

(f) To ensure that parole board members, release hearing officers, and administrative hearing officers under contract with the board are accurately collecting data and information on his or her decision-making as required by section 17-22.5-404 (6). The chairperson shall notify the governor immediately if any board member, release hearing officer, or administrative hearing officer fails to comply with data collection requirements.

(g) To conduct an annual comprehensive review of board functions to identify workload inefficiencies and to develop strategies or recommendations to address any workload inefficiencies.

(h) (I) To contract with licensed attorneys to serve as administrative hearing officers to conduct parole revocation hearings pursuant to rules adopted by the parole board; or

(II) To appoint an administrative law judge pursuant to the provisions of section 24-30-1003, C.R.S., to conduct parole revocation hearings pursuant to the rules and regulations promulgated pursuant to this subsection (3). Any references to the board regarding parole revocation hearings or revocation of parole shall include an administrative law judge appointed pursuant to this paragraph (h).

(h.1) To contract with qualified individuals to serve as release hearing officers:

(I) To conduct parole application hearings for inmates convicted of class 4, class 5, or class 6 felonies who have been assessed to be less than high risk by the Colorado risk assessment scale developed pursuant to section 17-22.5-404 (2) (a), C.R.S., pursuant to rules adopted by the parole board; and

(II) To set parole conditions for inmates eligible for release to mandatory parole.

(3.5) The chairperson shall annually make a presentation to the judiciary committees of the house of representatives and the senate, or any successor committees, regarding the operations of the board and the information required by section 17-22.5-404.5 (4).

(4) The board has the following powers and duties:

(a) To meet as often as necessary every month to consider all applications for parole. The board may parole any person who is sentenced or committed to a correctional facility when such person has served his or her minimum sentence, less time allowed for good behavior, and there is a strong and reasonable probability that the person will not thereafter violate the law and that release of such person from institutional custody is compatible with the welfare of society. If the board refuses an application for parole, the board shall reconsider the granting of parole to such person within one year thereafter, or earlier if the board so chooses, and shall continue to reconsider the granting of parole each year thereafter until such person is granted parole or until such person is discharged pursuant to law; except that, if the person applying for parole was convicted of any class 3 sexual offense described in part 4 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., a habitual criminal offense as defined in section 18-1.3-801 (2.5), C.R.S., or of any offense subject to the requirements of section 18-1.3-904, C.R.S., the board need only reconsider granting parole to such person once every three years, until the board grants such person parole or until such person is discharged pursuant to law, or if the person applying for parole was convicted of a class 1 or class 2 felony that constitutes a crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., the board need only reconsider granting parole to such person once every five years, until the board grants such person parole or until such person is discharged pursuant to law.

(b) To conduct hearings on parole revocations as required by section 17-2-103. Such hearings shall be exempt from the requirements set forth in section 24-4-105, C.R.S. Judicial review of any revocation of parole shall be held pursuant to section 18-1-410 (1) (h), C.R.S.

(c) To issue, pursuant to rules and regulations, an order of exigent circumstances to place an offender under parole supervision immediately upon release from a correctional facility when the board is prevented from complying with publication and interview requirements due to the application of time served prior to confinement in a correctional facility and the operation of good time credits;

(d) To carry out the duties prescribed in article 11.5 of title 16, C.R.S.;

(e) To carry out the duties prescribed in article 11.7 of title 16, C.R.S.;

(f) (I) To conduct a parole release review in lieu of a hearing, without the presence of the inmate, if:

(A) The application for release is for special needs parole pursuant to section 17-22.5-403.5, and victim notification is not required pursuant to section 24-4.1-302.5, C.R.S.; or

(B) A detainer from the United States immigration and customs enforcement agency has been filed with the department, the inmate meets the criteria for the presumption of parole in section 17-22-404.8, and victim notification is not required pursuant to section 24-4.1-302.5, C.R.S.

(II) The board shall notify the inmate's case manager if the board decides to conduct a parole release review without the presence of the inmate, and the case manager shall notify the inmate of the board's decision. The case manager may request that the board reconsider and conduct a hearing with the inmate present.

(5) (a) As to any person sentenced for conviction of a felony committed prior to July 1, 1979, or of a misdemeanor and as to any person sentenced for conviction of an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior or for which the factual basis involved an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior, as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., committed prior to July 1, 1996, or a class 1 felony and as to any person sentenced as a habitual criminal pursuant to section 18-1.3-801, C.R.S., for an offense committed prior to July 1, 2003, the board has the sole power to grant or refuse to grant parole and to fix the condition thereof and has full discretion to set the duration of the term of parole granted, but in no event shall the term of parole exceed the maximum sentence imposed upon the inmate by the court or five years, whichever is less; except that the five-year limitation shall not apply to parole granted pursuant to section 17-22.5-403.7 for a class 1 felony.

(a.3) (I) Any person sentenced as a habitual criminal pursuant to section 18-1.3-801 (1.5) or (2), C.R.S., for an offense committed on or after July 1, 2003, shall be subject to the mandatory parole set forth in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (V) (A), C.R.S., for the class of felony of which the person is convicted.

(II) As to any person sentenced as a habitual criminal pursuant to section 18-1.3-801 (1) or (2.5), C.R.S., for an offense committed on or after July 1, 2003, upon completion of forty calendar years of incarceration in the department of corrections, the parole board may schedule a hearing to determine whether the inmate may be released on parole. If the inmate is released on parole, the life sentence shall continue and shall not be deemed to be discharged until such time as the parole board may discharge the offender. The offender shall serve at least five years on parole prior to discharge. If the parole board revokes the parole, the offender shall be returned to the department of corrections to serve the remainder of the life sentence. The parole board need only reconsider granting parole to such inmate once every three years.

(a.5) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a.7) of this subsection (5), as to any person sentenced for conviction of an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior or for which the factual basis involved an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., committed on or after July 1, 1996, but prior to July 1, 2002, the board has the sole power to grant or refuse to grant parole and to fix the condition thereof and has full discretion to set the duration of the term of parole granted, but in no event shall the term of parole exceed the maximum sentence imposed upon the inmate by the court.

(a.6) As to any person who is sentenced for conviction of an offense committed on or after July 1, 2002, involving unlawful sexual behavior, as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., or for conviction of an offense committed on or after July 1, 2002, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior, and who is not subject to the provisions of part 10 of article 1.3 of title 18, C.R.S., such person shall be subject to the mandatory period of parole set forth in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (V) (A), C.R.S.

(a.7) As to any person sentenced for conviction of a sex offense pursuant to the provisions of part 10 of article 1.3 of title 18, C.R.S., committed on or after November 1, 1998, the board shall grant parole or refuse to grant parole, fix the conditions thereof, and set the duration of the term of parole granted pursuant to the provisions of part 10 of article 1.3 of title 18, C.R.S.

(b) Conditions imposed for parole may include, but are not limited to, requiring that the offender pay reasonable costs of supervision of parole or placing the offender on home detention as defined in section 18-1.3-106 (1.1), C.R.S.

(c) (I) As a condition of every parole, the board shall order that the offender make restitution to the victim or victims of his or her conduct. The amount of such restitution shall be determined by the court pursuant to article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S. The board shall fix the manner and time of payment of restitution as a condition of parole. Such order shall require the offender to make restitution within the period of time that the offender is on parole as specified by the board. In the event that the defendant does not make full restitution by the date specified by the board, the restitution may be collected as provided for in article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

(II) If the offender fails to pay the restitution, he or she may be returned to the board and, upon proof of failure to pay, the board shall:

(A) (Deleted by amendment, L. 96, p. 1779, § 5, effective June 3, 1996.)

(B) Order that the offender continue on parole or extend the period of parole, either subject to the same condition or modified conditions of parole; or

(C) Revoke the parole and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to a place of confinement designated by the executive director; or

(D) Revoke parole for a period not to exceed one hundred eighty days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to a community corrections program pursuant to section 18-1.3-301 (3), C.R.S., a place of confinement within the department of corrections, or any private facility that is under contract with the department of corrections; or

(E) Revoke parole for a period not to exceed ninety days and request the sheriff of the county in which the hearing is held to transport the parolee to the county jail of such county or to any private facility that is under contract with the department of corrections.

(III) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 1043, § 4, effective September 1, 2000.)

(d) If, as a condition of parole pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (5), a parolee will be required to attend a postsecondary educational institution as a part of his parole plan, the board, before granting parole, shall first notify the postsecondary educational institution and the prosecuting attorney of the parolee's plan and request their comments thereon. The notice shall include all relevant information pertaining to the person and the crime for which he was convicted. The postsecondary educational institution and the prosecuting attorney shall reply to the board in writing within ten days of receipt of the notification or within such other reasonable time in excess of ten days as specified by the board. The postsecondary educational institution's reply shall include a statement of whether or not it will accept the parolee as a student. Acceptance by a state postsecondary educational institution shall be pursuant to section 23-5-106, C.R.S.

(e) As a condition of parole of every person convicted of the class 2 felony of sexual assault in the first degree under section 18-3-402 (3), C.R.S., for an offense committed prior to November 1, 1998, the board shall require that the parolee participate in a program of mental health counseling or receive appropriate treatment to the extent that the board deems appropriate to effectuate the successful reintegration of the parolee into the community.

(f) (I) As a condition of every parole, the parolee shall sign a written agreement that contains such parole conditions as deemed appropriate by the board, which conditions shall include but need not be limited to the following:

(A) That the parolee shall go directly to a place designated by the board upon his release from the institution to which he has been confined;

(B) That the parolee shall establish a residence of record and shall not change it without the knowledge and consent of his or her community parole officer and that the parolee shall not leave the area or the state without the permission of his or her community parole officer;

(C) That the parolee shall obey all state and federal laws and municipal ordinances, conduct himself or herself as a law-abiding citizen, and obey and cooperate with his or her community parole officer;

(D) That the parolee shall make reports as directed by his or her community parole officer, permit residential visits by the community parole officer, submit to urinalysis or other drug tests, and allow the community parole officer to make searches of his or her person, residence, or vehicle;

(E) That the parolee shall not own, possess, or have under his control or in his custody any firearm or other deadly weapon;

(F) That the parolee shall not associate with any other person on parole, on probation, or with a criminal record or with any inmate of a correctional facility without the permission of his or her community parole officer;

(G) That the parolee shall seek and obtain employment or shall participate in a full-time educational or vocational program while on parole, unless such requirement is waived by his or her community parole officer;

(H) That the parolee shall not abuse alcoholic beverages or use illegal drugs while on parole;

(I) That the parolee shall abide by any other condition the board may determine to be necessary;

(J) That the parolee shall contact any delegate child support enforcement unit with whom the parolee may have a child support case to arrange and fulfill a payment plan to pay current child support, child support arrearages, or child support debt due under a court or administrative order.

(II) The parole agreement shall also contain a notification to the parolee that, should he violate any of the said conditions or should his behavior while on parole indicate the potentiality for criminality or violence, his parole may be subject to revocation.

(III) The provisions of this paragraph (f) shall apply to any person paroled on or after July 1, 1987, and to any person whose parole conditions are modified by the board on or after said date.

(g) (I) As a condition of parole, the board shall require any offender convicted of or who pled guilty or nolo contendere to an offense for which the factual basis involved a sexual offense as described in part 4 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., to submit to chemical testing of a biological substance sample from the offender to determine the genetic markers thereof and to chemical testing of his or her saliva to determine the secretor status thereof. Such testing shall occur prior to the offender's release from incarceration, and the results thereof shall be filed with and maintained by the Colorado bureau of investigation. The results of such tests shall be furnished to any law enforcement agency upon request.

(II) The provisions of this paragraph (g) shall apply to any person who is paroled on or after May 29, 1988, and to any person whose parole conditions are modified by the board on or after said date.

(III) Any costs of implementing this paragraph (g) shall be derived solely from appropriations made from moneys in the victims assistance and law enforcement fund created pursuant to section 24-33.5-506, C.R.S.

(h) Repealed.

(i) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2001, p. 955, § 3, effective July 1, 2001.)

(j) As a condition of parole, the board may order any person who is not otherwise subject to the provisions of article 22 of title 16, C.R.S., and is convicted of an offense, the underlying factual basis of which is determined by the department of corrections to involve unlawful sexual behavior, as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., to register as a sex offender for the period of the person's parole. Such registration shall be completed as provided in article 22 of title 16, C.R.S. Within five business days after completion of the period of parole and final discharge from the legal custody of the department of corrections, the department of corrections shall notify the Colorado bureau of investigation to remove the person's name from the Colorado sex offender registry.

(k) As a condition of every grant of parole, the board shall require the offender to execute a written prior waiver of extradition stating that the offender consents to extradition to this state and waives all formal procedures incidental to extradition proceedings in the event that the offender is arrested in another state upon an allegation that the defendant has violated the terms of his or her parole, and acknowledging that the offender shall not be admitted to bail in any other state pending extradition to this state.

(5.5) (a) As a condition of parole, the board shall require every parolee at the parolee's own expense to submit to random chemical testing of a biological substance sample from the parolee to determine the presence of drugs or alcohol. Such testing shall take place as follows:

(I) Immediately upon the parolee's release from incarceration in order to establish a baseline sample;

(II) Within the first thirty days from the date of parole;

(III) On or after sixty-one days but not later than six months from the date of parole; and

(IV) Annually on or after one year from the date of parole for the duration of parole.

(b) For purposes of this subsection (5.5), "drug" means:

(I) Any "controlled substance" as defined in section 18-18-102 (5), C.R.S.; and

(II) Any "drug" as defined in section 27-80-203 (13), C.R.S., if chemical testing conducted pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (5.5) reveals such drug is present at such a level as to be considered abusive pursuant to regulations established by the board in consultation with the department of human services.

(c) (I) The community parole officer shall be responsible for acquiring at random, but within the time requirements of paragraph (a) of this subsection (5.5), a biological substance sample from a parolee.

(II) At the time the community parole officer acquires a biological substance sample pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c), the community parole officer shall direct the parolee to pay the necessary fee for the testing of his or her biological substance sample directly to the private laboratory under contract with the department, the department of public safety, or a local governmental agency pursuant to subparagraph (IV) of this paragraph (c).

(III) The community parole officer shall submit the biological substance sample to a private laboratory under contract with the department, the department of public safety, or a local governmental agency pursuant to subparagraph (IV) of this paragraph (c) for testing. The contracting laboratory shall return the results of the tests to the community parole officer within five working days after receipt of the sample. The results of the test shall be made available by the community parole officer to the parolee or the parolee's attorney on request.

(IV) The department and the department of public safety and local governmental agencies for inmates paroled to community corrections facilities shall enter into one or more contracts with private laboratories for chemical testing under this subsection (5.5). Any private laboratory that contracts with the department, the department of public safety, or a local governmental agency shall use appropriate methods to ensure compliance with evidentiary rules and requirements. Any contract entered into pursuant to this subparagraph (IV) shall specify the fee to be charged the parolee for chemical biological substance sample testing.

(d) (I) If a chemical test administered pursuant to the requirements of this subsection (5.5) reflects the presence of drugs or alcohol, the parolee may be required to participate at his own expense in an appropriate drug or alcohol program, community correctional nonresidential program, mental health program, or other fee-based or non-fee-based treatment program approved by the parole board.

(II) (A) Any subsequent chemical testing reflecting the presence of alcohol may be grounds for arrest of the parolee and the initiation of revocation proceedings at the discretion of the community parole officer pursuant to section 17-2-103.

(B) A parolee may be arrested and a proceeding for revocation may be initiated pursuant to the provisions of section 17-2-103 if any subsequent chemical test reflects the presence of drugs pursuant to subparagraph (I) of paragraph (b) of this subsection (5.5).

(C) A parolee may be arrested and proceedings for revocation may be initiated pursuant to section 17-2-103 if any subsequent chemical test reveals the presence of drugs as defined in subparagraph (II) of paragraph (b) of this subsection (5.5) at a level considered to be abusive as established by the board pursuant to said section.

(e) A parolee who refuses to submit to chemical testing of a sample of his or her biological substance pursuant to the requirements of this subsection (5.5) shall be arrested, and revocation proceedings shall be initiated pursuant to section 17-2-103.

(f) Section 16-3-309, C.R.S., pertaining to the admissibility of laboratory tests shall apply to the admissibility of chemical tests required by this subsection (5.5) in parole revocation hearings conducted pursuant to section 17-2-103.

(g) This subsection (5.5) shall not apply to any parolee to whom article 11.5 of title 16, C.R.S., applies.

(5.7) If, as a condition of parole, an offender is required to undergo counseling or treatment, unless the parole board determines that treatment at another facility or with another person is warranted, such treatment or counseling shall be at a facility or with a person:

(a) Approved by the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, established in article 80 of title 27, C.R.S., if the treatment is for alcohol or drug abuse;

(b) Certified or approved by the sex offender management board, established in section 16-11.7-103, C.R.S., if the offender is a sex offender;

(c) Certified or approved by a domestic violence treatment board, established pursuant to part 8 of article 6 of title 18, C.R.S., if the offender was convicted of or the underlying factual basis of the offense included an act of domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3, C.R.S.; or

(d) Licensed or certified by the division of adult parole in the department of corrections, the department of regulatory agencies, the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, the state board of nursing, or the Colorado medical board, whichever is appropriate for the required treatment or counseling.

(5.8) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (5.7) of this section, if, as a condition of parole, an offender who was convicted of or pled guilty to an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior, as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., is required to undergo counseling or treatment, such treatment or counseling shall be at a facility or with a person listed in subsection (5.7) of this section and the parole board may not determine treatment at another facility or with another person is warranted.

(6) The board has the authority at any time after the period of any parole is fixed to shorten the period thereof or to lengthen said period within the limits specified in subsection (5) of this section; except that the provisions of this subsection (6) shall not apply to any person sentenced as a sex offender pursuant to part 10 of article 1.3 of title 18, C.R.S.

(7) The board has exclusive power to conduct all proceedings involving an application for revocation of parole.

(8) The board has the power, in the performance of official duties, to issue warrants and subpoenas, to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and other documents pertinent to the subject of its inquiry, and to administer oaths and take the testimony of persons under oath. The issuance of a warrant tolls the expiration of a parolee's parole.

(9) (a) (I) Whenever an inmate initially applies for parole, the board shall conduct an interview with the inmate. At such interview at least one member of the board shall be present. Any final action on an application shall not be required to be made in the presence of the inmate or parolee, and any such action shall require the concurrence of at least two members of the board. When the two members do not concur, a third member shall review the record and, if deemed necessary, interview the applicant and cast the deciding vote. Any subsequent application for parole shall be considered by the board in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (a) of subsection (4) of this section.

(II) The provisions of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) shall also apply to all interviews of inmates who apply for parole pursuant to section 17-22.5-303, who were sentenced for an offense committed on or after July 1, 1979.

(b) When a recommendation has been made before the board for revocation or modification of a parole, the final disposition of such application shall be reduced to writing. The parolee shall be advised by the board of the final decision at the conclusion of the hearing or within a period not to exceed five working days following said hearing; however, a parolee may waive the five-day notice requirement. A copy of the final order of the board shall be delivered to the parolee within ten working days after the completion of the hearing.

(c) If the parolee decides to appeal the decision to revoke his parole, such appeal shall be filed within thirty days of such decision. The parolee shall remain in custody pending the appeal. Two members of the board, excluding the one who conducted the revocation proceeding, shall review the record within fifteen working days after the filing of the appeal. They shall notify the parolee of their decision in writing within ten working days after such decision has been made.

(d) The district attorney or the attorney general may appeal the decision of a member of the board to two members of the board, excluding the member who conducted the parole revocation proceeding.

(10) The board shall interview all parole applicants at the institution or in the community in which the inmate is physically held or through teleconferencing as provided in subparagraph (II) of paragraph (d) of subsection (3) of this section. The site location of an interview shall not be changed within the thirty days preceding the interview date without the approval of the board. Any inmate of an adult correctional institution who has been transferred by executive order or by civil commitment or ordered by a court of law to the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo may be heard at the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo upon an application for parole.

(11) Repealed.

(12) All votes of the board at any hearing or appeal held pursuant to this section shall be recorded by member and shall be a public record open to inspection and shall be subject to the provisions of part 3 of article 72 of title 24, C.R.S.

(13) (a) The board may appoint or contract with an attorney to represent a parolee at a parole revocation hearing only if:

- (I) The parolee denies that he violated the condition or conditions of his parole, as set forth in the complaint;
- (II) The parolee is incapable of speaking effectively for himself;
- (III) The parolee establishes to the satisfaction of the board that he is indigent; and
- (IV) The board, after reviewing the complaint, makes specific findings in writing that the issues to be resolved are complex and that the parolee requires the assistance of counsel.

(b) Repealed.

(14) The board shall consider the parole of a person whose parole is revoked either for a technical violation or based on a self-revocation at least once within one hundred eighty days after the revocation if the person's release date is more than nine months from the date of the person's revocation; except that a person whose parole is revoked based on a technical violation that involved the use of a weapon shall not be considered for parole for one year.

(15) Each correctional facility and private contract prison shall make available to the board hearing room space and video teleconferencing technology that are acceptable to the board for the purpose of conducting parole hearings within the administrative area or another location within the facility acceptable to the board.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 911, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (3)(a), (3)(b), (6), and (7) amended, (3)(c) repealed, pp. 688, 705, §§ 27, 88, effective July 1; (3)(f) added and (5)(a) amended, p. 666, §§ 11, 12, effective July 1. L. 81: (5)(b) amended and (5)(c) added, p. 942, § 2, effective July 1. L. 84: (5)(d) added, p. 497, § 2, effective April 5; (3)(g) added and (5)(c)(II)(B) amended, p. 511, §§ 2, 1, effective April 13; (5)(c)(II)(B) amended, p. 524, § 4, effective July 1. L. 85: (3) and (4) R&RE, p. 639, § 4, effective June 6; (1), (2), (7), (8), (9), and (11) amended, pp. 637, 638, §§ 2, 3, effective July 1; (5)(c)(I) and (5)(c)(III) amended, p. 628, § 2, effective July 1; (5)(e) added, p. 667, § 4, effective July 1; (12) added, p. 643, § 2, effective July 1. L. 87: (3)(c), (7), (8), and (9)(b) amended, p. 954, § 56, effective March 13; (1)(b) amended, p. 906, § 11, effective June 15; (1) and (9)(c) amended and (5)(f) and (13) added, pp. 651, 653, §§ 7, 8, effective July 1; (5.5) added, p. 660, § 1, effective July 1. L. 88: (5)(g) added, p. 701, § 1, effective May 29; (5)(b) amended, p. 709, § 5, effective July 1. L. 90: (1)(a) and (1)(b) amended and (1)(c) and (1)(d) added, p. 959, § 1, effective June 7. L. 91: (10) amended, p. 1142, § 5, effective May 18; (4)(d) and (5.5)(g) added, p. 442, §§ 6, 7, effective May 29. L. 92: (1)(a) amended, p. 2172, § 22, effective June 2; (4)(e) added, p. 461, § 5, effective June 2; (5)(f)(I)(H) and (5)(f)(I)(I) amended and (5)(f)(I)(J) added, p. 211, § 14, effective August 1. L. 94: (1)(b), (3)(c), (4)(a), (7), (8), (9)(a)(I), and (9)(b) amended, pp. 2595, 2596, 2598, §§ 3, 4, 5, 8, effective June 3; (5.5)(b)(II) and (5.5)(c) amended, p. 2732, § 355, effective July 1. L. 95: (3)(c) and (9)(b) amended, p. 1272, § 5, effective June 5; (5.5)(c) amended, p. 465, § 9, effective July 1. L. 96: (5)(c) amended, p. 1779, § 5, effective June 3; (5)(a) amended and (5)(a.5) added, p. 1584, § 6, effective July 1. L. 97: (5)(c)(I) amended, p. 1566, § 14, effective July 1. L. 98: (13)(b) repealed, p. 727, § 9, effective May 18; (5)(a.7) added and (5)(e) and (6) amended, p. 1291, §§ 10, 11, effective November 1. L. 99: (5)(h) and (5)(i) added, p. 1168, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2000: (11) repealed, p. 842, § 28, effective May 24; (3)(d) added, p. 1056, § 1, effective May 26; (5.7) added, p. 236, § 7, effective July 1; (5)(c) amended, p. 1043, § 4, effective September 1; (3)(a) amended, p. 1496, § 3, effective July 1, 2001. L. 2001: (3)(c.5) added, p. 502, § 3, effective May 16; (5.8) added, p. 658, § 7, effective May 30; (5)(g), (5)(h), and (5)(i) amended, p. 955, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2002: (5)(a.5) amended and (5)(a.6) added, p. 125, § 2, effective March 26; (5.7)(a) amended, p. 666, § 11, effective May 28; (5)(g)(I) and (5.8) amended, p. 1017, § 22, effective June 1; (5)(a), (5)(a.5), (5)(a.6), and (5.8) amended and (5)(j) added, pp. 1185, 1192, 1181, §§ 19, 40, 5, effective July 1; (5)(g)(I) and (5)(h)(I) amended, p. 1152, § 8, effective July 1; (4)(a), (5)(a), (5)(a.6), (5)(a.7), (5)(b), (5)(c)(II)(D), and (6) amended, pp. 1500, 1566, §§ 159, 388, effective October 1. L. 2003: (5)(g)(I) amended, p. 1433, § 25, effective April 29 and (5)(a) amended and (5)(a.3) added, p. 1436, § 33, effective July 1; (4)(a) amended, p. 813, § 3, effective July 1; (14) added, p. 2676, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2004: (1)(a), (1)(b), and (1)(c) amended, p. 437, § 1, effective April 13; (10) amended and (15) added, p. 587, § 1, effective April 21. L. 2006: (5)(a) amended, p. 1054, § 7, effective May 25; (5)(k) added, p. 342, § 5, effective July 1; (5)(h)(IV) added by revision, pp. 1689, 1693, §§ 6, 17. L. 2008: IP(5.5)(a), (5.5)(c), and (5.5)(e) amended, p. 461, § 1, effective April 14; (5)(f)(I)(B), (5)(f)(I)(C), (5)(f)(I)(D), (5)(f)(I)(F), (5)(f)(I)(G), (5.5)(c)(I), (5.5)(c)(II), (5.5)(c)(III), and (5.5)(d)(II)(A) amended, p. 657, § 6, effective April 25; (5.5)(c)(II) amended, p. 1888, § 49, effective August 5. L. 2010: (5.7)(a) amended, (SB 10-175), ch. 188, p. 784, § 24, effective April 29; (3.5) added, (HB 10-1374), ch. 261, p. 1187, § 9, effective May 25; (5.7)(d) amended, (HB 10-1260), ch. 403, p. 1986, § 75, effective July 1; (9)(a)(I) amended, (HB 10-1422), ch. 419, p. 2073, § 30, effective August 11. L. 2011: (1)(a), (3)(c), and (3)(c.5) amended and (1)(e), (3)(e), (3)(f), (3)(g), (3)(h), (3)(h.1), and (4)(f) added, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, pp. 832, 833, 834, §§ 2, 3, 4, effective May 23; (3.5) amended, (HB 11-1064), ch. 234, p. 1010, § 2, effective May 27; (5.7)(d) amended, (HB 11-1303), ch. 264, p. 1156, § 29, effective August 10. L. 2012: (3)(h.1)(I) amended, (HB 12-1310), ch. 268, p. 1403, § 27, effective June 7; (5.5)(b) amended, (HB 12-1311), ch. 281, p. 1617, § 36, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 17-1-201 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) Amendments to subsections (5)(a) and (5)(a.6) by House Bill 02-1046 and Senate Bill 02-010 were harmonized, effective October 1, 2002. Amendments to subsection (5)(a.5) by House Bill 02-1223 and Senate Bill 02-010 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (5)(g)(I) by Senate Bill 02-159 and Senate Bill 02-019 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (5.8) by Senate Bill 02-159 and Senate Bill 02-010 were harmonized.

(3) Subsection (5)(h)(IV) provided for the repeal of subsection (5)(h), effective July 1, 2007. (See L. 2006, pp. 1689, 1693.)

(4) Amendments to subsection (5.5)(c) by Senate Bill 08-171 and Senate Bill 08-172 were harmonized.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending subsections (5.5)(b)(II) and (5.5)(c), see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (4)(a), (5)(a), (5)(a.6), (5)(a.7), (5)(b), (5)(c)(II)(D), and (6), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2006 act amending subsection (5)(a), see section 1 of chapter 228, Session Laws of Colorado 2006.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Power to Grant Parole.
- III. Power to Revoke Parole.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962).

Annotator's note. Since § 17-2-201 is similar to § 17-1-201 as it existed prior to the 1977 repeal and reenactment of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Section 16-13-101 does not violate the constitution. Even though a person sentenced to life imprisonment may be eligible for parole before a person sentenced for a term of not less than 25 years and not more than 50 years under § 16-13-101, it does not violate the equal protection clause because the statutory scheme gives the parole board discretionary power to grant parole on the basis of factors other than the length of a prisoner's sentence and this is reasonably related to a legitimate government interest. People v. Alexander, 797 P.2d 1250 (Colo. 1990).

While obtaining and analyzing the DNA or saliva of an inmate convicted of a sex offense is a search and seizure implicating fourth amendment concerns, it is a reasonable search and seizure in light of an inmate's diminished privacy rights; the minimal intrusion of saliva and blood tests; and the legitimate government interest in the investigation and prosecution of unsolved and future criminal acts by the use of DNA in a manner not significantly different from the use of fingerprints. Boling v. Romer, 101 F.3d 1336 (10th Cir. 1996).

Since DNA samples are not testimonial in nature, requiring such samples from inmates does not amount to compulsory self-incrimination under the fifth amendment. Boling v. Romer, 101 F.3d 1336 (10th Cir. 1996).

Taking DNA samples only from inmates convicted of sex offenses does not deprive those inmates of the equal protection of the laws since a rational relationship exists between the government's decision to classify inmates as convicted sex offenders and the government's stated objective to investigate and prosecute unsolved and future sex crimes. Boling v. Romer, 101 F.3d 1336 (10th Cir. 1996).

Subsection (5)(g), by its plain language, applies only to those offenders who are convicted of a sexual offense after the date the statute took effect (May 29, 1988) and who subsequently are eligible for parole. Thus the statute was not retrospectively applied to defendant who was convicted July 28, 1988, as a sex offender. Jamison v. People, 988 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1999).

As applied to the defendant, the 1994 amendment to subsection (4)(a) that decreased the frequency of parole suitability hearings for certain classes of prisoners did not violate the ex post facto clause of the United States Constitution. Raymer v. Enright, 113 F.3d 172 (10th Cir. 1997).

The parole board, as a Colorado state agency, benefits from the immunity conferred by the eleventh amendment to the federal constitution. Hughes v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 594 F. Supp. 2d 1226 (D. Colo. 2009).

The trial court correctly determined that the board of parole is exempt from the requirements of the APA. This section governs the responsibilities, authority, and discretion of the board. McCallum v. Colo. State Bd. of Parole, 23 P.3d 1226 (Colo. App. 2000).

Review of acts of parole board. Acts of the parole board being definitely of grace are not such a function as is reviewable by the courts by certiorari, habeas corpus or mandamus. Berry v. State Bd. of Parole, 148 Colo. 547, 367 P.2d 338 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 927, 82 S. Ct. 1569, 8 L.Ed.2d 507 (1962).

A person denied parole can seek judicial review only as provided by C.R.C.P. 106(a)(2). In re Question Concerning State Judicial Review, 199 Colo. 463, 610 P.2d 1340 (1980).

It is only when the Colorado state board of parole has failed to exercise its statutory duties that the courts of Colorado have the power to review the board's actions. In re Question Concerning State Judicial Review, 199 Colo. 463, 610 P.2d 1340 (1980).

Absent specific criteria which mandate release. The Colorado statutory scheme does not create a constitutionally protected entitlement to parole. Thompson v. Riveland, 714 P.2d 1338 (Colo. App. 1986); Andretti v. Johnson, 779 P.2d 382 (Colo. 1989).

Persons sentenced as habitual criminals are subject to the discretionary parole period established in subsection (5)(a). People v. Denton, 91 P.3d 388 (Colo. App. 2003).

Subsection (5)(a) mandates that parole is discretionary for sexual offenders. Grenemyer v. Gunter, 770 F. Supp. 1432 (D. Colo. 1991).

There is no mandatory parole for persons convicted of an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior committed on or after July 1, 1996, but prior to November 1, 1998. Pursuant to subsection (5)(a.5), the parole board sets the length of parole that cannot exceed the sentence imposed. People v. Cooper, 8 P.3d 554 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 27 P.3d 348 (Colo. 2001).

Rather, subsection (5)(a.5) requires discretionary parole for an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior, as defined in § 18-3-412.5 (1), and for an offense for which the factual basis involved an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior. Thus, an offense that is not an unlawful sexual behavior offense will still trigger the discretionary parole requirement as long as there is a factual basis that involves an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior. People v. Pahlavan, 83 P.3d 1138 (Colo. App. 2003).

The phrase "in no event shall the term of parole exceed the maximum sentence imposed upon the inmate by the court" means the period of parole granted by the board cannot be longer than the unserved portion of the sentence of incarceration. Martin v. People, 27 P.3d 846 (Colo. 2001).

The phrase "maximum sentence" refers only to the sentence of incarceration. Martin v. People, 27 P.3d 846 (Colo. 2001).

The provisions of subsection (5)(a) of this section and § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V)(C) are in conflict. Subsection (5)(a) is a specific provision related to the parole of sex offenders while § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V)(C) is the general sentencing statute for all felonies. As such, applying the statutory construction rule that the specific provision prevails over the general provision, subsection (5)(a) of this section shall be given effect for all sex offender parole for crimes committed before July 1, 1996. Martin v. People, 27 P.3d 846 (Colo. 2001); People v. Pauley, 42 P.3d 57 (Colo. App. 2001).

Subsection (5)(a.5) of this section is a specific provision related to the parole of sex offenders while § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V) is the general sentencing statute for all felonies. As such, applying the statutory construction rule that the specific provision prevails over the general provision, subsection (5)(a.5) of this section shall be given effect for all sex offender parole for crimes committed between July 1, 1996, and July 1, 1998. People v. Cooper, 27 P.3d 348 (Colo. 2001).

Sex offenders convicted of offenses occurring between July 1, 1993, and July 1, 1998, are subject to discretionary parole pursuant to subsection (5)(a), and not mandatory parole pursuant to § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V)(C). People v. Koehler, 30 P.3d 694 (Colo. App. 2000).

Under subsections (5)(a) and (5)(a.5), a factual basis for unlawful sexual behavior must be established by statements made by the defendant, facts or fact-finding stipulated to by the defendant, or facts found by a jury. People v. Rockwell, 125 P.3d 410 (Colo. 2005).

Habitual offenders are subject to a period of discretionary parole rather than a period of statutory mandatory parole. The provisions of subsection (5)(a) of this section and § 17-2-

213 irreconcilably conflict with the provisions of § 17-22.5-403 (7) and § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V). Thus, the specific provision of subsection (5)(a) of this section and § 17-2-213 prevail over the general provisions of § 17-22.5-403 (7) and § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V). People v. Falls, 58 P.3d 1140 (Colo. App. 2002).

The provisions of subsection (5)(a) of this section and § 17-22.5-403 (7) are in conflict. Subsection (5)(a) of this section is a specific provision related to the parole of sex offenders while § 17-22.5-403 (7) is the mandatory parole statute for all felonies. As such, applying the statutory construction rule that the specific provision prevails over the general provision, subsection (5)(a) of this section is an exception to § 17-22.5-403 (7), which creates a specialized schedule for sex offenders who committed crimes prior to July 1, 1996. Martin v. People, 27 P.3d 846 (Colo. 2001).

Subsection (5)(a.5) of this section is a specific provision related to the parole of sex offenders while § 17-22.5-403 (7) is the mandatory parole statute for all felonies. As such, applying the statutory construction rule that the specific provision prevails over the general provision, subsection (5)(a.5) of this section is an exception to § 17-22.5-403 (7), which creates a specialized schedule for sex offenders who committed crimes between July 1, 1996, and July 1, 1998. People v. Cooper, 27 P.3d 348 (Colo. 2001).

Where plaintiff does not dispute that parole in Colorado is discretionary, subsection (5)(g) does not implicate any liberty interest protected by due process by conditioning parole on an inmate's submission of DNA samples. Boling v. Romer, 101 F.3d 1336 (10th Cir. 1996).

Immunity of state officials from civil liability. Federal officials are immune from any form of civil liability arising out of the authorized performance of official judgment or discretionary functions. Allegations of malice, while sufficient to raise a cause of action in those few jurisdictions recognizing only a qualified privilege, do not defeat the absolute liability recognized by the great weight of federal decisions. Advancing the effective administration of state government is a no less important policy goal than securing fearless federal decision-making. Belveal v. Bray, 253 F. Supp. 606 (D. Colo. 1966).

Subsection (5)(f)(I)(D) authorizes a warrantless search if it is conducted in furtherance of the purposes of parole, i.e., related to the rehabilitation and supervision of the parolee; and it is not arbitrary, capricious, or harassing. People v. McCullough, 6 P.3d 774 (Colo. 2000).

Although it becomes the duty of the parole board to provide, as a condition of parole, that offender make restitution to the victim or victim's immediate family, it is error for court to require that defendant pay restitution to the police of cost of extradition. The proper way to effectuate this result is for court to enter judgment in favor of state of Colorado for amount of costs of prosecution under § 16-1-501. People v. Lemons, 824 P.2d 56 (Colo. App. 1991).

Position as officer of state parole board not fundamental right. An officer of the state parole board has no property or vested interest in the public office and procedural protections of due process do not apply. Wilkerson v. State of Colo., 830 P.2d 1121 (Colo. App. 1992).

While the trial court is authorized to fix the amount of restitution owing by the defendant, the manner and time of payment of restitution is exclusively within the jurisdiction of the parole board. People v. Strock, 931 P.2d 538 (Colo. App. 1996).

Under subsection (5)(c)(I) the term "victim" includes insurers and other parties who have suffered a loss because of a contractual relationship with the immediate victim. People v. Rivera, 968 P.2d 1061 (Colo. App. 1997).

Searches by parole officers of a parolee's residence pursuant to the statutory waiver (subsection (5)(f)(I)(D)) require no more than reasonable suspicion, supported by specific and articulable facts that the parolee has committed a parole violation or crime. People v. Tafoya, 985 P.2d 26 (Colo. App. 1999).

Search of parolee's residence was a special-needs parole search because participating police officer acted under the direction of a parole officer. Special-needs exception to the warrant and probable-cause requirements applies when special needs, beyond the normal need for law enforcement, make the warrant and probable-cause requirement impracticable. A parole officer must authorize the search and would normally be present during the search, and the search must be related to the rehabilitation and supervision of the parolee. United States v. Warren, 566 F.3d 1211 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 569, 175 L. Ed. 2d 393 (2009).

Although the department of corrections did not have the statutory authority to draw defendant's blood for a DNA test, suppression of the DNA evidence is not warranted. In contrast to a constitutional violation, a statutory violation does not ordinarily require suppression of relevant evidence. Generally, only willful and recurrent statutory violations require exclusion of evidence. In this case there was no evidence of willfulness or recurrence, so suppression is not required. People v. Shreck, 107 P.3d 1048 (Colo. App. 2004).

The plain language of subsection (5.5)(g) of this section and § 17-2-102 (8.5)(c) prohibits the application of either subsection (5.5) of this section or § 17-2-102 (8.5) to any parolee to whom the Substance Abuse Act, article 11.5 of title 16, applies. Whidden v. People, 78 P.3d 1092 (Colo. 2003).

Applied in Sorenson v. Zapien, 455 F. Supp. 1207 (D. Colo. 1978); Turman v. Buckallew, 784 P.2d 774 (Colo. 1989); People v. Apodaca, 998 P.2d 25 (Colo. App. 1999).

II. POWER TO GRANT PAROLE.

Parole is a mere matter of grace, favor, or privilege and is not a matter of right. Berry v. State Bd. of Parole, 148 Colo. 547, 367 P.2d 338 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 927, 82 S. Ct. 1569, 8 L.Ed.2d 507 (1962); Ferchaw v. Tinsley, 234 F. Supp. 922 (D. Colo. 1964); Folks v. Patterson, 159 Colo. 403, 412 P.2d 214 (1966).

Parole is a privilege, and no prisoner is entitled to it as a matter of right. Silva v. People, 158 Colo. 326, 407 P.2d 38 (1965).

Parole is a privilege under Colorado law. Belveal v. Bray, 253 F. Supp. 606 (D. Colo. 1966).

It is exercise of discipline by state. Acts authorizing the parole of convicts are an exercise of the power of discipline possessed by the state, implemented through the general assembly. Silva v. People, 158 Colo. 326, 407 P.2d 38 (1965).

Imposition of mandatory term of parole not within court's jurisdiction, but is within the exclusive province of the parole board. People v. Howard, 886 P.2d 296 (Colo. App. 1994).

The parole board has absolute discretion in the granting or denial of parole. The determinations involved in granting parole depend exclusively on the judgment and discretion of the board. Wilkerson v. Patterson, 174 Colo. 264, 483 P.2d 365 (1971).

The ultimate decision as to the granting or denial of parole is entrusted to the state parole board. Ferchaw v. Tinsley, 234 F. Supp. 922 (D. Colo. 1964).

The decision of the Colorado state board of parole to grant or deny parole is clearly discretionary since parole is a privilege, and no prisoner is entitled to it as a matter of right. In re Question Concerning State Judicial Review, 199 Colo. 463, 610 P.2d 1340 (1980).

The decision to grant parole or absolute release to an inmate incarcerated for an indeterminate sentence under the Colorado Sex Offender Lifetime Supervision Act is vested within the sound discretion of the state parole board. The parole board's discretion is plenary and is not subject to judicial review. People v. Oglethorpe, 87 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2003).

The parole board must act within scope of delegated authority. The parole board is authorized to act only in specified ways. Absolute quasi-judicial immunity to acts not permitted by law does not serve the purpose of more efficient government. Officials who act without the scope of their delegated authority must, at the least, proceed at their own risk. Belveal v. Bray, 253 F. Supp. 606 (D. Colo. 1966).

Decision of the board to deny parole is not an abuse of discretion as long as there is sufficient evidence before the board to support its decision. Mulberry v. Neal, 96 F. Supp.2d 1149 (D. Colo. 2000).

An inmate has a substantial interest in knowing the reason or reasons from the board for denial of parole. Johnson v. Heggie, 362 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1973).

And board must give written reasons. Notwithstanding any other policy to the contrary, the board must, by the very terms and conditions of its own rules and regulations, give written reasons for denial or deferral of parole to the inmate concerned. Johnson v. Heggie, 362 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1973).

The general assembly did not intend to provide a mandatory period of parole. Wilkerson v. Patterson, 174 Colo. 264, 483 P.2d 365 (1971).

Board must reconsider application yearly after denial. The parole board is explicitly not required to grant an application, but when it does not grant a parole, it must reconsider the application each succeeding year until the prisoner is discharged pursuant to law, that is, until he has fully served the maximum term of his sentence less time allowed for good behavior, if any. Wilkerson v. Patterson, 174 Colo. 264, 483 P.2d 365 (1971).

Habeas corpus in the federal district court is not available to secure relief from the decisions of the parole board as to the grant or denial of parole. Ferchaw v. Tinsley, 234 F. Supp. 922 (D. Colo. 1964).

Denial of parole raises no federal question of due process. The action of the parole board denying petitioner parole and requiring him to serve the maximum sentence originally imposed by the sentencing court raises no federal question of violation of due process or equal protection. Ferchaw v. Tinsley, 234 F. Supp. 922 (D. Colo. 1964).

Restitution as a condition of parole. Sentence which ordered defendant to pay restitution as a condition of parole after serving time in prison is consistent with the applicable statutory scheme governing parole and restitution. People v. Martinez, 734 P.2d 650 (Colo. App. 1987).

The court's duty to fix the amount of restitution is not confined to sentences to probation but applies equally to sentences to imprisonment. People v. Johnson, 780 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1989).

A codefendant is jointly responsible for restitution when he is also a complicitor in the crime. People v. Fichtner, 869 P.2d 539 (Colo. 1994).

Codefendants were participants and complicitors in the same criminal acts, therefore, each is responsible for the damage he caused and also for the damage caused by the other. People v. Fichtner, 869 P.2d 539 (Colo. 1994).

Where the parole board fails to issue a warrant for the arrest of a parolee, and the period of parole expires, law enforcement agencies have no authority to arrest the parolee, and the good faith exception and the fellow officer rule do not apply. People v. Fields, 785 P.2d 611 (Colo. 1990).

Subsection (5)(a) plainly and unambiguously provides that all habitual criminals sentenced pursuant to § 16-13-101 are subject to discretionary parole, regardless of when their current offenses were committed. People v. Marquez, 983 P.2d 159 (Colo. App. 1999).

Under subsection (5)(a), parole for inmates convicted of sexual offenses under § 16-13-202 (5) was discretionary, not mandatory. Lustgarden v. Kautzky, 811 P.2d 1098 (Colo. 1991); Lustgarden v. Gunter, 779 F. Supp. 500 (D. Colo. 1991); Lustgarden v. Gunter, 966 F.2d 552 (10th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1008, 113 S. Ct. 624, 121 L.Ed.2d 556 (1992); Jackson v. Zavaras, 963 P.2d 1118 (Colo. App. 1998).

The provisions of § 16-13-216 (1) granting yearly parole consideration for persons sentenced to an indeterminate term pursuant to § 16-13-203 conflict with the provisions of subsection (4)(a) of this section, which allow the parole board to consider parole for sex offenders every three years. Since subsection (4)(a) is the later enacted statute, the provisions of subsection (4) prevail. A person sentenced to an indeterminate sentence pursuant to § 16-13-203 is entitled to parole consideration only every three years. White v. Van Pelt, 55 P.3d 823 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where defendant was convicted of both a sexual offense and attempted murder, and received equal and concurrent sentences for each crime, parole was discretionary pursuant to subsection (5)(a). Mahn v. Gunter, 978 F.2d 599 (10th Cir. 1992).

No equal protection violation where offender convicted of a nonsexual offense would receive mandatory parole, but an offender convicted of a comparable nonsexual offense in which there is an underlying factual basis of unlawful sexual behavior would receive discretionary parole under subsection (5)(a). Offenders are not similarly situated because different behavior triggers the different parole requirements. People v. Fritschler, 87 P.3d 186 (Colo. App. 2003).

Retroactive application of the parole board's reinterpretation of subsection (5)(a), where the reinterpretation of the ambiguous statutory language was foreseeable, did not result in a violation of the ex post facto clause or the due process requirements. Lustgarden v. Gunter, 779 F. Supp. 500 (D. Colo. 1991);

Lustgarden v. Gunter, 966 F.2d 552 (10th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1008, 113 S. Ct. 624, 121 L.Ed.2d 556 (1992).

Because subsection (5)(a) leaves it to the parole board's discretion whether to grant parole before a sex offender completes his sentence, petitioner's unilateral belief that good-time credits would result in his early release did not give rise to a constitutionally protected interest. Lustgarden v. Gunter, 779 F. Supp. 500 (D. Colo. 1991); Lustgarden v. Gunter, 966 F.2d 552 (10th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1008, 113 S. Ct. 624, 121 L.Ed.2d 556 (1992).

Where defendant was convicted of sexually assaulting the victim over a period of four years that ended July 6, 1998, the elements of the crime were not complete, and the crime was not committed, until that date. Therefore, the provisions of subsection (5)(a.5) apply and, if the parole board releases the defendant to a period of discretionary parole when he has more than five years of his prison sentence remaining, the length of the parole period may be up to the full amount of the unserved portion of his sentence and shall not be subject to the five-year cap. People v. Myers, 45 P.3d 756 (Colo. App. 2001).

Consideration of application for parole is matter entrusted solely to the discretion of the parole board for parolee convicted of sexual offenses. White v. People, 866 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1994).

Court may correct erroneous sentence of person convicted of unlawful sexual offense from one-year probation to the period set forth in subsection (5)(a). People v. Reynolds, 907 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court may correct the mittimus where the trial court neglected to specify that its sentence included a mandatory period of parole. People v. Mayes, 981 P.2d 1106 (Colo. App. 1999).

Parole decision is subtle and dependent on an amalgam of elements some of which are factual and many of which are purely subjective appraisals by the parole board members based upon their experience. White v. People, 866 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1994).

Although parole agreement is anticipated, it is not a condition to grant of parole but a condition to release on parole. Regulations do not suggest that grant of parole not effective until prisoner actually released from custody. Prisoner granted parole to a county detainer and serving consecutive sentence on another conviction made prima facie case for writ of habeas corpus relief when he alleged that parole had not been suspended or rescinded. Cardiel v. Brittan, 833 P.2d 748 (Colo. 1992) (decided prior to enactment of § 17-2-201 (5)(f)(I)).

III. POWER TO REVOKE PAROLE.

Law reviews. For article, "Due Process, Equal Protection and State Parole Revocation Proceedings", see 42 U. Colo. L. Rev. 197 (1970).

The decision to revoke is discretionary, and the degree to which personal factors dictate a positive disposition is not susceptible to legal analysis. Martinez v. Patterson, 429 F.2d 844 (10th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 934, 91 S. Ct. 1528, 28 L.Ed.2d 868 (1971).

Rules of board provide adequate opportunity to be heard. The rules and regulations of the state board of parole providing that where the parolee has been returned to custody he shall be brought before the board for interview, that he shall be informed of the reason for the suspension and of grounds asserted for revocation, and shall be given an opportunity to be heard in regard thereto, satisfy the requirements of law in that they adequately provide for an inquiry by the board together with an opportunity for the parolee to be heard with respect to the alleged violations. Hutchison v. Patterson, 267 F. Supp. 433 (D. Colo. 1967).

Probation and parole revocation distinguished. Probation revocation proceedings involving deferred sentencing are quite distinct from parole revocation proceedings. The Colorado provisions on probation, § 16-11-201 et seq., do not provide probationers more in substance than what is accorded parolees. Martinez v. Patterson, 429 F.2d 844 (10th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 934, 91 S. Ct. 1528, 28 L.Ed.2d 868 (1971).

Acts of parole board in revoking parole were not subject to review by the judiciary, be it through the medium of certiorari, habeas corpus or mandamus. Folks v. Patterson, 159 Colo. 403, 412 P.2d 214 (1966).

Colorado affords no judicial review of the acts of the state board of parole in conducting revocation proceedings and therefore no state remedy is available to petitioner upon his claim that his present confinement is unlawfully premised on a parole revocation hearing at which he was denied due process. Green v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 560 (10th Cir. 1966).

Federal court found no prejudice where parolees did not deny violations. Appellants' allegations do not at any place deny that they violated the conditions of their respective paroles. Appellants easily could have made a record in this regard and in the absence of that the court cannot conclude that any appellant was prejudiced in the proceedings before the parole board. In view of the nature of the decision to be made in parole revocation proceedings, the presumption of correctness accorded to the proceedings of parole boards, and limited review of such decisions for abuse of discretion, the court cannot conclude that the parole revocation proceedings accorded each appellant lacked inherent fairness. Martinez v. Patterson, 429 F.2d 844 (10th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 934, 91 S. Ct. 1528, 28 L.Ed.2d 868 (1971).

Subsection (5.5)(d), when read together with § 17-2-102, prohibits parole revocation upon initial drug or alcohol testing even if the result is positive, but does allow revocation upon any subsequent positive test if the initial test was not positive. People v. Whidden, 56 P.3d 1201 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 78 P.3d 1092 (Colo. 2003).

17-2-201.5. Study of parole system. (Repealed)

Source: L. 97: Entire section added, p. 30, § 9, effective March 20. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 842, § 29, effective May 24.

17-2-202. Request for transfer - penitentiary to reformatory. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 914, § 10, effective August 1. L. 85: Entire section repealed, p. 641, § 11, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 17-1-202 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-2-202.5. Administrative hearing officers and release hearing officers - qualifications - duties. (1) (a) To be eligible to serve as an administrative hearing officer or administrative law judge under contract with the board, an attorney shall have five years' experience in the practice of law and be knowledgeable of parole laws and guidelines, offender rehabilitation, correctional administration, the functioning of the criminal justice system, issues associated with victims of crime, the duties of parole board members, and actuarial risk assessment instruments and other offender assessment instruments used by the board and the department of corrections.

(b) An administrative hearing officer or administrative law judge under contract with the board is required to complete twelve hours annually of continuing education or training consistent with section 17-2-201 (1) (e).

(c) An administrative hearing officer or administrative law judge under contract with the board shall comply with the data and information collection on decision-making as required by section 17-22.5-404 (6) and shall transmit this information as directed by the chairperson or board policy.

(d) The sole remedy for failure to comply with training and data collection requirements shall be termination of the employee, and the failure to comply with training and data collection requirements shall not create any right for any offender.

(2) (a) A release hearing officer shall have three years of relevant experience and be knowledgeable of parole laws and guidelines, offender rehabilitation, correctional administration, the functioning of the criminal justice system, the issues associated with victims of crime, the duties of parole board members, and actuarial risk assessment instruments and other offender assessment instruments used by the board and the department of corrections.

(b) A release hearing officer under contract with the board is required to complete twelve hours annually of continuing education or training consistent with section 17-2-201 (1) (e).

(c) A release hearing officer shall comply with the data and information collection on decision-making required by section 17-22.5-404 (6) and shall transmit this information as directed by the chairperson or board policy.

(d) The sole remedy for failure to comply with training and data collection requirements shall be termination of the employee, and the failure to comply with training and data collection requirements shall not create any right for any offender.

Source: L. 2011: Entire section added, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, p. 835, § 5, effective May 23.

17-2-203. Request for transfer - reformatory to penitentiary. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 914, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section repealed, p. 705, § 88, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 17-1-203 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-2-204. Parole may issue - when. (1) The board, pursuant to rules and regulations, may issue a parole or permit to go at large to any inmate who now is imprisoned in a correctional facility and who may have served the minimum term pronounced by the court or, in the absence of such minimum term pronounced by the court, the minimum term provided by law for the crime for which he was convicted.

(2) (a) Any inmate who does not wish to be considered for parole shall sign a waiver witnessed by an institutional supervisory employee no later than thirty days prior to the date of the scheduled parole hearing. Except as otherwise provided in this subsection (2), any waiver signed by an inmate in accordance with this subsection (2) shall become effective on the date of signing and shall remain in effect for six months after the date of the scheduled parole hearing. The inmate may not withdraw such waiver or submit an application for parole at any time during the six-month period.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), an inmate who waives parole consideration may, no later than thirty days prior to the date of the scheduled parole hearing, make a written request that the six-month waiver period be shortened to a lesser period of time. Such request shall specifically state grounds constituting sufficient and reasonable cause as to why the six-month waiver period should be shortened. Such request shall also specifically state the lesser period of time being requested by the inmate. The chairperson of the board, vice-chairperson of the board, or the designee of either, in his or her discretion, shall grant or deny the inmate's request for the shortened waiver period made under this paragraph (b).

(c) If the inmate's request for the shortened waiver period is made and granted in accordance with paragraph (b) of this subsection (2), the inmate may not, at any time prior to the date of the rescheduled parole hearing, make another such request. In the event such inmate is not prepared for or otherwise not ready to proceed at the rescheduled parole hearing, the inmate shall be deemed to have waived parole consideration for a period of six months following the date of such hearing.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 914, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (1) amended, p. 688, § 28, effective July 1. L. 85: Entire section amended, p. 640, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2002: (2) amended, p. 38, § 1, effective March 21.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-1-204 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-2-204 is similar to former § 17-1-204 as it existed prior to the 1977 repeal and reenactment of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Parole is a matter of grace, favor, or privilege and a prisoner is not entitled thereto as a matter of right. Berry v. State Bd. of Parole, 148 Colo. 547, 367 P.2d 338 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 927, 82 S. Ct. 1569, 8 L. Ed.2d 507 (1962).

Under parole procedures an indeterminate sentence usually results in an earlier release, and it cannot be said to be harsh or excessive so as to require the scrutiny of an appellate court. Nugent v. District Court, 184 Colo. 353, 520 P.2d 592 (1974).

17-2-205. Time of parole not considered when convict is reincarcerated. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 915, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 689, § 29, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 17-1-205 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-2-206. Parole not to be construed as discharge. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 915, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 689, § 30, effective July 1. L. 81: Entire section amended, p. 959, § 1, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 17-1-206 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-2-207. Parole - regulations.

(1) and (2) Repealed.

(3) Offenders on parole shall remain under legal custody and shall be subject at any time to be returned to a correctional facility.

(4) From and after the suspension, cancellation, or revocation of the parole of any prisoner and until his return to custody, he shall be deemed a parole violator and fugitive from justice, and no part of the time during which he was on parole shall be deemed a part of his term.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 915, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (1) and (3) amended, p. 689, § 31, effective July 1; (2) amended, p. 1635, § 26, effective July 1. L. 84: (1) and (2) repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1. L. 85: (3) amended, p. 640, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2010: (3) amended, (HB 10-1374), ch. 261, p. 1181, § 4, effective May 25.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-1-207 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For other provisions concerning parole regulations, see § 17-22.5-104.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Procedure in Colorado — A Summary and Recommendations for Improvement", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 221 (1950).

Annotator's note. Since § 17-2-207 is similar to § 17-1-207 as it existed prior to the 1977 repeal and reenactment of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

A parolee is subject to restrictions which are not applicable to other citizens. People v. Salvador, 189 Colo. 181, 539 P.2d 1273 (1975).

And he is not free from legal restraint by the penal authorities, but is constructively a prisoner of the state in the legal custody and under the control of the state department of institutions. Schooley v. Wilson, 150 Colo. 483, 374 P.2d 353 (1962); People v. Lucero, 772 P.2d 58 (Colo. 1989).

One who is on parole is granted a special privilege to be outside the walls of the institution while serving his sentence as a matter of legislative grace. At the same time the parolee remains in constructive custody and is subject to be returned to the enclosure at any time. Hutchison v. Patterson, 267 F. Supp. 433 (D. Colo. 1967).

Release on parole in no way alters the fact that appellant is still under sentence; that he is in technical custody; and that he is under supervision. People v. Salvador, 189 Colo. 181, 539 P.2d 1273 (1975); People v. Hunter, 738 P.2d 20 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd, 757 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1988).

Probable cause and duty to arrest. Where parole agent was aware of appellant's status as a parole violator and as a fugitive, this knowledge constituted probable cause for appellant's arrest, which the parole officer had a duty to effect, with or without a warrant. People v. Bergstrom, 190 Colo. 105, 544 P.2d 396 (1975).

17-2-208. Effective date and application. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 915, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 689, § 32, effective July 1; entire section amended, p. 1635, § 27, effective July 19. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 17-1-208 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-2-209. Civil proceedings - inmate subject to parole. When an inmate has met all of the requirements to be eligible for parole, but the board has reason to believe that the offender may have a mental illness pursuant to article 65 of title 27, C.R.S., the board shall initiate civil proceedings pursuant to article 23 of this title and articles 10.5, 11, 14, 65, 67, 92, 93, and 94 of title 27, C.R.S.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 916, § 10, effective August 1. L. 85: Entire section amended, p. 641, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 1398, § 45, effective August 7. L. 2010: Entire section amended, (SB 10-175), ch. 188, page 784, § 25, effective April 29.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 17-1-209 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) Articles 11 and 14 of title 27, which are included in the reference in this section, were repealed by L. 85, p. 1016, § 46.

17-2-210. Duties of board. The board, acting through its chairperson or an assistant or a community parole officer, shall promptly commence civil proceedings pursuant to section 17-2-209 and shall notify the office of the attorney general, who shall then represent the board in the hearings.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 916, § 10, effective August 1. L. 85: Entire section amended, p. 641, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section amended, p. 658, § 7, effective April 25.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-1-210 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-2-211. Jurisdiction of courts. All civil actions under sections 17-2-209 to 17-2-212 shall be brought in the court of proper jurisdiction in the county of Pueblo, state of Colorado. Wherever and whenever possible, qualified witnesses in the field of mental health shall be obtained from the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 916, § 10, effective August 1. L. 91: Entire section amended, p. 1143, § 6, effective May 18.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-1-211 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-2-212. Duty of warden. If the board has previously considered an inmate for release and the inmate is still imprisoned and if the inmate's mental condition is questioned by a warden of a correctional facility, it is the duty of said warden to notify the chairperson of the board at least forty days prior to the discharge of the inmate, and the chairperson then shall proceed in the same manner outlined in sections 17-2-210 and 17-2-211.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 916, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 690, § 33, effective July 1. L. 85: Entire section amended, p. 641, § 9, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 842, § 30, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-1-212 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-2-213. Application of part. Effective July 1, 1979, the provisions of this part 2 relating to the power of the state board of parole to grant parole and to establish the duration of the term of parole shall apply only to persons sentenced for conviction of a felony committed prior to July 1, 1979, persons sentenced for conviction of a misdemeanor, persons sentenced for conviction of a sex offense, as defined in section 18-1.3-903 (5), C.R.S., or a class 1 felony, and persons sentenced as habitual criminals pursuant to section 18-1.3-801, C.R.S. Parole for persons sentenced for conviction of a class 2, class 3, class 4, or class 5 felony committed on or after July 1, 1979, shall be as provided in section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S., and article 22.5 of this title.

Source: L. 79: Entire section added, p. 667, § 13, effective July 1. L. 2002: Entire section amended, p. 1501, § 160, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Habitual offenders are subject to a period of discretionary parole rather than a period of statutory mandatory parole. The provisions of § 17-2-201 (5)(a) and this section irreconcilably conflict with the provisions of § 17-22.5-

403 (7) and § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V). Thus, the specific provision of § 17-2-201 (5)(a) and this section prevail over the general provisions of § 17-22.5-403 (7) and § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V). People v. Falls, 58 P.3d 1140 (Colo. App. 2002).

17-2-214. Right to attend parole hearings. (1) The victim of any crime or any person requested by the victim to appear on behalf of such victim or a relative of the victim, if the victim has died or is a minor or is incapacitated and unable to appear, has the right to attend any parole proceeding under this title relative to said crime and has the right to appear, personally or with counsel, at the proceeding and to reasonably express his or her views concerning the crime, the offender, and whether or not the offender should be released on parole, and if so released under what conditions. The board, in deciding whether to release the offender on parole, and if so under what conditions, shall consider the testimony of such person.

(2) (a) In the case of any offenses against the person, as specified in article 3 of title

18, C.R.S., notice of any parole proceeding shall be sent by the department of corrections, working in cooperation with the board, to any victim of the crime or relative of the victim, if the victim has died, at least sixty days before the hearing. Such notice shall be sent to the last address in the possession of the department of corrections or the board, and the victim of the crime or relative of the victim, if the victim has died, has the duty to keep the department of corrections or the board informed of his or her most current address.

(b) In the case of any offenses other than offenses against the person as specified in article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., notice of any parole proceeding shall be sent by the department of corrections, working in cooperation with the board, only upon request to the department of corrections or the board, to any victim of the crime or relative of a victim, if the victim has died, who makes such a request at least sixty days before the hearing. Such notice shall be sent to the last address in the possession of the department of corrections or the board, and the victim of the crime or relative of the victim, if the victim has died, has the duty to keep the department of corrections or the board informed of his or her most current address.

Source: L. 84: Entire section added, p. 499, § 2, effective July 1. L. 85: (1) amended, p. 643, § 3, effective July 1. L. 94: (2) amended, p. 2599, § 11, effective June 3.

Cross references: For the right to attend sentencing proceedings, see § 16-11-601; for the right to attend dispositional, review, and restitution proceedings under the “Colorado Children’s Code”, see § 19-2-112.

17-2-215. Notification of parole proceeding. In addition to the notice required by section 17-2-214 (2), the department of corrections shall establish a system of notification under which any person may make a written request to the department of corrections or the board for the notification of any parole proceeding concerning an offender, which notice shall be given by the department of corrections, working in cooperation with the board, at least thirty days before the hearing. Such notice shall be sent to the last-known address of the person making a written request for notification in the possession of the department of corrections or the board, and the person making such written request for notification has the duty to keep the department of corrections or the board informed of his or her current address.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 644, § 4. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 2599, § 12, effective June 3.

17-2-216. Application of sections 17-2-214 and 17-2-215. The provisions of sections 17-2-214 and 17-2-215 shall apply to any parole proceeding held on or after July 1, 1985, irrespective of when the offender was sentenced or incarcerated.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 644, § 4, effective July 1.

17-2-217. Release hearing officers - pilot program. (1) The department and the board are hereby authorized to conduct a release hearing officers pilot program that utilizes the officers described in section 17-2-201 (3) (c.5).

(2) Repealed.

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 502, § 4, effective May 16. L. 2008: (2) repealed, p. 1888, § 50, effective August 5.

PART 3

COOPERATIVE RETURN OF PAROLE AND PROBATION VIOLATORS

17-2-301. Short title. This part 3 shall be known and may be cited as the “Cooperative Return of Parole and Probation Violators Act of 1957”.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 916, § 10, effective August 1.

17-2-302. Director - powers. The executive director is authorized to deputize any person regularly employed by the state of Colorado, or any person regularly employed by another state, to act as an officer and agent of this state in effecting the return of any person who has violated the terms and conditions of parole or probation as granted by this state. In any matter relating to the return of such a person, any agent so deputized shall have all the powers of a police official of this state.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 916, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 843, § 31, effective May 24.

17-2-303. Deputization. Any deputization pursuant to section 17-2-302 shall be in writing, and any person authorized to act as an agent of this state pursuant to this part 3 shall carry formal evidence of his deputization and shall produce the same upon demand.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 916, § 10, effective August 1.

17-2-304. Interstate agreements. The executive director is authorized to enter into contracts with similar officials of any other state, subject to approval of the governor, for the purpose of sharing an equitable portion of the cost of effecting the return of any person who has violated the terms and conditions of parole or probation as granted by this state.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 916, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 843, § 32, effective May 24.

PART 4

PREPAROLE FACILITIES AND PROGRAMS

17-2-401 to 17-2-405. (Repealed)

Source: L. 97: Entire part repealed, p. 31, § 10, effective March 20.

Editor's note: This part 4 was added in 1990. For amendments to this part 4 prior to its repeal in 1997, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume.

Care and Custody - Reimbursement

ARTICLE 10

Cost of Care Reimbursement

Editor's note: This article was added in 1989. This article was repealed and reenacted in 1994, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For amendments to this article prior to 1994, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume. Former C.R.S. section numbers are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated.

17-10-101.	Legislative declaration.		cost of care - when com-
17-10-102.	Definitions.		menced.
17-10-103.	Action for reimbursement of	17-10-105.	Jurisdiction - process.
	cost of care.	17-10-106.	Costs of the action - payment
17-10-104.	Action for reimbursement of		by offender.

17-10-101. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds that persons who are convicted of offenses in the state which result in such persons being confined to a local jail or a correctional facility, being sentenced to home detention, being placed on probation by the sentencing court, or being placed on parole by the state board of parole should be required, where appropriate, to reimburse the state or a county or a city and county for the cost of care incurred as a result of such sentence. The general assembly further finds that a convicted person's financial circumstances may be fraudulently misrepresented to the sentencing court or that such circumstances may change after sentencing so that a person who is unable to pay the cost of care at sentencing may be or become able to contribute to the cost of care at a later date.

Source: L. 94: Entire article R&RE, p. 1359, § 4, effective July 1. L. 95: Entire section amended, p. 10, § 1, effective July 1.

17-10-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Cost of care" means the cost to the department or a county or a city and county charged with the custody of an offender for providing room, board, clothing, medical care, and other normal living expenses for an offender confined to a local jail or a correctional facility, or any costs associated with maintaining an offender in a home detention program contracted for by the department of public safety, as determined by the executive director of the department of corrections or the executive director of the department of public safety, whichever is appropriate, or the cost of supervision of probation when the offender is granted probation, or the cost of supervision of parole when the offender is placed on parole by the state board of parole, as determined by the court.

(2) "Estate" means any tangible or intangible properties, real or personal, belonging to or due to an offender, including income or payments to such person received or earned prior to or during incarceration from salary or wages, bonuses, annuities, pensions, or retirement benefits, or any source whatsoever except federal benefits of any kind. Real property that is held in joint ownership or ownership in common with an offender's spouse, while being used and occupied by the spouse as a place of residence, shall not be considered a part of the estate of the offender for the purposes of this article.

(3) "Offender" means a person confined to a correctional facility or a local jail as the result of a conviction of a crime or to home detention, a person placed on probation by the sentencing court, or a person placed on parole by the state board of parole.

Source: L. 94: Entire article R&RE, p. 1360, § 4, effective July 1. L. 96: (2) amended, p. 1844, § 16, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 17-10-102 as it existed prior to 1994.

(2) Subsection (3) was amended in Senate Bill 94-172. Those amendments were superseded by the repeal and reenactment of this entire article in Senate Bill 94-143. (See L. 94, p. 2598.)

17-10-103. Action for reimbursement of cost of care. (1) When any person has been sentenced to confinement in a local jail or a correctional facility or to home detention or has been granted probation or has been placed on parole by the state board of parole and the sentencing court has not entered an order pursuant to section 18-1.3-701, C.R.S., requiring such person to pay the full cost of care incurred during such person's sentence, the state, the appropriate prosecuting attorney, the department of corrections, the judicial department, or any government agency which has incurred cost of care of such person may file an action for reimbursement for cost of care.

(2) In an action filed pursuant to this article, the plaintiff seeking reimbursement for cost of care shall demonstrate that the offender substantially misrepresented such offender's financial status to the sentencing court or that such offender's financial circumstances have changed substantially after sentencing.

(3) If, after a hearing, the court determines that the offender has sufficient assets to pay all or part of the cost of care, the court shall order the offender to make such payments toward the cost of care as are appropriate under the circumstances. In setting the amount of such payments, the court shall take into consideration and make allowances for any restitution ordered to the victim or victims of a crime, which shall take priority over any payments ordered pursuant to this article, and for the maintenance and support of the offender's spouse, dependent children, or any other persons having a legal right to support and maintenance out of the offender's estate. If the offender is confined to a local jail or a correctional facility or is under home detention, the court shall also consider the financial needs of the offender for the six-month period immediately following the offender's release, for the purpose of allowing the offender to seek employment. The court shall determine the amount which shall be paid by the offender for cost of care, which amount shall in no event be in excess of the per capita cost of maintaining prisoners in the local jail or a correctional facility, the per capita cost of maintaining an offender under home detention, the per capita cost of supervising an offender on probation, or the per capita cost of supervising an offender placed on parole, as the case may be.

(4) After the set-offs for restitution and for maintenance and support as provided in subsection (3) of this section, any amounts recovered pursuant to this section that are available to reimburse the costs of providing medical care shall be used to reimburse the state for the state's financial participation for medical assistance if medical care is provided for the inmate or an infant of a female inmate under the "Colorado Medical Assistance Act", articles 4, 5, and 6 of title 25.5, C.R.S.

Source: L. 94: Entire article R&RE, p. 1360, § 4, effective July 1. L. 95: (4) added, p. 336, § 4, effective April 27; (2) amended, p. 10, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1) amended, p. 1501, § 161, effective October 1. L. 2006: (4) amended, p. 2004, § 58, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-10-104 as it existed prior to 1994.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-10-104. Action for reimbursement of cost of care - when commenced. (1) An action may be commenced pursuant to section 17-10-103 against any offender:

- (a) At any time during the imprisonment of such offender;
- (b) During the period of probation supervision of such offender; or
- (c) Within two years after the offender's release from imprisonment or release from probation supervision.

(2) A plaintiff may recover the expenses incurred on behalf of an offender during the entire period the offender has been confined in a correctional facility or a local jail, under home detention, under probation supervision, or placed on parole.

Source: L. 94: Entire article R&RE, p. 1361, § 4, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 17-10-105 as it existed prior to 1994.

(2) The provisions of this section were renumbered to conform to C.R.S. standard numbering format.

17-10-105. Jurisdiction - process. (1) An action to recover cost of care brought pursuant to this article shall be brought in the district court of any county in which the offender has been confined, supervised on probation, or placed on parole.

(2) The practice and procedure in an action to recover cost of care shall be governed by the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

Source: L. 94: Entire article R&RE, p. 1361, § 4, effective July 1.

17-10-106. Costs of the action - payment by offender. If the court determines that the offender has a sufficient estate to pay the cost of care, the court may also order that such offender pay the costs of any action filed pursuant to this article.

Source: L. 94: Entire article R&RE, p. 1361, § 4, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-10-106 as it existed prior to 1994.

CORRECTIONAL FACILITIES AND PROGRAMS

Facilities

ARTICLE 18

Correctional Facilities - Statutory Appropriations

Editor's note: Amendments to this article by House Bill 08-1115, House Bill 08-1352, House Bill 08-1194, and Senate Bill 08-239 were harmonized.

17-18-101.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 08-1115 - repeal.	17-18-105.	1194 - repeal. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 10-1081 - repeal.
17-18-102.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 08-1352 - repeal.	17-18-106.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 10-1277 - repeal.
17-18-103.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 08-239 - repeal.	17-18-107.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 10-128 - repeal.
17-18-104.	Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 08-

17-18-101. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 08-1115 - repeal.
(1) Pursuant to section 2-2-703, C.R.S., the following statutory appropriations, or so much thereof as may be necessary, are made in order to implement House Bill 08-1115, enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-sixth general assembly:

(a) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2008, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of one hundred twenty-five thousand one hundred sixty-five dollars ($125,165).

(b) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2009, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand seven hundred fifty-eight dollars ($28,758).

(c) (I) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2010, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated, from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of one hundred twelve thousand six hundred forty-nine dollars ($112,649).

(II) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2010, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand seven hundred fifty-eight dollars ($28,758).

(d) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2011, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of fifty-four thousand six hundred forty dollars ($54,640).

(e) (I) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated, from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of one hundred twelve thousand six hundred forty-nine dollars ($112,649).

(II) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand seven hundred fifty-eight dollars ($28,758).

(2) This section is repealed, effective July 1, 2013.

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 1029, § 2, effective July 1.

17-18-102. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 08-1352 - repeal.

(1) Pursuant to section 2-2-703, C.R.S., the following statutory appropriations, or so much thereof as may be necessary, are made in order to implement House Bill 08-1352, enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-sixth general assembly:

(a) (I) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2008, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of two million one hundred twenty-seven thousand eight hundred five dollars ($2,127,805).

(II) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2008, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of two hundred seventeen thousand five hundred sixty-six dollars ($217,566).

(b) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2009, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of two hundred seventeen thousand five hundred sixty-six dollars ($217,566).

(c) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2010, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of two hundred seventeen thousand five hundred sixty-six dollars ($217,566).

(d) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2011, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of two hundred seventeen thousand five hundred sixty-six dollars ($217,566).

(e) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of two hundred seventeen thousand five hundred sixty-six dollars ($217,566).

(2) This section is repealed, effective July 1, 2013.

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 1035, § 2, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-18-101 in House Bill 08-1352 but has been renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-18-103. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 08-239 - repeal.

(1) Pursuant to section 2-2-703, C.R.S., the following statutory appropriations, or so much thereof as may be necessary, are made in order to implement Senate Bill 08-239, enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-sixth general assembly:

(a) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2008, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of one hundred twenty-five thousand one hundred sixty-five dollars ($125,165).

(b) (I) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2009, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated, from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of one hundred twenty-five thousand one hundred sixty-five dollars ($125,165).

(II) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2009, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand seven hundred fifty-eight dollars ($28,758).

(c) (I) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2010, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated, from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of one hundred thirty-seven thousand six hundred eighty-two dollars ($137,682).

(II) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2010, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of fifty-seven thousand five hundred sixteen dollars ($57,516).

(d) (I) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2011, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated, from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of three hundred seventy-five thousand four hundred ninety-five dollars ($375,495).

(II) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2011, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of eighty-nine thousand one hundred fifty dollars ($89,150).

(e) (I) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated, from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of three hundred seventy-five thousand four hundred ninety-five dollars ($375,495).

(II) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of one hundred seventy-five thousand four hundred twenty-four dollars ($175,424).

(2) This section is repealed, effective July 1, 2013.

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 850, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-18-101 in Senate Bill 08-239 but has been renumbered on revision for ease of location.

17-18-104. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 08-1194 - repeal.

(1) Pursuant to section 2-2-703, C.R.S., the following statutory appropriations, or so much thereof as may be necessary, are made in order to implement House Bill 08-1194, enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-sixth general assembly:

(a) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2008, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of one hundred twenty-five thousand one hundred sixty-five dollars ($125,165).

(b) (I) Repealed.

(II) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2009, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand seven hundred fifty-eight dollars ($28,758).

(c) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2010, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of thirty-one thousand six hundred thirty-four dollars ($31,634).

(d) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2011, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of thirty-one thousand six hundred thirty-four dollars ($31,634).

(e) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of thirty-one thousand six hundred thirty-four dollars ($31,634).

(2) This section is repealed, effective July 1, 2013.

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 838, § 9, effective September 1. L. 2010: (1)(b)(I) repealed, (HB 10-1389), ch. 206, p. 897, § 7, effective May 5.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 17-18-101 in House Bill 08-1194 but has been renumbered on revision for ease of location.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2008 act enacting this section, see section 1 of chapter 221, Session Laws of Colorado 2008.

17-18-105. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 10-1081 - repeal.

(1) Pursuant to section 2-2-703, C.R.S., the following statutory appropriations, or so much thereof as may be necessary, are made in order to implement House Bill 10-1081, enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-seventh general assembly:

(a) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2010, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of ninety-one thousand three hundred seventy dollars ($91,370).

(b) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2011, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department of corrections, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand eight hundred dollars ($28,800).

(c) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department of corrections, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand eight hundred dollars ($28,800).

(d) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2013, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department of corrections, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand eight hundred dollars ($28,800).

(e) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2014, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department of corrections, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand eight hundred dollars ($28,800).

(2) This section is repealed, effective July 1, 2015.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (HB 10-1081), ch. 256, p. 1141, § 7, effective August 11.

17-18-106. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - HB 10-1277 - repeal.

(1) Pursuant to section 2-2-703, C.R.S., the following statutory appropriations, or so much thereof as may be necessary, are made in order to implement House Bill 10-1277, enacted in 2010:

(a) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2010, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of eighty-three thousand eight hundred sixty-one dollars ($83,861).

(b) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2011, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand fourteen dollars ($28,014).

(c) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of four thousand four hundred eighty-two dollars ($4,482).

(2) This section is repealed, effective July 1, 2013.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (HB 10-1277), ch. 262, p. 1191, § 4, effective July 1.

17-18-107. Appropriation to comply with section 2-2-703 - SB 10-128 - repeal.

(1) Pursuant to section 2-2-703, C.R.S., the following statutory appropriations, or so much thereof as may be necessary, are made in order to implement Senate Bill 10-128, enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-seventh general assembly:

(a) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated from the capital construction fund created in section 24-75-302, C.R.S., to the corrections expansion reserve fund created in section 17-1-116, the sum of eighty-three thousand eight hundred sixty-one dollars ($83,861).

(b) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2013, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department of corrections, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand fourteen dollars ($28,014).

(c) For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2014, in addition to any other appropriation, there is hereby appropriated to the department of corrections, out of any moneys in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of four thousand four hundred eighty-two dollars ($4,482).

(2) This section is repealed, effective July 1, 2015.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (SB 10-128), ch. 415, p. 2048, § 10, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the designation of correctional facilities and authorization for the construction thereof, see sections 1 and 2 of chapter 120, Session Laws of Colorado 1990.

ARTICLE 19

Correctional Facilities - Visitors and Employees

Editor's note: (1) Prior to the repeal and reenactment of this title in 1977, the substantive provisions of this article were contained in §§ 27-2-109 and 27-2-110.

(2) For additional historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor's note at the beginning of this title.

17-19-101. Visitors at correctional facilities.

17-19-102. Employees of correctional facilities.

17-19-101. Visitors at correctional facilities. (1) Any person who wishes to enter a correctional facility shall be asked, prior to entering the facility, to sign a consent form in which the visitor shall give his consent to be stopped and searched by a person of the same sex and to have his vehicle, if any, searched without probable cause while in the correctional facility. Said form shall be as promulgated by the executive director with the advice of the attorney general. A person who refuses to sign said form shall not be admitted to a correctional facility.

(2) At each entrance to a correctional facility, the executive director shall cause to be displayed at all times in a prominent place a sign in English and in Spanish with a minimum height of two feet and a minimum width of three feet and with each letter to be a minimum of two inches in height, which shall read as follows:

NOTICE

ANY PERSON WHO WISHES TO ENTER THIS CORRECTIONAL FACILITY SHALL BE ASKED, PRIOR TO ENTERING THE FACILITY, TO SIGN A CONSENT FORM IN WHICH SAID PERSON SHALL GIVE HIS CONSENT TO BE STOPPED AND SEARCHED BY A PERSON OF THE SAME SEX AND TO HAVE HIS VEHICLE, IF ANY, SEARCHED WITHOUT PROBABLE CAUSE WHILE IN THE CORRECTIONAL FACILITY. ANY PERSON WHO REFUSES TO SIGN SAID FORM SHALL NOT BE ADMITTED TO THIS CORRECTIONAL FACILITY.

(3) "Correctional facility", as used in this section, means any facility under the supervision of the department in which persons are or may be lawfully held in custody as a result of conviction of a crime.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 917, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-2-109 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For visitors at the state penitentiary, see § 17-20-124.

ANNOTATION

Searches of prison visitors outside of the correctional facility on less than probable cause are unlawful. The clear language of this section, confining searches of prison visitors to the correctional facility, acknowledges the justification for allowing such searches on less than probable cause, which is the need to prevent the introduction of contraband and weapons into the prison rather than to detect evidence of a crime. People v. Lingo, 806 P.2d 949 (Colo. 1991).

Strip search exceeded the scope of the defendant's consent under this section where the defendant was arrested at the correctional facility, then removed from the facility to the sheriff's office where the strip search was conducted. People v. Lingo, 806 P.2d 949 (Colo. 1991).
As to searches of visitors as condition of entering penitentiary, see People v. Thompson, 185 Colo. 208, 523 P.2d 128 (1974) (decided under repealed § 27-20-124).

17-19-102. Employees of correctional facilities. Any person who wishes to become or to continue as an employee, including but not limited to contract employees and volunteers, of a correctional facility, as defined in section 17-19-101 (3), shall sign, as a condition of his or her employment or of volunteering, a consent form in which the employee or volunteer shall give his or her consent to be stopped and searched without probable cause by a person of the same sex while engaged in the performance of his or her duties within or around the correctional facility. Said form shall be as promulgated by the executive director with the advice of the attorney general.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 917, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 843, § 33, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-2-110 as it existed prior to 1977.

ARTICLE 20

Correctional Facilities

Editor's note: (1) Prior to the repeal and reenactment of this title in 1977, the substantive provisions of this article were contained in article 20 of title 27.
(2) For additional historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor's note at the beginning of this title.

Law reviews: For article, "Civil Rights", which discusses Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with prisoners' rights, see 61 Den. L.J. 182 (1984).

17-20-101.	State institutions.		duct. (Repealed)
17-20-102.	Administration of correctional facilities - wardens - reports.	17-20-105.	Trusty prisoners - allowance. (Repealed)
17-20-103.	Wardens and others - conservators of peace.	17-20-106.	Forfeiture of good time. (Repealed)
17-20-104.	Reduced time for good con-	17-20-107.	Good time credit allowable. (Repealed)

17-20-108.	Credits forfeited upon misbehavior. (Repealed)	17-20-117.	Labor of inmates.
17-20-109.	Sections affect only certain prisoners. (Repealed)	17-20-118.	Computation of time. (Repealed)
17-20-110.	Forfeiture for violation of rules. (Repealed)	17-20-119.	Discharge - clothes, money, transportation. (Repealed)
17-20-111.	One continuous sentence. (Repealed)	17-20-120.	Convict to leave county. (Repealed)
17-20-112.	Wardens shall record infractions.	17-20-121.	Failure to observe conditions - penalty. (Repealed)
17-20-113.	Behavior certificate - citizenship. (Repealed)	17-20-122.	Justification of officer.
17-20-114.	Federal prisoners - others. (Repealed)	17-20-123.	Insurrection - duty of citizens.
17-20-114.5.	Restriction of privileges in correctional facilities - restriction of privileges because of lawsuit filed without justification.	17-20-124.	Visitors at correctional facilities.
17-20-115.	Persons to perform labor.	17-20-125.	Revolving fund. (Repealed)
17-20-116.	County or municipal roadwork. (Repealed)	17-20-126.	Correctional facilities for women. (Repealed)
		17-20-127.	Canteen, vending machine, and library fund created - receipts - disbursements. (Repealed)
		17-20-128.	State authorized to receive Fort Lyon property - repeal. (Repealed)

17-20-101. State institutions. All correctional facilities under the supervision of the executive director, wherever located, shall be maintained as state institutions.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 917, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 690, § 34, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 49, § 1, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-20-101 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

The reformatory and penitentiary are creatures of the constitution, not of the general assembly, and legislative acts concerning them must be construed accordingly. Hessick v. Moynihan, 83 Colo. 43, 262 P. 907 (1927) (decided under repealed § 27-20-101).

17-20-102. Administration of correctional facilities - wardens - reports. (1) The organization and administration of all correctional facilities under the supervision of the executive director shall be the responsibility of such executive director.

(2) (Deleted by amendment, L. 93, p. 49, § 2, effective July 1, 1993.)

(3) The wardens of correctional facilities shall report to such persons as the executive director designates at such times and on such matters as the executive director may require. Publications of all correctional facilities under the supervision of the executive director that are intended to be circulated in quantity outside such facilities are subject to the approval and control of the executive director or the executive director's designee.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 917, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 690, § 35, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 49, § 2, effective July 1. L. 94: (3) amended, p. 603, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2000: (3) amended, p. 843, § 34, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-20-102 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-103. Wardens and others - conservators of peace. The wardens of all correctional facilities under the supervision of the executive director and the staff of such correctional facilities shall be conservators of the peace. As such they shall have the power to arrest or cause to be arrested, with or without process, upon any grounds owned or leased by this state and used by such correctional facilities, any person who breaks the peace, has an outstanding arrest warrant, or is found upon said grounds violating any criminal law of this state and to turn such person over to local law enforcement for detainment and disposition. Local law enforcement authorities are obligated to respond at the facilities' request to carry out the provisions of this section.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 918, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 690, § 36, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 50, § 3, effective July 1. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 603, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 843, § 35, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-20-103 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For authority of a peace officer to make an arrest, see part 1 of article 3 of title 16; for use of physical force by an authorized official of a jail, prison, or correctional institution, see § 18-1-703(1)(b).

ANNOTATION

Guard's authority does not include engaging in undercover activities. A penitentiary guard, accused of aiding an escape, whose theory of the case is that he was attempting to apprehend an escaped criminal by using undercover techniques, is not entitled to a jury instruction on the affirmative defense of execution of public duty when his authority to make an arrest is limited to penitentiary grounds and there is no evidence he had any authorization to engage in undercover activities. People v. Roberts, 43 Colo. App. 100, 601 P.2d 654 (1979).

Applied in People v. Scott, 41 Colo. App. 66, 583 P.2d 939 (1978).

17-20-104. Reduced time for good conduct. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 918, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 691, § 37, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 515, § 1, effective March 16; entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-104 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-105. Trusty prisoners - allowance. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 918, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 691, § 38, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 515, § 1, effective March 16; entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-105 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-106. Forfeiture of good time. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 918, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 691, § 39, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 515, § 1, effective March 16; entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-106 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-107. Good time credit allowable. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 919, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (1), (2), IP (3), and (4) amended, p. 692, § 40, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-107 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-108. Credits forfeited upon misbehavior. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 920, § 10, effective August 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-108 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-109. Sections affect only certain prisoners. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 920, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 693, § 41, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 515, § 1, effective March 16; entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-109 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-110. Forfeiture for violation of rules. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 920, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 693, § 42, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 515, § 1, effective March 16; entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-110 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-111. One continuous sentence. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 920, § 10, effective August 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-111 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-112. Wardens shall record infractions. It is the duty of the wardens to keep a record of all infractions of the prison rules and regulations, as prescribed by the department.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 920, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 693, § 43, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 844, § 36, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-20-112 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-113. Behavior certificate - citizenship. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 920, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 693, § 44, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section repealed, p. 50, § 4, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-113 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-114. Federal prisoners - others. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 920, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 693, § 45, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section repealed, p. 50, § 5, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-114 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-114.5. Restriction of privileges in correctional facilities - restriction of privileges because of lawsuit filed without justification. (1) Any person convicted of a crime and confined in any state correctional facility listed in section 17-1-104.3 is not entitled to any privileges that may be made available by the department. If any such person is required by the department to perform any available labor, participate in any available educational program or work program, undergo any available counseling, or any one or a combination of the foregoing and such person does not perform the labor, participate in the program, undergo the counseling, or do any one or a combination of the foregoing as required by the department, the department shall deny specified privileges to such person. The privileges that the department shall deny to such person include, but are not limited to, television, radios, entertainment systems, and access to snacks. If the department denies television privileges, it may allow a person to watch television for educational purposes, including public television broadcasts transmitted to or available to the facility. A person who is physically unable to perform labor, participate in an educational program or work program, or undergo counseling may be allowed the privileges specified in this subsection (1). Nothing in this subsection (1) shall be construed to grant as a right any such labor, program, or counseling or any privileges listed in this subsection (1).

(2) (a) If any person is convicted of a crime and confined in any state correctional facility listed in section 17-1-104.3 or in any facility that houses adult offenders and such person files a lawsuit against the state of Colorado or against any state government official, officer, employee, or agent, the department or its agent having custody of the person shall deny specified privileges to such person if, upon the motion of any party or the court itself, a state or federal court finds that the action, or any part thereof, lacked substantial justification, was baseless, or was malicious or that the action, or any part thereof, was interposed for harassment. As used in this subsection (2), "lacked substantial justification" has the same meaning as that provided for such term in section 13-17-102 (4), C.R.S.

(b) The privileges denied to a person pursuant to the provisions of this subsection (2) include, but are not limited to, the privileges described in subsection (1) of this section. The department or its agent having custody of the person shall deny the privileges to the person for a period not to exceed one hundred twenty days for any such lawsuit.

(c) The department or its agent having custody of the person may not deny privileges to a person pursuant to the provisions of this subsection (2) if the court determines the lawsuit was asserted by the person in a good faith attempt to establish a new theory of law in Colorado.

(d) The department or its agent having custody of the person may determine not to deny privileges to a person pursuant to the provisions of this subsection (2) if, after filing the lawsuit, a voluntary dismissal of the action is filed within a reasonable time after the person filing the dismissal knew, or reasonably should have known, that he or she would not prevail in the action.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 1407, § 1, effective July 1. L. 95: Entire section amended, p. 300, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1) amended, p. 844, § 37, effective May 24.

17-20-115. Persons to perform labor. All persons convicted of any crime and confined in any state correctional facilities under the laws of this state, except such as are precluded by the terms of the judgment of conviction, shall perform labor under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the department.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 921, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 694, § 46, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 50, § 6, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-20-115 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Ramos v. Lamm, 485 F. Supp. 122 (D. Colo. 1979).

17-20-116. County or municipal roadwork. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 921, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 694, § 47, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 51, § 7, effective July 1. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 603, § 7, effective July 1. L. 95: Entire section repealed, p. 875, § 8, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-116 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-117. Labor of inmates. Every able-bodied inmate shall be put to and kept at the work most suitable to such inmate's capacity and most advantageous to the people of this state. Inmates who work in the department shall not be entitled to any right, benefit, or privilege applicable to employees of the state of Colorado.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 921, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 694, § 48, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 51, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 844, § 38, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-20-117 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For correctional industries, see article 24 of this title.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment on State v. Estate of Burnell (165 Colo. 205, 439 P.2d 38 (1969)), see 45 Den. L. J. 788 (1968).

Annotator's note. Since § 17-20-117 is similar to repealed § 27-20-117, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

The costs of maintaining and caring for those in the various institutions of the state, be they penal or medical, are recoverable. Only the manner of recovering the costs differ; able-bodied convicts are put to work, and the estates of the mentally deficient or criminally insane in public institutions are charged with costs of care. State v. Estate of Burnell, 165 Colo. 205, 439 P.2d 38, appeal dismissed per curiam, 393 U.S. 13, 89 S. Ct. 46, 21 L. Ed.2d 13, reh'g denied, 393 U.S. 992, 89 S. Ct. 441, 21 L. Ed.2d 458 (1968).

This legislative classification is reasonable. In making the distinction between the method of recovering the costs of confining and maintaining convicted criminals and of caring for and treating the criminally insane, the legislative difference in class is not unreasonable. The general assembly has given recognition to the fact that the criminally insane persons are ill and that many usually cannot be put to profitable work. State v. Estate of Burnell, 165 Colo. 205, 439 P.2d 38, appeal dismissed per curiam, 393 U.S. 13, 89 S. Ct. 46, 21 L. Ed.2d 13, reh'g denied, 393 U.S. 992, 89 S. Ct. 441, 21 L. Ed.2d 458 (1968).

Thus, prisoners are required to perform labor and services for which they are paid after deducting an amount sufficient to pay the cost of maintenance of the convicts. In re Estate of Buzzelle v. Colo. State Hosp., 176 Colo. 554, 491 P.2d 1369 (1971).

Statute excludes inmates from workmen's compensation coverage. Orr v. Indus. Comm'n, 691 P.2d 1145 (Colo. App. 1984) (decided prior to enactment of § 8-52-104.5), aff'd on other grounds, 716 P.2d 1106 (Colo. 1986).

Applied in Ramos v. Lamm, 485 F. Supp. 122 (D. Colo. 1979).

17-20-118. Computation of time. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 921, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 694, § 49, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-118 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-119. Discharge - clothes, money, transportation. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 921, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 695, § 50, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-119 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-120. Convict to leave county. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 922, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 695, § 51, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-120 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-121. Failure to observe conditions - penalty. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 922, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 696, § 52, effective July 1. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 524, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-121 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-122. Justification of officer. If an inmate sentenced to any state correctional facility resists the authority of any officer or refuses to obey any officer's lawful commands, it is the duty of such officer immediately to enforce obedience by the use of such weapons or other aid as may be effectual. If in so doing any inmate thus resisting is wounded or killed by such officer or such officer's assistants, such use of force is justified and any officer using such force shall be held guiltless; but such officer shall not be excused for using greater force than the emergency of the case demands.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 922, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 696, § 53, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 51, § 9, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-20-122 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For the use of physical force by an authorized official of a jail, prison, or correctional institution, see § 18-1-703 (1)(b); for use of force in preventing escape from a detention facility, see § 18-1-707 (8).

17-20-123. Insurrection - duty of citizens. It is the duty of all the officers and other citizens of the state, by every means in their power, to suppress any insurrection among the inmates sentenced to any correctional facilities under the supervision of the executive director and to prevent the escape or rescue of any such inmate therefrom, or from any other legal confinement, or from any person in whose legal custody such inmate may be. If, in so doing or in arresting any inmate who may have escaped, such officer or other person wounds or kills such inmate or other person aiding or assisting such inmate, such officer or other person shall be justified and held guiltless; but such officer or other person shall not be excused for using greater force than the emergency of the case demands.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 922, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 696, § 54, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 51, § 10, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-20-123 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For authority of a peace officer to enlist the services of a private citizen and the liability of said person in performing such service, see § 16-3-202; for authority of sheriffs to command aid, see § 30-10-516.

17-20-124. Visitors at correctional facilities. The following persons are authorized to visit any correctional facilities under the supervision of the executive director at pleasure: The governor and the judges of the supreme court, court of appeals, and district courts. No other persons shall be permitted to go within a correctional facility where inmates are confined, except as otherwise provided under prison rules or by special permission of the warden.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 922, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 696, § 55, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 52, § 11, effective July 1. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 604, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 844, § 39, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-20-124 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For visitors at correctional facilities, see § 17-19-101.

ANNOTATION

For searches of visitors as condition for entering penitentiary, see People v. Thompson, 185 Colo. 208, 523 P.2d 128 (1974) (decided under repealed § 27-20-124).

17-20-125. Revolving fund. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 923, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 696, § 56, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section repealed, p. 52, § 12, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-20-125 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-20-126. Correctional facilities for women. (Repealed)

Source: L. 93: Entire section added, p. 52, § 13, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 845, § 40, effective May 24.

17-20-127. Canteen, vending machine, and library fund created - receipts - disbursements. (Repealed)

Source: L. 93: Entire section added, p. 52, § 13, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 845, § 41, effective May 24. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 57, § 4, effective July 1.

Cross references: For current provisions concerning the canteen, vending machine, and library account, see § 17-24-126.

17-20-128. State authorized to receive Fort Lyon property - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 497, § 2, effective May 3. L. 2011: (3) added by revision, (SB 11-214), ch. 147, pp. 512, 513, §§ 3, 4.

Editor's note: Subsection (3) provided for the repeal of this section, effective March 1, 2012. (See L. 2011, pp. 512, 513.)

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2001 act enacting this section, see section 1 of chapter 155, Session Laws of Colorado 2001.

ARTICLE 21

Women's Correctional Institution

17-21-101 and 17-21-102. (Repealed)

Source: L. 93: Entire article repealed, p. 55, § 22, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) The provisions of this article were similar to article 21 of title 27 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) This title was repealed and reenacted in 1977, and this article was subsequently repealed in 1993. For amendments to this article prior to its repeal in 1993, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume and the editor's note following the title heading.

ARTICLE 22

Reformatory

17-22-101 to 17-22-110. (Repealed)

Source: L. 93: Entire article repealed, p. 55, § 22, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) The provisions of this article were similar to article 22 of title 27 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) This title was repealed and reenacted in 1977, and this article was subsequently repealed in 1993. For amendments to this article prior to its repeal in 1993, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume and the editor's note following the title heading.

ARTICLE 22.5

Inmate and Parole Time Computation

Editor's note: This article was added in 1979. This article was repealed and reenacted in 1984, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For amendments to this article prior to 1984, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume. Former C.R.S. section numbers are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated.

PART 1

APPLICABILITY

- 17-22.5-101. One continuous sentence.
- 17-22.5-102. Custody of department.

- 17-22.5-102.5. Purpose of parole.
- 17-22.5-103. Computation of time.
- 17-22.5-104. Parole - regulations.
- 17-22.5-105. Applicability of part.
- 17-22.5-106. Right to attend parole hearings
- right to notification of pa-

- 17-22.5-107.

role hearings. (Repealed)

Administrative release and re-vocation guidelines - crea-tion.
- 17-22.5-304.

Part affects only certain in-mates.

17-22.5-305.

Eligibility for other statutory provisions.

17-22.5-306.

Transfer of functions.

PART 2

OFFENDERS SENTENCED FOR CRIMES COMMITTED PRIOR TO JULY 1, 1979

- 17-22.5-201.

Good time credit allowable.
- 17-22.5-202.

Ticket to leave - discharge - clothes, money, transporta-tion.
- 17-22.5-203.

Time of parole not considered when inmate is reincarcerated.

PART 3

OFFENDERS SENTENCED FOR CRIMES COMMITTED ON OR AFTER JULY 1, 1979

- 17-22.5-301.

Good time.
- 17-22.5-302.

Earned time.
- 17-22.5-303.

Parole.
- 17-22.5-303.3.

Violent offenders - parole.
- 17-22.5-303.5.

Parole guidelines. (Repealed)

PART 4

PAROLE ELIGIBILITY AND DISCHARGE FROM CUSTODY

- 17-22.5-401.

Legislative declaration.
- 17-22.5-402.

Discharge from custody.
- 17-22.5-403.

Parole eligibility.
- 17-22.5-403.5.

Special needs parole.
- 17-22.5-403.7.

Parole eligibility - class 1 fel-ony - juvenile offender con- victed as adult.
- 17-22.5-404.

Parole guidelines.
- 17-22.5-404.5.

Presumption of parole - drug offenders - repeal.
- 17-22.5-404.7.

Presumption of parole - nonvi- olent offenders with ICE detainees.
- 17-22.5-405.

Earned time - earned release time - achievement earned time.
- 17-22.5-406.

Applicability of part.
- 17-22.5-407.

Genetic testing as condition of parole - repeal. (Repealed)

PART 1

APPLICABILITY

17-22.5-101. One continuous sentence. For the purposes of this article, when any inmate has been committed under several convictions with separate sentences, the depart- ment shall construe all sentences as one continuous sentence.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 517, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Cumulative sentence valid. A cumulative sentence of imprisonment for a period not ex- ceeding in the aggregate the maximum term fixed for a single offense, imposed by a judg- ment rendered on a number of indictments for felony which have been consolidated for trial only, is valid. Parker v. People, 13 Colo. 155, 21 P. 1120 (1889) (decided under repealed § 27-20-111).

Under application of this section, consecu- tive sentences would be considered one sen- tence, and thus, a defendant would not be eli- gible for release on parole until completion of all incarceration. People v. Baker, 703 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1985) (decided under former § 17-20-111).

Multiple sentences may be imposed to run as one continuous sentence with a single pe- riod of mandatory parole where defendant is sentenced under § 18-1.3-401 (1)(a)(V)(E). People v. Starcher, 107 P.3d 1127 (Colo. App. 2004).

Department of corrections correctly con- strued separate consecutive sentences as one continuous sentence for purposes of deter- mining parole eligibility. McKnight v. Riveland, 728 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1986).

For purposes of establishing a parole eli- gibility date, when an inmate has been convicted of several offenses with separate sentences, the department of corrections “shall construe all sentences as one continuous sentence.” People v. Santisteven, 868 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1993).

Department of corrections’ policy of apply- ing a single system of credits to a composite “governing sentence” created for each inmate by considering all of the inmate’s sentences together to arrive at a minimum governing sentence and a maximum governing sentence is reasonable and contravenes no legislative or constitutional rights or policies. Price v. Mills, 728 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1986).

The courts have no jurisdiction to fix parole eligibility, which is the responsibility of the department of corrections, and any attempt to do so is an illegal attempt to circumvent legislative dictates. People v. Anaya, 894 P.2d 28 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in People v. Broga, 750 P.2d 59 (Colo. 1988).

17-22.5-102. Custody of department. When any person is sentenced to any correctional facility, that person shall be deemed to be in the custody of the executive director or his designee and shall begin serving his sentence on the date of sentencing.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 517, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

This section does not require a Colorado sentence that is imposed to run consecutively to an out-of-state sentence to begin to run on the date the Colorado sentence is imposed. It simply clarifies a defendant's custodial status after sentencing when the defendant remains in the county jail awaiting transfer to a correctional facility. People v. Mackey, 101 P.3d 1143 (Colo. App. 2004).

17-22.5-102.5. Purpose of parole. (1) The purposes of this article with respect to parole are:

(a) To punish a convicted offender by assuring that his length of incarceration and period of parole supervision are in relation to the seriousness of his offense;

(b) To assure the fair and consistent treatment of all convicted offenders by eliminating unjustified disparity in length of incarceration, and establishing fair procedures for the imposition of a period of parole supervision; and

(c) To promote rehabilitation by encouraging the successful reintegration of convicted offenders into the community while recognizing the need for public safety.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 648, § 2, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Sex offenders and nonsexual offenders are not similarly situated for purposes of equal protection analysis because they are subject to different parole laws. People v. Walker, 75 P.3d 722 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Fritschler, 87 P.3d 186 (Colo. App. 2003).

17-22.5-103. Computation of time. No inmate shall be discharged from the department until he has remained the full term for which he was sentenced, to be computed on and after the day on which he was received into the same and excluding any time the inmate may have been at large by reason of escape therefrom, unless he is pardoned or otherwise released by legal authority.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 517, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-22.5-103 is similar to repealed §§ 17-20-118 and 27-20-118, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included with the annotations to this section.

A prisoner must serve his sentence in the penitentiary or in such other penal institution to which he may be legally transferred or ordered confined. Lange v. Schauer, 184 Colo. 373, 520 P.2d 753 (1974).

When defendant was confined in the state hospital as a result of a totally unrelated transaction which occurred during a period of escape, he was not serving his sentence and was not entitled to credit for the time of such confinement. Lange v. Schauer, 184 Colo. 373, 520 P.2d 753 (1974).

Pretrial confinement time subtracted prior to computing credits. Pretrial confinement time should be subtracted from the sentence prior to computing good time and similar credits. Menchetti v. Wilson, 43 Colo. App. 19, 597 P.2d 1054 (1979); Vashone-Carusio v. Suthers, 29 P.3d 339 (Colo. App. 2001).

There was no statutory requirement that the good time and other credits of former §§ 17-20-104, 17-20-105, and 17-20-107, be credited against presentence confinement. Menchetti v. Wilson, 43 Colo. App. 19, 597 P.2d 1054 (1979).

Under former § 17-20-118 and § 16-11-308, a defendant is entitled to credit against a sentence for time spent in the county jail after sentencing. People v. Mack, 681 P.2d 949 (Colo. 1984).

17-22.5-104. Parole - regulations. (1) Any inmate in the custody of the department may be allowed to go on parole in accordance with section 17-22.5-403, subject to the provisions and conditions contained in this article and article 2 of this title.

(2) (a) No inmate imprisoned under a life sentence for a crime committed before July 1, 1977, shall be paroled until such inmate has served at least ten calendar years, and no application for parole shall be made or considered during such period of ten years.

(b) No inmate imprisoned under a life sentence for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1977, but before July 1, 1985, shall be paroled until such inmate has served at least twenty calendar years, and no application for parole shall be made or considered during such period of twenty years.

(c) No inmate imprisoned under a life sentence for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1985, shall be paroled until such inmate has served at least forty calendar years, and no application for parole shall be made or considered during such period of forty years.

(d) (I) No inmate imprisoned under a life sentence for a class 1 felony committed on or after July 1, 1990, shall be eligible for parole. No inmate imprisoned under a life sentence pursuant to section 16-13-101 (2), C.R.S., as it existed prior to July 1, 1993, for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1990, shall be paroled until such inmate has served at least forty calendar years, and no application for parole shall be made or considered during such period of forty years.

(II) This paragraph (d) shall not apply to any inmate sentenced pursuant to section 18-1.3-801 (2), C.R.S., for any crime committed on or after July 1, 1993, and any such inmate shall be eligible for parole in accordance with section 17-22.5-403.

(III) No inmate imprisoned under a life sentence pursuant to section 18-1.3-801 (2.5), C.R.S., and no inmate imprisoned under a life sentence pursuant to section 18-1.3-801 (1), C.R.S., on and after July 1, 1994, for a crime committed on and after that date, shall be paroled until such inmate has served at least forty calendar years, and no application for parole shall be made or considered during such period of forty years.

(IV) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (d), an inmate imprisoned under a life sentence for a class 1 felony committed on or after July 1, 2006, who was convicted as an adult following direct filing of an information or indictment in the district court pursuant to section 19-2-517, C.R.S., or transfer of proceedings to the district court pursuant to section 19-2-518, C.R.S., may be eligible for parole after the inmate has served at least forty calendar years. An application for parole shall not be made or considered during the period of forty calendar years.

(3) Repealed.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 518, § 1, effective July 1. L. 85: (2)(b) amended and (2)(c) added, p. 648, § 3, effective July 1; (2)(b) amended and (2)(c) added, p. 657, § 5, effective July 1. L. 87: (3) added, p. 654, § 9, effective July 1. L. 90: (1) amended, p. 954, § 24, effective July 1; (2)(d) added, p. 928, § 3, effective July 1. L. 91: (2)(d) amended, p. 404, § 4, effective June 6. L. 93: (1) and (2) amended, p. 1977, § 3, effective July 1. L. 94: (2)(d)(III) amended, p. 1472, § 2, effective May 31. L. 2002: (2)(d)(II) and (2)(d)(III) amended, p. 1501, § 162, effective October 1. L. 2006: (2)(d)(IV) added, p. 1052, § 3, effective May 25.

Editor's note: Subsection (3)(b) provided for the repeal of subsection (3), effective July 1, 1990. (See L. 87, p. 654.)

Cross references: (1) For other provisions concerning parole regulations, see § 17-2-207.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (2)(d)(II) and (2)(d)(III), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2006 act enacting subsection (2)(d)(IV), see section 1 of chapter 228, Session Laws of Colorado 2006.

ANNOTATION

Prisoners who received life sentences for crimes committed before July 1, 1977, are not entitled to parole consideration until ten calendar years have passed from the date the sentence was imposed. Derrick v. Colo. Bd. of Parole, 747 P.2d 696 (Colo. App. 1987).

Prisoners who received life sentences for crimes committed on or after July 1, 1977, but before July 1, 1985, are not entitled to parole consideration until 20 calendar years have passed from the date the sentence was imposed. People v. Payseno, 954 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1997).

Since § 16-11-802 (1)(b) (now § 18-1.3-1302 (1)(b)) has a later effective date, was later enacted, and operates in an ameliorative manner for criminal defendants, it controls, and that portion of § 18-1-105 (4) (now § 18-1.3-401 (4)) which provides for no possibility of parole for persons sentenced to life imprisonment following conviction for class 1 felony offenses occurring during the period from July 1, 1990, until September 19, 1991, is abrogated by this later enactment. Thus, § 16-11-103 (1)(b) (now § 18-1.3-1201 (1)(b)), as amended by House Bill 91S-1001, controls parole eligibility for convictions and sentences to life imprisonment based on class 1 felony offenses occurring on or after September 20, 1991, and § 16-11-802 (1)(b) (now § 18-1.3-1302 (1)(b)) controls parole eligibility for class 1 felony offenses occurring during the period from July 1, 1990 until September 19, 1991. People v. District Court, 834 P.2d 236 (Colo. 1992).

Prisoner's parole eligibility date is determined by the date on which the prisoner's felony was committed rather than the date of adjudication as an habitual offender. Collins v. Gunter, 834 P.2d 1283 (Colo. 1992).

This section does not mandate that a prisoner be deemed to have been paroled ten years after the date of sentencing for a crime committed prior to July 1, 1979, if a parole hearing is not held on that date. For crimes committed prior to July 1, 1979, parole of prisoners from correctional institutions is a matter within the sole discretion of the parole board. Martinez v. Furlong, 893 P.2d 130 (Colo. 1995).

Under the plain meaning of this section and § 16-11-306, prisoners are entitled to credit against their life sentences for time spent in presentence confinement. Inmate, therefore, was entitled to a parole eligibility date that was calculated to include 329 days of presentence confinement credit. Fields v. Suthers, 984 P.2d 1167 (Colo. 1999).

17-22.5-105. Applicability of part. The provisions of this part 1 shall apply to all offenders sentenced to the department.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 518, § 1, effective July 1.

17-22.5-106. Right to attend parole hearings - right to notification of parole hearings. (Repealed)

Source: L. 84: Entire section added, p. 503, § 5, effective July 1. L. 85: Entire section amended, p. 644, § 5, effective July 1. L. 94: Entire section repealed, p. 2598, § 10, effective June 3.

17-22.5-107. Administrative release and revocation guidelines - creation. (1) (a) The division of criminal justice in the department of public safety, in consultation with the state board of parole, shall develop an administrative release guideline instrument for use by the board in evaluating applications for parole.

(b) The administrative release guideline instrument shall be used to provide the state board of parole with consistent and comprehensive information relevant to the factors listed in section 17-22.5-404 (4) (a). The instrument shall include a matrix of advisory-release-decision recommendations for the different risk levels.

(2) (a) The department of corrections, in consultation with the state board of parole, shall develop administrative revocation guidelines for use by the board in evaluating complaints filed for parole revocation.

(b) The administrative revocation guidelines shall be used to provide the state board of parole with consistent and comprehensive information based on the factors identified in section 17-22.5-404 (5) (a). The guidelines shall include a matrix of advisory-decision recommendations for the different risk levels.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (HB 10-1374), ch. 261, p. 1180, § 3, effective May 25.

PART 2

OFFENDERS SENTENCED FOR CRIMES COMMITTED PRIOR TO JULY 1, 1979

17-22.5-201. Good time credit allowable. (1) Unless otherwise provided by law, every inmate confined in a correctional facility of the department who has committed no infraction of the rules or regulations of the department or the laws of the state and who performs in a faithful, diligent, industrious, orderly, and peaceable manner the work, duties, and tasks assigned to him to the satisfaction of the executive director or any of his designees may be allowed time credit reductions as follows: A deduction of two months in each of the first two years, four months in each of the next two years, and five months in each of the remaining years of his term of confinement, and correspondingly for any part of the year if such term of confinement is for less than a year. The mode of computing credits shall be as follows:

Number of yrs. of sentence	Good time that may be earned	Total good time that may be earned	Time to be served if full credits are earned and al- lowed
1st year	2 months	2 months	10 months
2nd year	2 months	4 months	1 year 8 months
3rd year	4 months	8 months	2 years 4 months
4th year	4 months	1 year	3 years
5th year	5 months	1 year 5 months	3 years 7 months
6th year	5 months	1 year 10 months	4 years 2 months
7th year	5 months	2 years 3 months	4 years 9 months
8th year	5 months	2 years 8 months	5 years 4 months
9th year	5 months	3 years 1 month	5 years 11 months
10th year	5 months	3 years 6 months	6 years 6 months

and so continuing through as many years as may be the time of confinement.

(2) To those inmates whom the executive director or any of his designees may designate as trustees and who conduct themselves in accordance with departmental rules and perform their work in a creditable manner, upon approval of the executive director or any of his designees, additional good time to that allowed in the table set forth in subsection (1) of this section, not to exceed ten days in any one calendar month, shall be credited upon the time remaining to be served, such credit to be allowed only upon the actual number of months served in each year in a correctional facility of the department.

(3) The executive director or any of his designees may grant to any inmate confined in a correctional facility additional good time credit to that allowed under subsections (1) and (2) of this section, not to exceed five days per month for each calendar year remaining to be served, for the following reasons:

(a) Meritorious service by an inmate; or

(b) Outstanding performance of assigned tasks in correctional industries.

(4) The executive director or any of his designees may restore to the credit of any inmate confined in a correctional facility all or any portion of good time credits which have been forfeited by the inmate as a result of any disciplinary action or provision of law.

(5) (a) The provisions of this section shall apply to a defendant whose sentence was stayed pending appeal prior to July 1, 1972, but who was confined pending disposition of the appeal. Such credit shall be against the maximum and minimum terms of his sentence for the entire period of confinement served while the stay of execution was in effect.

(b) A defendant whose sentence is stayed pending appeal after July 1, 1972, but who is confined pending disposition of the appeal is entitled to the credit provided by this section against the maximum and minimum terms of his sentence for the entire period of confinement served while the stay of execution was in effect.

(6) If any inmate assaults any keeper, guard, foreman, officer, inmate, or other person, or threatens or endangers the person or life of anyone, or violates or disregards any departmental rule or regulation, or neglects or refuses to do the work to which he is assigned, or is guilty of any misconduct, or violates any of the rules or regulations governing parole, the department may order the forfeiture of all time credits theretofore earned by or allowed to him before the commission of such offense under this section.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 518, § 1, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-20-107 as it existed prior to 1984.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Procedure in Colorado — A Summary and Recommendations for Improvement", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 221 (1950).

Annotator's note. Since § 17-22.5-201 is similar to repealed §§ 17-20-107 and 27-20-107, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutionality. Former § 17-20-107 did not deny equal protection of the laws even though it distinguished between those persons who remain in jail before conviction and those who make bail. People v. Turman, 659 P.2d 1368 (Colo. 1983).

Provisions of this section are limited by § 17-22.5-104 (2)(a), which provides that an inmate imprisoned under a life sentence committed before July 1, 1977, shall not be paroled until he has served at least ten calendar years, such period to commence on the day of sentencing, with no reduction for meritorious good time credits. People v. Goodwin, 768 P.2d 715 (Colo. App. 1988).

Good conduct credits are in the nature of a reward which are granted to the convict for his commendable behavior and are designed to induce similar conduct during the remainder of the convict's imprisonment. Alexander v. Wilson, 189 Colo. 321, 540 P.2d 331 (1975); Hall v. Zavaras, 916 P.2d 634 (Colo. App. 1996).

There is nothing in subsection (1) to indicate that good time is to be given only after each year is served. Rather, credits are to be projected for portions of each year of an inmate's sentence. Vashone-Caruso v. Suthers, 29 P.3d 339 (Colo. App. 2001).

But the plain language of subsection (2) governing trusty time, unlike the language of subsection (1), requires that trusty time be credited against actual time to be served. Vashone-Caruso v. Suthers, 29 P.3d 339 (Colo. App. 2001).

Term, "may," as used in subsection (3), grants discretion to the department of corrections in the grant or denial of good time credit. Thus, an inmate has no legitimate claim of entitlement to the award of meritorious good time credits. Hall v. Zavaras, 916 P.2d 634 (Colo. App. 1996).

The decision to withhold or condition good time credits does not constitute the imposition of additional punishment. Hall v. Zavaras, 916 P.2d 634 (Colo. App. 1996).

The allowance of credit for good conduct is not a right but rather a benefit conferred by the state, and for that reason, the conditions under which a sentence will be shortened are controlled entirely by statute. Alexander v. Wilson, 189 Colo. 321, 540 P.2d 331 (1975).

By its express terms, this statute is limited in application to state convicts incarcerated in the penitentiary of this state as the general assembly has not seen fit to extend the privilege of good conduct credit to prisoners for time spent in confinement outside of this state immediately prior to imprisonment in this state. Alexander v. Wilson, 189 Colo. 321, 540 P.2d 331 (1975).

It is the convict's behavior in the penitentiary of this state, not that of some other jurisdiction, which is being rewarded by this section. Alexander v. Wilson, 189 Colo. 321, 540 P.2d 331 (1975).

This statute plainly requires that an inmate serve a given month in confinement before trusty time credit for such month may be deducted from the remainder of the inmate's sentence. People v. Bastardo, 725 P.2d 88 (Colo. App. 1986); McLeod v. Brittain, 728 P.2d 1296 (Colo. 1986).

Good time credits not credited against pre-sentence confinement. Pretrial confinement time should be subtracted from the sentence prior to computing good time and similar credits. Menchetti v. Wilson, 43 Colo. App. 19, 597 P.2d 1054 (1979).

There is no statutory requirement that the good time and other credits of §§ 17-20-104, 17-20-105, and 17-20-107, be credited against presentence confinement. Menchetti v. Wilson, 43 Colo. App. 19, 597 P.2d 1054 (1979).

Aggregation of consecutive sentences is proper when calculating good time credit. People v. Broga, 750 P.2d 59 (Colo. 1988); Vashone-Carusio v. Suthers, 29 P.3d 339 (Colo. App. 2001).

17-22.5-202. Ticket to leave - discharge - clothes, money, transportation. (1) Ten days prior to the date on which any inmate confined in a correctional facility is entitled to be discharged or to be paroled from said correctional facility, the executive director or the executive director's designee shall give such inmate a ticket of leave therefrom, which shall entitle the inmate to depart from said correctional facility. The executive director or the executive director's designee shall at the same time furnish such inmate with suitable clothing and may furnish transportation, at the expense of the state, from the place at which said correctional facility is located to the place of the inmate's residence in Colorado, or any other place in Colorado. The executive director or the executive director's designee shall also furnish to any inmate being discharged, other than a parolee, one hundred dollars. The executive director or the executive director's designee may furnish any inmate being released on parole a reasonable sum of money not to exceed one hundred dollars; except that, if the executive director or the executive director's designee furnishes less than one hundred dollars, the difference between one hundred dollars and the amount furnished shall be credited to an account for such parolee. Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection (1), if the inmate has previously been returned to custody in a correctional facility after being paroled and before the completion of his or her period of parole and previously received such sum of money, the executive director or the executive director's designee shall not furnish a sum of money to the inmate. The executive director or the executive director's designee shall certify any amount so credited to the division of adult parole, and any such amount shall be distributed to an inmate in accordance with rules promulgated by the department.

(2) An inmate furnished with a ticket of leave for discharge shall be deemed to be fully discharged from the sentence upon which he was confined at the end of said ten-day period.

(3) Prior to the release from a correctional facility by discharge or parole of any person imprisoned for the commission of a child abuse offense which occurred within the state of Colorado, the executive director shall:

- (a) Notify the Colorado bureau of investigation of:
 - (I) The identity of the offender; and
 - (II) The anticipated release date of the offender; and
 - (III) The last-known home address of the offender; and
 - (IV) The parole address of the offender; and
 - (V) The results of a chemical test of a sex offender's biological substance sample in accordance with paragraph (b.5) of this subsection (3);

(b) Notify the local law enforcement agency having jurisdiction over the last-known home address of the offender of:

- (I) The identity of the offender; and
- (II) The last-known home address of the offender; and
- (III) The anticipated release date of the offender; and
- (IV) The parole address of the offender;

(b.5) (I) On and after July 1, 1994, direct appropriate personnel with the department of corrections to require any offender who is released from the custody of the department of corrections having completed serving a sentence for an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior or for which the factual basis involved unlawful sexual behavior as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., who is under their jurisdiction to sign a notice that informs the offender of the duty to register with local law enforcement agencies in accordance with the provisions of article 22 of title 16, C.R.S. The same persons, after obtaining a signed notice from an offender, shall notify local law enforcement agencies where the offender plans to reside of the offender's address within forty-eight hours after an offender has been placed on parole or probation when such an address is provided in the signed notice. Department of corrections personnel shall provide such notice no later than two days before the offender is to be released from the department of corrections.

(II) Repealed.

(III) The department may use reasonable force to obtain a biological substance sample in accordance with section 16-11-102.4, C.R.S. In addition, any person who refuses to comply with section 16-11-102.4, C.R.S., may be denied parole, or, if such person has been granted parole, such parole may be revoked.

(c) Notify the local law enforcement agency having jurisdiction over the parole address of the offender if the parole address is not the same as the last-known home address of the offender of:

(I) The identity of the offender; and

(II) The anticipated release date of the offender; and

(III) The last-known home address of the offender; and

(IV) The parole address of the offender;

(d) Notify the victim or victims individually or through those persons with whom they reside of:

(I) The identity of the offender; and

(II) The anticipated release date of the offender; and

(III) The last-known home address of the offender; and

(IV) The parole address of the offender;

(e) Check with the Colorado bureau of investigation to determine whether there are any outstanding warrants for the arrest of any person confined for the commission of a Colorado child abuse offense and about to be released from a correctional facility, and, if so, said release shall be into the custody of the law enforcement agency issuing the warrant.

(3.5) Repealed.

(4) (a) If the victim of a child abuse crime under section 18-6-401, C.R.S., or a relative of the victim, if the victim has died or is a minor or is incapacitated, or any person requested by the victim to receive notice has requested notice from the parole board of any parole proceedings pursuant to section 17-2-214, relative to the person convicted of said crime, the executive director shall not be required to provide duplicate notice under paragraph (d) of subsection (3) of this section.

(b) The notice to the victim pursuant to paragraph (d) of subsection (3) of this section shall be sent by the department to the last-known address in the possession of the department, and the victim of the crime or a relative of the victim, if the victim has died or is a minor or is incapacitated, or any person requested by the victim to receive notice has the duty to keep the department informed of his or her most current address.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 519, § 1, effective July 1. L. 87: (3) and (4) added, p. 688, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: (3)(b.5) added, p. 1739, § 2, effective July 1. L. 95: (3)(a) and (3)(b.5) amended, p. 880, § 18, effective May 24. L. 96: (3)(b.5)(I) and (3)(b.5)(II) amended, p. 1585, § 7, effective July 1. L. 97: (1) amended, p. 26, § 1, effective March 20. L. 2000: (1) amended, p. 852, § 61, effective May 24; (3.5) added, p. 1027, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2001: (3)(b.5)(II) amended, p. 957, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2002: (3)(a), (3)(b.5), and (3.5) amended, p. 1152, § 9, effective July 1; (3)(b.5)(I) and (3)(b.5)(II) amended, p. 1185, § 20, effective July 1. L. 2003: (3.5) amended, p. 1990, § 31, effective May 22. L. 2006: (3)(b.5)(II)(B) and (3.5)(b) added by revision, pp. 1689, 1693, §§ 7, 17. L. 2007: (3)(b.5)(III) amended, p. 2028, § 34, effective June 1.

Editor's note: (1) Amendments to subsection (3)(b.5) by Senate Bill 02-010 and Senate Bill 02-019 were harmonized.

(2) Subsection (3) (b.5) (II) (B) provided for the repeal of subsection (3) (b.5) (II), effective July 1, 2007. (See L. 2006, pp. 1689, 1693.)

(3) Subsection (3.5) (b) provided for the repeal of subsection (3.5), effective July 1, 2007. (See L. 2006, pp. 1689, 1693.)

17-22.5-203. Time of parole not considered when inmate is reincarcerated.

(1) The paroled inmate, upon an order of the state board of parole, may be returned to the custody of the department according to the terms of his original sentence, and, in computing the period of his confinement, the time between his release and his return to said custody shall not be considered any part of the term of his sentence.

(2) Parole shall not be construed in any sense to operate as a discharge of any inmate paroled under the provisions of law but simply a permit to any such inmate to go outside a correctional facility; and, if, while so at large, he behaves and conducts himself as not to incur his reincarceration, he shall be deemed to be still serving out the sentence imposed upon him by the court and shall be entitled to good time the same as if he had not been paroled, except as provided in subsection (3) of this section. If the said paroled inmate is returned to the department, he shall serve out his original sentence, as provided for in this part 2.

(3) No inmate released on parole on or after July 1, 1981, shall be entitled to a good time deduction from his sentence while on parole. In the event that his parole is revoked, he shall become eligible for any good time deductions authorized pursuant to this article on the date he is returned to the custody of the department.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 520, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-22.5-203 is similar to repealed §§ 17-2-205 and 17-2-206, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Time on parole is not considered to be time which applies against the sentence when the parolee is reincarcerated. Ferchaw v. Tinsley, 234 F. Supp. 922 (D. Colo. 1964).

Under this section where a paroled convict returns to prison for violation of his parole, the time between his release on parole and his return to prison shall not be taken to be any part of the time served in computing the period to be served under original sentence. Furlow v. Tinsley, 151 Colo. 280, 377 P.2d 132 (1962).

This statutory refusal to count time spent on parole when sentence is resumed does not violate federal due process. Firkins v. Colo., 434 F.2d 1232 (10th Cir. 1970).

And is not ground for release on habeas corpus. Where petition for habeas corpus contained allegations that petitioner should have been given credit for time served while on parole, his ground for release was improper as a matter of law. Minor v. Tinsley, 154 Colo. 249, 389 P.2d 850 (1964).

Statute prohibits awarding credits to parolee against his original sentences for time he was later incarcerated awaiting trial on subsequent criminal charges. Santisteven v. Johnson, 751 P.2d 621 (Colo. 1988).

Statute prohibits giving parolee credit for time served prior to his parole revocation, while being held on an unrelated charge. Wiedemer v. People, 784 P.2d 739 (Colo. 1989).

A parolee is subject to restrictions which are not applicable to other citizens. People v. Salvador, 189 Colo. 181, 539 P.2d 1273 (1975).

And he is not free from legal restraint by the penal authorities, but is constructively a prisoner of the state in the legal custody and under the control of the department of institutions. Schooley v. Wilson, 150 Colo. 483, 374 P.2d 353 (1962).

Release on parole in no way alters the fact that appellant is still under sentence; that he is in technical custody; and that he is under supervision. People v. Salvador, 189 Colo. 181, 539 P.2d 1273 (1975).

Parolee is not in custody of department, for purposes of this section, from time parole detainee is lodged against him, where parolee had been arrested and confined for acts of forgery and remained in physical custody of Denver authorities until his parole was revoked. Santisteven v. Johnson, 751 P.2d 621 (Colo. 1988).

Tolling of expiration of parole upon the filing of a violation complaint does not impose additional punishment on parole violator. Goetz v. Gunter, 830 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1992).

The phrase "return to said custody" refers to the time of parole revocation. Wiedemer v. People, 784 P.2d 739 (Colo. 1989).

When a parolee is returned to custody, the time between his or her release and return to custody is not considered part of the term of the sentence. "Return to custody" means the time at which parole is revoked, not the time at which the defendant is reincarcerated. People v. Norton, 49 P.3d 344 (Colo. App. 2001), rev'd on other grounds, 63 P.3d 339 (Colo. 2003).

The probationer has a substantially different status from that of the parolee. The imposition of sentence in his case has been suspended and thus unlike the parolee he is not serving a sentence while on probation. Hutchison v. Patterson, 267 F. Supp. 433 (D. Colo. 1967).

Parole does not operate as a discharge. A paroled prisoner who receives a ticket and leaves the prison as provided by this section is not discharged and can later be restrained as a parole violator. Johnson v. Tinsley, 157 Colo. 539, 404 P.2d 159 (1965) (decided under repealed § 27-20-120).

PART 3

OFFENDERS SENTENCED FOR CRIMES COMMITTED ON OR AFTER JULY 1, 1979

17-22.5-301. Good time. (1) Each person sentenced for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1979, but before July 1, 1981, whose conduct indicates that he has substantially observed all of the rules and regulations of the institution or facility in which he has been confined and has faithfully performed the duties assigned to him shall be entitled to a good time deduction of fifteen days a month from his sentence. The good time authorized by this section shall vest quarterly and may not be withdrawn once it has vested. No more than forty-five days of good time may be withheld by the department in any three-month period of sentence.

(2) Each person sentenced for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1981, but before July 1, 1985, shall be subject to all the provisions of this part 3; except that the good time authorized by this section shall vest semiannually and no more than ninety days of good time may be withheld by the department in any six-month period of sentence.

(3) Each person sentenced for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1985, shall be subject to all the provisions of this part 3; except that the good time authorized by this section shall not vest and may be withheld or deducted by the department.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be so construed as to prevent the department from withholding good time earnable in subsequent periods of sentence, but not yet earned, for conduct occurring in a given period of sentence.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 520, § 1, effective July 1. L. 85: (3) amended, p. 646, § 1, effective June 6. L. 98: (3) amended, p. 727, § 10, effective May 18.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-22.5-101 as it existed prior to 1984.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-22.5-301 is similar to former § 17-22.5-101, relevant cases construing that provision have been included with the annotations to this section. For other cases construing good time provisions, see the annotations under § 17-22.5-201.

There is no constitutional right to good-time credits for presentence confinement. People v. Cooper, 662 P.2d 478 (Colo. 1983); People v. Turman, 659 P.2d 1368 (Colo. 1983).

But former § 17-22.5-101 mandated good-time credit for presentence confinement. People v. Chavez, 659 P.2d 1381 (Colo. 1983).

The creation and distribution of good time credits is a matter committed to the authority of the legislature. A trial court order stipulating that credit be given an inmate for good time, presentence confinement, and time served in a community corrections program does not override the discretionary authority granted the department of corrections by the general assembly to withhold or withdraw such credits. Renneke v. Kautzky, 782 P.2d 343 (Colo. 1989).

For crimes committed on or after July 1, 1985, credit for good time is within discretionary authority of the department of corrections. Since the department of corrections may withhold or deduct good time credits, an inmate's maximum control date, as initially calculated by the department of corrections, is not necessarily the date upon which he is entitled to unconditional release. Renneke v. Kautzky, 782 P.2d 343 (Colo. 1989).

Presentence confinement. There is no statutory requirement that a sentencing court include in the mittimus information concerning a defen-defendant's eligibility for good time credit for time spent in presentence confinement. Although such information is often included in the mittimus, it is the department of corrections alone which ultimately determines whether a defendant receives and maintains good time credit. People v. White, 981 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1998).

Confinement in county jail. To the extent that a defendant's sentence is served by confinement in county jail, the good-time credit provisions of former § 17-22.5-101 applied. People v. Chavez, 659 P.2d 1381 (Colo. 1983); People v. Roedel, 701 P.2d 891 (Colo. App. 1985).

By statute, good time credit for presentence confinement exists only in the case of crimes committed on or after July 1, 1979. People v. Emig, 676 P.2d 1156 (Colo. 1984).

When defendant entitled to credits. Where the trial court accepts a stipulation stating that the defendant substantially observed all of the rules and regulations of the county jail and faithfully performed the duties assigned to him, he is entitled to good-time credits for his presentence confinement. People v. Hamilton, 662 P.2d 177 (Colo. 1983); People v. Roedel, 701 P.2d 891 (Colo. App. 1985).

Where presentence report reflects that defendant had met the other requirements for a "good time" credit for the period of his presentence confinement, this section requires that the department of corrections recognize such credit. People v. Chavez, 659 P.2d 1381 (Colo. 1983); People v. Johnson, 776 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 797 P.2d 1296 (Colo. 1990).

Use of word "shall" mandates good time deduction to each person whose conduct indicates that he or she has observed the rules and regulations of the facility in which such person is confined. People v. Galvin, 835 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992).

Because equal protection and due process claims were not clearly established rights at the time presentence good time credits of inmate were improperly withheld, individual defendants are qualifiedly immune from suit for compensatory damages. Griess v. State of Colo., 841 F.2d 1042 (10th Cir. 1988) (decided under former § 17-20-107).

An inmate who is incarcerated in the state prison system is eligible for two types of time deduction from his sentence. The first is "good time", under this section, which rewards the inmate who substantially observes the rules and regulations of the facility in which he is confined and who faithfully performs his assigned duties. The second is "earned time" pursuant to § 17-22.5-302 (1) which is provided if the inmate makes substantial progress in matters such as work and training. Bynum v. Kautzky, 784 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1989).

Aggregation of consecutive sentences is proper when calculating good time credit. People v. Broga, 750 P.2d 59 (Colo. 1988).

Good time and earned time credits do not constitute service of sentence and are only used to determine inmate's parole eligibility date. Thorson v. Dept. of Corr., 801 P.2d 540 (Colo. 1990); Myers v. Price, 842 P.2d 229 (Colo. 1992).

Although the legislature revised and relocated the good time, earned time, and parole provisions originally included in § 16-11-310, eventually moving them to their present location in the statutes in this section and §§ 17-22.5-302 and 17-22.5-303, there is nothing in those revisions which would indicate that § 16-11-310 was meant to render inoperative the provision in § 17-22.5-303 allowing reincarceration for a parole violation. Such an interpretation is unjustified since it would severely undermine the ability of the parole system to effect the successful reintegration of former inmates into the community while recognizing the need for public safety. Bynum v. Kautzky, 784 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1989).

The earned time and good time provisions of this section and § 17-22.5-302 do not preclude the reincarceration of an inmate for violation of his parole. These sections, together with § 16-11-310 (now repealed), were only intended to establish the mandatory date of release on parole. Thus, with respect to parole, the good time and earned time credits "vest" only for the purpose of determining parole eligibility, not for purposes of determining whether reincarceration is possible once a former inmate has violated his parole. Bynum v. Kautzky, 784 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1989); Williamson v. Jordan, 797 P.2d 744 (Colo. 1990); Jones v. Martinez, 799 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1990).

Section does not limit the place of confinement where good-time credit can be earned to only those facilities under the supervision of the department of corrections. Community corrections board also has the discretion to withhold or deduct against good-time credits. People v. Galvin, 835 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992).

Good time and earned time credits are not to be credited towards service of sentence but only toward eligibility for parole. Rather v. Suthers, 973 P.2d 1264 (Colo. 1999).

Person convicted of a sex offense is not entitled to mandatory parole; therefore, the accumulation of good time and earned time credits do not make person eligible for immediate release. Rather v. Suthers, 973 P.2d 1264 (Colo. 1999).

17-22.5-302. Earned time. (1) In addition to the good time authorized in section 17-22.5-301, earned time, not to exceed thirty days for every six months of incarceration, may be deducted from the inmate's sentence upon a demonstration to the department by the inmate that he has made substantial and consistent progress in each of the following categories:

- (a) Work and training, including attendance, promptness, performance, cooperation, care of materials, and safety;
- (b) Group living, including housekeeping, personal hygiene, cooperation, social adjustment, and double bunking;
- (c) Participation in counseling sessions and involvement in self-help groups;
- (d) Progress toward the goals and programs established by the Colorado diagnostic program.

(1.3) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section to the contrary, after his or her first ninety days in administrative segregation, a state inmate in administrative segregation shall be eligible to receive earned time if he or she meets the criteria required by this section or any modified criteria developed by the department to allow a state inmate to receive the maximum amount of earned time allowable for good behavior and participation in any programs available to the state inmate in administrative segregation.

(1.5) (a) In addition to the thirty days of earned time authorized in subsection (1) of this section, an inmate who makes positive progress, in accordance with performance standards, goals, and objectives established by the department, in the correctional education program established pursuant to section 17-32-105, shall receive earned time pursuant to section 17-22.5-405; except that, if, upon review of the inmate's performance record, the inmate has failed to satisfactorily perform in the literacy corrections or correctional education program, any earned time received pursuant to this paragraph (a) may be withdrawn as provided in subsection (4) of this section. For purposes of this paragraph (a), "positive progress", at a minimum, means that the person is attentive, responsive, and cooperative during the course of instruction and satisfactorily completes required work assignments equivalent to the courses and hours necessary for advancement at a rate of one grade level per calendar year in the school district where such inmate was last enrolled.

(b) Repealed.

(2) The department shall develop objective standards for measuring substantial and consistent progress in the categories listed in subsection (1) of this section. Such standards shall be applied in all evaluations of inmates for the earned time authorized in this section.

(3) For each inmate sentenced for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1979, but before July 1, 1985, the department shall review the performance record of the inmate and shall grant, consistent with the provisions of this section, an earned time deduction from the sentence imposed. Such review shall be conducted at least annually; except that, in the case of an inmate who has one year or less of his sentence remaining to be served, the review shall be conducted at least semiannually. The earned time deduction authorized by this section shall vest upon being granted and may not be withdrawn once it is granted.

(4) For each inmate sentenced for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1985, the department shall review the performance record of the inmate and may grant, withhold, withdraw, or restore, consistent with the provisions of this section, an earned time deduction from the sentence imposed. Such review shall be conducted as specified in subsection (3) of this section; except that the earned time deduction authorized by this subsection (4) shall not vest upon being granted and may be withdrawn once it is granted.

(5) For each inmate sentenced for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1987, the department shall not credit such inmate with more than one-half of his allowable earned time for any six-month period or portion thereof unless such inmate was employed or was participating in institutional training or treatment programs provided by the department or was participating in some combination of such employment, training, or treatment programs. This subsection (5) shall not apply to those inmates excused from such employment or programs for medical reasons.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 521, § 1, effective July 1. L. 87: (5) added, p. 654, § 10, effective March 27. L. 88: (1.5) added, p. 697, § 3, effective July 1. L. 90: (1.5)(a) amended and (1.5)(b) repealed, pp. 976, 977, §§ 3, 7, effective July 1. L. 91:

(1.5)(a) amended, p. 431, § 9, effective May 24. L. 92: (1.5)(a) amended, p. 2173, § 23, effective June 2. L. 2011: (1.3) added, (SB 11-176), ch. 289, p. 1343, § 3, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-22.5-102 as it existed prior to 1984.

Cross references: For the Colorado diagnostic program, see article 40 of this title.

ANNOTATION

An inmate does not have a vested right in earned time, so the inmate's punishment is not increased by withholding earned time from the inmate for not participating in sex offender treatment. Reeves v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 155 P.3d 648 (Colo. App. 2007).

The creation and distribution of credits to be applied against an inmate's sentence are matters committed to the authority of the legislature; trial court orders do not prevail over the letter and intent of statutory provisions adopted by the general assembly. Renneke v. Kautzky, 782 P.2d 343 (Colo. 1989).

For crimes committed on or after July 1, 1985, deductions for earned time are within discretionary authority of the department of corrections. Since the department of corrections may withhold, withdraw, or restore earned time deductions, an inmate's maximum control date, as initially calculated by the department of corrections, is not necessarily the date upon which he is entitled to unconditional release. Renneke v. Kautzky, 782 P.2d 343 (Colo. 1989).

Granting of earned time credit for educational programs under subsection (1.5) lies with the discretion of the department. To read "shall" in subsection (1.5) in a mandatory sense would create an absurd result. An inmate has no clear right to receive and department has no clear duty to grant earned time credit. Verrier v. Dept. of Corr., 77 P.3d 875 (Colo. App. 2003).

An inmate who is incarcerated in the state prison system is eligible for two types of time deduction from his sentence. The first is "good time" pursuant to § 17-22.5-301, which rewards the inmate who substantially observes the rules and regulations of the facility in which he is confined and who faithfully performs his assigned duties. The second is "earned time" under this section which is provided if the inmate makes substantial progress in matters such as work and training. Bynum v. Kautzky, 784 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1989).

Inmate not entitled to earned time for time spent in county jail because statutory requirements of this section were not met. People v. Alderman, 720 P.2d 1000 (Colo. App. 1986).

Good time and earned time credits do not constitute service of sentence and are only used to determine inmate's parole eligibility date. Thorson v. Dept. of Corr., 801 P.2d 540 (Colo. 1990); Myers v. Price, 842 P.2d 229 (Colo. 1992).

Subsection (3) of this section and §§ 16-11-310 (now repealed), 17-22.5-301 (2), and 17-22.5-303 (2) do not preclude the reincarceration of a person for violating his parole even though his time served, together with his good time and earned time credits accrued, equal or exceed the length of the sentence originally imposed. Bynum v. Kautzky, 784 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1989); Williamson v. Jordan, 797 P.2d 744 (Colo. 1990); Jones v. Martinez, 799 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1990).

The earned time and good time provisions of this section and § 17-22.5-301 do not preclude the reincarceration of an inmate for violation of his parole. These sections, together with § 16-11-310 (now repealed), were only intended to establish the mandatory date of release on parole. Thus, with respect to parole, the good time and earned time credits "vest" only for the purpose of determining parole eligibility, not for purposes of determining whether reincarceration is possible once a former inmate has violated his parole. Bynum v. Kautzky, 784 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1989); Williamson v. Jordan, 797 P.2d 744 (Colo. 1990); Jones v. Martinez, 799 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1990).

Inmates in administrative segregation do not meet certain criteria required for an award of earned time credits, even under the apparently mandatory subsection. Tempelman v. Gunter, 16 F.3d 367 (10th Cir. 1994).

17-22.5-303. Parole. (1) As to any person sentenced for a class 2, class 3, class 4, or class 5 felony committed on or after July 1, 1979, but before July 1, 1981, the division of adult parole shall provide a one-year period of parole supervision and assistance in securing employment, housing, and such other services as may effect the successful reintegration of such offender into the community while recognizing the need for public safety; except that the state board of parole may discharge an offender at any time during the year upon a determination that the offender has been sufficiently rehabilitated and reintegrated into society and can no longer benefit from parole supervision. The conditions of parole for any such person shall be established by the state board of parole prior to his release from incarceration. Upon a determination that the conditions of parole have been violated in any parole revocation proceeding, the state board of parole shall continue the parole in effect, modify the conditions of parole if circumstances then shown to exist require such modifications, or revoke the parole and order the return of the offender to the institution in which he was originally received for a period of not more than six months. For second and subsequent revocations of parole, the offender shall be reincarcerated; but in no event shall any such person spend more than one year under parole supervision and reincarceration as provided in this section. The good time deduction authorized by section 17-22.5-301 shall apply to periods of reincarceration provided for in this section.

(2) As to any person sentenced for a class 2, class 3, class 4, or class 5 felony committed on or after July 1, 1981, and before July 1, 1984, the division of adult parole shall provide a one-year period of parole supervision and assistance in securing employment, housing, and such other services as may effect the successful reintegration of such offender into the community while recognizing the need for public safety; except that the state board of parole may discharge an offender at any time during the year upon a determination that the offender has been sufficiently rehabilitated and reintegrated into society and can no longer benefit from parole supervision. The conditions of parole for any such person shall be subject to section 17-2-201 (5) (b) and (5) (c) prior to his or her release from incarceration; but in no event shall any such person whose initial parole has not been revoked spend more than one year under parole supervision, as provided in this section. Upon a determination that the conditions of parole have been violated in any such parole revocation proceeding, the state board of parole shall continue the parole in effect, modify the conditions of parole if circumstances then shown to exist require such modifications, or revoke the parole and order the return of the offender to the institution in which he or she was originally received for a period of not more than two years; but in no event shall any period of reincarceration, subsequent term of parole, and sentence actually served exceed the sentence imposed pursuant to section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S. The good time deduction authorized by section 17-22.5-301 shall apply to periods of reincarceration provided for in this section.

(3) The state board of parole, working in conjunction with the department, shall adopt risk assessment guidelines, based upon risk of violence to the general population, to be utilized for determining whether any person sentenced pursuant to the provisions of section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S., for committing a class 2, class 3, class 4, or class 5 felony committed on or after July 1, 1984, but before July 1, 1985, may be suitable for release on his or her parole eligibility date or shall be subject to extended parole of up to three years. Such guidelines shall include provisions which take into consideration the progress toward rehabilitation made by the individual as well as the necessity of guarding the welfare of the community.

(4) As to any person sentenced for a class 2, class 3, class 4, or class 5 felony committed on or after July 1, 1984, but before July 1, 1985, the division of adult parole shall either release an offender on his or her parole eligibility date, pursuant to the determination made by the state board of parole, or shall provide up to three years of parole for any offender who is determined by the state board of parole to present a high risk to the general population upon release from incarceration. For persons who are provided parole, the division of adult parole shall provide a period of up to three years of parole supervision and assistance in securing employment, housing, and such other services as may effect the successful reintegration of such offender into the community while recognizing the need for public safety. The conditions for parole for any such offender under this subsection (4) shall be established pursuant to section 17-2-201 (5) (b) and (5) (c) by the state board of parole prior to his or her release from incarceration. Upon a determination that the conditions of parole have been violated in a parole revocation proceeding, the state board of parole shall continue the parole in effect, modify the conditions of parole if circumstances then shown to exist require such modifications, or revoke the parole and order the return of the offender to the institution in which he or she was originally received for a period of not more than five years. In no event shall any period of reincarceration, subsequent term of parole, and sentence actually served exceed the sentence imposed pursuant to section 18-1.3-401,

C.R.S. The state board of parole may discharge an offender granted parole under this section at any time during the term of parole upon a determination that the offender has been sufficiently rehabilitated and reintegrated into society and can no longer benefit from parole supervision. The good time deduction authorized by section 17-22.5-301 shall apply to periods of reincarceration provided for in this section.

(5) Pursuant to section 17-2-201 (9) (a), an interview of an inmate who applies for parole, who was sentenced for an offense committed on or after July 1, 1979, may be conducted by one member of the parole board.

(6) Any person sentenced for a class 2, class 3, class 4, class 5, or class 6 felony committed on or after July 1, 1985, shall be eligible for parole after such person has served the sentence imposed less any time authorized for good time earned pursuant to section 17-22.5-301 and for earned time pursuant to section 17-22.5-302. Upon an application for parole, the state board of parole, working in conjunction with the department and using the guidelines established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404, shall determine whether or not to grant parole and, if granted, the length of the period of parole, which may be for a period of up to five years. If an application for parole is refused by the state board of parole, the state board shall reconsider within one year thereafter the granting of parole to such person and shall continue the reconsideration each year thereafter until such person is granted parole or until such person is discharged pursuant to law; except that, if the person applying for parole was convicted of any class 3 sexual offense described in part 4 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., a habitual criminal offense as defined in section 18-1.3-801 (2.5), C.R.S., or of any offense subject to the requirements of section 18-1.3-904, C.R.S., the board need only reconsider granting parole to such person once every three years, until the board grants such person parole or until such person is discharged pursuant to law, or if the person applying for parole was convicted of a class 1 or class 2 felony that constitutes a crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., the board need only reconsider granting parole to such person once every five years, until the board grants such person parole or until such person is discharged pursuant to law.

(7) For persons who are granted parole pursuant to subsection (6) of this section, the division of adult parole shall provide a period of up to five years of parole supervision and assistance in securing employment, housing, and such other services as may effect the successful reintegration of such offender into the community while recognizing the need for public safety. The conditions for parole for any such offender under this subsection (7) shall be established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404 by the state board of parole prior to such offender's release from incarceration. Upon a determination that the conditions of parole have been violated in a parole revocation proceeding, the state board of parole shall continue the parole in effect, modify the conditions of parole if circumstances then shown to exist require such modifications, which circumstances shall be set forth in writing, or revoke the parole and order the return of the offender to a place of confinement designated by the executive director for a period of not more than five years. In computing the period of reincarceration for an offender other than an offender sentenced for a nonviolent felony offense, as defined in section 17-22.5-405 (5), the time between the offender's release on parole and return to custody in Colorado for revocation of such parole shall not be considered to be any part of the term of the sentence. In no event shall any period of reincarceration and sentence actually served exceed the sentence imposed pursuant to section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S. The state board of parole may discharge an offender granted parole under this section at any time during the term of parole upon a determination that the offender has been sufficiently rehabilitated and reintegrated into society and can no longer benefit from parole supervision.

(8) The state board of parole shall consider the parole of a person whose parole is revoked either for a technical violation or based on a self-revocation at least once within one hundred eighty days after the revocation if the person's release date is more than nine months from the date of the person's revocation; except that a person whose parole is revoked based on a technical violation that involved the use of a weapon shall not be considered for parole for one year.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 521, § 1, effective July 1. L. 85: (3) and (4) amended and (6) and (7) added, p. 648, § 4, effective July 1; (5) added, p. 641, § 10, effective July 1. L. 87: (7) amended, p. 654, § 11, effective July 1. L. 90: (6) amended, p. 924, § 6, effective March 27. L. 92: (6) and (7) amended, p. 2173, § 24, effective June 2. L. 94: (6) amended, p. 2597, § 6, effective June 3. L. 95: (7) amended, p. 877, § 12, effective May 24. L. 2000: (1), (2), (4), and (7) amended, p. 853, § 62, effective May 24. L. 2002: (2), (3), (4), (6), and (7) amended, p. 1502, § 163, effective October 1. L. 2003: (6) amended, p. 812, § 1, effective July 1; (8) added, p. 2676, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2008: (7) amended, p. 1756, § 4, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-22.5-103 as it existed prior to 1984.

Cross references: (1) For parole revocation proceedings, see §§ 17-2-103 and 17-2-201; for the right to attend parole hearings, see § 17-2-214.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (2), (3), (4), (6), and (7), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

It is not a violation of the ex post facto clause found in article II section 11 of the Colorado Constitution to apply the amendment of this section which requires that parole time not be credited upon a second parole violation to a defendant who violates parole after the effective date of the amendment. Gasper v. Gunter, 851 P.2d 912 (Colo. 1993); People v. Gallegos, 975 P.2d 1135 (Colo. App. 1998).

1994 amendments to subsection (6) create only a speculative and attenuated risk of producing the prohibited effect of increasing the actual punishment for the covered crimes. These speculative effects are insufficient to establish a violation of the ex post facto prohibition. Funari v. Zavaras, 914 P.2d 508 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial courts do not have the authority to impose a period of parole as part of a sentence. Only the parole board has the authority to determine whether and for what period parole is appropriate. People v. Mendez, 897 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1995).

A defendant is not legally entitled to good time credit, even though he or she may become eligible for such credit. People v. McCreddie, 938 P.2d 528 (Colo. 1997).

For felonies committed on or after July 1, 1985, good time and earned time credits are within discretionary authority of the department of corrections. Since the department of corrections may withdraw good time and earned time credits, an inmate's maximum control date, as initially calculated by the department of corrections, is not necessarily the date upon which he is entitled to unconditional release. Renneke v. Kautzky, 782 P.2d 343 (Colo. 1989).

Only purpose of accumulation of good time credits is for determining parole eligibility date of inmates and such credits do not constitute service of sentence. People v. Swepston, 822 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1991); Myers v. Price, 842 P.2d 229 (Colo. 1992).

Parole violator reincarcerated for the lesser of two years or the remainder of sentence originally imposed. Subsection (2) provides that a parole violator may be returned to the institution in which he was originally received for a period of not more than two years, but in no event may the reincarceration and the subsequent term of parole and the sentence actually served exceed the sentence originally imposed. Thus, the parole board's imposition of a two-year term of reincarceration was improper. People v. Leedom, 781 P.2d 173 (Colo. App. 1989).

For purposes of a parole revocation, the term "sentence already served" in subsection (2) includes all previous periods of incarceration plus all previous periods of release on parole. People v. Browning, 809 P.2d 1086 (Colo. App. 1990).

Effect of parole violation on discretion to impose sentence to be served concurrently or consecutively. Even though a parolee could be reincarcerated after parole revocation for a maximum period of only six months, for the purposes of sentencing for a subsequent offense committed while on parole, the parolee was reincarcerated for the original offense. Therefore, the court sentencing for the subsequent offense had the discretion to impose the sentence to run consecutively to the period of reincarceration. People v. Lucero, 772 P.2d 58 (Colo. 1989).

Subsection (2) of this section and §§ 16-11-310 (now repealed), 17-22.5-301 (2), and 17-22.5-302 (3) do not preclude the reincarceration of a person for violating his parole even though his time served, together with his good time and earned time credits accrued, equal or exceed the length of the sentence originally imposed. Bynum v. Kautzky, 784 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1989); Williamson v. Jordan, 797 P.2d 744 (Colo. 1990); Jones v. Martinez, 799 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1990).

Although the legislature revised and relocated the good time, earned time, and parole provisions originally included § 16-11-310 (now repealed), eventually moving them to their present location in the statutes at §§ 17-22.5-301 to 17-22.5-303, there is nothing in those revisions which would indicate that § 16-11-310 was meant to render inoperative the provision in this section allowing reincarceration for a parole violation. Such an interpretation is unjustified since it would severely undermine the ability of the parole system to effect the successful reintegration of former inmates into the community while recognizing the need for public safety. Bynum v. Kautzky, 784 P.2d 735 (Colo. 1989).

Plain and clear language of this section requires that a parole violator not be reincarcerated for a period in excess of the balance of time to be served on such person's original sentence and that good time credits acquired during reincarceration be applied in a manner that will not so extend the balance of such person's original sentence. Anderson v. Kautzky, 786 P.2d 1082 (Colo. 1989).

Credits may not be carried forward. Good time and earned time credits received during original period of incarceration do not apply to period of reincarceration. Williamson v. Jordan, 797 P.2d 744 (Colo. App. 1990); Jones v. Martinez, 799 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1990).

Good time and earned time credits cannot be used to diminish defendant's sentence and accelerate release date. People v. Grenemyer, 827 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under section as it existed prior to its repeal in 1988).

It was foreseeable that § 16-11-310 would not be construed in such manner as to defeat the purpose or eliminate the requirement of parole. The possibility of reincarceration for violating conditions of parole necessarily rejects the concept of an incarcerated person meriting diminution of sentence by credits for good behavior prior to being released on a conditional basis. People v. Grenemyer, 827 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under section as it existed prior to its repeal in 1988); Fultz v. Embry, 158 F.3d 1101 (10th Cir. 1998).

Inmate who was eligible for mandatory parole under the longest of three concurrent sentences imposed upon him was entitled to be released on parole. Vaughn v. Gunter, 820 P.2d 659 (Colo. 1991).

Parole board has authority to impose parole on inmates who committed offenses between July 1, 1984, and July 1, 1985, pursuant to subsection (4) regardless of whether sentencing court imposed illegal sentence by imposing period of parole. People v. Swepston, 822 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1991).

In determining a defendant's parole date where consecutive sentences have been imposed and both the mandatory and discretionary parole statutes apply, the court should construe the consecutive sentences as one continuous sentence. The defendant's right to mandatory parole under the first conviction is nullified by his two subsequent discretionary parole convictions. Spoto v. Colo. State Dept. of Corr., 883 P.2d 11 (Colo. 1994); People v. Gallegos, 975 P.2d 1135 (Colo. App. 1998); Badger v. Suthers, 985 P.2d 1042 (Colo. 1999).

Department of corrections acted properly when it combined all of defendant's sentences, treating them as a continuous sentence, before the applicable parole date was determined. People v. Gallegos, 975 P.2d 1135 (Colo. App. 1998).

When a defendant is paroled under this section or under § 17-22.5-403, he must be reincarcerated for a parole violation under the same statute. People v. Gallegos, 975 P.2d 1135 (Colo. App. 1998).

17-22.5-303.3. Violent offenders - parole. (1) Any person sentenced for second degree murder, first degree assault, first degree kidnapping, unless the first degree kidnapping is a class 1 felony, first or second degree sexual assault, first degree arson, first degree burglary, or aggravated robbery, committed on or after July 1, 1987, who has previously been convicted of a crime of violence, shall be eligible for parole after he has served seventy-five percent of the sentence imposed less any time authorized for earned time pursuant to section 17-22.5-302. Thereafter, the provisions of section 17-22.5-303 (6) and (7) shall apply.

(2) Any person sentenced for any crime enumerated in subsection (1) of this section, who has twice previously been convicted for a crime of violence, shall be eligible for parole after he has served the sentence imposed less any time authorized for earned time pursuant to section 17-22.5-302. Thereafter, the provisions of section 17-22.5-303 (6) and (7) shall apply.

(3) The governor may grant parole to an offender to whom this section applies before such offender's parole eligibility date if, in the governor's opinion, extraordinary mitigating circumstances exist and such offender's release from institutional custody is compatible with the safety and welfare of society.

Source: L. 87: Entire section added, p. 655, § 12, effective July 1. L. 88: (1) amended, p. 1435, § 28, effective June 11.

ANNOTATION

Definition of "crime of violence" in § 16-11-309 applies in determining when a convicted person is eligible for parole under § 17-22.5-303.3 (1). Busch v. Gunter, 870 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1993).

A convicted person is eligible for parole after serving seventy-five percent of the person's sentence if previously convicted of a crime in which a deadly weapon was used, possessed, or threatened to be used. Busch v. Gunter, 870 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1993).

17-22.5-303.5. Parole guidelines. (Repealed)

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 650, § 5, effective July 1. L. 87: (1) amended and (5) to (7) added, p. 655, § 13, effective July 1. L. 88: (2)(a)(IX) amended and (2)(a)(XI) added, p. 697, § 4, effective July 1. L. 90: (1) amended, p. 925, § 7, effective March 27; (2)(a)(XII) added, p. 977, § 4, effective July 1. L. 91: Entire section repealed, p. 335, § 2, effective May 18.

17-22.5-304. Part affects only certain inmates. The good time provisions of this part 3 are effective July 1, 1979, and shall apply only to those persons convicted of crimes committed on or after said date. No person subject to the good time provisions of part 2 of this article shall be eligible for any of the provisions authorized by this part 3.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 523, § 1, effective July 1. L. 85: Entire section amended, p. 652, § 6, effective July 1; Entire section amended, p. 1372, § 51, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

This part 3 applies only to those persons convicted of crimes committed on or after July 1, 1979, which reflects a legislative decision that persons convicted of more than one offense may not receive double credits while serving sentences resulting from the circumstance that the offenses were committed both before and on or after July 1, 1979. Price v. Mills, 728 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1986).

17-22.5-305. Eligibility for other statutory provisions. (1) No person subject to the provisions of section 17-22.5-301 (1) shall be eligible for any of the time limit and vesting provisions of section 17-22.5-301 (2) or (3) or 17-22.5-302 (4).

(2) No person subject to the provisions of section 17-22.5-301 (2) shall be eligible for any of the time limit and vesting provisions of section 17-22.5-301 (1) or (3) or 17-22.5-302 (4).

(3) No person subject to the provisions of section 17-22.5-301 (3) shall be eligible for any of the time limit and vesting provisions of section 17-22.5-301 (1) or (2) or 17-22.5-302 (3).

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 523, § 1, effective July 1.

17-22.5-306. Transfer of functions. The executive director shall, on and after July 1, 1984, execute, administer, perform, and enforce the rights, powers, duties, functions, and obligations formerly vested in the state board of parole with respect to the earned time provisions of section 17-22.5-302. Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, the state board of parole shall carry out all of its other functions as if this section had not been enacted.

Source: L. 84: Entire article R&RE, p. 523, § 1, effective July 1.

PART 4

PAROLE ELIGIBILITY AND DISCHARGE FROM CUSTODY

Law reviews: For article, "1990 Criminal Law Legislative Update", see 19 Colo. Law. 2049 (1990).

17-22.5-401. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby declares that if any inmate does not demonstrate positive behavior during incarceration, such inmate should be required to serve out the full sentence imposed upon such inmate. If any inmate does demonstrate positive behavior during incarceration, such inmate should be considered for release from incarceration prior to the end of the full sentence imposed upon him. Therefore, the general assembly, in enacting this part 4, intends to provide standards whereby any inmate can earn a reduction of incarceration time and to provide incentives for inmates to demonstrate positive behavior during incarceration.

Source: L. 90: Entire part added, p. 946, § 19, effective June 7.

17-22.5-402. Discharge from custody. (1) No inmate shall be discharged from the department until he has remained the full term for which he was sentenced, to be computed on and after the date upon which the sentence becomes effective and excluding any time the inmate may have been at large by reason of escape therefrom, unless he is pardoned or otherwise released by legal authority.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, the full term for which an inmate is sentenced shall be reduced by any earned release time and earned time granted pursuant to section 17-22.5-405, except as provided in section 17-22.5-403 (3) and (3.5).

(3) This part 4 shall not apply to any offender to whom section 17-22.5-104 (2) (a), (2) (b), (2) (c), (2) (d) (I), (2) (d) (II), or (2) (d) (III) applies.

Source: L. 90: Entire part added, p. 947, § 19, effective June 7. L. 2004: (2) amended, p. 1741, § 2, effective June 4. L. 2006: (3) amended, p. 1053, § 4, effective May 25. L. 2009: (2) amended, (HB 09-1351), ch. 359, p. 1867, § 2, effective June 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2006 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 228, Session Laws of Colorado 2006.

ANNOTATION

An inmate is not entitled to unconditional release under this section when the inmate has a sufficient amount of good time and earned time credits, when combined with time served, to satisfy the inmate's sentence. The statutory scheme regarding eligibility for parole and discharge reflect the general assembly's intent that good time and earned time credits apply for the purpose of determining an inmate's eligibility for parole. Meyers v. Price, 842 P.2d 229 (Colo. 1992).

17-22.5-403. Parole eligibility. (1) Any person sentenced for a class 2, class 3, class 4, class 5, or class 6 felony, or any unclassified felony, shall be eligible for parole after such person has served fifty percent of the sentence imposed upon such person, less any time authorized for earned time granted pursuant to section 17-22.5-405. However, the date established by this subsection (1) upon which any person shall be eligible for parole may be extended by the executive director for misconduct during incarceration. The executive director shall promulgate rules and regulations concerning when and under what conditions any inmate's parole eligibility date may be extended. Such rules and regulations shall be promulgated in such a manner as to promote fairness and consistency in the treatment of all inmates.

(2) (a) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, any person convicted and sentenced for second degree murder, first degree assault, first degree kidnapping unless the first degree kidnapping is a class 1 felony, first or second degree sexual assault, first degree arson, first degree burglary, or aggravated robbery, committed on or after June 7, 1990, and before July 1, 2004, which person has previously been convicted of a crime which would have been a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., shall be eligible for parole after such person has served seventy-five percent of the sentence imposed upon such person, less any time authorized for earned time granted pursuant to section 17-22.5-405.

(b) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall not apply to persons sentenced pursuant to part 10 of article 1.3 of title 18, C.R.S.

(2.5) (a) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, any person convicted and sentenced for second degree murder, first degree assault, first degree kidnapping unless the first degree kidnapping is a class 1 felony, first degree arson, first degree burglary, or aggravated robbery, committed on or after July 1, 2004, shall be eligible for parole after such person has served seventy-five percent of the sentence imposed upon such person, less any time authorized for earned time granted pursuant to section 17-22.5-405.

(b) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2.5) shall only apply to:

(I) A person convicted and sentenced for a crime listed in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2.5) that is a class 2 or class 3 felony offense; or

(II) A person convicted and sentenced for a crime listed in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2.5) that is a class 4 or class 5 felony offense, which person has previously been convicted of a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S.

(3) Notwithstanding subsection (1) or (2) of this section, any person convicted and sentenced for any crime enumerated in subsection (2) of this section, committed on or after June 7, 1990, and before July 1, 2004, who has twice previously been convicted for a crime which would have been a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., shall be eligible for parole after such person has served seventy-five percent of the sentence served upon such person, at which time such person shall be referred by the department to the state board of parole which may place such person on parole for a period of time which does not exceed the time remaining on such person's original sentence. For offenses committed on or after July 1, 1993, such person shall be placed on parole for the period of time specified in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (V), C.R.S. Section 17-22.5-402 (2) shall not apply to any such offender.

(3.5) (a) Notwithstanding subsection (1) or (2.5) of this section, any person convicted and sentenced for any crime enumerated in subsection (2.5) of this section, committed on or after July 1, 2004, who has previously been convicted for a crime which would have been a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., shall be eligible for parole after such person has served seventy-five percent of the sentence served upon such person, at which time such person shall be referred by the department to the state board of parole which may place the person on parole for the period of time specified in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (V), C.R.S. Section 17-22.5-402 (2) shall not apply to any such offender.

(b) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (3.5) shall only apply to:

(I) A person convicted and sentenced for a crime listed in paragraph (a) of subsection (2.5) of this section that is a class 2 or class 3 felony offense; or

(II) A person convicted and sentenced for a crime listed in paragraph (a) of subsection (2.5) of this section that is a class 4 or class 5 felony offense, which person has twice previously been convicted of a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S.

(4) The governor may grant parole to an inmate to whom subsection (2) or (3) of this section applies prior to such inmate's parole eligibility date or discharge date if, in the governor's opinion, extraordinary mitigating circumstances exist and such inmate's release from institutional custody is compatible with the safety and welfare of society.

(5) For any offender who is incarcerated for an offense committed prior to July 1, 1993, upon application for parole, the state board of parole, working in conjunction with the department and using the guidelines established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404, shall determine whether or not to grant parole and, if granted, the length of the period of parole. The state board of parole may set the length of the period of parole for any time period up to the date of final discharge as determined in accordance with section 17-22.5-402. If an application for parole is refused by the state board of parole, the state board of parole shall reconsider within one year thereafter whether such inmate should be granted parole. The state board of parole shall continue such reconsideration each year thereafter until such inmate is granted parole or until such inmate is discharged pursuant to law; except that, if the inmate applying for parole was convicted of a class 1 or class 2 crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., any class 3 sexual offense described in part 4 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., a habitual criminal offense as defined in section 18-1.3-801 (2.5), C.R.S., or of any offense subject to the requirements of section 18-1.3-904, C.R.S., the board need only reconsider granting parole to such inmate once every three years, until the board grants such inmate parole or until such inmate is discharged pursuant to law.

(6) For persons who are granted parole pursuant to subsection (5) of this section, the division of adult parole shall provide parole supervision and assistance in securing employment, housing, and such other services as may effect the successful reintegration of such offender into the community while recognizing the need for public safety. The conditions for parole for any such offender under this subsection (6) shall be established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404 by the state board of parole prior to such offender's release from incarceration. Upon a determination that the conditions of parole have been violated in a parole revocation proceeding, the state board of parole shall continue the parole in effect, modify the conditions of parole if circumstances then shown to exist require such modifications, which circumstances shall be set forth in writing, or revoke the parole and order the return of the offender to a place of confinement designated by the executive director for any period of time up to the period remaining on such person's sentence until the discharge date as determined by section 17-22.5-402 or one year, whichever is longer. In computing the period of reincarceration for an offender other than an offender sentenced for a nonviolent felony offense, as defined in section 17-22.5-405 (5), the time between the offender's release on parole and return to custody in Colorado for revocation of such parole shall not be considered to be part of the term of the sentence. The state board of parole may discharge an offender granted parole under this section at any time during the term of parole upon a determination that the offender has been sufficiently rehabilitated and reintegrated into society and can no longer benefit from parole supervision.

(7) (a) For any offender who is incarcerated for an offense committed on or after July 1, 1993, upon application for parole, the state board of parole, working in conjunction with the department and using the guidelines established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404, shall determine whether or not to grant parole. The state board of parole, if it determines that placing an offender on parole is appropriate, shall set the length of the period of parole at the mandatory period of parole established in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (V), C.R.S., except as otherwise provided for specified offenses in section 17-2-201 (5) (a), (5) (a.5), and (5) (a.7). If an application for parole is refused by the state board of parole, the state board of parole shall reconsider within one year thereafter whether such inmate should be granted parole. The state board of parole shall continue such reconsideration each year thereafter until such inmate is granted parole or until such inmate is discharged pursuant to law; except that, if the inmate applying for parole was convicted of any sex offense, as defined in section 18-1.3-1003 (5), C.R.S., a habitual criminal offense as defined in section 18-1.3-801 (2.5), C.R.S., or of any offense subject to the requirements of section 18-1.3-904, C.R.S., the board need only reconsider granting parole to such inmate once every three years, until the board grants such inmate parole or until such inmate is discharged pursuant to law, or if the person applying for parole was convicted of a class 2 felony that constitutes a crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., the board need only reconsider granting parole to such person once every five years, until the board grants such person parole or until such person is discharged pursuant to law.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (7), for any sex offender, as defined in section 18-1.3-1003 (4), C.R.S., who is sentenced pursuant to the provisions of part 10 of article 1.3 of title 18, C.R.S., for commission of a sex offense committed on or after November 1, 1998, the state board of parole shall determine whether or not to grant parole as provided in section 18-1.3-1006, C.R.S. If the state board of parole determines that placing a sex offender on parole is appropriate, it shall set an indeterminate period of parole as provided in section 18-1.3-1006, C.R.S. If the state board of parole does not release a sex offender on parole, it shall reconsider release on parole at least once every three years until the state board of parole determines the sex offender meets the criteria for parole specified in section 18-1.3-1006 (1), C.R.S.

(8) (a) For persons who are granted parole pursuant to paragraph (a) of subsection (7) of this section, the division of adult parole shall provide parole supervision and assistance in securing employment, housing, and such other services as may affect the successful reintegration of such offender into the community while recognizing the need for public safety. The conditions for parole for any such offender under this paragraph (a) shall be established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404 by the state board of parole prior to such offender's release from incarceration. Upon a determination that the conditions of parole have been violated in a parole revocation proceeding, the state board of parole shall continue the parole in effect, modify the conditions of parole if circumstances then shown to exist require such modifications, which circumstances shall be set forth in writing, or revoke the parole and order the return of the offender to a place of confinement designated by the executive director for any period of time up to the period remaining on such person's mandatory period of parole established in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (V), C.R.S. Any offender who has been reincarcerated due to a parole revocation pursuant to this paragraph (a) shall be eligible for parole at any time during such reincarceration. The state board of parole may discharge an offender granted parole under this section at any time during the term of parole upon a determination that the offender has been sufficiently rehabilitated and reintegrated into society and can no longer benefit from parole supervision. In making any such determination, the state board of parole shall make written findings as to why such offender is no longer in need of parole supervision.

(b) For sex offenders, as defined in section 18-1.3-1003 (4), C.R.S., who are convicted of an offense committed on or after November 1, 1998, and who are granted parole pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (7) of this section, the division of adult parole shall provide parole supervision and assistance in securing employment, housing, and such other services as may affect the successful reintegration of the sex offender into the community while recognizing the need for public safety. The conditions for parole for any sex offender shall be established pursuant to section 18-1.3-1006, C.R.S., and section 17-22.5-404 by the state board of parole prior to the sex offender's release from incarceration. Upon a determination in a parole revocation proceeding that the sex offender has violated the conditions of parole, the state board of parole shall continue the parole in effect, modify the conditions of parole if circumstances then shown to exist require such modifications, which circumstances shall be set forth in writing, or revoke the parole and order the return of the sex offender to a place of confinement designated by the executive director for any period of time up to the remainder of the sex offender's natural life. The revocation hearing shall be held and the state board of parole shall make its determination as provided in section 18-1.3-1010, C.R.S. Following reincarceration, the sex offender's eligibility for parole shall be determined pursuant to section 18-1.3-1006, C.R.S. The state board of parole may discharge a sex offender from parole as provided in section 18-1.3-1006 (3), C.R.S.

(9) The state board of parole shall consider the parole of a person whose parole is revoked either for a technical violation or based on a self-revocation at least once within one hundred eighty days after the revocation if the person's release date is more than nine months from the date of the person's revocation; except that a person whose parole is revoked based on a technical violation that involved the use of a weapon shall not be considered for parole for one year.

Source: L. 90: Entire part added, p. 947, § 19, effective June 7. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 1730, § 11, effective July 1; entire section amended, p. 1978, § 4, effective July 1. L. 94: (5) and (7) amended, p. 2597, § 7, effective June 3. L. 95: (6) amended, p. 878, § 13, effective May 24. L. 98: (9) added, p. 1445, § 37, effective July 1; (7) and (8) amended, p. 1291, § 12, effective November 1. L. 2000: (6), (8), and (9)(c) amended, p. 854, § 63, effective May 24. L. 2002: (7)(a) amended, p. 125, § 3, effective March 26; (2), (3), (5), (7)(a), (7)(b), (8)(a), (8)(b), and (9)(a) amended, p. 1504, § 164, effective October 1. L. 2003: (2) amended, p. 975, § 10, effective April 17; (7)(a) amended, p. 813, § 2, effective July 1; (9) amended, p. 2677, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2004: (2) and (3) amended and (2.5) and (3.5) added, p. 1739, § 1, effective June 4. L. 2008: (6) amended, p. 1756, § 5, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Amendments to this section by House Bill 93-1302 and House Bill 93-1088 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (7)(a) by House Bill 02-1223 and House Bill 02-1046 were harmonized, effective October 1, 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (2), (3), (5), (7)(a), (7)(b), (8)(a), (8)(b), and (9)(a), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Application of the triennial review authorized in subsection (5) does not violate the ex post facto clauses in the federal or state constitution. Martinez v. Colo. State Bd. of Parole, 989 P.2d 256 (Colo. App. 1999).

Retrospective application of the 1993 mandatory parole provisions of this section, in conjunction with § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V), not violative of ex post facto clause where defendant had pleaded guilty to underlying offense with stipulation that the offense occurred within a time frame that happened to include time periods both prior and subsequent to the date such provisions were enacted. People v. Flagg, 18 P.3d 792 (Colo. App. 2000).

Retroactive application of the policy of the parole board to no longer reconsider a parole application two months early does not extend a prisoner's actual period of confinement and is appropriate. Mulberry v. Neal, 96 F. Supp.2d 1149 (D. Colo. 2000).

In enacting statutory section, general assembly did not intend 75% provision to apply only to persons whose prior violent crime resulted in a separate charge and separate conviction. Instead, general assembly's general goal was to make parole eligibility more difficult for all persons who have previously committed a violent crime. Outler v. Norton, 934 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1997).

Subsection (1) applies only to an offender sentenced for a crime committed on or after July 1, 1979. Vashone-Caruso v. Suthers, 29 P.3d 339 (Colo. App. 2001).

Plain and ordinary meaning of the words "would have been a crime of violence" as used in the section includes the situation in which a criminal defendant has been previously convicted of a crime which satisfies definition of crime of violence contained in § 16-11-309 (2). Outler v. Norton, 934 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1997).

The language of subsection (3) is unambiguous and contains no qualification that the crimes arise out of separate criminal transactions and have been separately tried and convicted. Koucherik v. Zavaras, 940 P.2d 1063 (Colo. App. 1996).

Defendant's assertion that the application of subsection (3) to his circumstances denied him equal protection of the law was not supported by any evidence and defendant therefore failed to meet his burden to show that he was being treated differently from other persons who were similarly situated. Koucherik v. Zavaras, 940 P.2d 1063 (Colo. App. 1996).

Extension of inmate's parole eligibility date under subsection (2)(a) or (3) does not alter or increase inmate's sentence. Jenner v. Ortiz, 155 P.3d 563 (Colo. App. 2006).

Defendant's post-conviction challenge to imposition of mandatory parole period as an unconstitutional violation of the double jeopardy clause based on the assertion that only the parole board has the authority to impose parole was denied, since the parole board only administers parole and the court imposes it; hence there is no separate penalty imposed in a separate proceeding. People v. Xiong, 10 P.3d 719 (Colo. App. 2000).

With a mandatory parole period, an offender does not begin serving the period of parole until his or her prison sentence has been fully served or the parole board determines that he or she is ready for parole. People v. Hall, 87 P.3d 210 (Colo. App. 2003).

While an offender subject to discretionary parole will never be confined for a period greater than the original sentence imposed, an offender subject to mandatory parole faces a sentence to prison, a period of parole, and possibly another period of confinement not necessarily limited to the original term of incarceration imposed. People v. Hall, 87 P.3d 210 (Colo. App. 2003).

Only the parole board, not a parole officer, has the authority to direct that an offender attend a community corrections program as a condition of parole. People v. Lanzieri, 996 P.2d 156 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 25 P.3d 1170 (Colo. 2001).

Subsection (9) does not violate separation of powers or double jeopardy. The constitution does not provide that sentencing is within the sole province of the judiciary. The general assembly has the power to prescribe punishment and limit the court's sentencing authority. In this case, the general assembly, by enacting subsection (9), simply extended Colorado's parole supervision scheme to provide additional means for successfully reintegrating offenders into the community consistent with public safety. People v. Jackson, 109 P.3d 1017 (Colo. App. 2004).

Defendant was on notice that, under certain circumstances, he or she could be subject to post-release supervision and reincarceration following mandatory parole. Thus, he or she could not have had a legitimate expectation of finality in the sentence announced by the court at sentencing. Therefore, the defendant's double jeopardy rights were not violated when, because of intervening circumstances, the defendant was subject to the additional period of statutorily required supervision. People v. Jackson, 109 P.3d 1017 (Colo. App. 2004).

Department of corrections acted properly when it combined all of defendant's sentences, treating them as a continuous sentence, before the applicable parole date was determined. People v. Gallegos, 975 P.2d 1135 (Colo. App. 1998).

When a defendant is paroled under this section or under § 17-22.5-303, he must be reincarcerated for a parole violation under the same statute. People v. Gallegos, 975 P.2d 1135 (Colo. App. 1998).

A period of confinement attributable to a parole revocation was not a "period of mandatory parole". When a person is reincarcerated on a parole revocation, he is no longer serving his original sentence. Therefore, when a person is sentenced for the crime of escape during a period of mandatory parole for another offense, ordering such a sentence to run consecutive with the period of incarceration for the parole revocation did not violate § 18-1.3-401 (1)(a)(V)(E). People v. Luther, 58 P.3d 1013 (Colo. 2002).

Subsection (5) applied to defendant convicted of first degree murder, even though defendant was not convicted of a separate count of crime of violence. This subsection does not require proof of conviction of a crime of violence count, instead it applies to any defendant convicted of any crime described as a crime of violence in § 16-11-309. Martinez v. Colo. State Bd. of Parole, 989 P.2d 256 (Colo. App. 1999).

Defendant's argument that he did not enter into a voluntary plea because he was not advised that a violation of mandatory parole could lead to reincarceration was without merit. Pursuant to subsection (7), a term of mandatory parole is imposed in addition to, and not in lieu of, a term of incarceration. If parole is granted, it must be for the mandatory period established by statute and it is implied that an advisement on mandatory parole includes notice that violation of such parole may result in imprisonment. People v. Jones, 957 P.2d 1046 (Colo. App. 1997).

The provisions of § 17-2-201 (5)(a) and subsection (7) of this section are in conflict. Section 17-2-201 (5)(a) is a specific provision related to the parole of sex offenders while subsection (7) of this section is the mandatory parole statute for all felonies. As such, applying the statutory construction rule that the specific provision prevails over the general provision, § 17-2-201 (5)(a) is an exception to subsection (7) of this section by creating a specialized schedule for sex offenders who committed crimes prior to July 1, 1996. Martin v. People, 27 P.3d 846 (Colo. 2001).

Section 17-2-201 (5)(a.5) is a specific provision related to the parole of sex offenders while subsection (7) of this section is the mandatory parole statute for all felonies. As such, applying the statutory construction rule that the specific provision prevails over the general provision, § 17-2-201 (5)(a.5) is an exception to subsection (7) of this section, which creates a specialized schedule for sex offenders who committed crimes between July 1, 1996, and July 1, 1998. People v. Cooper, 27 P.3d 348 (Colo. 2001).

Habitual offenders are subject to a period of discretionary parole rather than a period of statutory mandatory parole. The provisions of § 17-2-201 (5)(a) and § 17-2-213 irreconcilably conflict with the provisions of subsection (7) of this section and § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V). Thus, the specific provision of § 17-2-201 (5)(a) and § 17-2-213 prevail over the general provisions of subsection (7) of this section and § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V). People v. Falls, 58 P.3d 1140 (Colo. App. 2002).

Petition to review mandatory parole is ripe for judicial review even though the defendant has not completed period of incarceration. People v. Wirsching, 30 P.3d 227 (Colo. App. 2000).

An advisement that a defendant is subject to mandatory parole without disclosing the period of parole is not sufficient to meet the requirements of this section and may allow the defendant to withdraw his or her plea agreement. People v. Wirsching, 30 P.3d 227 (Colo. App. 2000).

17-22.5-403.5. Special needs parole. (1) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, a special needs offender, as defined in section 17-2-102 (7.5) (a), may be eligible for parole prior to or after the offender's parole eligibility date pursuant to this section if:

(a) The state board of parole determines, based on the special needs offender's condition and a medical evaluation, that he or she does not constitute a threat to public safety and is not likely to commit an offense; and

(b) The state board of parole approves a special needs parole plan that ensures appropriate supervision of and continuity of medical care for the special needs offender.

(2) This section shall apply to any inmate applying for parole on or after July 1, 2001, regardless of when the inmate was sentenced. The provisions of this section shall not affect the length of the parole period to which a special needs offender would otherwise be subject.

(3) (a) The department is responsible for identifying inmates who meet the eligibility criteria for special needs parole and shall submit a referral to the state board of parole for all eligible inmates.

(b) The referral shall include:

(I) A summary of the inmate's medical or physical condition and the risk of reoffense that the inmate poses to society. In rendering an opinion regarding the inmate's level of risk of reoffense, the department may consider such factors as the inmate's medical or physical condition, the severity of any disability or incapacitation, risk assessment scores, the nature and severity of the offense for which the inmate is currently incarcerated, the inmate's criminal history, institutional conduct, and other relevant factors.

(II) The details of a special needs parole plan recommended by the department;

(III) A recommendation to the parole board that an offender be released or not be released as a special needs offender pursuant to the provisions of subsection (1) of this section. Prior to making any recommendation pursuant to this subparagraph (III), the department shall establish objective criteria on which to base a recommendation for parole pursuant to the provisions of this section; and

(IV) A victim impact statement or response from the district attorney that prosecuted the offender, if received pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (3).

(c) (I) The department shall provide notification to any victim, as required under section 24-4.1-302.5, C.R.S. A victim shall have thirty days after receiving notification to submit a victim impact statement to the department. The department shall include any victim impact statement in the referral to the state board of parole.

(II) At the same time that the department completes the notification required by subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c), the department shall notify the district attorney that prosecuted the offender if the offender is serving a sentence for a conviction of a crime of violence as described in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., or a sex offense as listed in section 16-22-102 (9) (j), (9) (k), (9) (l), (9) (n), (9) (o), (9) (p), (9) (q), (9) (r), or (9) (s), C.R.S. A district attorney shall have thirty days after receiving notification to submit a response to the department. The department shall include any district attorney response in the referral to the state board of parole.

(4) (a) The state board of parole shall consider an inmate for special needs parole upon referral by the department.

(b) The state board of parole shall make a determination of the risk of reoffense that the inmate poses after considering such factors as the inmate's medical or physical condition, the severity of any disability or incapacitation, the inmate's risk assessment scores, the nature and severity of the offense for which the inmate is currently incarcerated, the inmate's criminal history, the inmate's institutional conduct, and other relevant factors.

(c) The state board of parole may schedule a hearing on the application for special needs parole with the inmate present, or the board may review the application and issue a decision without a hearing, pursuant to section 17-2-201 (4) (f).

(d) The state board of parole shall make a determination of whether to grant special needs parole within thirty days after receiving the referral from the department. The board may delay the decision in order to request that the department modify the special needs parole plan.

(e) A denial of special needs parole by the state board of parole shall not affect an inmate's eligibility for any other form of parole or release under applicable law.

(5) The board may consider the application for special needs parole pursuant to the proceedings set forth in section 17-2-201 (4) (f) or 17-2-201 (9) (a). If the department recommends to the state board of parole that an offender be released to parole as a special needs offender pursuant to the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, the board may deny parole only by a majority vote of the board.

(6) The department shall not have any responsibility for the payment of medical care for any offender upon his or her release.

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 1495, § 2, effective July 1, 2001. L. 2003: IP(1) amended and (3) added, p. 1910, § 2, effective August 6. L. 2011: Entire section amended, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, p. 836, § 6, effective May 23. L. 2012: (3)(c)(II) amended, (HB 12-1310), ch. 268, p. 1401, § 22, effective June 7.

17-22.5-403.7. Parole eligibility - class 1 felony - juvenile offender convicted as adult. (1) As used in this section, "inmate" means a person:

(a) (I) Who is convicted as an adult of a class 1 felony following direct filing of an information or indictment in the district court pursuant to section 19-2-517, C.R.S.; or

(II) Who is convicted as an adult of a class 1 felony following transfer of proceedings to the district court pursuant to section 19-2-518, C.R.S.; and

(b) Who is sentenced to life imprisonment with the possibility of parole after serving a period of forty calendar years as provided in section 18-1.3-401 (4) (b), C.R.S.

(2) The governor may grant parole to an inmate prior to the inmate's parole eligibility date if, in the governor's opinion, extraordinary mitigating circumstances exist and the inmate's release from institutional custody is compatible with the safety and welfare of society.

(3) Upon application for parole by an inmate, the state board of parole, working in conjunction with the department and using the guidelines established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404, shall determine whether to grant parole. If the state board of parole determines that placing the inmate on parole is appropriate, the inmate shall remain in the legal custody of the department of corrections for the remainder of his or her life. If an application for parole is refused by the state board of parole, the state board of parole shall reconsider within five years thereafter whether the inmate should be granted parole. The state board of parole shall continue such reconsideration at least once every five years thereafter until the inmate is granted parole.

(4) (a) If the state board of parole grants parole pursuant to subsection (3) of this section, the division of adult parole shall provide parole supervision and assistance in securing employment, housing, and such other services as may affect the successful reintegration of the inmate into the community while recognizing the need for public safety.

(b) The conditions for parole for the inmate under this subsection (4) shall be established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404 by the state board of parole prior to the inmate's release from incarceration. Upon a determination that the conditions of parole have been violated in a parole revocation proceeding, the state board of parole shall:

(I) Continue the parole in effect;

(II) Modify the conditions of parole if circumstances then shown to exist require such modifications and set forth those circumstances in writing; or

(III) Revoke the parole and order the return of the inmate to a place of confinement designated by the executive director for any period of time remaining on the inmate's sentence to incarceration.

(c) An inmate who has been reincarcerated due to a parole revocation pursuant to this subsection (4) shall be eligible for parole at any time during the reincarceration.

(5) (a) If an inmate is subsequently reincarcerated pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (4) of this section, following reincarceration, the inmate may apply for parole and the state board of parole, working in conjunction with the department and using the guidelines established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404, shall determine whether to grant parole. If the state board of parole refuses the application for parole, the state board of parole shall reconsider within one year thereafter whether the inmate should be granted parole. The state board of parole shall continue such reconsideration each year thereafter, until the board grants the inmate parole.

(b) If the state board of parole grants parole to an inmate pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (5), the provisions of subsection (4) of this section shall apply while the inmate is serving the remainder of the period of parole.

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 1053, § 5, effective May 25.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2006 act enacting this section, see section 1 of chapter 228, Session Laws of Colorado 2006.

17-22.5-404. Parole guidelines. (1) The general assembly hereby finds that:

(a) The risk of reoffense shall be the central consideration by the state board of parole in making decisions related to the timing and conditions of release on parole or revocation of parole;

(b) Research demonstrates that actuarial risk assessment tools can predict the likelihood or risk of reoffense with significantly greater accuracy than professional judgment alone. Evidence-based correctional practices prioritize the use of actuarial risk assessment tools to promote public safety. The best outcomes are derived from a combination of empirically based actuarial tools and clinical judgment.

(c) Although the state board of parole is made up of individuals, using structured decision-making unites the parole board members with a common philosophy and set of goals and purposes while retaining the authority of individual parole board members to make decisions that are appropriate for particular situations. Evidence-based correctional practices support the use of structured decision-making.

(d) Structured decision-making by the state board of parole provides for greater accountability, standards for evaluating outcomes, and transparency of decision-making that can be better communicated to victims, offenders, other criminal justice professionals, and the community; and

(e) An offender's likelihood of success may be increased by aligning the intensity and type of parole supervision, conditions of release, and services with assessed risk and need level.

(2) (a) The division of criminal justice in the department of public safety shall develop the Colorado risk assessment scale to be used by the state board of parole in considering inmates for release on parole. The risk assessment scale shall include criteria that statistically have been shown to be good predictors of the risk of reoffense. The division of criminal justice shall validate the Colorado risk assessment scale at least every five years or more often if the predictive accuracy, as determined by data collection and analysis, falls below an acceptable level of predictive accuracy as determined by the division of criminal justice, the state board of parole, and the division of adult parole in the department of corrections.

(b) The division of criminal justice, the department of corrections, and the state board of parole shall cooperate to develop parole board action forms consistent with this section that capture the rationale for decision-making that shall be published as official forms of the department of corrections. Victim identity and input shall be protected from display on the parole board action form or any parole hearing report that may become a part of an inmate record.

(c) The division of criminal justice, in cooperation with the department of corrections and the state board of parole, shall provide training on the use of the administrative release guideline instrument developed pursuant to section 17-22.5-107 (1) and the Colorado risk assessment scale to personnel of the department of corrections, the state board of parole, administrative hearing officers, and release hearing officers. The division shall conduct the training on a semiannual basis.

(d) The department of corrections, in cooperation with the state board of parole, shall provide training on the use of the administrative revocation guidelines developed pursuant to section 17-22.5-107 (2) to personnel of the department of corrections, the state board of parole, and administrative hearing officers. The department shall conduct the training semiannually.

(3) For a person sentenced for a class 2, class 3, class 4, class 5, or class 6 felony who is eligible for parole pursuant to section 17-22.5-403, or a person who is eligible for parole pursuant to section 17-22.5-403.7, the state board of parole may consider all applications for parole, as well as all persons to be supervised under any interstate compact. The state board of parole may parole any person who is sentenced or committed to a correctional facility when the board determines, by using, where available, evidence-based practices and the guidelines established by this section, that there is a reasonable probability that the person will not violate the law while on parole and that the person's release from institutional custody is compatible with public safety and the welfare of society. The state board of parole shall first consider the risk of reoffense in every release decision it makes.

(4) (a) In considering offenders for parole, the state board of parole shall consider the totality of the circumstances, which include, but need not be limited to, the following factors:

(I) The testimony or written statement from the victim of the crime, or a relative of the victim, or a designee, pursuant to section 17-2-214;

(II) The actuarial risk of reoffense;

(III) The offender's assessed criminogenic need level;

(IV) The offender's program or treatment participation and progress;

(V) The offender's institutional conduct;

(VI) The adequacy of the offender's parole plan;

(VII) Whether the offender while under sentence has threatened or harassed the victim or the victim's family or has caused the victim or the victim's family to be threatened or harassed, either verbally or in writing;

(VIII) Aggravating or mitigating factors from the criminal case;

(IX) The testimony or written statement from a prospective parole sponsor, employer, or other person who would be available to assist the offender if released on parole;

(X) Whether the offender had previously absconded or escaped or attempted to abscond or escape while on community supervision; and

(XI) Whether the offender completed or worked toward completing a high school diploma, a general equivalency degree, or a college degree during his or her period of incarceration.

(b) The state board of parole shall use the Colorado risk assessment scale that is developed by the division of criminal justice in the department of public safety pursuant to paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section in considering inmates for release on parole.

(c) (I) Except as provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c), the state board of parole shall also use the administrative release guideline instrument developed pursuant to section 17-22.5-107 (1) in evaluating an application for parole.

(II) The administrative release guideline instrument shall not be used in considering those inmates classified as sex offenders with indeterminate sentences for whom the sex offender management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009, C.R.S., has established separate and distinct release guidelines. The sex offender management board in collaboration with the department of corrections, the judicial department, the division of criminal justice in the department of public safety, and the state board of parole shall develop a specific sex offender release guideline instrument for use by the state board of parole for those inmates classified as sex offenders with determinate sentences.

(5) (a) In conducting a parole revocation hearing, the state board of parole and the administrative hearing officer shall consider, where available, evidence-based practices and shall consider, but need not be limited to, the following factors:

(I) A determination by the state board of parole that a parolee committed a new crime while on parole, if applicable;

(II) The parolee's actuarial risk of reoffense;

(III) The seriousness of the technical violation, if applicable;

(IV) The parolee's frequency of technical violations, if applicable;

(V) The parolee's efforts to comply with a previous corrective action plan or other remediation plan required by the state board of parole or parole officer;

(VI) The imposition of intermediate sanctions by the parole officer in response to the technical violations that may form the basis of the complaint for revocation; and

(VII) Whether modification of parole conditions is appropriate and consistent with public safety in lieu of revocation.

(b) The state board of parole shall use the administrative revocation guidelines developed pursuant to section 17-22.5-107 (2), in evaluating complaints filed for parole revocation.

(c) The state board of parole or the administrative hearing officer shall not revoke parole for a technical violation unless the board or administrative hearing officer determines on the record that appropriate intermediate sanctions have been utilized and have been ineffective or that the modification of conditions of parole or the imposition of intermediate sanctions is not appropriate or consistent with public safety and the welfare of society.

(6) (a) The state board of parole shall work in consultation with the division of criminal justice in the department of public safety and the department of corrections to develop and implement a process to collect and analyze data related to the basis for and the outcomes of the board's parole decisions. The process shall collect data related to the board's rationale for granting, revoking, or denying parole. Any information relating to victim identification or victim input that is identifiable to an individual defendant or case shall be maintained, but kept confidential and released only to other government agencies, pursuant to a nondisclosure agreement, for the purpose of analysis and reporting, pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (6). When the board grants parole, the process shall also collect data related to whether the offender has previously recidivated, the type of reentry program given to the offender as a part of the offender's parole plan, and whether the offender recidivates while on parole.

(b) The state board of parole shall also determine whether a decision granting, revoking, or denying parole conformed with or departed from the administrative guidelines created pursuant to section 17-22.5-107 and, if the decision was a departure from the guidelines, the reason for the departure. The data collected pursuant to this paragraph (b) are subject to the same victim protections described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (6).

(c) The state board of parole shall provide the data collected pursuant to this subsection (6) to the division of criminal justice in the department of public safety for analysis. The division of criminal justice shall analyze the data received pursuant to this paragraph (c) and shall provide its analysis to the board. The board and the division of criminal justice shall use the data and analysis to identify specific factors that are important in the decision-making process.

(d) The division of criminal justice in the department of public safety shall provide the state board of parole with training regarding how to use the data obtained and analyzed pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (6) to facilitate the board's future decision-making.

(e) (I) On or before November 1, 2011, and on or before November 1 each year thereafter, the state board of parole and the division of criminal justice in the department of public safety shall issue a report to the general assembly regarding outcomes of decisions by the state board of parole. The data shall be reported to the general assembly only in the aggregate.

(II) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2011, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, p. 838, § 7, effective May 23, 2011.)

(7) The department of corrections, the state board of parole, the division of adult parole, and the division of criminal justice in the department of public safety shall cooperate in implementing all aspects of this section.

(8) This section shall apply to any person to whom section 17-22.5-303.5, as it existed prior to May 18, 1991, would apply pursuant to the operation of section 17-22.5-406, because the provisions of such sections are substantially similar.

(9) For purposes of this section, "technical violation" means a violation of a condition of parole that is not a conviction for a new criminal offense or not determined by the state board of parole to be a commission of a new criminal offense.

Source: L. 90: Entire part added, p. 948, § 19, effective June 7. L. 91: (6) amended and (8) added, p. 334, § 1, effective May 18. L. 93: (2)(a)(VII) amended, p. 1634, § 16, effective July 1. L. 97: (2)(a)(I) and (3)(a)(V) amended, p. 1008, § 9, effective August 6. L. 98: (2)(a)(I) amended, p. 820, § 18, effective August 5. L. 99: (4.5) added, p. 61, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2000: (5), (6)(b), (6)(c), (6)(d), (6)(e), and (7) amended, p. 845, § 42, effective May 24. L. 2006: (1) amended, p. 1054, § 6, effective May 25. L. 2008: (2)(a)(VIII) and (2)(a)(IX) amended, p. 658, § 8, effective April 25. L. 2009: (6)(d) amended, (SB 09-135), ch. 329, p. 1754, § 1, effective August 5. L. 2010: Entire section R&RE, (HB 10-1374), ch. 261, p. 1182, § 6, effective May 25. L. 2011: (6)(e) amended, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, p. 838, § 7, effective May 23.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2006 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 228, Session Laws of Colorado 2006.

ANNOTATION

Mandamus relief under C.R.C.P. 106 is available to challenge the parole board's actions if it has failed to exercise its statutory duties. Although plaintiff did not expressly seek mandamus relief pursuant to C.R.C.P. 106, the gravamen of his complaint was that the parole board's failure to consider any events or circumstances prior to plaintiff's incarceration was in direct violation of statutory guidelines for parole. Under these circumstances, the trial court had jurisdiction to address the merits of the complaint. Fraser v. Colo. Bd. of Parole, 931 P.2d 560 (Colo. App. 1996).

17-22.5-404.5. Presumption of parole - drug offenders - repeal. (1) There shall be a presumption, subject to the final discretion of the parole board, in favor of granting parole to an inmate who has reached his or her parole eligibility date and who:

(a) Is serving a sentence for which the controlling term of incarceration is based on a felony possession or use offense described in section 18-18-404, or section 18-18-405, C.R.S., as it existed prior to August 11, 2010;

(b) Has not incurred a class I code of penal discipline violation within the last twelve months or a class II code of penal discipline violation within the last three months;

(c) Is program-compliant;

(d) Was not convicted of, and has not previously been convicted of, a felony crime described in section 18-3-303, 18-3-305, 18-3-306, or 18-6-701; sections 18-7-402 to 18-7-407; or section 18-12-102 or 18-12-109, C.R.S.; or a felony crime listed in section 24-4.1-302 (1), C.R.S.; and

(e) Does not have an active felony or immigration detainer.

(2) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, an inmate who is eligible for the presumption in subsection (1) of this section shall have a parole release hearing within ninety days after becoming eligible for the presumption in subsection (1) of this section.

(3) If the parole board grants parole to an inmate pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, the parole board shall require as a condition of parole that the parolee participate in substance abuse treatment consistent with the assessed treatment need of the parolee.

(4) (a) The chairperson of the parole board shall provide a report to the judiciary committees of the house of representatives and the senate, or any successor committees, by January 30, 2012, and by each January 30 thereafter regarding the impact of this section on the department of corrections' population and public safety.

(b) This subsection (4) is repealed, effective February 1, 2016.

(5) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the discretion of the parole board in considering the statutory release guidelines in section 17-22.5-404 or the administrative release guidelines developed pursuant to section 17-22.5-107 (1) in making a decision regarding an inmate's application for release to parole.

Source: L. 2011: Entire section added, (HB 11-1064), ch. 234, p. 1009, § 1, effective May 27.

17-22.5-404.7. Presumption of parole - nonviolent offenders with ICE detainees. (1) There shall be a presumption, subject to the final discretion of the parole board, in favor of granting parole to an inmate who has reached his or her parole eligibility date and who:

(a) Has been assessed by the Colorado risk assessment scale developed pursuant to section 17-22.5-404 (2) (a), to be medium risk or below of reoffense;

(b) Is not serving a sentence for a felony crime described in section 18-3-303, 18-3-306, or 18-6-701, C.R.S.; sections 18-7-402 to 18-7-407, C.R.S.; or section 18-12-102 or 18-12-109, C.R.S.; section 18-17-104, C.R.S., or section 18-18-407, C.R.S.; or a felony crime listed in section 24-4.1-302 (1), C.R.S.; and

(c) Has an active detainer lodged by the United States immigration and customs enforcement agency.

(2) In determining whether to grant parole pursuant to provisions of subsection (1) of this section, the board shall consider the cost of incarceration to the state of Colorado in relation to the needs of further confinement of the inmate to achieve the purpose of the inmate's sentence.

(3) (a) The state board of parole may release an eligible inmate, pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, only to the custody of the United States immigration and customs enforcement agency or other law enforcement agency with authority to execute the detainer on behalf of the United States immigration and customs enforcement agency.

(b) If the United States immigration and customs enforcement agency withdraws the detainer or declines to take the inmate into custody, the state board of parole shall hold a recission hearing to reconsider the granting of parole to the inmate.

(c) If the United States immigration and customs enforcement agency issues an order of deportation for the inmate, the department of corrections shall submit a request to the state board of parole to discharge parole.

(d) A denial of parole by the state board of parole pursuant to this section shall not affect an inmate's eligibility for another form of parole or release applicable under law.

(4) The board may consider the application for parole pursuant to the proceedings set forth in section 17-2-201 (4) (f) or 17-2-201 (9) (a).

(5) For inmates who were parole eligible before May 23, 2011, the department shall notify the state board of parole of any of those inmates who meet the criteria listed in subsection (1) of this section, and the board shall either set a release hearing or conduct a release review within ninety days after May 23, 2011.

Source: L. 2011: Entire section added, (SB 11-241), ch. 200, p. 838, § 8, effective May 23.

17-22.5-405. Earned time - earned release time - achievement earned time.

(1) Earned time, not to exceed ten days for each month of incarceration or parole, may be deducted from the inmate's sentence upon a demonstration to the department by the inmate, which is certified by the inmate's case manager or community parole officer, that he or she has made consistent progress in the following categories as required by the department of corrections:

(a) Work and training, including attendance, promptness, performance, cooperation, care of materials, and safety;

(b) Group living, including housekeeping, personal hygiene, cooperation, social adjustment, and double bunking;

(c) Participation in counseling sessions and involvement in self-help groups;

(d) Progress toward the goals and programs established by the Colorado diagnostic program;

(e) For any inmates who have been paroled, compliance with the conditions of parole release;

(f) The offender has not harassed the victim either verbally or in writing;

(g) The inmate has made positive progress, in accordance with performance standards established by the department, in the literacy corrections program or the correctional education program established pursuant to article 32 of this title.

(1.5) (a) Earned time, not to exceed twelve days for each month of incarceration or parole, may be deducted from an inmate's sentence if the inmate:

(I) Is serving a sentence for a class 4, class 5, or class 6 felony;

(II) Has not incurred a class I code of penal discipline violation within the twenty-four months immediately preceding the time of crediting or during his or her entire term of incarceration if the term is less than twenty-four months or a class II code of penal discipline violation within the twelve months immediately preceding the time of crediting or during his or her entire term of incarceration if the term is less than twelve months;

(III) Is program-compliant; and

(IV) Was not convicted of, and has not previously been convicted of, a felony crime described in section 18-3-303, 18-3-305, 18-3-306, or 18-6-701, sections 18-7-402 to 18-7-407, or section 18-12-102 or 18-12-109, C.R.S., or a felony crime listed in section 24-4.1-302 (1), C.R.S.

(b) The earned time specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1.5) may be deducted based upon a demonstration to the department by the inmate, which is certified by the inmate's case manager or community parole officer, that he or she has made consistent progress in the categories described in subsection (1) of this section.

(c) Nothing in this subsection (1.5) shall preclude an inmate from receiving earned time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if the inmate does not qualify for earned time pursuant to this subsection (1.5).

(2) The department shall develop objective standards for measuring consistent progress in the categories listed in subsection (1) of this section. Such standards shall be applied in all evaluations of inmates for the earned time authorized in this section.

(3) For each inmate sentenced to the custody of the department, or for each parolee, the department shall review the performance record of the inmate or parolee and may grant, withhold, withdraw, or restore, consistent with the provisions of this section, an earned time deduction from the sentence imposed. Such review shall be conducted annually while such person is incarcerated and semiannually while such person is on parole and shall vest upon being granted. However, any earned time granted to a parolee shall vest upon completion of any semiannual review unless an administrative hearing within the department determines that such parolee engaged in criminal activity during the time period for which such earned time was granted, in which case the earned time granted during such period may be withdrawn. In addition to any other sanctions, the executive director may refer to the district attorney all cases where the offender tests positive for the presence of drugs.

(3.5) In addition to the earned time deducted pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, an inmate working at a disaster site pursuant to section 17-24-124 shall be entitled to additional earned time in the amount of one day of earned time for every day spent at a disaster site.

(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, earned time may not reduce the sentence of an inmate as defined in section 17-22.5-402 (1) by a period of time that is more than thirty percent of the sentence. This subsection (4) shall not apply to subsection (6) or subsection (9) of this section.

(5) (a) Notwithstanding subsections (1), (2), and (3) of this section, an offender who is sentenced and paroled for a felony offense other than a nonviolent felony committed on or after July 1, 1993, shall not be eligible to receive any earned time while the offender is on parole. An offender who is sentenced and paroled for a nonviolent felony offense committed on or after July 1, 1993, shall be eligible to receive any earned time while the offender is on parole.

(a.5) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (5), an offender who is sentenced for a felony committed on or after July 1, 1993, and paroled on or after January 1, 2009, shall be eligible to receive any earned time while on parole or after reparole following a parole revocation.

(b) As used in this subsection (5), unless the context otherwise requires, a "nonviolent felony offense" means a felony offense other than a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406 (2), C.R.S., any of the felony offenses set forth in section 18-3-104, 18-4-203, or 18-4-301, C.R.S., or any felony offense committed against a child as set forth in articles 3, 6, and 7 of title 18, C.R.S.

(6) Earned release time shall be scheduled by the state board of parole and the time computation unit in the department of corrections for inmates convicted of class 4 and class 5 felonies up to sixty days prior to the mandatory release date and for inmates convicted of class 6 felonies up to thirty days prior to the mandatory release date for inmates who meet the following criteria:

(a) The inmate has not incurred a class I code of penal discipline violation within the twenty-four months immediately preceding the time of crediting or during his or her entire term of incarceration if the term is less than twenty-four months or a class II code of penal discipline violation within the twelve months immediately preceding the time of crediting or during his or her entire term of incarceration if the term is less than twelve months;

(b) The inmate is program-compliant; and

(c) The inmate was not convicted of, and has not previously been convicted of, a felony crime described in section 18-3-303, 18-3-305, 18-3-306, or 18-6-701, sections 18-7-402 to 18-7-407, or section 18-12-102 or 18-12-109, C.R.S., or a felony crime listed in section 24-4.1-302 (1), C.R.S.

(7) Beginning in the fiscal year 2012-13, the general assembly may appropriate the savings generated by subsections (1.5) and (6) of this section to recidivism-reduction programs.

(8) Notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary, after his or her first ninety days in administrative segregation, a state inmate in administrative segregation shall be eligible to receive earned time if he or she meets the criteria required by this section or any modified criteria developed by the department to allow a state inmate to receive the maximum amount of earned time allowable for good behavior and participation in any programs available to the state inmate in administrative segregation.

(9) (a) Notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary, in addition to the earned time authorized in this section, an offender who successfully completes a milestone or phase of an educational, vocational, therapeutic, or reentry program, or who demonstrates exceptional conduct that promotes the safety of correctional staff, volunteers, contractors, or other persons under the supervision of the department of corrections, may be awarded as many as sixty days of achievement earned time per program milestone or phase or per instance of exceptional conduct, at the discretion of the executive director; except that an offender shall not be awarded more than one hundred twenty days of achievement earned time pursuant to this subsection (9).

(b) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires, "exceptional conduct" includes, but is not limited to:

(I) Saving or attempting to save the life of another person;

(II) Aiding in the prevention of serious bodily injury or loss of life;

(III) Providing significant assistance in the prevention of a major facility disruption;

(IV) Providing significant assistance in the solving of a cold case, as defined in section 24-4.1-302 (1.2), C.R.S.;

(V) Acting to prevent an escape; or

(VI) Providing direct assistance in a documented facility or community emergency.

Source: L. 90: Entire part added, p. 952, § 19, effective June 7. L. 91: (1)(g) amended, p. 1912, § 20, effective June 1. L. 93: (5) added, p. 1980, § 5, effective July 1. L. 95: (5) amended, p. 879, § 14, effective May 24. L. 97: (5)(b) amended, p. 1548, § 24, effective July 1. L. 2001: (3.5) added, p. 1452, § 2, effective June 5. L. 2002: (5)(a) and (5)(b) amended, p. 1507, § 165, effective October 1. L. 2008: IP(1) amended, p. 658, § 9, effective April 25; (5)(a.5) added, p. 1756, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2009: (1.5), (6), and (7) added and (4) amended, (HB 09-1351), ch. 359, p. 1866, § 1, effective June 1. L. 2010: (1.5)(a) and (6) amended, (HB 10-1374), ch. 261, p. 1181, § 5, effective May 25. L. 2011: (8) added, (SB 11-176), ch. 289, p. 1343, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2012: (4), (5)(a), and (5)(a.5) amended and (9) added, (HB 12-1223), ch. 213, p. 916, § 2, effective May 24.

Editor's note: Section 4 of chapter 213, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (4), (5)(a), and (5)(a.5) and adding subsection (9) does not apply until at least ninety days after May 24, 2012.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (5)(a) and (5)(b), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002. For the legislative declaration in the 2012 act amending subsections (4), (5)(a), and (5)(a.5) and adding subsection (9), see section 1 of chapter 213, Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Exclusion of felony theft from definition of “nonviolent felony offenses” in this section did not operate to deny defendant equal protection of the law. People v. Gonzales, 973 P.2d 732 (Colo. App. 1999).

An inmate does not have a vested right in earned time, so the inmate’s punishment is not increased by withholding earned time from the inmate for not participating in sex offender treatment. Reeves v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 155 P.3d 648 (Colo. App. 2007).

Earned time credit not available for pre-sentence confinement. People v. Maestas, 920 P.2d 875 (Colo. App. 1996).

Where prisoner was not in the custody of the department of corrections, but was instead held in a county jail awaiting sentencing, credit was not available under this section. People v. Maestas, 920 P.2d 875 (Colo. App. 1996).

Earned time credits are not required to be given when serving a concurrent sentence in a federal prison, but department was required to conduct a hearing pursuant to subsection (3). When state and federal sentences are running concurrently, even when defendant was in federal prison, defendant was in the custody of the department. People v. Frank, 30 P.3d 664 (Colo. App. 2000).

17-22.5-406. Applicability of part. (1) (a) This part 4 applies to all offenders sentenced for crimes committed on or after July 1, 1979.

(b) Notwithstanding paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), the amount of earned time which may be credited pursuant to this part 4 to any inmate incarcerated on or before July 1, 1990, shall not exceed the amount of earned time actually earned by such inmate pursuant to earned time provisions in effect prior to July 1, 1990.

(c) If the application of the provisions of this subsection (1) would result in the early discharge of any offender, the department shall refer such offender to the state board of parole which may, in its discretion, grant or deny parole using the guidelines established pursuant to section 17-22.5-404, discharge the offender or place such offender under conditional parole supervision. If the offender is placed on parole pursuant to this paragraph (c), the state board of parole may revoke the parole granted to such inmate for a period not to exceed the amount of earned time granted to the offender pursuant to this part 4.

(d) Nothing in this subsection (1) shall be construed as a mandate to the state board of parole to release any inmate.

(e) If any inmate incarcerated prior to June 7, 1990, has not accrued any earned time prior to such date, the provisions of law in effect at the time of such inmate’s sentencing shall apply to such inmate in determining such inmate’s discharge date.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, no offender incarcerated on June 7, 1990, shall be released pursuant to the provisions of subsection (1) of this section unless the department of corrections makes a written certification that the offender has met the conditions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) and at least two additional of the following criteria:

(a) The offender has not used controlled substances, except pursuant to the prescription of a physician, for at least one year prior to such certification.

(b) The offender has engaged in a satisfactory participation in available educational programs during his incarceration.

(c) The offender has engaged in a satisfactory participation in any treatment programs indicated in his diagnostic evaluation.

(d) The offender has had no serious infractions of the penal code of discipline for at least two years.

(e) The offender has had an exemplary work record while being incarcerated under the custody of the department of corrections.

(3) This part 4 shall not apply to any offender who is presently incarcerated who does not meet the appropriate criteria stated in subsection (2) of this section. Any such offender’s sentence shall be governed by provisions in existence prior to June 7, 1990.

(4) Repealed.

Source: L. 90: Entire part added, p. 953, § 19, effective June 7. L. 98: (4) repealed, p. 727, § 11, effective May 18.

17-22.5-407. Genetic testing as condition of parole - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 957, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2002: Entire section amended, p. 1153, § 10, effective July 1. L. 2006: (2) added by revision, pp. 1690, 1693, §§ 8, 17.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2007. (See L. 2006, pp. 1690, 1693.)

ARTICLE 23Inmates with Mental Illness or a Developmental Disability - Transfer

Editor's note: (1) Prior to the repeal and reenactment of this title in 1977, the substantive provisions of this article were contained in article 23 of title 27.

(2) For additional historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor's note at the beginning of this title.

17-23-101. Transfer of inmates who have a mental illness or a developmental disability.

17-23-102. Transfer of recovered inmate.
17-23-103. Transfer to department.

17-23-101. Transfer of inmates who have a mental illness or a developmental disability. (1) The executive director, in coordination with the executive director of the department of human services, is empowered to transfer an inmate who has a mental illness or developmental disability and cannot be safely confined in a correctional facility to an appropriate facility operated by the department of human services for observation and stabilization. The costs associated with care provided in the facility operated by the department of human services shall continue to be charged to the department of human services.

(2) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 846, § 43, effective May 24, 2000.)

(3) Except when a person is serving a sentence to the department concurrently with a commitment to the department of human services, a person who is adjudged to have a mental illness by a court of competent jurisdiction shall not be transferred to any correctional facility, except upon a finding that the person is so dangerous that he or she cannot be safely confined in the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo or Fort Logan. A hearing on the dangerousness of the patient shall be conducted pursuant to the provisions of section 17-23-103.

(4) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 846, § 43, effective May 24, 2000.)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 926, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (1), (2), and (4) amended, p. 697, § 59, effective July 1. L. 91: (1), (3), and (4) amended, p. 1143, § 7, effective May 18. L. 94: (1) amended, p. 604, § 9, effective July 1; (3) amended, p. 2652, § 129, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 846, § 43, effective May 24. L. 2006: (1) and (3) amended, p. 1398, § 46, effective August 7.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-23-101 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: (1) For records required upon transfer, see § 17-1-108.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-23-101 is similar to repealed § 27-23-101, and repealed CSA,

C. 105, § 27(2), relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

For exclusiveness of procedure outlined by this section, see Parker v. People, 108 Colo. 362, 117 P.2d 316 (1941).

Confinement of insane persons is constitutional. The state as parens patriae has general power and is under the general duty of caring for insane persons. The prerogative is a segment of police power. In the exercise of such power, insane persons may be restrained and confined both for the welfare of themselves and for the protection of the public, and if the exactions of due process are met, such restraint and confinement do not violate any constitutional right of the individual. Pigg v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 101 (10th Cir. 1966).

Whether in a federal or state penal system, the disposition of those adjudicated criminally irresponsible is a matter of administrative determination which the federal courts should not undertake to supervise. Sound and practical reasons readily occur in support of the state's designation of the penitentiary as the appropriate place of confinement for those criminally insane who demonstrate dangerous or violent tendencies. One who has been adjudicated in a court of law to be criminally irresponsible, and duly committed thereupon, has no vested right to any particular place of institutionalization. Pigg v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 101 (10th Cir. 1966).

The procedures for transfer among the Colorado correctional institutions are valid, are discretionary with the officials concerned, and give rise to no duty the breach of which is cognizable in a § 1983 action for a violation of the federal Civil Rights Act. Coppinger v. Townsend, 398 F.2d 392 (10th Cir. 1968).

Therefore, state district court judge, superintendent of state hospital, and staff psychiatrist held protected by governmental immunity, in § 1983 action involving revocation of probation and transfer to state penitentiary, those acts being discretionary. Franklin v. Meredith, 386 F.2d 958 (10th Cir. 1967).

No patient may be involuntarily transferred to the penitentiary except upon a finding that he is so dangerous that he cannot be safely confined in the state hospital. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

Subsection (3) authorizes involuntary transfer of the "dangerous", not the nondangerous, high escape risk or the patient allegedly in danger from others. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

17-23-102. Transfer of recovered inmate. When the superintendent of any institution or facility in which any person has been placed by transfer from a correctional facility, as provided in section 17-23-101, is of the opinion that said person is stabilized, it is the duty of said superintendent to give written notice of such recovery to the executive director who shall transfer said person to the place of former commitment for the purpose of serving out said person's sentence, if the same has not expired.

Subsection (3) draws a perfect classification, and it has not been contended that in practice it is drawn less perfectly. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

Therefore transfer and confinement in the penitentiary, in and of themselves, work no denial of equal protection even when subjected to strict scrutiny. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

The accusation that a patient is dangerous is not a criminal charge. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

Therefore a proceeding at which the dangerousness issue is determined is not a criminal proceeding. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

Patients at state hospital do not forfeit all constitutional rights. Just as the inmates of a prison do not forfeit all constitutional rights upon commitment, neither do the patients at the Colorado state hospital, although those rights retained may be somewhat restricted by the nature of the institutional environment. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

Psychiatric care provided in penitentiary must be equivalent to that provided at state hospital. The state must provide patients transferred to the state penitentiary with psychiatric care and treatment substantially equivalent to that provided patients confined at the state hospital. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

Or patients in penitentiary denied equal protection. Confinement of mental patients in the state penitentiary without psychiatric treatment substantially equivalent to that provided patients at the Colorado state hospital denies them equal protection of the laws. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

Dangerousness of patient does not provide rational basis for inferior treatment. Although the dangerousness of the patient may justify his transfer to, and incarceration in, the penitentiary, even when subjected to strict scrutiny, the classification does not provide a rational basis for inferior psychiatric treatment provided dangerous patients who are confined in the penitentiary. Romero v. Schauer, 386 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1974).

An adjudication that an insane person has been restored to reason cannot be had in "habeas corpus" proceedings. Pigg v. Tinsley, 158 Colo. 160, 405 P.2d 687 (1965).

Applied in Ramos v. Lamm, 485 F. Supp. 122 (D. Colo. 1979); People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983).

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 926, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 698, § 60, effective July 1. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 604, § 10, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 847, § 44, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-23-102 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-23-103. Transfer to department. (1) A person alleged to be so dangerous that he cannot be safely confined in the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo or Fort Logan shall be entitled to:

(a) Written notice of the facts upon which the allegation of dangerousness is based;
 (b) A hearing on the issue of his dangerousness before an impartial hearing body prior to transfer; however, if an emergency transfer for safety or security reasons is effected before a hearing can be had, the hearing shall be held within a reasonable time after such transfer;

(c) An opportunity to call witnesses and present evidence in his own behalf when permitting him to do so will not be unduly hazardous to institutional security or safety;

(d) A written statement by the hearing body as to the evidence relied on and the reasons for any finding that he is so dangerous that he cannot be safely confined in the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo or Fort Logan and is recommended for transfer to a correctional facility in the department;

(e) Assistance of legal counsel provided by the state if the patient is indigent and the opportunity for assistance of legal counsel retained by the patient if he is not indigent.

(2) The department shall provide patients transferred to a correctional facility with psychiatric care and treatment substantially equivalent to that provided patients confined at the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo or Fort Logan.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 927, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (1)(d) and (2) amended, p. 698, § 61, effective July 1. L. 91: IP(1), (1)(d), and (2) amended, p. 1144, § 8, effective May 18.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-23-103 as it existed prior to 1977.

ARTICLE 24

Correctional Industries

Editor's note: (1) Prior to the repeal and reenactment of this title in 1977, the substantive provisions of this article were contained in article 25 of title 27.

(2) For additional historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor's note at the beginning of this title.

Cross references: For other provisions concerning work by inmates, see § 17-20-117 and article 29 of this title.

17-24-101.	Short title.	17-24-106.5.	Interstate sales authorized. (Repealed)
17-24-102.	Legislative declaration.	17-24-106.6.	Surplus state property.
17-24-103.	Definitions.	17-24-107.	Records.
17-24-104.	Creation of division of correctional industries and advisory committee - enterprise status of division - duties of committee - sunset review of committee - rules.	17-24-108.	Disclosure of interests.
		17-24-109.	Required programs.
		17-24-109.5.	License plates - highway signs.
		17-24-109.8.	Pilot program - refuse derived fuel. (Repealed)
17-24-105.	Personnel.	17-24-110.	Financial payment incentives.
17-24-106.	General powers of the division.	17-24-111.	Purchasing requirement.
		17-24-112.	Pricing.
17-24-106.3.	Revenue bonds - authority - issuance - requirements - covenants.	17-24-113.	Business operations and budget.

17-24-114.	Provisions for offenders.	17-24-122.	Agreements for the employ-
17-24-115.	Rules and regulations.		ment of inmates by private
17-24-116.	Sole authority.		entities.
17-24-117.	Penalty. (Repealed)	17-24-123.	Clean-up of illegally disposed
17-24-118.	Treasurer and controller to		and abandoned waste tires -
	write off debt. (Repealed)		services to counties.
17-24-119.	Training and employment by	17-24-124.	Inmate disaster relief program organizations - account for		- legislative declaration.
	proceeds and wages.	17-24-125.	Correctional industries at non-
17-24-120.	Treasurer and controller to		state-owned facilities.
	write off amount owed state.	17-24-126.	Canteen, vending machine,
	(Repealed)		and library account created -
17-24-121.	Venture agreements.		receipts - disbursements.

17-24-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Correc-tional Industries Act".

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 927, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-25-101 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-24-102. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that, to the extent possible, all able-bodied offenders should be employed and that the means now provided for the employment of offenders are inadequate to allow a forty-hour-week work assignment for all able-bodied offenders and for correctional indus-tries programs to be operated on a financially profitable basis. Therefore, it is the intent of the general assembly in this article to:

(a) Create a division of correctional industries which is profit-oriented, which generates revenue for its operations and capital investment, which partly reimburses the general fund for the expense of correctional services, and which assumes responsibility for training offenders in general work habits, work skills, and specific training skills that increase their employment prospects when released;

(b) Develop, to the extent possible, industries that provide forty hours of work activity each week for all able-bodied offenders;

(c) Provide an environment for the operation of correctional industries that closely resembles the environment for the business operations of a private corporate entity;

(d) Make the division of correctional industries responsible for and accountable to the general assembly and to the governor for correctional industries programs in this state.

(2) It is the intent of the general assembly that the division of correctional industries assume all duties and functions for correctional industries.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 927, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (2) amended, p. 698, § 62, effective July 1. L. 80: IP(1), (1)(a), and (1)(b) amended, p. 525, § 2, effective March 25.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-25-102 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Ramos v. Lamm, 485 F. Supp. 122 (D. Colo. 1979).

17-24-103. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Able-bodied offender" means an offender in the custody of the department who is to participate in a work program or other productive activity authorized by this article and who is physically able to do so. The term does not include an offender who is participating in a community corrections program, who is a part of the "blind count", or who is ill or unable to participate in a work program or other productive activity.

(2) "Director" means the director of the division of correctional industries.

(3) "Division" means the division of correctional industries created in section 17-24-104.

(4) "Programs" means the correctional industries programs provided and administered by the division but does not include educational services or other productive activities administered by the division of adult parole.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 928, § 10, effective August 1. L. 80: Entire section R&RE, p. 526, § 3, effective March 25. L. 2000: (4) amended, p. 864, § 64, effective May 24.

17-24-104. Creation of division of correctional industries and advisory committee - enterprise status of division - duties of committee - sunset review of committee - rules.

(1) There is hereby created in the department of corrections the division of correctional industries, which shall be under the direction of the director of correctional industries, who shall be appointed by the executive director of the department of corrections pursuant to section 13 of article XII of the state constitution. The division shall constitute an enterprise for the purposes of section 20 of article X of the state constitution so long as it retains the authority to issue revenue bonds and receives less than ten percent of its total annual revenues in grants, as defined in section 24-77-102 (7), C.R.S., from all Colorado state and local governments combined. So long as it constitutes an enterprise pursuant to the provisions of this section, the division of correctional industries shall not be a district for purposes of section 20 of article X of the state constitution.

(2) (a) There is hereby created the correctional industries advisory committee, which shall consist of:

(I) The state treasurer for the duration of his term of office;

(II) Four members of the general assembly, two of whom shall be appointed by the speaker of the house of representatives and two of whom shall be appointed by the president of the senate. Of the legislative members appointed, one shall be a member of the minority party of the house of representatives and one shall be a member of the minority party of the senate. The legislative members shall be appointed in January at the beginning of the regular session held in odd-numbered years and shall serve through the legislative biennium.

(III) The director of the office of state planning and budgeting;

(IV) The executive director of the department of personnel;

(V) Two members from affected industries in the business community, who shall be appointed by the governor for terms of three years each;

(VI) Two members from organized labor, who shall be appointed by the governor for terms of three years each;

(VII) The executive director of the department of corrections; and (VIII) A county sheriff appointed by the governor.

(b) Each member shall hold office for his term and until his successor is appointed and qualified. Any member shall be eligible for reappointment, but he shall not be eligible to serve more than two consecutive full terms. Members of the advisory committee shall receive no compensation for such services but may be reimbursed for their necessary expenses while serving as members of the board. Any vacancy shall be filled in the same manner as for an original appointment and shall be for the unexpired term. The chairman shall be elected by the voting members of the advisory committee from among the appointed members of the general assembly.

(c) Any member appointed by the governor may be removed by the governor and any member appointed by the speaker of the house of representatives or the president of the senate may be removed by the appropriate appointing officer for malfeasance in office, for failure to regularly attend meetings, or for any cause which renders said member incapable of or unable to discharge the duties of his office.

(d) Repealed.

(3) (a) Before any industry is established to utilize the services of prisoners as provided by this article, including but not limited to any industry in a nonstate-owned facility pursuant to section 17-24-125, the advisory committee shall consider the feasibility of establishing such industry and the effect of such establishment on similar industries already established in the state and shall make its recommendations thereon to the director. A majority of the members of the advisory committee at any meeting duly called by the chairman has full power to act upon and resolve any matter or question referred to it by the director.

(b) Repealed.

(4) Repealed.

(5) (a) The advisory committee shall consider the advisability of issuing any revenue bonds and make recommendations in the form of a resolution to the director. A majority of the members of the advisory committee at any meeting duly called by the chairman has full power to act upon and make such recommendations. Any resolution authorizing the issuance of bonds under the terms of this section shall include:

(I) The date of issuance of the bonds;

(II) The maturity date or dates during a period not to exceed thirty years from the date of issuance of the bonds;

(III) The interest rate or rates on, and the denomination or denominations of, the bonds;

(IV) The form of the bond, whether bearer or registered; and

(V) The medium of payment of the bonds and the place where the bonds will be paid.

(b) Any resolution authorizing the issuance of bonds under the terms of this section may:

(I) State that the bonds are to be issued in one or more series;

(II) State a rank or priority of the bonds; and

(III) Provide for redemption of the bonds prior to maturity, with or without premium.

(c) A resolution pertaining to issuance of bonds under this section may contain covenants as to:

(I) The purpose to which the proceeds of sale of the bonds may be applied and to the use and disposition thereof;

(II) Such matters as are customary in the issuance of revenue bonds including, without limitation, the issuance and lien position of other or additional bonds; and

(III) Books of account and the inspection and audit thereof.

(d) The committee may provide for preferential security for any bonds, both principal and interest, to be issued under this section to the extent deemed feasible and desirable by such committee over any bonds that may be issued thereafter.

(e) Upon issuance of a bond by the division pursuant to the provisions of section 17-24-106.3, any resolution made pursuant to the terms of this section shall be deemed a contract with the holders of the bonds, and the duties of the committee under such resolution shall be enforceable by any appropriate action in a court of competent jurisdiction.

(6) Repealed.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 928, § 10, effective August 1. L. 83: (2)(a)(II) and (2)(b) amended and (2)(a)(VII) added, p. 688, § 1, effective May 25; (2)(a)(III) amended, p. 970, § 22, effective July 1, 1984. L. 86: (2)(d) and (4) added and (3) amended, p. 410, §§ 11, 12, effective March 26. L. 88: (3)(b) amended, p. 316, § 8, effective April 14; (2)(a)(V) R&RE, p. 703, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89: (2) and (4) RC&RE, p. 881, § 1, effective April 8. L. 90: (2)(d), (3)(b), and (4) repealed, p. 334, § 24, effective April 3. L. 94: (1) amended and (5) added, p. 313, § 1, effective March 22. L. 95: (2)(a)(IV) amended, p. 639, § 26, effective July 1. L. 98: (2)(a)(VII) and (3)(a) amended and (2)(a)(VIII) added, p. 426, § 2, effective April 21. L. 2006: (6) added, p. 826, § 1, effective May 4. L. 2011: (6) repealed, (HB 11-1301), ch. 297, p. 1424, § 17, effective August 10.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 27-25-104 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) Subsection (2)(d) provided for the repeal of subsection (2), effective July 1, 1988. (See L. 86, p. 410.) Subsection (4)(b) provided for the repeal of subsection (4), effective July 1, 1988. (See L. 86, p. 410.)

17-24-105. Personnel. (1) The director shall have considerable business operations experience, including the supervision and management of production operations.

(2) The director shall have the authority to determine the personnel needs and requirements of the programs and shall have the authority to hire all subordinate personnel pursuant to section 13 of article XII of the state constitution.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 929, § 10, effective August 1.

17-24-106. General powers of the division. (1) In addition to any other powers granted to the division by this article, the division shall have the following powers:

(a) To provide programs which are profit-oriented, which generate revenue for their operation and capital investment, and which partly reimburse the general fund for the use of inmate labor for the expense of adult correctional services;

(b) To develop, to the extent possible, programs that provide forty hours of work activity each week for all able-bodied offenders;

(c) To develop programs that assume responsibility for training offenders in general work habits, general work skills, and specific training skills which increase the offenders' employment prospects when released;

(d) To acquire or purchase equipment, raw materials, supplies, office space, insurance, and services and to engage the supervisory personnel necessary to establish and maintain for the state programs at the state's correctional institutions pursuant to law;

(e) To utilize the labor services of prisoners in the manufacture or production of goods and services that are needed for the construction, operation, or maintenance of any office, department, institution, or agency supported in whole or in part by the state, any political subdivision of the state, or the federal government;

(f) (I) To sell all goods and services, including capital construction items, produced by the programs to agencies supported in whole or in part by the state, any political subdivision of the state, other states or their political subdivisions, or the federal government; or

(II) To sell such goods to lessors who have entered into lease-purchase agreements with any public entity enumerated in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (f) pursuant to which such goods are leased to and used by such public entity;

(g) To adopt, have, and use a seal and to alter the same at its pleasure;

(h) To sue and be sued;

(i) To enter into any contract or agreement not inconsistent with this article or the laws of this state;

(j) To borrow money from the state treasury in an amount not to exceed three million dollars pursuant to section 24-75-203, C.R.S., for a period of time not to exceed ten years. All moneys borrowed, including principal and interest shall be repaid in nine equal annual installments, commencing after the first year. The three-million-dollar limit shall include any amounts loaned to correctional industries in supplemental appropriation bills passed prior to May 22, 1979.

(k) (I) To purchase, lease, trade, exchange, or otherwise acquire, maintain, and dispose of real property and personal property and any interest therein pursuant to law.

(II) to (IV) Repealed.

(V) As used in this paragraph (k), "real property" means land, including land under water, buildings, structures, fixtures, and improvements on land, any property appurtenant to or used in connection with land, and every estate, interest, privilege, easement, right-of-way, and other right in land, legal or equitable, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, rights-of-way, terms for years, and liens, charges, or encumbrances by way of judgment, mortgage, or otherwise, and the indebtedness secured by such liens. However, the term "real property" does not include leasehold interests.

(l) To accept grants or loans from the federal, the state, or any local government and to do all things necessary, not inconsistent with this article or any other laws of this state, in order to avail itself of such aid, assistance, and cooperation under any federal legislation;

(m) To enter into contracts, execute all instruments, and do all things necessary or convenient in the exercise of the powers granted in this article pursuant to law;

(n) To have and exercise all rights and powers necessary or incidental to or implied from the specific powers granted in this article, which powers shall not be considered as a limitation upon any power necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes and intent of this article;

(o) To adopt rules and regulations pursuant to article 4 of title 24, C.R.S., consistent with the provisions of this article;

(p) To sell Colorado state flags produced by the programs to retailers in this state at a price as near to the prevailing wholesale market price and quality as is practical and to individuals at retail price; however, the division must supply the requirements of state agencies and political subdivisions of the state before selling such flags as provided in this paragraph (p). The price of flags to state agencies and political subdivisions of this state shall be determined pursuant to section 17-24-112.

(q) Repealed.

(r) To utilize the labor services of prisoners in order to receive, repair, and distribute surplus property pursuant to the powers and duties provided in part 4 of article 82 of title 24, C.R.S., and to use such labor services in order to receive, repair, sell, or otherwise dispose of surplus state property as provided in section 17-24-106.6;

(s) To authorize and issue revenue bonds pursuant to the provisions of section 17-24-106.3;

(t) To establish and operate a canteen for the use and benefit of the inmates of state correctional facilities and to operate vending machines for the use of visitors to such facilities.

(2) Repealed.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 929, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (1)(j) amended, p. 707, § 1, effective May 22. L. 80: (1)(f) amended, p. 528, § 1, effective February 29; (1)(a) and (1)(b) amended, p. 526, § 4, effective March 25. L. 81: (1)(p) and (1)(q) added, p. 962, § 1, effective May 18. L. 82: (1)(j) amended, p. 623, § 16, effective April 2. L. 83: (1)(p) amended and (1)(q) repealed, p. 692, §§ 1, 2, effective March 3; (1)(f) amended, p. 690, § 1, effective April 29. L. 86: (2) added, p. 757, § 12, effective July 1; (1)(r) added, p. 753, § 1, effective July 1, 1987. L. 92: (1)(k) amended, p. 1062, § 1, effective June 1. L. 94: (1)(s) added, p. 315, § 2, effective March 22. L. 96: (1)(k)(III) amended, p. 1266, § 182, effective August 7. L. 97: (1)(j) amended, p. 78, § 1, effective March 24. L. 98: (1)(k)(II) to (1)(k)(IV) repealed, p. 728, § 12, effective May 18. L. 2002: (1)(r) amended, p. 220, § 2, effective April 3; (1)(t) added, p. 56, § 1, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 27-25-103 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) Subsection (2)(b) provided for the repeal of subsection (2), effective July 1, 1988. (See L. 86, p. 757.)

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1996 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 237, Session Laws of Colorado 1996.

17-24-106.3. Revenue bonds - authority - issuance - requirements - covenants.

(1) (a) Subject to the prior approval of the correctional industries advisory committee acting by resolution in accordance with the provisions of section 17-24-104 (5) and from both houses of the general assembly acting either by bill or joint resolution, the division may, in accordance with the requirements of subsection (2) of this section, authorize and issue revenue bonds in an amount not to exceed one million dollars in the aggregate for expenses of the division.

(b) All bonds issued by the division shall provide that:

(I) No holder of any such bond may compel the state or any subdivision thereof to exercise its appropriation or taxing power; and

(II) The bond does not constitute a debt of the state and is payable only from the net revenues allocated to the division for expenses as designated in such bond.

(2) Any bonds issued pursuant to the terms of this section may be sold at public or private sale. If bonds are to be sold at a public sale, the division shall advertise the sale in such manner as the general assembly authorizes by bill or joint resolution. All bonds issued pursuant to the terms of this section shall be sold at a price not less than the par value thereof, together with all accrued interest to the date of delivery.

(3) Notwithstanding any provisions of the law to the contrary, all bonds issued pursuant to this section are negotiable.

(4) Bonds issued under this section shall be valid and binding obligations, regardless of whether, prior to the delivery thereof and payment therefor, any or all of the persons whose signatures appear thereon have ceased to serve in their official capacities.

(5) (a) Except as otherwise provided in a resolution authorizing bonds pursuant to the provisions of section 17-24-104 (5), all bonds of the same issue under this section shall have a prior and paramount lien on the net revenues pledged therefor.

(b) Bonds of the same issue or series issued under this section shall be equally and ratably secured, without priority by reason of number, date, sale, execution, or delivery, by a lien on the net revenue pledged in accordance with the terms of the resolution authorizing the bonds.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 315, § 3, effective March 22.

17-24-106.5. Interstate sales authorized. (Repealed)

Source: L. 79: Entire section added, p. 709, § 1, effective May 22. L. 80: Entire section repealed, p. 528, § 2, effective February 29.

17-24-106.6. Surplus state property. (1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, p. 218, § 1, effective April 3, 2002.)

(b) "State agency" means this state or any department or other agency of the state, but not including the department of transportation or the Auraria higher education center established in article 70 of title 23, C.R.S.

(c) "Surplus state property" means any equipment and supplies no longer having any use to the state or any state agency.

(2) The director shall promulgate rules to be utilized by the division in governing:

(a) The sale or disposal of surplus state property by public auction, competitive sealed bidding, or daily warehouse sales; and

(b) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, p. 218, 1, effective April 3, 2002.)

(c) The circumstances under which a public employee may purchase surplus state property.

(d) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2011, (HB 11-1301), ch. 297, p. 1424, § 16, effective August 10, 2011.)

(2.1) (a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, p. 218, § 1, effective April 3, 2002.)

(b) Repealed.

(c) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, p. 218, § 1, effective April 3, 2002.)

(3) Such rules shall include, but shall not be limited to:

(a) The preparation of a perpetual inventory of surplus state property collected by the division;

(a.5) A procedure to inform all state agencies of the availability of such surplus state property;

(b) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, p. 218, § 1, effective April 3, 2002.)

(c) Procedures coordinating, to the extent possible, the programs administered by the division under section 17-24-106 with the division's responsibility with respect to surplus state property;

(d) A procedure whereby surplus state property which is not sold or otherwise disposed of within six months after being received by the division shall be disposed of as soon as possible thereafter.

(4) Any moneys used to cover the administrative costs of the transfer of responsibilities with respect to surplus state property from the department of administration to the department of corrections shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the surplus property fund, which fund is hereby created, and such fund shall be subject to appropriation by the general assembly for the purposes of this section.

(5) Any moneys in any accounts or funds administered by the department of administration that are derived from the administration of part 4 of article 82 of title 24, C.R.S., shall be transferred to the surplus property fund.

(6) The division may assess fees from the disposer or recipient of any surplus state property, which fees shall be limited to reasonable administrative costs of the division incurred in effecting the collection of surplus state property. All such fees shall be credited to the surplus property fund.

Source: L. 86: Entire section added, p. 753, § 2, effective July 1, 1987. L. 90: (2)(a) amended and (2.1) added, p. 961, § 1, effective June 9. L. 91: (1)(b) amended, p. 1058, § 13, effective July 1. L. 97: (2.1)(c) amended, p. 1009, § 10, effective August 6. L. 98: (5) amended, p. 820, § 19, effective August 5. L. 2002: Entire section amended, p. 218, § 1, effective April 3. L. 2005: (2)(a) and (6) amended and (2)(c) added, p. 33, § 1, effective August 8. L. 2006: (2)(c) amended and (2)(d) added, p. 826, § 2, effective May 4. L. 2011: (1)(b) and (2) amended, (HB 11-1301), ch. 297, p. 1424, § 16, effective August 10. L. 2012: (1)(b) amended, (HB 12-1081), ch. 210, p. 902, § 1, effective August 8.

Editor's note: Subsection (2.1)(b) provided for the repeal of subsection (2.1)(b), effective September 1, 1990. (See L. 90, p. 961.)

17-24-107. Records. The account of all moneys received by and disbursed on behalf of the division shall also be a public record. Any public record of the division shall be open for inspection by any citizen.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 930, § 10, effective August 1.

17-24-108. Disclosure of interests. Any employee or any other agent or adviser of the division who has a direct or indirect interest in any contract or transaction with the division shall disclose this interest to the division. No such employee or other agent or adviser having such an interest shall participate on behalf of the division in the authorization of any such contract or transaction.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 930, § 10, effective August 1.

17-24-109. Required programs. (1) The division shall establish programs which are responsible for physical plant and facility maintenance, vehicle maintenance, and food and laundry services for each of the state's correctional facilities, and providing license plates and highway signs for the state.

(2) All staff members, authorized full-time equivalent employees, capital equipment, and inventories currently used for physical plant maintenance and food and laundry services shall be resources dedicated to the establishment of the correctional industries program.

(3) All vocational training programs, personnel, inventories, and equipment shall be resources dedicated to the establishment of the correctional industries program.

(4) A portion of the real property at each correctional institution shall be designated by the executive director as an industry area, and all facilities and buildings within this area shall be assigned to the division in cooperation with the division of adult parole. The responsibility for the maintenance and upkeep of these facilities, buildings, and grounds shall be vested in the division.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 930, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (1) amended, p. 698, § 63, effective July 1. L. 80: (4) amended, p. 526, § 5, effective March 25. L. 2000: (4) amended, p. 864, § 65, effective May 24.

17-24-109.5. License plates - highway signs. (1) The division is authorized to purchase such equipment, machinery, and other materials as may be necessary to manufacture and deliver motor vehicle license plates, validating tabs or decals, road signs, markers, and metal badges used by any department and manufactured under the authority of this article. Each year the executive director of the department of revenue shall estimate the number of license plates and validating tabs or decals that will be required and the cost of manufacturing thereof for the year such estimate is made and shall certify such estimates to the joint budget committee of the general assembly.

(2) During the year such estimate is so made and certified by the executive director of the department of revenue from the sale of motor vehicle license plates and validating tabs or decals, the joint budget committee shall consider such estimate in making its budget recommendation for the division of correctional industries to the general assembly. Any amounts appropriated by the general assembly for the purposes of this section shall be used and expended by the division of correctional industries to purchase such equipment and machinery, including repairs thereof, sheet steel or aluminum, paints, enamels, and other materials and support services as may be necessary to manufacture and deliver as a finished product motor vehicle license plates required by the executive director of the department of revenue to be furnished under the motor vehicle laws of this state.

Source: L. 78: Entire section added, p. 359, § 1, effective May 2. L. 87: (2) amended, p. 663, § 2, effective July 1. L. 88: Entire section amended, p. 705, § 1, effective July 1, 1989. L. 99: (2) amended, p. 550, § 1, effective May 7.

17-24-109.8. Pilot program - refuse derived fuel. (Repealed)

Source: L. 80: Entire section added, p. 529, § 1, effective May 1.

Editor's note: Subsection (6) provided for the repeal of this section, effective December 31, 1980. (See L. 80, p. 529.)

17-24-110. Financial payment incentives. (1) The division shall establish a system of financial payments to serve as an incentive for more effective and efficient performance of its programs.

(2) The division shall be provided, from the diagnostic services unit of the division of adult parole, personnel testing services that perform a vocational assessment of work experience and training needs; from the superintendent of each correctional institution, offender labor services; and from the superintendent of each such institution, security services at the work site, in addition to perimeter and scheduled security, when the division and the superintendent determine such additional services are reasonably necessary to ensure the safety of the public, the staff, and the offenders.

(3) The division shall provide the superintendent at each correctional institution with physical plant operations and maintenance services, food services, and laundry services.

(4) The director and the director of the division of adult parole are authorized to negotiate resource allocations for the exchange of services set forth in this section, subject to the annual review by the joint budget committee and the governor and appropriation by the general assembly. Payment rates shall be negotiated and set before the exchange of any of the services.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 930, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: (2) and (4) amended, p. 857, § 66, effective May 24.

17-24-111. Purchasing requirement. (1) (a) The director is hereby authorized to develop programs that produce goods and services, including capital construction items, which are used by agencies financed in whole or in part by the state, any political subdivision thereof, or the federal government and to develop programs that produce goods, including capital construction items, which are used by public entities involved in lease-purchase agreements as provided in section 17-24-106 (1) (f) (II). The director shall also develop programs to market goods and services to distributor networks, nonprofit organizations, private sector retailers, and the general public. The state and its institutions, agencies, and departments may purchase through the department of personnel or purchasing agency authorized by section 24-102-302 (2), C.R.S., such goods and services as are produced by the division, unless similar goods and services can be obtained at or below the amount established for small purchases which are exempt from the competitive sealed bidding requirements of the "Procurement Code" contained in part 2 of article 103 of title 24, C.R.S. Goods and services produced by the division shall be provided at a price comparable to the current market price for similar goods and services. State agencies may purchase goods and services from sources other than the division; except that office furniture and office systems shall be purchased from the division. Printing services shall be purchased from the division unless a state agency operates its own printing operation. If the division is not able to provide its goods or services at a price or level of quality which is comparable to that provided by the private sector or provide them in a timely manner, which price, level of quality, or timeliness is determined by the department of personnel, the department of personnel shall make a certification to that effect, and the state agency purchasing such goods or services shall not be required to purchase them from the division.

(b) Repealed.

(c) The financial and staff resources dedicated to said purchasing function in the affected agency shall be under the authority of the department of personnel during the period of suspension, and purchases made for the affected agency shall be in accordance with the requirements of this subsection (1).

(d) When a state agency issues an invitation for bids pursuant to section 24-103-202, C.R.S., for goods or services which are available from the division of correctional industries, as shown on the list provided by the division pursuant to paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section, the division of correctional industries shall be included on its list of prospective bidders.

(e) Repealed.

(f) The division of correctional industries shall have access to the purchasing records of the department of personnel and the records of purchasing agents of state agencies established pursuant to section 24-102-302, C.R.S.

(2) (a) Repealed.

(b) State agencies which have purchased goods and services available from the division of correctional industries, as shown on the list provided by the division pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), shall, as a part of their annual budget requests to the joint budget committee of the general assembly, report on all such purchases and of the value of the goods and services actually purchased from the division of correctional industries, and the division of correctional industries shall, as a part of its annual budget request to the joint budget committee, report on the value of all goods and services sold to each state agency.

(c) and (d) Repealed.

(3) Repealed.

(4) To the extent the articles and products which are produced or manufactured by the division are not purchased pursuant to the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, said articles or products may be purchased from the division on the open market by any person at the then current prevailing market prices.

(5) Articles and products manufactured or produced by the division shall first be used in supplying the requirements of state agencies and secondly in supplying the political subdivisions of the state which purchase the same. Only the surplus of such articles and products left after meeting the requirements of state agencies and their political subdivisions shall be made available for purchase by the general public.

(6) (a) Notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary, on and after July 1, 2012, a state institution of higher education or the Auraria higher education center created in article 70 of title 23, C.R.S., may, but is not required to, purchase goods and services from the division pursuant to this section. In purchasing furniture and office systems that exceed the amount established for small purchases that are exempt from the competitive sealed bidding requirements of the "Procurement Code" contained in part 2 of article 103 of title 24, C.R.S., a state institution of higher education or the Auraria higher education center shall request a bid from the division for the purchase, and the institution or the center shall consider the bid on a competitive basis.

(b) Nothing in paragraph (a) of this subsection (6) shall require a state institution of higher education or the Auraria higher education center to engage in competitive bidding for an item or items if the institution or the center chooses to use the division as the sole source supplier for the item or items.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 931, § 10, effective August 1. L. 81: (1), (2), and (3) amended, p. 1285, § 2, effective January 1, 1982. L. 83: (1) amended, p. 690, § 2, effective April 29. L. 84: (1), (2), and (3) amended, p. 525, § 1, effective May 2. L. 87: (1)(e) repealed, p. 349, § 4, effective July 1; (2)(c) and (2)(d) added, p. 664, § 3, effective July 1. L. 88: (1)(a) and (2)(a) amended and (1)(b) and (3) repealed, pp. 703, 704, §§ 2, 3, effective July 1. L. 95: (1)(c) amended, p. 639, § 27, effective July 1. L. 96: (1)(a), (1)(c), (1)(f), and (2)(a) amended, p. 1514, § 44, effective June 1. L. 98: (2)(a) repealed, p. 728, § 13, effective May 18. L. 2011: (6) added, (HB 11-1301), ch. 297, p. 1424, § 18, effective August 10.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 27-25-106 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) Subsections (2)(c) and (2)(d) provided for the repeal of subsections (2)(c) and (2)(d), respectively, effective June 30, 1994. (See L. 87, p. 664.)

Cross references: For the authority of state agencies to contract with private enterprise for goods or services, see § 6-2-115.5.

17-24-112. Pricing. (1) The division shall fix and determine the prices at which all labor is performed and at which all goods and services produced are sold. Such prices for industry products shall be as near the prevailing market prices for similar goods and services and quality as is practical. Such prices, other than prices for agricultural products, shall not exceed the wholesale market prices for like articles and products in the case of sales to the state or its political subdivisions or the prevailing retail market prices for like articles and products in the case of sales to the general public.

(2) The division shall prepare catalogs containing the description of all goods and services produced, with the price of each item. Copies of such catalogs shall be sent by the division to all state agencies and shall be available for political subdivisions of the state and the federal government.

(3) The director shall ensure that the level of quality for goods and services produced is comparable to similar goods and services available from the private sector. The director shall determine if the quality of goods and services produced is approximately the same as the quality requested by the purchasing agencies and departments. The sale of such goods or services shall not give rise to any warranties, but, in the case of a sale to a state agency or political subdivision, if the quality of the goods or services is not approximately the same as that requested, the director shall refund the purchase price or replace the goods or services. In the case of a sale of surplus goods or services, no refund or replacement shall be made after ninety days from the date of the sale.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 932, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-25-108 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-24-113. Business operations and budget. (1) The division is hereby authorized, within appropriations which may be at its disposal, to procure or cause to be procured and maintained all necessary materials, supplies, space, services, and equipment required for the proper operation of the division.

(2) The division shall require that the operation of industries be conducted on a thorough-going business basis, and the value of the labor and the amount of money received shall be accurately recorded, together with the number of work hours used in the production of correctional industries goods and services.

(3) Except as provided in section 17-24-126, all revenues collected by the division from the sale of industry goods and services and from the sale or disposal of surplus state property shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to a special revolving enterprise account designated as the correctional industries account. All interest derived from the deposit and investment of moneys in the correctional industries account shall be credited to said account. All moneys in said account shall be used for the purchase of requirements necessary for the production of industry goods and services, for the responsibilities set forth in section 17-24-106.6, and for all necessary personnel, in accordance with the annual appropriation by the general assembly; but such account shall not exceed the requirements of activities authorized by this article, as determined necessary by the director, and any excess, upon order of the director, shall be transferred to the general fund by the state treasurer.

(4) Except as provided in section 17-24-126, all acquisitions, purchases, and loan repayments of the division shall be payable out of the revenues derived from the sale of correctional industry goods and services authorized in this article and from the sale or disposal of surplus state property under section 17-24-106.6.

(5) The division is authorized to enter into a borrowing arrangement with the state treasurer or other organizations when initial money is needed for a new or expanded program, if the advisory committee has approved such an arrangement and such an arrangement is within the authorized appropriation for the division.

(6) The director shall make regular reports, including monthly operating statements and annual financial reports, to the governor, the joint budget committee, and the office of state planning and budgeting regarding the financial operation of the division.

(7) On January 1 of each year, the division shall submit a proposed annual budget as a part of the total budget of the department of corrections for the following fiscal year beginning July 1. The budget of the division shall be reviewed by the advisory committee. This proposed budget shall contain at least the following:

- (a) Repealed.
- (b) A statement of proposed industry products and services to be produced by the division during said fiscal year and their prices;
- (c) A statement of the past, current, and expected number of offenders employed in each program and at each institution;
- (d) A financial statement of past, current, and expected production levels, sales revenues, operating expenses, profits, and reversions to the general fund of the division;
- (e) A statement of the payment rates specified in section 17-24-110;
- (f) A statement of past, current, and expected staff personnel;
- (g) Capital requirements for equipment and facilities;
- (h) All budgetary schedules, forms, and other information required by the joint budget committee.

(8) The general assembly, upon recommendation of the joint budget committee, shall make appropriations based on the evaluation of the budget request that determines the production level and financial operation of the division.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 932, § 10, effective August 1. L. 86: (3) and (4) amended, p. 754, § 3, effective July 1, 1987. L. 93: (7)(a) repealed, p. 29, § 1, effective March 18. L. 97: (3) amended, p. 78, § 2, effective March 24. L. 98: (3) amended, p. 368, § 2, effective September 1. L. 2002: (3) and (4) amended, p. 220, § 3, effective April 3; (3) and (4) amended, p. 56, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 27-25-111 as it existed prior to 1977.

(2) Amendments to subsections (3) and (4) by House Bill 02-1171 and House Bill 02-1286 were harmonized.

17-24-114. Provisions for offenders. (1) The director shall make all offender work assignments within the division. Each such offender work assignment shall take into account the diagnostic services unit recommendation of employment training needs of the offender and the security classification of the offender as determined by the superintendent of each correctional institution.

(2) The director shall establish the rate of compensation for the offenders working. The director and the director of the division of adult parole shall have the authority to make rules and regulations regarding the method and time of compensation payments. A portion of such compensation shall be paid to the division of adult parole to defray the cost of operations for adult parole, and a portion of such compensation shall be paid to each offender in relation to the number of hours worked, type of work assignment, and quality of work performed. Payment rates shall be established on an annual basis after review by the joint budget committee and by appropriation of the general assembly. No offender shall be compensated if he is placed in administrative or punitive segregation or if he is able-bodied but refuses to participate in an available work program or other productive activity. The department will provide hygienic items to all inmates in administrative or punitive segregation.

(3) The division of adult parole is empowered to grant earned time allowances consistent with part 4 of article 22.5 of this title in relation to an offender's work performance and evaluation, as recommended by the director.

(4) The division has the power to establish rules and regulations governing the employment, conduct, and management of offenders while assigned to programs. All such rules and regulations pertaining to the payment, employment, conduct, and management of offenders shall be published and posted for offenders.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 934, § 10, effective August 1. L. 78: (2) amended, p. 360, § 2, effective May 2. L. 80: (2) amended, p. 526, § 6, effective March 25. L. 90: (3) amended, p. 954, § 23, effective May 25. L. 96: (3) amended, p. 1149, § 8, effective June 1. L. 2000: (2) and (3) amended, p. 857, § 67, effective May 24.

17-24-115. Rules and regulations. Pursuant to article 4 of title 24, C.R.S., the director has the power to promulgate the rules and regulations which are deemed necessary for the implementation of this article.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 934, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-25-110 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

In light of the rules concerning prison employment promulgated pursuant to this section, prisoners can claim no legitimate expectation of continued employment in their prison work assignments. Rather v. Conte, 849 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1992).

17-24-116. Sole authority. The division shall have sole authority for operating any programs within the adult correctional institutions of this state.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 934, § 10, effective August 1.

17-24-117. Penalty. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 934, § 10, effective August 1. L. 93: Entire section repealed, p. 2129, § 2, effective September 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 27-25-112 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-24-118. Treasurer and controller to write off debt. (Repealed)

Source: L. 79: Entire section added, p. 711, § 1, effective June 7.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 1980. (See L. 79, p. 711.)

17-24-119. Training and employment by organizations - account for proceeds and wages. (1) The division, after consultation with the respective superintendents of the correctional facilities and with the director of the division of adult parole, is authorized to contract with any corporation, association, labor organization, or private nonprofit organization or with any federal or state agency for the purpose of training or employing offenders who have been committed to the department of corrections or who have been assigned to a community correctional program.

(2) Proceeds and wages due an offender from the sale of products produced by the offender under a program authorized by subsection (1) of this section shall be held in an account maintained by the division and distributed periodically for:

(a) Compensation of the victim of the crime committed by the offender in an amount not to exceed forty percent of the offender's wages for expenses actually and reasonably incurred as a result of the injury to the person or property of the victim, including medical expenses, loss of earning power, and any other pecuniary loss directly resulting from the injury to the person or property or the death of the victim, which a court of competent jurisdiction determines to be reasonable and proper;

(b) Payment of such amounts for the support of the offender's dependents as is deemed appropriate by the division after consultation with the respective superintendents of the correctional facilities and with the director of the division of adult parole;

(c) Establishment of funds in trust for the offender upon his release; except that an amount consistent with the payment plan for existing correctional industries programs shall be allocated by the division to the offender for personal expenses while serving his sentence;

(d) Voluntary payment of such amounts to the victims assistance and law enforcement fund established in section 24-33.5-506, C.R.S., as is deemed appropriate by the division after consultation with the respective superintendents of the correctional facilities and with the director of the division of adult parole.

(3) A portion of said wages and proceeds in an amount determined by the division, but not to exceed twenty percent, may be used to defray the costs incident to the offender's confinement.

(4) The provisions of this section shall apply only to a program established pursuant to this section and not to other programs established pursuant to this article.

Source: L. 81: Entire section added, p. 963, § 1, effective May 27. L. 88: (1) amended, p. 1430, § 8, effective June 11. L. 96: (2)(d) added, p. 1149, § 9, effective June 1. L. 2000: (1), (2)(b), and (2)(d) amended, p. 857, § 68, effective May 24.

17-24-120. Treasurer and controller to write off amount owed state. (Repealed)

Source: L. 82: Entire section added, p. 310, § 1, effective March 25.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 1983. (See L. 82, p. 310.)

17-24-121. Venture agreements. (1) The department of corrections, working through the division, is authorized to enter into agreements with private persons for the utilization of inmate labor in the manufacture, processing, or assembly of components, finished goods, services, or product lines within facilities owned or leased by the department. Such agreements shall be subject to the prior review of the attorney general and the correctional industries advisory committee.

(2) The department is authorized to enter into agreements subject to state fiscal rules and the prior review of the attorney general which allow for shared financing by the division and the private contractor for the facility, equipment, raw materials, and operation of industries developed pursuant to the provisions of this section.

(3) Inmates producing goods and services under the terms of an agreement authorized by this section shall be paid on a scale to be determined by the executive director of the department in the best interests of the division.

(4) The division is authorized to market goods and services produced under a venture agreement to any office, department, institution, or agency supported in whole or in part by the state or any political subdivision thereof or to any other state, the federal government, any nonprofit organization, any private sector retailer, or the general public.

(5) The wages of an inmate working under an agreement entered into pursuant to this section with a private person shall be distributed under guidelines established by the executive director in order to offset the cost of imprisonment and incidental expenses, pay court-ordered restitution, make voluntary payments to the victims assistance and law enforcement fund established in section 24-33.5-506, C.R.S., pay the pro rata share of child support cost as established by the department of human services, and establish a savings account to assist the inmate upon release and to offset state costs at the time of release.

Source: L. 87: Entire section added, p. 664, § 4, effective July 1. L. 94: (5) amended, p. 1813, § 6, effective June 1. L. 95: Entire section RC&RE, p. 875, § 9, effective May 24. L. 96: (5) amended, p. 1149, § 10, effective June 1.

Editor's note: Prior to this section being recreated and reenacted in 1995, former subsection (6) provided for the repeal of this section, effective June 30, 1994. (See L. 87, p. 664.)

17-24-122. Agreements for the employment of inmates by private entities. (1) The department of corrections, working through the division, is authorized to enter into agreements with private persons or entities for the utilization of inmate labor in the manufacturing, processing, or assembly of components, finished goods, services, or product lines within facilities owned or leased by the department. Such agreements shall be subject to the prior review of the attorney general and the correctional industries advisory committee.

(2) The department is authorized to enter into agreements subject to state fiscal rules and the prior review of the attorney general which allow for financing by the private contractor for equipment, raw materials, training of workers, and operation of industries developed pursuant to the provisions of this section. In any such agreement, the department may provide for the recovery of the costs of providing facilities for the private contractor by requiring the payment of rent for such facilities.

(3) Agreements entered into pursuant to this section shall provide that any inmate assigned pursuant to section 17-24-114 (1) to work as inmate labor for a private person or entity which made such agreement pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall be an employee of the private person or entity and, notwithstanding section 17-24-114 (2), such inmate shall be paid at least the federal minimum wage for the labor performed. Such wages shall be paid to the department of corrections and shall be held in trust for the inmate in a revenue-producing account until the inmate is paroled or discharged from custody. The provisions of section 8-40-301 (3), C.R.S., shall apply to any inmate employed by a private person or entity pursuant to this section.

(4) Out of the wages held in trust for an inmate pursuant to subsection (3) of this section, the department of corrections shall deduct up to fifty percent of such wages to be used to defray the costs incident to the inmate's confinement.

(5) Out of the wages held in trust for an inmate pursuant to subsection (3) of this section, and subsequent to the deduction made pursuant to subsection (4) of this section, the department of corrections shall deduct periodically for the following purposes and in the following order of priority:

(a) Compensation of the victim of the crime committed by the inmate for expenses actually and reasonably incurred as a result of the injury to the person or property of the victim, including medical expenses, loss of earning power, and any other pecuniary loss directly resulting from the injury to the person or property or the death of the victim, which a court of competent jurisdiction determines or has determined to be reasonable and proper;

(a.5) Voluntary payment of such amounts to the victims assistance and law enforcement fund established in section 24-33.5-506, C.R.S., as is deemed appropriate by the executive director of the department of corrections;

(b) Payment of such amounts for the support of the inmate's dependents as is deemed appropriate by the executive director of the department of corrections, taking into account any court orders for such support; and

(c) Payment of incidental expenses of the inmate while the inmate is still in custody.

(6) Any amounts of money which remain in trust for the inmate after the deductions made pursuant to this section shall be paid to the inmate upon parole or discharge from custody. The executive director of the department of corrections shall have the discretion to pay to the inmate any amounts of money which remain in trust for such inmate in installments over the period of one year from the date of parole or discharge. If an inmate dies prior to discharge from custody and the body goes unclaimed for more than five days, the amount remaining in trust may be used to defray any costs incurred by the state of Colorado in connection with the burial of such inmate and any amount remaining after burial costs have been paid or the body has been claimed shall be paid to the inmate's estate.

(7) Any agreement entered into pursuant to this section shall provide that appropriate security measures for a state correctional facility shall not be jeopardized due to any operations which result from such agreement.

(8) In making offender work assignments pursuant to section 17-24-114, there shall be a presumption that the most fit and able inmates shall be assigned by the director to a work assignment pursuant to this section.

Source: L. 93: Entire section added, p. 2127, § 1, effective September 1. L. 95: (1) amended, p. 1097, § 17, effective May 31. L. 96: (5)(a.5) added, p. 1150, § 11, effective June 1.

17-24-123. Clean-up of illegally disposed and abandoned waste tires - services to counties. (1) The general assembly finds that the clean-up, removal, and transportation of illegally dumped, stored, or abandoned waste tires is necessary and that inmate labor is one source of labor that should be used to correct these problems.

(2) The division is authorized to:

(a) Provide labor using supervised inmate crews to counties or private entities for the clean-up, loading, and any on-site processing of illegally dumped, stored, or abandoned waste tires prior to transporting such waste tires to a county- or state-approved recycling or disposal facility and to pay the personnel and operating costs necessary to do so;

(b) Contract with county and city and county sheriffs for the provision of supervised inmate crews to clean up illegally dumped, stored, or abandoned waste tires;

(c) Contract with private haulers for the moving of illegally dumped, stored, or abandoned waste tires to a county- or state-approved recycling or disposal facility and shall do so whenever feasible and cost-effective; and

(d) Pay any fees necessary for a county- or state-approved recycling or disposal facility to accept illegally dumped, stored, or abandoned waste tires.

(3) Any moneys received from contracts entered into pursuant to this section shall be credited to the correctional industries account described in section 17-24-113 (3).

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 813, § 1, effective May 23.

17-24-124. Inmate disaster relief program - legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly finds that inmates housed in certain prison facilities throughout the state form a labor pool that could be safely utilized to fight forest fires, help with flood relief, and assist in the prevention of or clean up after other natural or man-made disasters.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires, "disaster" means the occurrence or imminent threat of widespread or severe damage, injury, or loss of life or property resulting from any natural cause or cause of human origin, but "disaster" does not include any hazardous substance incident, oil spill or other contamination, epidemic, air pollution, blight, drought, infestation, explosion, civil disturbance, or hostile military or paramilitary action.

(3) There is hereby established in the division the inmate disaster relief program, referred to in this section as the "program". The purpose of the program shall be to establish one or more inmate disaster relief crews composed of inmates from minimum restrictive, or minimum security facilities. An inmate shall receive an additional amount of earned time pursuant to section 17-22.5-405 in the amount of one day of earned time for every day spent at the site of a disaster. An inmate disaster relief crew may be utilized by the state or by local or federal governmental agencies that apply to the division for assistance.

(4) The executive director shall promulgate rules governing the program including but not limited to:

- (a) The inmates who are eligible to participate in the program;
- (b) Types of disasters to which an inmate disaster relief crew may be sent;
- (c) The security measures that are required to prevent escapes and protect the public;
- (d) The procedures that must be followed before an inmate disaster relief crew may be utilized;

(e) The fees that may be charged by the division for the provision of services by an inmate disaster relief crew; and

(f) The compensation that may be paid to inmates participating in the program.

(5) The division is authorized to purchase equipment and obtain necessary training for any inmate disaster relief crews.

(6) The department is authorized to solicit, accept, and expend grants, donations, gifts, and other moneys to defer the costs of equipping and training one or more inmate disaster relief crews. The program shall not be implemented or made available to other agencies until sufficient moneys are available from appropriations, grants, donations, gifts, and other moneys to cover the costs of equipping and training at least one inmate disaster relief crew.

Source: L. 98: Entire section added, p. 17, § 1, effective August 5. L. 2001: (3) and (6) amended, p. 1452, § 1, effective June 5.

17-24-125. Correctional industries at nonstate-owned facilities. (1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Inmate labor program" means a program operated at a nonstate-owned prison facility as a business or for profit utilizing in whole or in part labor of inmates, except that "inmate labor program" does not include a program that is operated by a local government or combination of local governments of this state as a nonprofit business within the jurisdiction boundaries of the local government or governments and whose operation has been reviewed and approved by the local government or local governments.

(b) "Nonstate-owned prison facility" means any private correctional facility or any jail or other detention facility operated by a political subdivision of the state that houses state prisoners or that houses inmates from another state whose incarceration in this state is approved pursuant to section 17-1-104.5; except that "nonstate-owned prison facility" shall not include a jail or other detention facility operated by a political subdivision of the state that only houses state prisoners pursuant to a contract under section 16-11-308.5 (2), C.R.S., or a facility in which a community corrections program is operated pursuant to article 27 of this title.

(2) (a) On and after March 1, 1999, all inmate labor programs operated at a nonstate-owned prison facility shall be approved by the division prior to commencing operations.

(b) Repealed.

(3) (a) On or before February 1, 1999, the division shall promulgate rules governing the approval required by subsection (2) of this section including but not limited to:

(I) Establishing a procedure for approving inmate labor programs that shall include review by the correctional industries advisory committee of a business plan for each inmate labor program;

(II) Establishing the duration of any approval and procedures for reapproval and revocation of any approval;

(III) Requiring all inmate labor programs to comply with all federal laws and regulations relating to the use of inmate labor;

(IV) Requiring that all goods or services be priced at prevailing market rates; except that goods or services sold to governmental or nonprofit entities may be priced at wholesale cost;

(V) Requiring that persons employed by a nonstate-owned prison facility shall not be involved in decisions involving the inmate labor program relating to persons or entities with whom the person has a conflict or potential conflict of interest;

(VI) Requiring that inmates be compensated as determined by rule promulgated by the department;

(VII) Requiring that all records pertaining to inmate labor programs shall be available for inspection and copying by representatives of the division to ensure compliance with this section and any rules promulgated thereunder; and

(VIII) Requiring nonstate-owned prison facilities to reimburse the division for any expenses incurred in certifying and monitoring the inmate labor programs.

(b) The rules promulgated pursuant to this subsection (3) shall be substantially similar to the rules governing programs at facilities operated by the department.

(4) (a) Each nonstate-owned prison facility operating an inmate labor program shall hold wages earned by a state prisoner in trust for the prisoner in a revenue-producing account until the prisoner is paroled or discharged from custody. Out of the wages held in trust for a state prisoner pursuant to the provisions of this paragraph (a), the nonstate-owned prison facility shall make disbursements pursuant to the provisions of section 17-24-122 (4) and (5). Section 17-24-122 (6) shall also apply to any wages held in trust for a state prisoner pursuant to this paragraph (a).

(b) Each nonstate-owned prison facility operating an inmate labor program shall hold and distribute wages earned by an inmate from a state other than Colorado pursuant to the statutes and rules of that state or the contract between that state and the prison facility.

Source: L. 98: Entire section added, p. 424, § 1, effective April 21.

Editor's note: Subsection (2)(b)(II) provided for the repeal of subsection (2)(b), effective January 1, 2000. (See L. 98, p. 424.)

17-24-126. Canteen, vending machine, and library account created - receipts - disbursements. (1) There is hereby created in the state treasury a special revolving enterprise account to be known as the canteen, vending machine, and library account. The account shall be used by the division to establish and operate a canteen for the use and benefit of the inmates of state correctional facilities and to operate vending machines for the use of visitors to state correctional facilities. The moneys in the account shall be continuously available to the division and are appropriated for the purposes set forth in subsection (3) of this section.

(2) The canteen and vending machines shall be managed by the division, and they shall not be operated in any manner for the personal profit of any employees of the division or any inmates of state correctional facilities.

(3) Items in the canteen shall be sold to inmates, and items in vending machines shall be sold to visitors, at prices set so that revenues from the sale are sufficient to fund all expenses of the canteen and vending machines, including the cost of services of employees of the canteen and the cost of servicing the vending machines, and to produce a reasonable profit. All revenues derived from the canteen and vending machines and interest derived from the deposit and investment of moneys in the canteen, vending machine, and library account shall be credited to such account. Any profits arising from the operation of the canteen and vending machines shall be expended for the educational, recreational, and social benefit of the inmates and to supplement direct inmate needs.

(4) Article 8.5 of title 26, C.R.S., regarding vending facilities in state buildings, shall not apply to vending machines operated in visiting areas of any department facility.

(5) On July 1, 2002, the state treasurer shall transfer any moneys in the canteen, vending machine, and library fund created in section 17-20-127 to the canteen, vending machine, and library account.

Source: L. 2002: Entire section added, p. 57, § 3, effective July 1.

ARTICLE 25

Minimum Security Facilities

Editor's note: (1) This article was originally enacted in 1977 as part 2 of article 20 of title 27 but was incorporated later in 1977 into this title when all the provisions in title 27 relating to corrections were transferred to title 17. (See L. 77, p. 1377, § 1.)

(2) For additional historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor's note at the beginning of this title.

17-25-101.	Definitions.	17-25-103.	Placement limitations.
17-25-102.	Minimum security facility - limitations.

17-25-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Department" means the department of corrections.

(2) "Minimum security facility" means a facility which is designed and operated to protect the public from least security risk inmates and is operated by the department for adult felony inmates committed to the custody of the executive director of the department and includes but is not limited to the Colorado correctional center at Golden, the Rifle correctional center at Rifle, and the Delta correctional center at Delta, but does not include any community corrections program as defined in section 17-27-102 (3).

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 934, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: (2) amended, p. 699, § 64, effective July 1. L. 93: (2) amended, p. 54, § 17, effective July 1; (2) amended, p. 718, § 3, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Amendments to subsection (2) in House Bill 93-1190 and House Bill 93-1233 were harmonized.

17-25-102. Minimum security facility - limitations. (1) Except for correctional facilities located in Fremont county and Delta county, a permanent minimum security facility existing on July 14, 1989, including the Rifle correctional center, shall not exceed a capacity of one hundred ninety-two inmates.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, the Colorado correctional center shall not exceed a capacity of one hundred fifty inmates.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 935, § 10, effective August 1. L. 89, 1st Ex. Sess.: Entire section R&RE, p. 20, § 6, effective July 1. L. 95: Entire section amended, p. 1282, § 20, effective June 5. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 1150, § 13, effective June 1.

17-25-103. Placement limitations. No adult felony violent or sex offender shall be placed by the department in a minimum security facility located in any county without first having been placed in at least one more restrictive setting for not less than six months. Said six-month time period shall include any time spent by the inmate in any diagnostic unit operated by the department. The six-month requirement may be waived only with the approval of the executive director.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 935, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 848, § 45, effective May 24.

ARTICLE 26

Jails

Editor's note: (1) Prior to the repeal and reenactment of this title in 1977, the substantive provisions of this article were contained in article 26 of title 27.

(2) For additional historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor's note at the beginning of this title.

Cross references: For reimbursement by the department of corrections of expenses incurred by a county or city and county to maintain a prisoner in a local jail, see § 17-1-112.

PART 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

17-26-101.	Jail in each county.	17-26-122.	Guards - compensation.
17-26-102.	Keeper of jail - expenses.	17-26-123.	Federal prisoners - expense.
17-26-103.	Duties of keeper.	17-26-124.	Charges for foreign prisoners.
17-26-104.	Feeding prisoners.	17-26-125.	Account of moneys - report.
17-26-104.5.	Medical visits - charge to persons in custody - provider charges - state hospital in Pueblo.	17-26-126.	Commissioners to examine jail.
17-26-104.7.	Prohibition against the use of restraints on pregnant women in custody.	17-26-127.	Escape - duty of sheriff - expenses.
17-26-105.	Separation of prisoners.	17-26-128.	Employment of county prisoners. (Repealed)
17-26-106.	Male and female prisoners.	17-26-129.	Applicability of provisions.
17-26-107.	Prisoners to work.	17-26-130.	Jail - pilot project authorized. (Repealed)
17-26-108.	County to support spouse - when.	17-26-131.	Joint jail commission authorized. (Repealed)
17-26-109.	Deductions of time - good time - earned time.	17-26-132.	Joint jail commission - powers and duties. (Repealed)
17-26-110.	Forfeiture of good time.	17-26-133.	Contract provisions - approval by the division of criminal justice. (Repealed)
17-26-110.5.	Restriction of privileges because of lawsuit filed without justification.	17-26-134.	Jail inspection. (Repealed)
17-26-111.	Separate sentences continuous.	17-26-135.	Project shall comply with provisions pertaining to inter-governmental relationships. (Repealed)
17-26-112.	Sheriff to keep record.	17-26-136.	Termination of pilot project. (Repealed)
17-26-113.	Prisoners to work.	17-26-137.	County jail assistance fund.
17-26-114.	Work on highways - expenses.	17-26-138.	Benefits assistance - legislative declaration - demonstration grant program - repeal. (Repealed)
17-26-115.	Trusty prisoners - good time.	17-26-139.	County jail identification processing unit - personnel authority - repeal. (Repealed)
17-26-116.	Commitment - copy to sheriff - return endorsed.
17-26-117.	Commitment box - successor.
17-26-118.	Record - contents - inspection.
17-26-118.5.	Prevention of erroneous payments to prisoners - identifying information reporting system.
17-26-119.	Jail in another county - costs.
17-26-120.	Keeping of fugitives - charges.
17-26-121.	Juveniles - confinement - when.

PART 2

REIMBURSEMENT OF COST OF CARE BY INMATES TO COUNTIES

17-26-201 to
17-26-208. (Repealed)

PART 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

17-26-101. Jail in each county. There shall be maintained in each county in this state, at the expense of the county, a county jail for the detention, safekeeping, and confinement of persons and prisoners lawfully committed. Nothing in this article shall be construed to compel the erection of jails in counties having a population of less than two thousand or when the county owns a jail erected in any other place in the county.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 935, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-101 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-102. Keeper of jail - expenses. The sheriff of the county, in person or by deputy appointed for that purpose, shall be the keeper of the county jail. He shall be responsible for the manner in which the same is kept. He shall see that the same is kept clean, safe, and wholesome. The expenses of keeping the jail in good order and repair and of lighting and warming that part thereof wherein prisoners are confined and the office in the jail shall be paid by the county wherein the jail is situated. Nothing in this section shall authorize the lighting or warming of that part of the jail occupied by the keeper thereof as his dwelling house.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 935, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-102 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For the sheriff as custodian of the jail, see also § 30-10-511.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-26-102 is identical to repealed § 27-26-102, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

General powers of county commissioners yield to special powers of sheriff in reference to jails. General powers conferred upon the board of county commissioners with respect to county property, when in conflict with the special, particular powers conferred upon the sheriff with reference to jails, must yield to the latter. Richart v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 95 Colo. 153, 33 P.2d 971 (1934).

Hence, sheriff may determine use of particular rooms. It is for the sheriff to determine whether or not a particular room or some other place in the jail should be used for cleaning and conference purposes. The county commissioners have no authority to forbid the sheriff to occupy a vacant room as a living room. Richart v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 95 Colo. 153, 33 P.2d 971 (1934).

For various powers and duties of sheriff as jailer, see Richart v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 95 Colo. 153, 33 P.2d 971 (1934).

A jailer cannot perform satisfactorily the duties imposed upon him by law without living in the jail. To accomplish the best results, he should be present night and day to control and guard the prisoners, repel attacks, prevent escapes and forcible jail deliveries, feed the prisoners, and minister to those that are sick and might need constant attention. Richart v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 95 Colo. 153, 33 P.2d 971 (1934).

Therefore it is customary and proper for the jailer to live in the jail, and this custom is recognized by Colorado statutes. Richart v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 95 Colo. 153, 33 P.2d 971 (1934).

However, there is no statute specifically requiring the jailer to live in the jail; but the instant section recognizes the existence and propriety of the custom. Richart v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 95 Colo. 153, 33 P.2d 971 (1934).

This section does not authorize living quarters in the jail or a housing allowance in lieu thereof, either as partial compensation or salary for a sheriff jailer. Van Cleave v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 33 Colo. App. 227, 518 P.2d 1371 (1973).

County may provide living quarters under certain circumstances. County is not prohibited from providing living quarters to a jailer where public purposes can be achieved thereby. Van Cleave v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 33 Colo. App. 227, 518 P.2d 1371 (1973).

Elimination of housing allowance was constitutional. Because housing allowance paid to sheriff jailer was unauthorized and illegal, its elimination did not violate constitutional prohibitions against salary or compensation reduction during the term of office of a public official. But the decision holding such payments illegal and unauthorized would not be applied retroactively, and, therefore, a county could not recover for sums already paid to sheriff for such allowance. Van Cleave v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 33 Colo. App. 227, 518 P.2d 1371 (1973).

The sheriff may perform the duties of keeper personally or by deputy. But there is no law which entitles him to special or extra compensation for such services. Bd. of County

Comm'rs v. Bransom, 4 Colo. App. 274, 35 P. 750 (1894).

Keeping jail in good order and repair is county expense. The expense of keeping the jail in good order and repair, and of lighting and warming the part where the prisoners are confined, must be paid by the county; but the liability of the county is on account of expense, and not of service. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bransom, 4 Colo. App. 274, 35 P. 750 (1894).

For action for damages for death of person confined in jail, see People ex rel. Coover v. Guthner, 105 Colo. 37, 94 P.2d 699 (1939).

Applied in Tihonovich v. Williams, 196 Colo. 144, 582 P.2d 1051 (1978).

17-26-103. Duties of keeper. The keepers of the several county jails and adult detention centers in this state shall receive and safely keep every person duly committed or placed pursuant to section 16-11-308.5, C.R.S., to such jail or adult detention center for safekeeping, examination, or trial or duly sentenced to imprisonment in such jail or adult detention center upon conviction for any contempt or misconduct or for any criminal offense, and they shall not without lawful authority let out of such jail, on bail or otherwise, any such person.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 935, § 10, effective August 1. L. 88: Entire section amended, p. 677, § 3, effective July 1; entire section amended, p. 710, § 10, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 407, § 5, effective April 19.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-103 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For use of physical force to maintain order and discipline, see § 18-1-703(1)(b).

17-26-104. Feeding prisoners. The sheriff of each county shall feed all the prisoners kept in confinement by him with good and sufficient food. The board of county commissioners of such county, at the expense of the county, shall furnish to such sheriff all the groceries, supplies, utensils, equipment, and assistants he requires to perform his duty of properly feeding such prisoners and shall also pay all the costs and expenses incurred therein.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 936, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-104 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-26-104 is identical to repealed § 27-26-104, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Violation of this section by failing to provide prisoners in isolation with food, while at the same time complying with this section by feeding other prisoners, is not a denial of equal protection of the law. Denial of equal protection of the laws involves more than discrimination or unequal treatment. Ruark v. Schooley, 211 F. Supp. 921 (D. Colo. 1962).

The fact that officials, while acting under color of state law, may violate this section, is not a basis for an action under federal civil rights act, unless the violations result in a deprivation of some right which the plaintiffs have under the federal constitution and laws. Ruark v. Schooley, 211 F. Supp. 921 (D. Colo. 1962).

Applied in Tihonovich v. Williams, 196 Colo. 144, 582 P.2d 1051 (1978).

17-26-104.5. Medical visits - charge to persons in custody - provider charges - state hospital in Pueblo. (1) A county jail may assess a medical treatment charge against any person who receives while being held in custody medical treatment performed by a physician, dentist, nurse, or licensed hospital or as a result of a sick call or for whom a prescription is filled. The county jail may assess any such medical treatment charge against the person's jail account. In addition, the county jail may assess a reasonable medical treatment charge for each visit by a person in custody to an institutional or noninstitutional physician, dentist, or optometrist; except that a medical treatment charge shall not be assessed for any visit required by the county jail during the intake process or an annual physical examination required by the county jail. In no case shall a person's inability to pay be the basis for not providing medical treatment equivalent to the community standard of care. Any medical treatment charge that remains unpaid shall constitute a cost of care that the person shall be ordered to pay pursuant to section 18-1.3-701, C.R.S., and that may be collected by the county pursuant to the provisions of section 16-11-101.6, C.R.S.

(1.3) A provider of medical care that receives any state money, including but not limited to providers that receive money from the medical assistance program established in articles 4, 5, and 6 of title 25.5, C.R.S., or the Colorado indigent care program established in part 1 of article 3 of title 25.5, C.R.S., shall charge a county for medical care provided to a person in custody in a county jail:

(a) At the same rate that the provider is reimbursed for such services by the medical assistance program; or

(b) If the provider is not reimbursed by the medical assistance program, at the highest rate that the provider is reimbursed in whole or in part with state moneys in any other program.

(1.5) (a) If economical, a county sheriff may transport a person held in custody in a county jail to the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo for medical treatment. Within the bed and medical capacity of the facility, the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo shall provide medical care to a person held in custody in a county jail. The county in which the person was held shall be responsible for the payment to the hospital for medical costs incurred by a person in custody, but, if such costs are not repaid to the county by the person in custody, such costs constitute a medical treatment charge that may be collected as provided for in subsection (1) of this section.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1.5), the mental health institute at Pueblo shall charge a county the actual costs of the medical care provided to a person held in custody. The charges shall cover the full direct and indirect costs of the care provided as determined by generally accepted accounting principles. The general assembly shall include within the appropriation for the general medical division of the institute an amount equal to the estimated reimbursements to be received from counties pursuant to this paragraph (b).

(2) The provisions of this section shall apply to any person held in custody in a county jail regardless of whether the person is a juvenile, is being held prior to trial, or is in custody for conviction under a state statute or a county or municipal ordinance.

(3) When a person is held in custody in a county jail, the person shall be primarily responsible for the payment of the cost of medical care provided to the person for a self-inflicted injury or a condition that was preexisting prior to the person's arrest and shall be charged for the medical care by the provider of care. For purposes of this section, "preexisting condition" means an illness beginning or an injury sustained before a person is in the peaceable custody of the county's officers. This subsection (3) shall not apply to care required by the county jail pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, care paid for by other entities pursuant to section 17-26-120 or 17-26-124, care paid for by any other entity, or medical care provided by the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo.

(4) A county may seek payment or reimbursement for any medical treatment costs from a person being held in custody and receiving such services, except as otherwise provided in subsection (1) of this section.

Source: L. 97: Entire section added, p. 191, § 1, effective April 1. L. 2002: (1) amended, p. 1507, § 166, effective October 1. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 1890, § 1, effective August 6; (1.3) and (1.5) added, p. 1694, § 3, effective August 6. L. 2006: IP(1.3) amended, p. 2005, § 59, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-26-104.7. Prohibition against the use of restraints on pregnant women in custody. (1) The staff of a county jail, in restraining a woman who is committed, detained, or confined to the county jail, shall use the least restrictive restraints necessary to ensure safety if the staff of the county jail have actual knowledge or a reasonable belief that the woman is pregnant. The requirement that staff use the least restrictive restraints necessary to ensure safety shall continue during postpartum recovery and transport to or from the county jail.

(2) (a) (I) The county jail staff or medical facility staff shall not use restraints of any kind on the woman during labor and delivery of the child; except that staff may use restraints if:

(A) The medical staff determine that restraints are medically necessary for safe childbirth;

(B) The county jail staff or medical staff determine that the woman presents an immediate and serious risk of harm to herself, to other patients, or to medical staff; or

(C) The sheriff or his or her designee determines that the woman poses a substantial risk of escape that cannot reasonably be reduced by the use of other existing means.

(II) Notwithstanding any provision of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) to the contrary, under no circumstances shall staff use leg shackles or waist restraints on a woman during labor and delivery of the child, postpartum recovery while in a medical facility, or transport to or from a medical facility for childbirth.

(b) The county jail or medical facility staff authorizing the use of restraints on a pregnant woman during labor or delivery of the child shall make a written record of the use of the restraints, which record shall include, at a minimum, the type of restraint used, the circumstances that necessitated the use of the restraint, and the length of time the restraint was used. The sheriff shall retain the record for a minimum of five years and shall make the record available for public inspection with individually identifying information redacted from the record unless the woman who is the subject of the record gives prior written consent for the public release of the record. The written record of the use of restraint shall not constitute a medical record under state or federal law.

(3) Upon return to a county jail after childbirth, the woman shall be entitled to have a member of the county jail's or county's medical staff present during any strip search.

(4) When a woman's pregnancy is determined, the staff of a county jail shall inform a pregnant woman committed, detained, or confined in a county jail in writing in a language and in a manner understandable to the woman of the provisions of this section concerning the use of restraints and the presence of medical staff during a strip search.

(5) Each sheriff shall ensure that staff of the county jail receive adequate training concerning the provisions of this section.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (SB 10-193), ch. 312, p. 1464, § 2, effective January 1, 2011.

17-26-105. Separation of prisoners. Persons committed on criminal process and detained for trial and persons committed for contempt or upon civil process shall be kept in rooms separate and distinct from those in which prisoners convicted and under sentence are confined. This section shall not apply to any county whose jail does not have sufficient room for such separate confinement.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 936, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-105 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

For the distinction between “committed” and “convicted”, see Hershey v. People, 91 Colo. 113, 12 P.2d 345 (1932) (decided under repealed § 27-26-105).

17-26-106. Male and female prisoners. Male and female prisoners, except husband and wife, shall not be put or kept in the same room.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 936, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-106 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-107. Prisoners to work. (1) When any able-bodied prisoner is confined in the county jail of any county or city and county, having been convicted of a misdemeanor or of the violation of a municipal ordinance and being confined in punishment therefor, the sheriff of such county or the person having the duties of a sheriff of such city and county shall compel such prisoner to work eight hours of every working day. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any case where there are fewer than three prisoners so confined in said jail at any one time or to any prisoner physically unable to work. In counties and city and counties, it shall be discretionary with the sheriff or person having the duties of a sheriff to employ prisoners on the road serving sentences of sixty or fewer days. It is the duty of the sheriff of such county or the sheriff or person having the duties of a sheriff of such city and county, when no other work is available, to compel the prisoners to work upon the public roads, highways, or streets of such county or city and county. Employment as a jail trusty shall be sufficient to meet the requirements of this section.

(2) The county commissioners of the county or the governing body of the city and county, when informed by the sheriff or person having the duties of a sheriff that there are prisoners confined in the jail who may be put to work upon the roads, highways, or streets, if there is such work upon the roads, highways, or streets, shall provide for the payment of additional expenses of guarding such prisoners while performing such work. Such prisoners shall not be used for the purpose of building any bridge or structure of like character that requires the employment of skilled labor.

(3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 1120, § 1, effective August 2, 2000.)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 936, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 1120, § 1, effective August 2.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-107 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

The costs of maintaining and caring for those in the various institutions of the state, be they penal or medical, are recoverable. Only the manner of recovering the costs differs; able-bodied convicts are put to work, and the estates of the mentally deficient or criminally insane in public institutions are charged with costs of care. State v. Estate of Burnell, 165 Colo. 205, 439 P.2d 38, appeal dismissed per curiam, 393 U.S. 13, 89 S. Ct. 46, 21 L. Ed.2d 13, reh’g denied, 393 U.S. 992, 89 S. Ct. 441, 21 L. Ed.2d 458 (1968) (decided under repealed § 27-26-107).

17-26-108. County to support spouse - when. When any able-bodied person is confined in the county jail, having been convicted of the nonsupport of his or her spouse or minor children, the county shall pay toward the support of such spouse or minor children not less than fifty cents nor more than one dollar per day for each day such person so works if such spouse or minor children would otherwise be a public charge.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 937, § 10, effective August 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 1636, § 29, effective July 19.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-108 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For commitment of husband for nonsupport, see § 14-6-101.

17-26-109. Deductions of time - good time - earned time. (1) Every person who is sentenced to and imprisoned in any county jail of this state or sentenced to pay a fine and costs or either or all thereof and who performs faithfully the duties assigned to him or her during his or her imprisonment therein is entitled to a deduction from the time of his or her sentence of two days in any thirty-day period. If any such person escapes or attempts to escape from the county jail, he or she shall forfeit all deduction from the time of his or her sentence which he or she may have been entitled to up to the time of the escape or attempt at escape, as provided for in this section.

(2) A person who is sentenced to and imprisoned in any county jail of this state or sentenced to pay a fine and costs or either or all thereof may be awarded earned time of up to three days in any thirty-day period at the discretion of the county sheriff for the successful completion of certain designated programs or educational activities, for outstanding progress in any assigned program or activity, or for unusual or extraordinary actions as determined by the county sheriff. Each county sheriff shall develop and implement an earned time program and schedule for use in his or her county jail in accordance with the expectations and standards of the community in which he or she serves. Earned time shall be in addition to good time as allowed in subsection (1) of this section and section 17-26-115.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 937, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2009: Entire section amended, (HB 09-1263), ch. 105, p. 382, § 1, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-109 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For credit for presentence confinement, see § 18-1.3-405.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-26-109 is identical to repealed § 27-26-109, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Only payment of the judgment entitles a person, sentenced to jail under a body execution, to a release before expiration of the time of confinement fixed by the court. Hershey v. People ex rel. Johnson, 91 Colo. 113, 12 P.2d 345 (1932).

Therefore, the provisions of this section are not applicable to one confined under a body execution. Hershey v. People ex rel. Johnson, 91 Colo. 113, 12 P.2d 345 (1932).

No credit for presentence confinement. There is nothing in this article mandating the deduction of the period of presentence confinement from a sentence to a county jail. Castro v. Dist. Court, 656 P.2d 1283 (Colo. 1982).

Persons serving jail time as a condition of probation are eligible for good time credit under the provisions of this section and § 17-26-115. One who is imprisoned in the county jail, whether as a result of a sentence to imprisonment or a sentence to probation with a condition of imprisonment, cannot be denied the benefits of the good time statutes. Faulkner v. Dist. Court, 826 P.2d 1277 (Colo. 1992).

Court cannot deny benefits of this section. It is not within the power of the sentencing court to impose a sentence which denies to one imprisoned in the county jail the benefits of this section: the effect of this section is to proscribe the imposition of a "flat" time sentence which denies a defendant his statutory right to a reduction from the time of his sentence for good behavior. Hemphill v. Dist. Court, 197 Colo. 431, 593 P.2d 972 (1979).

17-26-110. Forfeiture of good time. In case any such person in the county jail is guilty of willful violation of any of the rules or regulations of the jail and is entitled to any deduction from the time of his sentence by the provisions of section 17-26-109, he shall forfeit the right of such deduction, the violation to be determined by the sheriff of the county in which such jail is situated.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 937, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-110 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-110.5. Restriction of privileges because of lawsuit filed without justification.

(1) If any person is convicted of a crime and confined in any county jail and such person files a lawsuit against the county or against any county government official, officer, employee, or agent, the county may deny any of the privileges allowed to such person if, upon the motion of any party or the court itself, a state or federal court finds that the action, or any part thereof, lacked substantial justification, was baseless, or was malicious or that the action, or any part thereof, was interposed for harassment. As used in this section, "lacked substantial justification" has the same meaning as that provided for such term in section 13-17-102 (4), C.R.S.

(2) The county may deny privileges to a person pursuant to subsection (1) of this section for a period not to exceed one hundred twenty days for any such lawsuit.

(3) The county may not deny privileges to a person pursuant to the provisions of this section if the court determines the lawsuit was asserted by the person in a good faith attempt to establish a new theory of law in Colorado.

(4) The county may determine not to deny privileges to a person pursuant to the provisions of this section if, after filing the lawsuit, a voluntary dismissal of the action is filed within a reasonable time after the person filing the dismissal knew, or reasonably should have known, that he or she would not prevail in the action.

Source: L. 95: Entire section added, p. 301, § 2, effective July 1.

17-26-111. Separate sentences continuous. For the purpose of sections 17-26-109 to 17-26-115, when any such persons confined in the county jail are sentenced under several convictions, with separate sentences, they shall be construed as one continuous sentence.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 937, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-111 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

Those persons who come within the provisions of the law are those only who have been sentenced in criminal cases. Hershey v. People ex rel. Johnson, 91 Colo. 113, 12 P.2d 345 (1932) (decided under repealed § 27-26-111).

17-26-112. Sheriff to keep record. It is the duty of the sheriff of each county to keep a record, in a book for that purpose, of all infractions of the prison rules and regulations, as may be prescribed by law or by him.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 937, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-112 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-113. Prisoners to work. All persons sentenced to and confined in the county jail under the laws of this state, except such as are precluded by the terms of the judgment, shall perform labors under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the county commissioners or sheriff of the county in which such jail is situated.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 937, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-113 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

This section is not applicable to one held under a body execution. Hershey v. People ex rel. Johnson, 91 Colo. 113, 12 P.2d 345 (1932) (decided under repealed § 27-26-113).

17-26-114. Work on highways - expenses. Upon the written request of a majority of the board of county commissioners of any county, the sheriff shall detail such persons in the county jail as in his judgment seems proper, not exceeding the number specified in said written request, to work upon such public roads and highways of such county or streets and alleys of any municipality within such county as are designated in said written request of said county commissioners. Such county shall furnish all tools and materials necessary in the performance of said work. No such work shall be done within the limits of a municipality without the consent of the proper authorities thereof, but, when such work is done within the limits of a municipality within such county, the municipality where said work is done shall pay all additional expenses of guarding such persons while performing said work and shall furnish all tools and necessary materials used in said work.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 937, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-114 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-115. Trusty prisoners - good time. Persons confined in the county jail, undergoing any sentence in accordance with law, who are engaged in work within or outside the walls of the jail, and who are designated by the sheriff as trusty prisoners, and who conduct themselves in accordance with the rules of the sheriff of the county and perform their work in a creditable manner, upon approval of the sheriff, may be granted such good time, in addition to that allowed in section 17-26-109, as the sheriff may order, not to exceed ten days in any thirty-day period.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 937, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2009: Entire section amended, (HB 09-1263), ch. 105, p. 383, § 2, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-115 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

This section is not applicable to one held under a body execution. Hershey v. People ex rel. Johnson, 91 Colo. 113, 12 P.2d 345 (1932) (decided under repealed § 27-26-115).

Persons serving jail time as a condition of probation are eligible for good time credit under the provisions of this section and § 17-

26-109. One who is imprisoned in the county jail, whether as a result of a sentence to imprisonment or a sentence to probation with a condition of imprisonment, cannot be denied the benefits of the good time statutes. Faulkner v. Dist. Court, 826 P.2d 1277 (Colo. 1992).

17-26-116. Commitment - copy to sheriff - return endorsed. When a prisoner is committed to any jail by virtue of any process which the sheriff is required to return to the court from which it issued, it is the duty of the court, clerk, or officer issuing such process to issue the same in duplicate, and the sheriff shall keep one copy of the same, together with a copy of his return thereto, endorsed thereon, which duplicate copy of such process retained by the sheriff shall be sufficient prima facie authority to retain such prisoner in custody.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 938, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-116 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-117. Commitment box - successor. All instruments of every kind, or attested copies thereof duly certified, by which any person is committed to or liberated from the county jail shall be regularly endorsed and filed and kept in a suitable box in the jail by the sheriff, or by his deputy acting as jailer, and such box, together with its contents, shall be delivered to his successor in office.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 938, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-117 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-118. Record - contents - inspection. It is the duty of the keeper of each county jail to keep in a book, provided by the county for that purpose, a daily record of the commitments and discharges of all persons delivered to his custody, which record shall exhibit the date of entrance, name, offense, term of sentence, fine, age, sex, citizenship, how and by whom committed, and when and by whom discharged. The record shall be open to inspection by the public at all reasonable hours and shall be delivered by the sheriff to his successor in office.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 938, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-118 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-118.5. Prevention of erroneous payments to prisoners - identifying information reporting system. (1) In order to eliminate erroneous payments of benefits to persons confined in local jails in the state, county sheriffs, the department of human services, county departments of social services, and the department of labor and employment shall cooperatively develop a system for reporting identifying information about persons confined in local jails for a period exceeding thirty days to state and county agencies responsible for the administration of workers' compensation and public assistance benefits. Such a system shall be implemented on or before July 1, 2000, within existing appropriations.

(2) On and after the implementation date of the information reporting system developed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, but in any event no later than July 1, 2000, each sheriff in the state shall periodically transmit identifying information about each person confined for a period exceeding thirty days in any local jail within the sheriff's jurisdiction to the department of human services, county departments of social services, and the department of labor and employment.

Source: L. 99: Entire section added, p. 552, § 1, effective August 4.

17-26-119. Jail in another county - costs. When there is no sufficient jail in any county wherein any criminal offense has been committed, any county or district judge, upon application of the sheriff, may order any person charged with any criminal offense and ordered to be committed to jail to be sent to the jail of the county nearest having a sufficient jail. The sheriff of such nearest county, on exhibit of the order of such judge, shall receive and keep in safe custody in the jail of his county the person ordered to be so committed. Such sheriff, upon the order of the district court thereof, shall redeliver such person when demand, and all the expenses of keeping such person shall be paid by the county from which such person was sent. The board of county commissioners of the county from which any prisoner is sent, at the next regular meeting after receiving the bill for the expenses of such maintenance, safekeeping, and custody, shall audit and allow the claim and pay the same to the treasurer of the county in which such jail is situated for the use of such county.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 938, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-119 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-120. Keeping of fugitives - charges. Any county jail may be used for the detention and safekeeping of any fugitive from justice from another state or territory, and in this case the county shall be entitled to compensation at the rate prescribed by the board of county commissioners. The rate so charged for the maintenance and safekeeping of such fugitive in custody shall be subject to the approval of the district judge, to be paid by the officer demanding the custody of such fugitive to the sheriff of the county and by him paid over to the treasurer of the county for the use of the county.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 938, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-120 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For the authority of a person executing a governor's warrant to confine a prisoner in a county jail, see § 16-19-113.

17-26-121. Juveniles - confinement - when. No jail shall receive a juvenile prisoner for confinement unless the juvenile has been charged by the direct filing of an information in the district court or by indictment pursuant to section 19-2-517, C.R.S., or the juvenile has been ordered by the court to be held for criminal proceedings pursuant to section 19-2-518 (1), C.R.S.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 939, § 10, effective August 1. L. 81: Entire section amended, p. 1042, § 3, effective July 1. L. 87: Entire section amended, p. 816, § 19, effective October 1. L. 90: Entire section amended, p. 1017, § 2, effective April 20. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 1690, § 21, effective January 1, 1997.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-121 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-122. Guards - compensation. When the safekeeping and detention of persons lawfully committed to any jail in this state, in the opinion of the board of county commissioners, requires the employment of one or more guards, the board of county commissioners of the county where such jail is situated shall authorize the sheriff of such county to employ such guards at the expense of the county, at such reasonable compensation as the board shall allow, which guards shall be under the command of the keeper of the jail. Such guards shall be discharged from service when in the judgment of the board of county commissioners their services are not required.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 939, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-122 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

Whenever in the opinion of the board of county commissioners the safekeeping of prisoners committed to jail requires guards, the board is empowered to authorize the sheriff to employ them at the expense of the county, at such reasonable compensation as the board shall allow. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bransom, 4 Colo. App. 274, 35 P. 750 (1894) (decided under repealed § 27-26-122).

17-26-123. Federal prisoners - expense. It is the duty of the keeper of each county jail to receive into the jail every person duly committed thereto for any offense against the United States, by any court or officer of the United States, and to confine every such person in the jail until he is duly discharged, the United States paying all the expenses of the confinement, safekeeping, and custody of such person, including the keeper's fees, at the rate established by the board of county commissioners of the county where such jail is situated.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 939, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-123 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-124. Charges for foreign prisoners. It is the duty of the board of county commissioners of each county having a jail in this state to establish a rate of charges to be paid for the confinement, safekeeping, and maintenance of prisoners sent from other counties in this state, fugitives from justice, and persons committed by authority of the United States, which rate of charges may be altered, changed, or modified by the board of county commissioners of such county when in their judgment it seems best to do so. The rate so charged shall be subject to the approval of the district court of such county.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 939, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-124 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-125. Account of moneys - report. It is the duty of the keeper of every jail within this state to keep an accurate account of all moneys received by him on account of the confinement, safekeeping, and maintenance of persons committed from other counties, fugitives from justice, and prisoners committed to the jail by authority of the United States, to report the same monthly to the board of county commissioners of the county wherein such jail is situated, and to pay over to the treasurer of such county monthly all such moneys for the use of such county.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 939, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-125 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-26-126. Commissioners to examine jail. It is the duty of the board of county commissioners, as often as they deem necessary, but at least once annually, to make personal examination of the jail of its county, its sufficiency, and the management thereof and to correct all irregularities and improprieties therein found.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 939, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2008: Entire section amended, p. 926, § 1, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-126 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For governmental immunity provisions relating to jails and the conditions thereof, see § 24-10-106 (1)(b).

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-26-126 is identical to repealed § 27-26-126, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

This section imposes a public official duty. It would seem clear that the county commissioners as to the performance of the duty imposed upon them by this section come within the class of public officers who are recognized by the authorities as subordinate governmental officers and administrative agents whose duty is owing primarily to the public collectively — to the body politic and not to any particular individual — who act for the public at large. Miller v. Ouray Elec. Light & Power Co., 18 Colo. App. 131, 70 P. 447 (1902).

The commissioners are not individually liable thereunder to an action for damages for the death of a prisoner caused by the burning of the county jail, alleged to have been caused by their negligent failure to make such examination. Miller v. Ouray Elec. Light & Power Co., 18 Colo. App. 131, 70 P. 447 (1902).

Complaint must allege knowledge of dangerous conditions existing. In an action against the individual commissioners of a county for the wrongful death of a prisoner in a county jail caused by the burning of the jail, based on the failure of said commissioners to personally examine said jail, a complaint which fails to allege that said commissioners had knowledge or could by proper examination have had knowledge of the dangerous condition which caused the fire, and fails to allege in what respect the failure to make the examination contributed to cause the fire, is defective. Miller v. Ouray Elec. Light & Power Co., 18 Colo. App. 131, 70 P. 447 (1902).

The words "and to correct all irregularities and improprieties therein found" impose no new obligation upon the county commissioners. Miller v. Ouray Elec. Light & Power Co., 18 Colo. App. 131, 70 P. 447 (1902).

Commissioners and the sheriff are separately elected officials, and the board does not exercise managerial control over either the sheriff or the detention center and its staff. Moreover, this section does not impose a legal duty on the board to ensure an inmate's safety against assaults from other inmates, nor does it prescribe a civil remedy. Terry v. Sullivan, 58 P.3d 1098 (Colo. App. 2002).

17-26-127. Escape - duty of sheriff - expenses. In case of escape of any person lawfully committed to any jail of any county in this state, it is the duty of the sheriff of the county where such jail is situated to pursue and recapture such escaped person at the expense of the office of such sheriff. In case of any escape without any fault or negligence on the part of the keeper of the jail or the guards under such keeper's command, the board of county commissioners of the county where such jail is situated may audit and allow to the office of the sheriff the necessary expenses incurred in such recapture.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 939, § 10, effective August 1. L. 92: Entire section amended, p. 401, § 10, effective June 3.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-127 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

For various powers and duties of sheriff as jailer, see Richart v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 95

Colo. 153, 33 P.2d 971 (1934) (decided under repealed § 27-26-127).

17-26-128. Employment of county prisoners. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 940, § 10, effective August 1. L. 84: (1.3) added, p. 498, § 3, effective April 5. L. 87: (1)(d), (1)(e), (4), and (6) amended and (1)(f), (1.1), (5)(b.3), and (11) added, pp. 666, 667, §§ 1-3, effective May 16. L. 88: (1.1) R&RE, p. 709, § 6, effective July 1. L. 93: (1)(e), (1)(f), and (1.1) amended and (1)(g) and (12) added, pp. 69, 70, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 94: (11) amended, p. 2041, § 22, effective July 1; (12) amended, p. 1050, § 6, effective July 1. L. 96: (1) and (2) amended, p. 121, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2000: (5) amended, p. 1048, § 11, effective September 1. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section was similar to former § 27-26-128 as it existed prior to 1977.
(2) This section was relocated to § 18-1.3-106 in 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-26-129. Applicability of provisions. The provisions of sections 17-26-107 and 17-26-108 shall not be applicable to any prisoner who is employed or detained outside of the jail under the provisions of section 18-1.3-106, C.R.S.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 941, § 10, effective August 1. L. 87: Entire section amended, p. 667, § 4, effective May 16. L. 2002: Entire section amended, p. 1507, § 167, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-26-129 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-26-130. Jail - pilot project authorized. (Repealed)

Source: L. 86: Entire section added, p. 759, § 1, effective April 24. L. 96: Entire section repealed, p. 556, § 6, effective April 24.

17-26-131. Joint jail commission authorized. (Repealed)

Source: L. 86: Entire section added, p. 759, § 1, effective April 24. L. 96: Entire section repealed, p. 557, § 7, effective April 24.

17-26-132. Joint jail commission - powers and duties. (Repealed)

Source: L. 86: Entire section added, p. 759, § 1, effective April 24. L. 96: Entire section repealed, p. 557, § 8, effective April 24.

17-26-133. Contract provisions - approval by the division of criminal justice. (Repealed)

Source: L. 86: Entire section added, p. 760, § 1, effective April 24. L. 96: Entire section repealed, p. 557, § 9, effective April 24.

17-26-134. Jail inspection. (Repealed)

Source: L. 86: Entire section added, p. 761, § 1, effective April 24. L. 96: Entire section repealed, p. 559, § 10, effective April 24.

17-26-135. Project shall comply with provisions pertaining to intergovernmental relationships. (Repealed)

Source: L. 86: Entire section added, p. 761, § 1, effective April 24. L. 96: Entire section repealed, p. 559, § 11, effective April 24.

17-26-136. Termination of pilot project. (Repealed)

Source: L. 86: Entire section added, p. 761, § 1, effective April 24. L. 96: Entire section repealed, p. 559, § 12, effective April 24.

17-26-137. County jail assistance fund. The moneys collected pursuant to section 16-3-503 (1), C.R.S., shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the county jail assistance fund, which fund is hereby created and referred to in this section as the “fund”. The moneys in the fund shall be subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly to the department of corrections for allocation to counties for the maintenance and operation of county jails. Any moneys in the fund not expended for the purpose of this section may be invested by the state treasurer as provided by law. All interest and income derived from the investment and deposit of moneys in the fund shall be credited to the fund. Any unexpended and unencumbered moneys remaining in the fund at the end of a fiscal year shall remain in the fund and shall not be credited or transferred to the general fund or another fund.

Source: L. 2008: Entire section added, p. 924, § 3, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2008 act enacting this section, see section 1 of chapter 248, Session Laws of Colorado 2008.

17-26-138. Benefits assistance - legislative declaration - demonstration grant program - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2008: Entire section added, p. 906, § 1, effective May 20. L. 2009: Entire section repealed, (SB 09-209), ch. 23, p. 109, § 1, effective March 18.

17-26-139. County jail identification processing unit - personnel authority - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2009: Entire section added, (SB 09-006), ch. 403, p. 2219, § 3, effective (see editor’s note).

Editor’s note: The revisor of statutes did not receive the notice specified in § 42-2-311 by July 1, 2012; therefore, this section is repealed as provided in subsection (2) of this section, effective July 1, 2012. (See L. 2009, p. 2219.)

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2009 act adding this section, see section 1 of chapter 403, Session Laws of Colorado 2009.

PART 2

REIMBURSEMENT OF COST OF CARE BY INMATES TO COUNTIES

17-26-201 to 17-26-208. (Repealed)

Source: L. 94: Entire part repealed, p. 1362, § 6, effective July 1.

Editor’s note: This part 2 was added in 1989. For amendments to this part 2 prior to its repeal in 1994, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume.

ARTICLE 26.5

Multijurisdictional Jails

17-26.5-101.	Multijurisdictional jails - authorized.	17-26.5-102.	Contracts for multijurisdictional jails - requirements.
--------------	---	--------------	---

17-26.5-101. Multijurisdictional jails - authorized. The general assembly hereby authorizes any county, city and county, city, or the department of corrections of the state of Colorado to enter into a contract or contracts with each other in accordance with part 2 of article 1 of title 29, C.R.S., to design, locate, construct, and operate a multijurisdictional jail for the incarceration of county, city and county, city, or state prisoners. In the alternative, the described governmental entities may enter into the necessary contracts with a private contractor for the provision and operation of such jail.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 940, § 4, effective July 1.

17-26.5-102. Contracts for multijurisdictional jails - requirements. (1) Any contract or contracts for the creation of a multijurisdictional jail as described in section 17-26.5-101 shall contain the following requirements:

(a) An agreement regarding involvement by each of the governmental entities in the predesign planning, design, location, and construction of such a jail facility or involvement in any agreement to obtain a private contractor to provide a jail facility and the operation thereof;

(b) An agreement regarding involvement by each of the governmental entities in construction management and oversight for such a jail facility;

(c) An agreement regarding involvement by each of the governmental entities in financing the construction of such a jail facility;

(d) An agreement regarding involvement by each of the governmental entities in financing and providing for staffing and operation of such jail facility, which may provide for staffing and operation solely by any county, city and county, or city with financial assistance from the state department of corrections or any other governmental entity involved, or staffing and operation through a joint staffing and operation agreement between any county, city and county, or city and the state department of corrections, if the department is involved in the multijurisdictional jail facility;

(e) An agreement regarding involvement by each of the governmental entities in financing and providing for programs for such jail facility;

(f) An agreement regarding utilization of such jail facility by each of the governmental entities involved in the multijurisdictional jail facility. However, if the state department of corrections is involved in the facility, such agreement shall provide that a proportionate number of beds in the facility, equal to the proportionate percentage of the financing of the construction and operation of the facility which was provided by the state department of corrections bears to the entire cost of the construction and operation of the facility, shall be reserved for utilization by the state department of corrections if such beds are needed by the department. Any such beds so reserved shall be counted by the department as available beds when determining the number of beds available in the state correctional system.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 941, § 4, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the authority of the executive director of the department of corrections to enter into contracts or agreements concerning multijurisdictional jails, see section 6 of chapter 120, Session Laws of Colorado 1990.

Programs

ARTICLE 27

Community Corrections Programs

Editor's note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1977, and this article was subsequently repealed and reenacted in 1993, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For amendments to this article prior to 1993, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume and the editor's note following the title heading. Former C.R.S. section numbers prior to 1993 are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated.

Cross references: For authority of the department of public safety to expand the use of community correctional facilities and programs, see section 12 of chapter 120, Session Laws of Colorado 1990.

Law reviews: For article, "Felony Sentencing in Colorado", see 18 Colo. Law. 1689 (1989).

17-27-101.	Legislative declaration.	17-27-105.5.	Community corrections pro- gram agents - duties - arrest powers.
17-27-102.	Definitions.
17-27-103.	Community corrections boards - establishment - duties.	17-27-105.7.	Offenders held in community corrections programs - med- ical benefits application as- sistance - county of resi- dence - repeal. (Repealed)
17-27-103.5.	Statements relating to a tran- sitional referral to commu- nity corrections.	17-27-106.	Escape from custody from a community corrections pro- gram.
17-27-104.	Community corrections pro- grams operated by units of local government, state agencies, or nongovernmen- tal agencies.	17-27-107.	Administrative procedure act not to apply.
17-27-105.	Authority to place offenders in community corrections programs. (Repealed)	17-27-108.	Division of criminal justice of the department of public safety - duties - community corrections contracts.

17-27-101. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby declares that it is the purpose of this article to establish and maintain community corrections programs which provide the courts, the department of corrections, and the state board of parole with more flexibility and a broader range of correctional options for offenders under the jurisdiction of such entities. It is the further purpose of this article to increase public safety and promote community-based correctional programming through collaboration between the state of Colorado and local units of government. It is also the purpose of this article to give local units of government the authority to designate the programs, boards, and networks established under this article to address local criminal justice needs with resources other than those appropriated pursuant to this article.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 708, § 1, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-27-101 as it existed prior to 1993.

ANNOTATION

Broader range of alternatives provided. By enacting the community corrections statute, the general assembly provided the sentencing judge with a broader range of alternatives and with a sentencing medium that is more severe than probation, but not as harsh as incarceration. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 195 Colo. 34, 575 P.2d 4 (1978) (decided under repealed § 27-27-101).

No private tort remedy available. Although this article imposes duties on administrators of community corrections facilities, those duties are owed directly to the relevant judicial or executive authorities. Members of the general public are incidental beneficiaries of the statute, but are owed no actionable duty by its specific terms. Davenport v. Cmty. Corr. of the Pikes Peak Region, Inc., 942 P.2d 1301 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 962 P.2d 963 (Colo. 1998).

17-27-102. Definitions. As used in this article:

(1) "Administrative review process" means a sequence of actions that includes written notification to an offender of the decision to reject and terminate program placement, a brief explanation of the reason for the termination, instructions for the offender to request review of the action of the community corrections board or community corrections program, and a method for the community corrections board or community corrections program to informally review the rejection and termination.

(2) "Community corrections board" means the governing body of any unit of local government, any combinations of such governing bodies for the purpose of this article, or any separate board created by any governing body or bodies pursuant to this article.

(3) "Community corrections program" means a community-based or community-oriented program that provides supervision of offenders pursuant to this article. Such program shall be operated by a unit of local government, the department, or any private individual, partnership, corporation, or association. Such program may provide residential or nonresidential services for offenders, monitoring of the activities of offenders, oversight of victim restitution and community service by offenders, programs and services to aid offenders in obtaining and holding regular employment, programs and services to aid offenders in enrolling in and maintaining academic courses, programs and services to aid offenders in participating in vocational training programs, programs and services to aid offenders in utilizing the resources of the community, meeting the personal and family needs of such offenders, programs and services to aid offenders in obtaining appropriate treatment for such offenders, programs and services to aid offenders in participating in whatever specialized programs exist within the community, day reporting programs, and such other services and programs as may be appropriate to aid in offender rehabilitation and public safety.

(3.5) "Community corrections program agent" or "agent" means a community parole officer who is an employee of the department and is a peace officer, as described in sections 16-2.5-101 and 16-2.5-136, C.R.S., with the powers and duties described in section 17-27-105.5.

(4) "Governing body" means the board or council of elected or appointed officials which is responsible for governing any unit of local government, such as a city council or a board of county commissioners.

(5) "Nongovernmental agency" means any private individual, partnership, corporation, or association.

(6) "Offender" means any person accused of or convicted of a felony or misdemeanor as defined by the laws of the state of Colorado.

(7) "Referring agency" means the agency which maintains legal jurisdiction over any offender referred to or placed in a community corrections program such as the sentencing court, the department of corrections, or the state board of parole.

(8) "Unit of local government" means any county, city and county, city, town, or service authority which may be established pursuant to section 17 of article XIV of the state constitution.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 708, § 1, effective July 1. L. 96: (3) amended, p. 122, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2000: (3.5) added, p. 228, § 1, effective March 29. L. 2003: (3.5) amended, p. 1625, § 50, effective August 6. L. 2008: (3.5) amended, p. 658, § 10, effective April 25.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-27-102 as it existed prior to 1993.

ANNOTATION

This section does not exclude persons who have been convicted of two prior felonies from community correctional programs. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 195 Colo. 34, 575 P.2d 4 (1978) (decided under repealed § 27-27-102).

Person convicted of felony menacing was a "nonviolent" offender since felony menacing is not a crime of violence as defined in § 16-

11-309. People v. Patrick, 683 P.2d 801 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section and § 17-27-103 entitle any person who is rejected after acceptance in a community corrections program to request an administrative hearing. However, the eight-year prison sentence imposed on a defendant without a previous administrative hearing would not be overturned where he failed to raise the issue before the trial court and records in evidence showed sufficient grounds for defendant's termination from community corrections. People v. Pauley, 42 P.3d 57 (Colo. App. 2001).

Applied in People v. Nix, 45 Colo. App. 195, 610 P.2d 1088 (1980).

17-27-103. Community corrections boards - establishment - duties. (1) A community corrections board may be established by resolution or ordinance of a governing body, or a combination of governing bodies. Any community corrections board which is established may be advisory to the governing body or bodies which created such board or it may be functionally independent from the governing body or bodies. Pursuant to subsection (8) of this section, the governing body or bodies may delegate to the community corrections board the authority which such governing body or bodies have to approve or disapprove the establishment and operation of community corrections programs within the jurisdiction of such governing body or bodies. In addition, the governing body or bodies may delegate such other powers which the governing body or bodies possess to the community corrections board to accomplish the purposes of this article.

(2) A community corrections board shall have the authority to enter into contracts with the state of Colorado, receive grants from governmental and private sources, and receive court-authorized expense reimbursement related to community corrections programs. A community corrections board may designate a community corrections program or programs within the jurisdiction of such board to contract with the state of Colorado to provide services and supervision for offenders.

(3) A community corrections board may establish programs to be operated by a unit or units of local government, or an agency of state government, to accomplish the purposes of this article, or such board may contract with other units of local government, other community corrections boards, any agency of state government, or any community corrections program to provide supervision of and services for offenders.

(4) A community corrections board may establish and enforce standards for the operation of any community corrections program located within the physical boundaries of the jurisdiction of the governing body or bodies which created such board. The standards established by a community corrections board may exceed, but shall not conflict with, standards established for community corrections programs by the division of criminal justice of the department of public safety pursuant to section 17-27-108. The community corrections board shall, in coordination with state and local agencies, monitor community corrections programs within the jurisdiction of such board and oversee compliance with state and local standards. The community corrections board's oversight of the community corrections programs within the board's jurisdiction shall include the following:

(a) Making an assessment of the number of offenders who have escaped from custody as such term is described in section 17-27-106, which assessment shall be based on the reports prepared by the administrators of community corrections programs in accordance with section 17-27-104 (11);

(b) Determining compliance by community corrections programs with the recommendations made in audit reports prepared by the division of criminal justice in accordance with section 17-27-108.

(5) A community corrections board has the authority to accept or reject any offender referred for placement in a community corrections program under the jurisdiction of such board. The community corrections board shall provide, in writing, acceptance criteria and screening procedures to each referring agency.

(6) A community corrections board may establish conditions or guidelines for the conduct of offenders placed in any community corrections program operated within the physical boundaries of the jurisdiction of the governing body or bodies which created such board. Written copies of such conditions or guidelines shall be made available to offenders placed in community corrections programs under the jurisdiction of the community corrections board.

(7) A community corrections board has the authority to reject after acceptance the placement of any offender in a community corrections program within the jurisdiction of such board. If the referring agency does not provide an administrative review process relating to such rejection after acceptance, the community corrections board shall provide an administrative review process for any offender who is rejected after acceptance by such board. The community corrections board shall provide written notification of the rejection after acceptance of any offender to the referring agency and the administrator of the community corrections program in which the offender is placed.

(8) A governing body shall approve or disapprove the establishment and operation of all community corrections programs within the jurisdiction of such governing body, but such authority may be delegated to the community corrections board created by such governing body.

(9) A community corrections board may serve in a planning and coordinating capacity by advising the governing body which created such board and consulting with officials of state criminal justice agencies to improve local community corrections services.

(10) A community corrections board, and each individual member of such board, shall be immune from any civil liability for the performance of the duties of such board or such individual member as specified in this article, if such person was acting in good faith within the scope of such person's respective capacity, makes a reasonable effort to obtain the facts of the matter as to which action was taken, and acts in the reasonable belief that the action taken by such person was warranted by the facts.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 710, § 1, effective July 1. L. 95: (4) amended, p. 80, § 1, effective March 23.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-27-103 is similar to § 17-27-104 (3) as it existed prior to the 1993 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Corrections board has power to reject an offender initially accepted into one of its programs or facilities. A trial court is powerless to dismiss for lack of evidence the termination of an offender from a community corrections facility and to return the offender to such facility; the court's only option is to resentence the offender by adopting an alternative sentence. People v. Akin, 783 P.2d 267 (Colo. 1989).

A person's sentence to community corrections may be revoked before or after acceptance to a program for any reason or for no reason at all. People v. Holt, 874 P.2d 410 (Colo. App. 1994).

Under subsection (5), a community corrections sentence can be revoked for any reason or for no reason at all. People v. Rodriguez, 55 P.3d 173 (Colo. App. 2002).

The sentencing court, as the referring agency, may conduct the administrative review process if the community corrections board or program has not done so. Benz v. People, 5 P.3d 311 (Colo. 2000).

This section and § 17-27-102 entitle any person who is rejected after acceptance in a community corrections program to an administrative hearing. However, the eight-year prison sentence imposed on a defendant without a previous administrative hearing would not be overturned where he failed to raise the issue before the trial court and records in evidence showed sufficient grounds for defendant's termination from community corrections. People v. Pauley, 42 P.3d 57 (Colo. App. 2001).

Upon termination from community corrections, an offender must be provided with: (1) Written or actual notice of rejection from community corrections and the reasons for rejection, and (2) an informal review of the facts underlying the rejection. People v. Kitsmiller, 74 P.3d 376 (Colo. App. 2002).

Informal review requires the trial court to either: (1) Review on the record the facts underlying the rejection, or (2) demonstrate a familiarity with those facts through documentation in the record regarding the rejection. People v. Kitsmiller, 74 P.3d 376 (Colo. App. 2002).

17-27-103.5. Statements relating to a transitional referral to community corrections. (1) Pursuant to the provisions of section 24-4.1-302.5 (1) (j.5), C.R.S., a victim shall have the right to provide a written victim impact statement and a separate oral statement to a community corrections board considering an offender's transitional referral to community corrections.

(2) (a) (I) A community corrections board shall allow, within the parameters set by the board, an offender who is under consideration for transitional placement in a community corrections program under the board's jurisdiction to provide a written statement to the community corrections board concerning the offender's transition plan and community support and the appropriateness of placing the offender in a community corrections program.

(II) If an offender elects to submit a written statement to a community corrections board pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a), and the offender provides a written statement to the department pursuant to the procedures and time frame established by the department, the department shall include the statement with any referral to a community corrections board considering the offender's transitional referral to a community corrections program.

(b) A community corrections board may allow, within the parameters set by the board, an offender to designate a person other than the offender to submit a written statement or give an oral statement on the offender's behalf to a community corrections board considering the offender's transitional referral to a community corrections program.

(3) A community corrections board shall develop written policies and procedures consistent with the provisions of this section and section 24-4.1-302.5 (1) (j.5), C.R.S., that are available to the public concerning the parameters for written and oral statements by victims and the permissibility of and the parameters for a written or oral statement by a person designated by an offender.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed to require the department or a community corrections board to provide transportation or make arrangements for the appearance at a community corrections hearing of an offender or, if permitted by a community corrections board, the person designated by the offender pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section to give an oral statement or to submit a written statement on the offender's behalf.

(5) The department shall not be required to provide notice to any person, other than a registered victim, of a community corrections board hearing relating to the offender.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (SB 10-159), ch. 306, p. 1443, § 1, effective August 11.

17-27-104. Community corrections programs operated by units of local government, state agencies, or nongovernmental agencies. (1) Any unit of local government, or any state agency authorized by this article, may establish, maintain, and operate such community corrections programs as such unit or agency deems necessary to serve the needs of such unit of local government or state agency and offenders who are assigned to such programs by the department of corrections, placed in such programs by the state board of parole, or sentenced to such programs by the court.

(2) Pursuant to provisions of section 17-27-103, any nongovernmental agency may establish, maintain, and operate a community corrections program under a contract with the state of Colorado, a contract with a unit or units of local government, or a contract with other nongovernmental agencies for the purpose of providing services to offenders who are assigned to such programs by the department of corrections, placed in such programs by the state board of parole, or sentenced to such programs by the court.

(3) The administrators of any community corrections program established pursuant to this section shall have the authority to accept or reject any offender referred for placement in such program. Screening procedures shall be developed in cooperation with the community corrections board of the jurisdiction in which such community corrections program is located. Acceptance criteria and screening procedures shall be provided in writing by each community corrections program to each referring agency.

(4) (a) The administrators of each community corrections program established pursuant to this section shall establish conditions or guidelines for the conduct of offenders accepted and placed in such program. Such conditions or guidelines shall not conflict with any conditions or guidelines established pursuant to section 17-27-103 (6) by the community corrections board of the jurisdiction in which such community corrections program is located. Offenders accepted and placed in any community corrections program shall have access to written copies of such conditions or guidelines for the conduct of offenders upon placement in such program.

(b) One such condition shall be that an offender, upon being placed in a community corrections program, shall execute a limited power of attorney to the director, or the director's designee, of the community corrections program with which the offender is being placed. The limited power of attorney shall grant to the director or the director's designee the authority to dispose of moneys the offender has earned since being placed in the program and that have been left in accounts or on deposit with the community corrections program in the event that, after the offender is accepted by the community corrections program, the offender is rejected from such program due to escape. The moneys shall be disposed of for the following purposes and in the following order of priority:

(I) Payment of court-ordered restitution to the victim of the crime committed by the offender;

(II) Payment for the court-ordered support of the offender's dependents;

(III) Payment of fines, offender fees and surcharges, and other court-ordered financial obligations imposed as part of the offender's sentence; and

(IV) Any remaining funds shall be paid into the victims and witnesses assistance and law enforcement fund, established pursuant to section 24-4.2-103, C.R.S., in the judicial district in which the community corrections program is located.

(c) The director of the community corrections program, or the director's designee, shall maintain records of any disbursements of offenders' funds pursuant to this subsection (4).

(d) The limited power of attorney shall be valid until the offender's sentence to community corrections is discharged from community placement by the court.

(5) The administrators of each community corrections program established pursuant to this section shall have the authority to reject after acceptance and terminate the placement of any offender who violates conditions or guidelines established pursuant to subsection (4) of this section, or if any conditions of such offender's placement in the program are not satisfied. If the referring agency does not provide an administrative review process, the community corrections program shall provide an administrative review process for any offender who is rejected after acceptance. If the termination of placement of an offender is initiated by the community corrections program, the referring agency shall be notified immediately to arrange a transfer of custody for such offender. The community corrections program may be required by the referring agency to maintain temporary custody of the offender whose placement is being terminated for a reasonable period of time pending receipt of appropriate transfer orders from the referring agency unless the provisions of subsection (6) of this section apply.

(6) When the administrator of a community corrections program established pursuant to this section, or any other appropriate referring agency, has cause to believe that an offender placed in a community corrections program has violated any rule or condition of such offender's placement in such program, or cannot be safely housed in such program, the administrator or other appropriate authority shall notify the appropriate judicial or executive authority of the facts which are the basis of such administrator's belief. Such administrator may then execute a transfer order to any sheriff, undersheriff, deputy sheriff, police officer, or state patrol officer which authorizes such peace officer to transport the offender to the county jail in the county in which the community corrections program is located and the offender shall be confined in such jail pending a determination by the appropriate judicial or executive authority as to whether the offender should remain in community corrections or be removed therefrom. Such offender shall be confined without bond.

(7) The administrator of any community corrections program established pursuant to this section shall notify a referring agency immediately that an offender has been transferred to a county jail pursuant to subsection (6) of this section. Such notification shall contain the name of the offender and identify the rule or condition of placement violated, and describe such violation, or state the reason the offender cannot be safely housed in the community corrections program.

(8) Upon placement of an offender in a community corrections program, the administrator of the program shall notify local law enforcement agencies of the identity of each such offender.

(9) The administrator of any community corrections program shall document the number of days of residential and nonresidential time completed by each offender sentenced directly to the community corrections program by the court and the time credits granted to such offender pursuant to section 18-1.3-301 (1) (i), C.R.S. If any such offender is rejected after acceptance by the community corrections board or the community corrections program, the program administrator shall provide a written summary of the residential days completed by such offender to the referring agency. If the offender is thereafter committed to the department of corrections, such summary shall be reported to the department of corrections to facilitate the calculation of any time credits pursuant to part 3 or part 4 of article 22.5 of this title.

(10) The administrator of any community corrections program shall enforce any order relating to the payment of restitution, court costs, fees, or community service which is ordered by the sentencing court. Such administrator shall establish a payment contract and schedule for each offender placed in the community corrections program.

(11) The administrator of each community corrections program shall report to the division of criminal justice and the community corrections board of the jurisdiction in which such program is located on the offenders who have escaped from custody as such term is described in section 17-27-106 (1). The division of criminal justice is authorized to prepare forms for these reports.

(12) The administrators of a community corrections program established pursuant to this section may implement a mental illness screening program to screen the persons accepted and placed in the community corrections program. If the administrators choose to implement a mental illness screening program, the administrators shall use the standardized screening instrument developed pursuant to section 16-11.9-102, C.R.S., and conduct the screening in accordance with procedures established pursuant to said section.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 711, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: (9) amended, p. 929, § 2, effective April 28. L. 95: (11) added, p. 81, § 2, effective March 23. L. 96: (4) amended, p. 132, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2002: (12) added, p. 574, § 2, effective May 24; (9) amended, p. 1508, § 168, effective October 1. L. 2011: (9) amended, (SB 11-254), ch. 274, p. 1237, § 2, effective June 2.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former §§ 17-27-103 and 17-27-104 as they existed prior to 1993.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (9), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-27-104 is similar to §§ 17-27-104, 17-27-106, 17-27-107, and 17-27-114 as they existed prior to the 1993 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Section provides a statutory right to an "administrative review process" when an offender placed in a community corrections program is rejected after acceptance. People v. Rogers, 983 P.2d 121 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 9 P.3d 371 (Colo. 2000).

Section 17-27-103 authorizes the sentencing court, as the referring agency, to conduct the administrative review process if the community corrections board or program has not done so. Benz v. People, 5 P.3d 311 (Colo. 2000); People v. Rogers, 9 P.3d 371 (Colo. 2000).

Defendant's rights to due process were not violated where the administrative review requirements were satisfied. The defendant was notified of the grounds for termination from the community corrections program and the trial court reviewed the information from the program. People v. Benz, 983 P.2d 117 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 5 P.3d 311 (Colo. 2000).

Determination of whether offender shall remain in community corrections is a two-step process. First, the sentencing court determines whether a violation of a placement condition has occurred, and second, if the violation has occurred, whether the offender should remain in community corrections. Wilson v. People, 747 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1987).

While it is a better practice to continue the revocation hearing until after the trial on the new charge, there is no abuse of discretion by proceeding with the hearing before disposition of the criminal charge. People v. Harrison, 771 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. granted, 785 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1989), cert. denied, 790 P.2d 843 (Colo. 1990).

Trial court is without jurisdiction to order a defendant to make monthly restitution payments. Former § 17-27-107 (1), which relate to the requirements set forth in subsection (10) of this section, required that a defendant sentenced to the community corrections agree to the terms and conditions under a contract with the agency, and required that the contract conform with specified statutes concerning the establishment of and the manner and time of payment of restitution. The plain language of the former section required that the court establish the amount of restitution and, if a defendant is directly sentenced to community corrections, that community correction establish the terms and conditions of payment of restitution. People v. Randolph, 852 P.2d 1282 (Colo. App. 1992).

Under subsection (3), a community corrections sentence can be revoked for any reason or for no reason at all. People v. Rodriguez, 55 P.3d 173 (Colo. App. 2002).

Subsection (6) does not give rise to a private tort remedy. Although this article imposes duties on administrators of community corrections facilities, those duties are owed directly to the relevant judicial or executive authorities. Members of the general public are incidental beneficiaries of the statute, but are owed no actionable duty by its specific terms. Davenport v. Cmty. Corr. of the Pikes Peak Region, Inc., 942 P.2d 1301 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 962 P.2d 963 (Colo. 1998).

Under subsection (9), at the time an offender is resentenced, the administrator of the community corrections program must provide to the sentencing court a written summary of the number of days the offender was a resident in that program. People v. Lopez, 961 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1998).

Applied in People v. Nix, 45 Colo. App 195, 610 P.2d 1088 (1980).

17-27-105. Authority to place offenders in community corrections programs. (Repealed)

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 713, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: (1)(i) amended, p. 927, § 1, effective April 28; (3)(a) amended, p. 2595, § 2, effective June 3. L. 95: (2)(b) amended, p. 1276, § 13, effective June 5. L. 96: (1)(a) amended, p. 1690, § 22, effective January 1, 1997. L. 97: (2)(b) amended, p. 30, § 8, effective March 20. L. 98: (2)(b) amended, p. 318, § 2, effective July 1. L. 99: (1)(j) amended and (1)(k) added, p. 660, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2000: (3)(b) repealed, p. 230, § 3, effective March 29. L. 2001: (1)(k)(II) repealed, p. 527, § 1, effective May 22. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section was relocated to § 18-1.3-301 in 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-27-105.5. Community corrections program agents - duties - arrest powers. (1) For purposes of this section:

(a) "Director" means the director of the department's community corrections program and whose powers and duties include those of a community corrections program agent.

(b) "Offender" means an inmate assigned to residential and nonresidential community corrections programs as those programs are set forth in articles 27, 27.5, and 27.7 of this title and an offender who is in phase III of the youthful offender system as set forth in section 18-1.3-407, C.R.S.

(2) The executive director of the department of corrections shall designate staff of the department to maintain jurisdiction over all offenders placed in any community corrections program by order of the executive director or as a condition of parole. Such staff may include community corrections program agents and the director.

(3) Community corrections program agents are authorized to:

- (a) Supervise and habilitate offenders;
- (b) Investigate, detect, and prevent crime involving offenders;
- (c) Issue warrants for the arrest of offenders;
- (d) Arrest offenders;
- (e) Process reports or other official documents regarding offenders;
- (f) Coordinate with community corrections boards and community corrections programs;
- (g) Review offender supervision and treatment;

(h) Authorize offender transfers between residential and nonresidential phases of placement; and

(i) Carry out such other duties as the executive director directs.

(4) The director of community corrections or any community corrections program agent may arrest any offender when any offense under the laws of this state has been or is being committed by the offender in the presence of the director or the agent, the director or the agent has a warrant commanding that such offender be arrested, or the director or the agent has probable cause to believe:

(a) That a warrant for the offender's arrest has been issued in this state or another state for any criminal offense or for a violation of the department's administrative code of penal discipline, a supervision order, or other administrative order;

(b) That a crime has been committed and that the offender has committed such crime;

(c) That the offender has violated a condition of the administrative code of penal discipline;

(d) That the offender is leaving or is about to leave the state;

(e) That the offender will fail or refuse to appear at a hearing to answer charges for a violation of the department's code of penal discipline; or

(f) That the arrest of the offender is necessary to prevent physical harm to the offender or another person or to prevent the commission of a crime.

(5) If a community corrections program agent makes an arrest of an offender with or without a warrant, or the offender is otherwise arrested, the offender shall be held in a county jail or program pending action by the agent or the director of the community corrections program.

(6) A community corrections program agent shall seek out and arrest any fugitive from a correctional facility when called upon and assist other agencies in the apprehension of fugitives from jurisdictions throughout the state.

(7) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, each agent, or the director acting as an agent, shall notify the local law enforcement agency when the agent is operating or intends to operate anywhere within the local law enforcement agency's jurisdiction and shall cooperate with such agency during the conduct of the investigation.

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 228, § 2, effective March 29. L. 2002: (1)(a) amended, p. 1508, § 169, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1)(a), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-27-105.7. Offenders held in community corrections programs - medical benefits application assistance - county of residence - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2002: Entire section added, p. 807, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2003: (1)(a) and (4)(c) amended, p. 416, § 5, effective March 5. L. 2005: (1)(a) and (4)(c) amended, p. 4, § 8, effective January 1.

Editor's note: Subsection (5) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2005. (See L. 2002, p. 807.)

17-27-106. Escape from custody from a community corrections program.
(1) (a) If an offender fails to remain within the extended limits of such offender's confinement or placement or fails to return within the time prescribed to any community corrections program to which such offender was assigned or transferred or if any offender who participates in a program established under the provisions of this article leaves such offender's place of employment or, having been ordered by the executive director of the department of corrections or the chief probation officer of the judicial district to return to the community corrections program, neglects or fails to do so, such offender shall be deemed to have escaped from custody and shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished as provided in section 18-8-208, C.R.S., and all reductions in sentence authorized by part 2 of article 22.5 of this title shall be forfeited.

(b) (I) In addition to the forfeiture of all reductions in sentence authorized by part 2 of article 22.5 of this title, any person convicted of escape from custody from a community correction program in violation of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) shall also forfeit all reductions in sentence authorized by section 18-1.3-301 (1) (i), C.R.S.

(II) Repealed.

(2) The division of criminal justice is hereby authorized to provide notice to appropriate law enforcement agencies and the sentencing court, if applicable, that there is probable cause to believe that an offender has escaped from custody.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 716, § 1, effective July 1. L. 95: Entire section amended, p. 81, § 3, effective March 23. L. 99: (1) amended, p. 661, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2001: (1)(b)(II) repealed, p. 527, § 2, effective May 22. L. 2002: (1)(b)(I) amended, p. 1508, § 170, effective October 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 17-27-108 as it existed prior to 1993.

(2) Subsection (1) was amended in House Bill 93-1190. Those amendments were superseded by the repeal and reenactment of the entire article in House Bill 93-1233. (See L. 93, p. 54.)

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1)(b)(I), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 17-27-106 is similar to § 17-27-108 as it existed prior to the 1993 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Section applies to work release facilities.

This section covers both traditional penitentiary type institutions operated by the state department of corrections and less traditional correctional facilities such as work release facilities. People v. Lucero, 654 P.2d 835 (Colo. 1982).

The failure to return to a work release facility upon the expiration of a 10-hour pass is punishable as escape under § 18-8-208. People v. Lucero, 654 P.2d 835 (Colo. 1982).

Leaving a community corrections facility without authorization constitutes escape under § 18-8-208 because offender is still in custody and subject to the authority of the court. People v. Brown, 695 P.2d 776 (Colo. App. 1984).

Person who absconds from a non-residential community corrections placement commits the crime of escape in violation of this section and § 18-8-208. By its plain language, the section applies to all types of community corrections placements, including non-residential community corrections programs. People v. Forester, 1 P.3d 758 (Colo. App. 2000).

A parolee may be convicted of escape even if there is a legal defect in the process of confinement. Such defects are to be challenged through appropriate legal means rather than through unauthorized departure from a custodial facility. People v. Lanzieri, 25 P.3d 1170 (Colo. 2001).

Delegating supervisory power to probation department and community corrections facility is not an unlawful delegation of the court's sentencing authority as the offender is still in custody and subject to authority of the court. People v. Brown, 695 P.2d 776 (Colo. App. 1984).

17-27-107. Administrative procedure act not to apply. The provisions of this article shall not be subject to the "State Administrative Procedure Act", article 4 of title 24, C.R.S.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 717, § 1, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-27-112 as it existed in 1993.

17-27-108. Division of criminal justice of the department of public safety - duties - community corrections contracts. (1) The division of criminal justice of the department of public safety is authorized to administer and execute all contracts with units of local government, community corrections boards, or nongovernmental agencies for the provision of community corrections programs and services.

(2) (a) The division of criminal justice is authorized to establish standards for community corrections programs operated by units of local government or nongovernmental agencies. Such standards shall prescribe minimum levels of offender supervision and services, health and safety conditions of facilities, and other measures to ensure quality services. The standards shall be promulgated or revised after consultation with representatives of referring agencies, community corrections boards, and administrators of community corrections programs.

(b) (I) The division of criminal justice shall audit community corrections programs to determine levels of compliance with standards promulgated pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2). Such audits shall include an evaluation of compliance with the reporting requirements pursuant to section 17-27-104 (11).

(II) (A) Before July 1, 2003, such audits shall occur at least once in each three-year period, unless waived by the executive director of the department of public safety.

(B) On and after July 1, 2003, the division of criminal justice shall implement a schedule for auditing community corrections programs that is based on risk factors such that community corrections programs with low risk factors shall be audited less frequently than community corrections programs with higher risk factors. In no event shall such audits occur less frequently than at least once in each five-year period. Prior to July 1, 2003, the division of criminal justice shall create classifications of community corrections programs that are based on risk factors as those factors are established by standards of the division of criminal justice.

(III) Written reports of such audits shall be provided to the administrator of the program which is audited, the local community corrections board, and referring agencies. Such written reports shall include findings of noncompliance with contractual obligations, including the standards promulgated pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), and shall identify those material findings that, if not corrected within a reasonable time, will result in a recommendation to terminate the contract to operate the program. As used in this subparagraph (III), "material findings" includes those findings related to:

- (A) Public safety, including but not limited to offender monitoring and rehabilitation;
- (B) Health and life safety pertaining to but not limited to staff and offenders;
- (C) Efficiency and effectiveness of programs' internal control systems;
- (D) Statutory compliance; and
- (E) Fiduciary duties and responsibilities.

(3) The division of criminal justice shall allocate appropriations for community corrections to local community corrections boards and community corrections programs in a manner which considers the distribution of offender populations and supports program availability proportionate to such distribution and projected need.

(4) Prior to April 1, 2003, and on and after July 1, 2006, the division of criminal justice may authorize up to five percent of community corrections appropriations to be spent by units of local government and community corrections boards in support of administrative costs incurred pursuant to this article. On and after April 1, 2003, through June 30, 2006, the division of criminal justice may authorize up to four percent of community corrections appropriations to be spent by units of local government and community corrections boards in support of administrative costs incurred pursuant to this article. Such moneys for administrative costs may be applied to support functions authorized in section 17-27-103, to supplement administrative expenses of community corrections programs which have contracted with or are under the jurisdiction of a unit of local government, or to support other direct or indirect costs of involvement in community corrections.

(5) The division of criminal justice is authorized to transfer up to ten percent of annual appropriations among or between line items for community corrections program services. Advance notice of such transfers shall be provided to the general assembly, the governor, the executive director of the department of corrections, and the chief justice of the supreme court.

(6) The division of criminal justice shall provide technical assistance to community corrections boards, community corrections programs, and referring agencies.

Source: L. 93: Entire article R&RE, p. 717, § 1, effective July 1. L. 95: (2) amended, p. 81, § 4, effective March 23. L. 2002: (2)(b)(II) amended, p. 103, § 1, effective March 26. L. 2003: (4) amended, p. 429, § 1, effective April 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former §§ 17-27-106 and 17-27-115 as they existed prior to 1993.

ARTICLE 27.1

Nongovernmental Facilities - Notice Requirements

17-27.1-101. Nongovernmental facilities for offenders - registration - notifications - penalties.

17-27.1-101. Nongovernmental facilities for offenders - registration - notifications - penalties. (1) (a) The general assembly finds that the transfer into Colorado of persons that have been convicted of or have agreed to a deferred judgment, deferred sentence, or deferred prosecution for a crime in another state who are required to participate in private treatment programs in this state is a matter of statewide and local concern.

(b) The general assembly further finds that although Colorado is a signatory to the "Interstate Compact for Adult Offender Supervision" established pursuant to part 28 of article 60 of title 24, C.R.S., more information concerning out-of-state offenders is necessary for the protection of the citizens of Colorado, and it may be necessary to further regulate programs that provide treatment and services to such persons.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2011, (HB 11-1009), ch. 5, p. 9, § 1, effective March 1, 2011.)

(b) "Chief law enforcement official" means:

(I) If a facility of a private treatment program is located within a municipality, the chief of police of such municipality;

(II) If a facility of a private treatment program is located within a city and county, the manager of safety of such city and county or other person with such duties; and

(III) If a facility of a private treatment program is not located within a municipality or city and county, the county sheriff of the county where the facility is located.

(b.5) "Compact administrator" means the person appointed pursuant to the provisions of part 28 of article 60 of title 24, C.R.S., to be responsible for the administration of the interstate compact.

(c) "Interstate compact" means the "Interstate Compact for Adult Offender Supervision", part 28 of article 60 of title 24, C.R.S.

(d) "Private treatment program" means any residential or nonresidential program that provides services, treatment, rehabilitation, education, or criminal history-related treatment for supervised or unsupervised persons but does not include a private contract prison facility, a prison facility operated by a political subdivision of the state, a facility providing treatment for persons with mental illness or developmental disabilities, or a community corrections program established pursuant to article 27 of this title.

(e) "Sending state" shall have the same meaning as in the interstate compact.

(f) "Supervised person" means a person eighteen years of age or older who is adjudicated for or convicted of or has agreed to a deferred judgment, deferred sentence, or deferred prosecution for a crime in another state but is or will be under the supervision of a probation officer or community parole officer in Colorado pursuant to the interstate compact.

(g) "Supervising person" means the person in this state who is in charge of the overall administration of a private treatment program.

(h) "Unsupervised person" means a person eighteen years of age or older who, although not required to be under the jurisdiction of a probation officer or community parole officer in Colorado, is adjudicated for or convicted of or has agreed to a deferred judgment, deferred sentence, or deferred prosecution for a crime outside of the state of Colorado and is directed to attend a private treatment program in Colorado by any court, department of corrections, state board of parole, probation department, parole division, adult diversion program, or any other similar entity or program in a state other than Colorado.

(3) (a) In order to ensure uniformity and consistency, the sending state shall be in compliance with the provisions of the interstate compact, or the compact administrator shall reject the placement of the supervised person pursuant to subsection (6) of this section.

(b) A sending state shall not permit travel of a supervised person who is a nonresident of this state to the state of Colorado without written notification from the compact administrator of acceptance of the supervised person into a private treatment program.

(c) Any request for placement of a nonresident of this state in a private treatment program from a sending state shall contain written justification as to why treatment in the state of Colorado is preferable or more beneficial than treatment in the sending state.

(4) No private treatment program in Colorado shall admit or accept a supervised or unsupervised person into the program unless the supervised or unsupervised person has signed a waiver that authorizes the release of confidential information.

(5) No private treatment program in Colorado shall admit or accept a supervised or unsupervised person into the program unless that program:

(a) Is registered with the compact administrator, and, if the person is a supervised person, the private treatment program is:

(I) Approved by the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, established in article 80 of title 27, C.R.S., if the program provides alcohol or drug abuse treatment;

(II) Certified or approved by the sex offender management board, established in section 16-11.7-103, C.R.S., if the program provides sex offender treatment;

(III) Certified or approved by a domestic violence treatment board, established pursuant to part 8 of article 6 of title 18, C.R.S., if the program provides treatment for persons who were convicted of an act of domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3, C.R.S., or of an act for which the underlying factual basis included an act of domestic violence; or

(IV) Licensed or certified by the division of adult parole in the department of corrections, the department of regulatory agencies, the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, the state board of nursing, or the Colorado medical board if the program provides treatment that requires such certification or licensure;

(b) If the person is unsupervised, has notified the compact administrator of the following information for each such unsupervised person:

(I) Name, date and place of birth, and social security number;

(II) Complete criminal history of the person as shown by a national criminal information check;

(III) Name and address of any court, department, board of parole, probation department, parole division, adult diversion program, or other similar entity or program having jurisdiction over the person; and

(IV) Terms and conditions under which the person is required or directed to attend the program; and

(c) (I) If the person is supervised and is a resident of the state of Colorado, has confirmed that the sending state has provided all information concerning the supervised person required by the interstate compact to the compact administrator; and

(II) If the person is supervised and is a nonresident of the state of Colorado, has confirmed that the compact administrator has accepted the person for placement in the private treatment program.

(6) (a) Pursuant to criteria established by the interstate compact, the compact administrator shall either accept or reject the placement of the supervised person in the private treatment program.

(b) For all unsupervised persons and for supervised persons that the compact administrator accepts for placement in a private treatment program, the compact administrator shall immediately notify the appropriate chief law enforcement official and the director of the Colorado bureau of investigation.

(c) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 232, § 1, effective July 1, 2000.)

(7) By written policy, a local law enforcement agency shall require a supervised or unsupervised person to physically appear at the local law enforcement agency for fingerprinting and photographing.

(8) (a) The private treatment program shall immediately notify the chief law enforcement official where the program is located and, if supervised, the person's probation or community parole officer whenever any person directed to appear in a facility operated by the program fails to appear or is absent without authority.

(b) The private treatment program shall notify the chief law enforcement official where the program is located and, if supervised, the person's probation or community parole officer at least seven days prior to the release of any person placed in such program.

(9) (a) Any private treatment program or supervising person that violates this section commits a misdemeanor. Upon a first conviction, the private treatment program or supervising person shall be punished by a fine of five hundred dollars. Upon a second conviction, a private treatment program or supervising person shall be punished by a fine of one thousand dollars. Upon a third or subsequent conviction, a private treatment program or supervising person shall be punished by a fine of five thousand dollars.

(b) Each failure to comply with a provision of this section by a private treatment program or supervising person relating to a different person constitutes a separate violation.

(10) (a) In addition to any other duties, the compact administrator may promulgate rules governing unsupervised persons including but not limited to their identification.

(b) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 232, § 1, effective July 1, 2000.)

(11) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit any unit of local government, as defined in section 17-27-102 (8), from enacting ordinances and regulations concerning the licensing of private treatment programs located within their jurisdiction and providing for the punishment for the operation of unlicensed private treatment programs.

(12) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 232, § 1, effective July 1, 2000.)

Source: L. 86: Entire article added, p. 765, § 1, effective July 1; entire section amended, p. 763, § 5, effective July 1. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 718, § 4, effective July 1. L. 95: (1) amended, p. 1098, § 18, effective May 31. L. 98: (2) amended, p. 820, § 20, effective August 5. L. 99: Entire section R&RE, p. 1172, § 1, effective June 2. L. 2000: (2)(d), (2)(f), (2)(g), (2)(h), (3), (5)(a), (5)(c), (6)(c), (10)(b), and (12) amended, p. 232, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2002: (5)(a)(I) amended, p. 666, § 12, effective May 28. L. 2006: (2)(d) amended, p. 1398, § 47, effective August 7. L. 2008: (2)(f), (2)(h), and (8) amended, p. 658, § 11, effective April 25. L. 2010: (5)(a)(I) amended, (SB 10-175), ch. 188, p. 784, § 26, effective April 29; (5)(a)(IV) amended, (HB 10-1260), ch. 403, p. 1987, § 76, effective July 1. L. 2011: (1)(b), (2)(a), (2)(c), (3)(a), (3)(b), IP(5)(a), IP(5)(b), (5)(c), (6)(a), (6)(b), and (10)(a) amended and (2)(b.5) added, (HB 11-1009), ch. 5, p. 9, § 1, effective March 1; (5)(a)(IV) amended, (HB 11-1303), ch. 264, p. 1156, § 30, effective August 10.

ARTICLE 27.5

Intensive Supervision Programs

Editor's note: (1) This article was repealed in 1986 and was subsequently recreated and reenacted in 1986, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For amendments to this article prior to 1986, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume.

(2) Section 17-27.5-106 as it existed prior to 1986 provided for the repeal of this article, effective February 15, 1986. (see L. 1984, p. 534.)

17-27.5-101.	Authority to establish intensive supervision programs for parolees and community corrections offenders.	17-27.5-103.	grams.
		17-27.5-104.	Confinement in county jail.
		17-27.5-105.	Escape from custody.
17-27.5-102.	Minimum standards and criteria for the operation of intensive supervision pro-	17-27.5-106.	Duty to report. (Repealed)
			Authority of state board of parole to utilize intensive supervision programs.

17-27.5-101. Authority to establish intensive supervision programs for parolees and community corrections offenders. (1) (a) The department shall have the authority to establish and directly operate an intensive supervision program for any offender not having more than one hundred eighty days remaining until such offender's parole eligibility date and for any offender who successfully completes a regimented inmate discipline program pursuant to article 27.7 of this title.

(b) The department shall also be authorized to refer for placement to an intensive supervision program operated under the jurisdiction of units of local government under contract with and approved by the department:

(I) Any offender not having more than one hundred eighty days remaining until such offender's parole eligibility date and any offender who successfully completes a regimented inmate discipline program pursuant to article 27.7 of this title;

(II) Any offender who has met program objectives of a residential community corrections program and who has not more than one hundred eighty days remaining until such offender's parole eligibility date.

(c) The department shall have the authority to contract with community corrections programs and other providers for intensive supervision services subject to the approval of the affected unit of local government. In contracting for such programs, the department shall obtain the advice and consent of affected units of local government and shall consider the needs of the communities and offenders for successful reintegration into communities and the appropriate allocation of resources for effective correction of offenders.

(2) The department may place in an intensive supervision program authorized pursuant to subsection (1) of this section any offender who has been referred to a community corrections program pursuant to section 18-1.3-301 (2) (b), C.R.S., and approved for placement in the program pursuant to section 17-27-103 (5) or section 17-27-104 (3) if the placement will not increase the overall vacancy rate as of June 30, 1995, for the community corrections program.

Source: L. 86: Entire article RC&RE, p. 764, § 6, effective May 28. L. 89: Entire section R&RE, p. 883, § 1, effective July 1. L. 91: Entire section amended, p. 342, § 2, effective June 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 44, § 1, effective July 1. L. 95: Entire section amended, p. 1276, § 14, effective June 5. L. 96: (1) amended, p. 842, § 1, effective May 23. L. 98: (1)(a) and (1)(b)(I) amended, p. 319, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2002: (2) amended, p. 1508, § 171, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (2), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-27.5-102. Minimum standards and criteria for the operation of intensive supervision programs. (1) The department shall have the power to establish and enforce standards and criteria for administration of intensive supervision programs.

(2) The standards and criteria shall require that offenders in the program receive at least the minimum services consistent with public safety, including highly restricted activities, weekly face-to-face contact between the offender and the program staff, daily telephone contact between the offender and the program staff, a monitored curfew at the offender's place of residence at least once a month, employment visitation and monitoring at least twice each month, home visitation, drug and alcohol screening, treatment referrals and monitoring, assuring the payment of restitution, and community service in a manner that shall minimize any risk to the public.

(3) An offender as defined in section 17-27-102 (6) is eligible for an intensive supervision program only upon the recommendation of the department if such offender has not more than one hundred eighty days remaining until such offender's parole eligibility date or upon a transfer from a community corrections residential program under article 27 of this title if such offender has not more than one hundred eighty days remaining until such offender's parole eligibility date and if the local community corrections board finds that the correctional needs of such offender will be better served by such supervision. The local community corrections board has the authority to accept, reject, or reject after acceptance the participation of any offender in each and every intensive supervision program under this article. In selecting offenders for transfer to an intensive supervision program, the department and the local community corrections board shall consider, but shall not be limited to, the following factors:

- (a) The frequency, severity, and recency of disciplinary actions against the offender;
 - (b) The offender's escape history, if any;
 - (c) Whether the offender has functioned at a high level of responsibility in a community corrections program, if applicable;
 - (d) Whether the offender will have adequate means of support and suitable housing in the community; and
 - (e) The nature of the offense for which the offender has been incarcerated.
- (4) At least two weeks prior to placement of a nonparoled offender in an intensive supervision program, the executive director shall notify or cause to be notified the respective prosecuting attorney and the law enforcement agency of the affected unit of local government; and he shall have previously notified the affected corrections board.

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 884, § 2, effective July 1. L. 91: IP(3) amended, p. 342, § 3, effective June 1. L. 93: IP(3) amended, p. 44, § 2, effective July 1; (3) amended, p. 719, § 5, effective July 1. L. 96: (1) amended, p. 843, § 2, effective May 23.

Editor's note: Amendments to subsection (3) in House Bill 93-1073 and House Bill 93-1233 were harmonized.

ANNOTATION

The department of corrections has the power to establish and enforce standards and criteria for intensive supervision programs that include alcohol and drug screening. People v. Whidden, 56 P.3d 1201 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 78 P.3d 1092 (Colo. 2003).

17-27.5-103. Confinement in county jail. Where the community corrections administrator of an intensive supervision program has cause to believe that an offender placed in the program has violated any rule or condition of his or her placement or cannot be safely supervised in that program, the administrator shall certify to the supervising community parole officer the facts that are the basis for his or her belief and execute a transfer order to the sheriff of the county in which the program is being operated, who shall confine the offender in the county jail pending a determination by the supervising community parole officer as to whether or not the offender shall remain in the program.

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 884, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section amended, p. 659, § 12, effective April 25.

17-27.5-104. Escape from custody. If an offender fails to remain within the extended limits on his confinement as established under the intensive supervision program, or, having been ordered by the parole board, the executive director, or the administrator of the program to return to the correctional institution, neglects or fails to do so, he shall be deemed to have escaped from custody and shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished as provided in section 18-8-208, C.R.S.

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 885, § 2, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

This section does not violate the separation of powers and nondelegation doctrines. The statute provides sufficient statutory standards and safeguards. People v. Sa'ra, 117 P.3d 51 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section does not violate the clear expression requirement. The subject of this section is clearly expressed in the title and failure to remain within the extended limits of confinement is essential to the accomplishment of the title. People v. Sa'ra, 117 P.3d 51 (Colo. App. 2004).

The phrase "extended limits on his confinement" is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Perea, 74 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2002).

The phrase "extended limits on his confinement" refers to geographic and time limits placed on the offender beyond those placed by incarceration in a correctional facility. People v. Perea, 74 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2002).

Because defendant was specifically advised of his residential curfew and he acknowledged advisement of the contents of this residential curfew directive in writing, the directive constituted an extended limitation of defendant's confinement. People v. Williams, 33 P.3d 1187 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Perea, 74 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2002).

For purposes of escape, there is no conflict between the home detention statute and the intensive supervision program (ISP) statute. In an escape case, the court must make a factual determination whether a defendant was placed in home detention or ISP based on the different elements of home detention and ISP. Home detention and ISP are mutually exclusive, therefore once the court determines whether the defendant was in home detention or on ISP there is no conflict. People v. Smith, 77 P.3d 751 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Sa'ra, 117 P.3d 51 (Colo. App. 2004).

The court did not err in instructing the jury under this section concerning custody or confinement where, taken together, the jury instructions, the information, and the parole mitimus signed by defendant indicate that he had sufficient notice that he could be liable for escape from custody. People v. Taylor, 74 P.3d 396 (Colo. App. 2002).

The court did not err when it instructed the jury on ISP escape without including the "extended limits" language of this section. People v. Sa'ra, 117 P.3d 51 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section applies to all parolees and not just those on discretionary parole. Colorado cases do not distinguish between mandatory and discretionary parolees. People v. Taylor, 74 P.3d 396 (Colo. App. 2002).

Assignment of defendant to a therapeutic community providing drug and alcohol treatment, as a place of residence during intensive supervision parole, constitutes confinement. People v. Taylor, 74 P.3d 396 (Colo. App. 2002).

17-27.5-105. Duty to report. (Repealed)

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 885, § 2, effective July 1. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 843, § 3, effective May 23. L. 98: Entire section repealed, p. 729, § 14, effective May 18.

17-27.5-106. Authority of state board of parole to utilize intensive supervision programs. An offender who is granted parole or whose parole is modified may be required by the state board of parole, as a condition of such parole, to participate in an intensive supervision program as defined by this article; except that the offender shall not be subject to the authority of the local community corrections board under section 17-27.5-102 (3).

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 885, § 2, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Section does not violate equal protection since statutory scheme is reasonably related to the legitimate governmental interest of supervising at-risk mandatory parolees. Parole board is given discretionary power, based on an analysis of factors in § 17-27.5-102 (3), to determine who among the mandatory parolees shall participate in an intensive supervision program; factors provide guidance to parole board and statutory scheme recognizes that not all mandatory parolees should be placed in an intensive supervision program. People v. Williams, 33 P.3d 1187 (Colo. App. 2001).

mandatory and discretionary parole. People v. Garcia, 64 P.3d 857 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Perea, 74 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2002).

The term "granted parole" includes both

ARTICLE 27.7

Regimented Inmate Discipline and Treatment Program

17-27.7-101.	Legislative declaration.	17-27.7-104.	Acceptance and completion of the program by an offender - reconsideration of sentence.
17-27.7-102.	Regimented inmate training programs - authorization - standards for operation.
17-27.7-103.	Regimented inmate training program - eligibility of offenders.	17-27.7-105.	Evaluation of regimented inmate training program. (Repealed)

17-27.7-101. Legislative declaration. It is the intent of the general assembly that the program established pursuant to this article shall benefit the state by reducing prison overcrowding and shall benefit persons who have been convicted of offenses and placed in the custody of the department by promoting such person's personal development and self-discipline.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 963, § 1, effective June 7.

17-27.7-102. Regimented inmate training programs - authorization - standards for operation. (1) The department may develop and implement a regimented inmate training program. Any regimented inmate training program shall include, but shall not be limited to, the following aspects:

- (a) A military-styled intensive physical training and discipline program;
- (b) An educational and vocational assessment and training program emphasizing job seeking skills;
- (c) A health education program; and
- (d) A drug and alcohol education and treatment program which shall be structured as an integral part of the entire regimented inmate training program.

(2) The department may establish and enforce standards for the regimented inmate training program and each of the aspects thereof described in subsection (1) of this section.

(3) The regimented inmate training program shall be structured in such a manner that any offender who is assigned to the program by the executive director shall remain in the program for a period of ninety days, unless removed from the program and reassigned by the executive director for unsatisfactory performance. The executive director may authorize an extension of the program for any offender not to exceed thirty days when such extension will allow the offender to be considered for probation under rule 35b of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 963, § 1, effective June 7.

17-27.7-103. Regimented inmate training program - eligibility of offenders. (1) The executive director may assign an inmate to a regimented inmate training program pursuant to section 17-40-102 (2). The executive director shall assign to a regimented inmate training program only those inmates who are nonviolent offenders thirty years of age or younger who are not serving a sentence, and have not served a previous sentence, in a correctional facility for an unlawful sexual behavior offense described in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., a crime of violence described in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., an assault offense described in part 2 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., or a child abuse offense described in part 4 of article 6 of title 18, C.R.S., or who are not presently serving a sentence for a nonviolent offense that was reduced from an unlawful sexual behavior offense described in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., a crime of violence described in section 18-1.3-406, C.R.S., an assault offense described in part 2 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., or a child abuse offense described in part 4 of article 6 of title 18, C.R.S., as a result of a plea agreement or who are not aliens subject to a removal order. Any offender assigned to the program shall be free of any physical or mental defect which could jeopardize his or her ability to complete the program. The department may eliminate any offender from the program upon a determination by the department that a physical or mental defect will prevent full participation in the program by such offender. The department is absolved of liability for participation in the program.

(2) The executive director shall assign no more than one hundred offenders to the regimented inmate training program at any one time. No more than a maximum of four hundred offenders shall be assigned to the program in any one year. However, the executive director may assign offenders to the program to replace those offenders who fail to complete the program.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 964, § 1, effective June 7. L. 92: (1) amended, p. 254, § 1, effective March 16. L. 2002: (1) amended, p. 1508, § 172, effective October 1. L. 2004: (1) amended, p. 187, § 1, effective April 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Immunity provision is constitutional. Norsby v. Jensen, 916 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1995).

Specific immunity provision in subsection (1) of this section prevails over general waiver of immunity in § 24-10-106 (1)(b), which is both earlier and less specific. Norsby v. Jensen, 916 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1995).

Immunity also extends to the state and to employees of the department, since the legislative rationale for immunizing the department also supports an interpretation that would also encompass these parties. Norsby v. Jensen, 916 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1995).

Although the executive director and not the sentencing court has the authority to assign a defendant to the regimented inmate training program (RITP), a trial court does not exceed its authority by making a recommendation to the department or simply by including on the mittimus a finding as to the defendant's eligibility for RITP. People v. Young, 894 P.2d 19 (Colo. App. 1994).

17-27.7-104. Acceptance and completion of the program by an offender - reconsideration of sentence. (1) The department, upon acceptance of an offender into the program, shall immediately notify the court of such acceptance.

(2) (a) If an offender successfully completes a regimented inmate training program, such offender, within sixty days of termination or completion of the program, shall automatically be referred to the sentencing court so that the offender may make a motion for reduction of sentence pursuant to rule 35b of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure.

(b) The department shall submit a report to the court concerning such offender's performance in the program. Such report may recommend that the offender be placed in a specialized probation or community corrections program. The court may not summarily deny the offender's motion without a complete consideration of all pertinent information provided by the offender, the offender's attorney, and the district attorney. The court may issue an order modifying the offender's sentence and placing the offender on probation or in a community corrections program.

(b.5) Notwithstanding the fact that the offender's case is on appeal, the sentencing court shall retain jurisdiction to consider and rule on motions for reconsideration filed pursuant to this subsection (2).

(c) (I) Any motion filed pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall be given priority for consideration by the sentencing court. An offender who successfully completes the regimented inmate training program within twenty-eight months prior to such offender's parole eligibility date shall be eligible for placement in a community corrections program operated pursuant to article 27 of this title.

(II) An offender placed in a community corrections program pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c) may be required to participate in a structured, transitional discipline program in such community corrections program for six months or until completion of the offender's sentence, whichever occurs first.

(III) Upon satisfactory completion of the community corrections program, an offender whose sentence has not been completely served may be required to participate in the intensive supervision program pursuant to section 17-27.5-102.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 964, § 1, effective June 7. L. 95: Entire section amended, p. 184, § 1, effective April 7. L. 98: (2)(c)(I) amended, p. 318, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2007: (2)(b.5) added, p. 557, § 3, effective April 16.

ANNOTATION

Defendant is required to file motion for reduction of sentence within 120 days after the date of successful completion of regimented inmate training program. This is because Crim. P. 35(b) provides a 120-day time limitation for the filing of a motion for reduction of sentence, and this section requires that a motion to reduce sentence must be brought pursuant to Crim. P. 35(b). People v. Campbell, 75 P.3d 1151 (Colo. App. 2003).

This section expressly incorporates the provisions of Crim. P. 35(b) as the framework for considering sentence reduction for any participant in the regimented inmate training program. Crim. P. 35(b) provides that the trial court "may, after considering the motion and supporting documents, if any, deny the motion without a hearing." Therefore, the plain language of the rule belies the claim that a hearing is required on a Crim. P. 35(b) motion. People v. Morales-Uresti, 934 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1996) (decided under law in effect prior to 1995 amendment).

Trial court gave complete consideration to defendant's Crim. P. 35(b) motion even though the record did not contain any information provided by defendant, his attorney, or the district attorney after defendant's acceptance into the regimented inmate training program. The court should not be precluded from ruling on defendant's motion simply because none of those entitled to provide additional information to the court chose to do so. People v. Morales-Uresti, 934 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1996) (decided under law in effect prior to 1995 amendment).

Resentencing of a successful regimented inmate training program participant is governed by the same statutory limits applicable to Crim. P. 35(b) resentencing. A Crim. P. 35(b) motion, and therefore a motion for reduction of sentence under this section, gives the court discretion to resentence the defendant to a lesser term within the statutory limits, but not to lower a mandatory minimum sentence imposed by law for a specific crime. People v. Smith, 971 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1999).

Persons convicted of child abuse resulting in death are eligible for sentence modification upon successful completion of the regimented inmate training program, but the sentencing court's discretion is limited by the relevant mandatory sentencing limits. People v. Smith, 971 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1999).

An offender who completes the boot camp program must be referred to the sentencing court after completing the program to reconsider sentencing, however, that does not mean the judge who imposed the sentence must consider the request to reduce the defendant's sentence. The request must merely be considered by a district court judge with the power to rule on such a motion. People v. Banuelos-Landa, 109 P.3d 1039 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section does not allow a court to reduce a sentence to less than the statutory minimum sentence for the crime committed. Thus the sentence of a person serving a mandatory minimum sentence for child abuse resulting in death could not be reduced pursuant to this section. People v. Smith, 971 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1999).

District attorney not permitted to withdraw from plea agreement when sentence reduced pursuant to this section. Because the plea agreement did not foreclose the future possibility of a reduction in sentence, the court-ordered sentence reduction could not amount to a substantial and material breach of the agreement between the parties. Keller v. People, 29 P.3d 290 (Colo. 2000).

17-27.7-105. Evaluation of regimented inmate training program. (Repealed)

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 964, § 1, effective June 7. L. 96: Entire section repealed, p. 1267, § 186, effective August 7.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1996 act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 237, Session Laws of Colorado 1996.

ARTICLE 27.8

Home Detention Programs

Law reviews: For article “1990 Criminal Law Legislative Update”, see 19 Colo. Law. 2049 (1990).

17-27.8-101.	Definitions.		operated by the judicial de-
17-27.8-102.	Authority of sentencing courts to utilize home detention programs. (Repealed)	17-27.8-105.	partment. Home detention program -
17-27.8-103.	Home detention program - contracted by department of public safety.		operated by the department of corrections for offenders who are paroled.
17-27.8-104.	Home detention program -	17-27.8-106.	Escape from custody.

- 17-27.8-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:
- (1) “Home detention” means an alternative correctional sentence or term of probation supervision wherein a defendant convicted of any felony, other than a class 1 or violent felony, is allowed to serve his sentence or term of probation, or a portion thereof, within his home or other approved residence. Such sentence or term of probation shall require the offender to remain within his approved residence at all times except for approved employment, court-ordered activities, and medical needs.
- (2) “Offender” means any person who has been convicted of or who has received a deferred sentence for a felony, other than a class 1 or violent felony.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 967, § 1, effective July 1.

17-27.8-102. Authority of sentencing courts to utilize home detention programs. (Repealed)

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 967, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: (1)(d) added, p. 2041, § 23, effective July 1. L. 95: (1)(d) amended, p. 569, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor’s note: In 2002, this section was relocated to § 18-1.3-105.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-27.8-103. Home detention program - contracted by department of public safety.

- (1) The division of criminal justice of the department of public safety is hereby authorized to contract with private entities to develop, administer, and operate home detention programs which may be utilized by any sentencing judge pursuant to section 18-1.3-105 (1), C.R.S.
- (2) Any home detention program developed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall include each of the following components:
- (a) Supervision of the offender by personal monitoring by a home detention officer employed by the entity operating the home detention program;

(b) Supervision of the offender through monitoring by electronic devices which are capable of detecting and reporting the offender's presence or absence at such offender's approved residence, place of employment, or other court-approved activity; and

(c) Access for the offender to attend any court-ordered counseling, substance abuse treatment, vocational rehabilitation or training, or education.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 968, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1) amended, p. 1509, § 173, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-27.8-104. Home detention program - operated by the judicial department.

(1) The judicial department is hereby authorized to develop, administer, and operate a home detention program which may be utilized by any sentencing judge pursuant to section 18-1.3-105 (1), C.R.S., or to contract with the division of criminal justice of the department of public safety for the utilization of home detention programs contracted for by that division.

(2) Any home detention program developed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall include each of the following components:

(a) Supervision of the offender by personal monitoring by a probation officer employed by the judicial department, or a home detention officer employed by a private entity operating a home detention program;

(b) Supervision of the offender through monitoring by electronic devices which are capable of detecting and reporting the offender's presence or absence at such offender's approved residence, place of employment, or other court-approved activity; and

(c) Access for the offender to attend any court-ordered counseling, substance abuse treatment, vocational rehabilitation or training, or education.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 969, § 1, effective July 1. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 1776, § 37, effective June 6. L. 2002: (1) amended, p. 1509, § 174, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-27.8-105. Home detention program - operated by the department of corrections for offenders who are paroled. The department of corrections is hereby authorized to develop, administer, and operate a home detention program or to contract with the division of criminal justice of the department of public safety pursuant to section 17-27.8-103 for a home detention program which may be utilized by the state board of parole for an offender as a condition of parole or modified parole.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 969, § 1, effective July 1.

17-27.8-106. Escape from custody. If an offender fails to remain within the extended limits of a home detention program as ordered by a sentencing judge, he shall be deemed to have escaped from custody and shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished as provided in section 18-8-208, C.R.S. An offender on parole who fails to remain within the limits of a home detention program shall be deemed to be in violation of parole pursuant to section 17-2-103 (1) (e).

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 969, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

For purposes of escape, there is no conflict between the home detention statute and the intensive supervision program (ISP) statute. In an escape case, the court must make a factual determination whether a defendant was placed in home detention or ISP based on the different elements of home detention and ISP. Home detention and ISP are mutually exclusive, therefore once the court determines whether the defendant was in home detention or on ISP there is no conflict. People v. Smith, 77 P.3d 751 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Sa’ra, 117 P.3d 51 (Colo. App. 2004).

ARTICLE 27.9

Specialized Restitution and Community Service Programs

17-27.9-101.	Legislative declaration. (Repealed)	17-27.9-104.	service program. (Repealed) Contracts with providers - amounts - loans.
17-27.9-102.	Specialized restitution and community service programs - contract with treatment providers - division of criminal justice.	17-27.9-105.	Evaluation of specialized restitution and community service programs.
17-27.9-103.	Offenders who may be sentenced to the specialized restitution and community	17-27.9-106.	Executive director of department - authority to accept funds - cash fund created.

17-27.9-101. Legislative declaration. (Repealed)

Source: L. 92: Entire article added, p. 262, § 2, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1172, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor’s note: In 2002, this section was relocated to § 18-1.3-302.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-27.9-102. Specialized restitution and community service programs - contract with treatment providers - division of criminal justice. (1) The director of the division of criminal justice of the department of public safety may, pursuant to section 17-27-108, contract with one or more public or private providers or community corrections boards, as defined in section 17-27-102 (2), who operate restitution and community service facilities, to provide specialized restitution and community service programs that meet the requirements of this section. As used in this article, such providers shall be referred to as “providers”. The provision of any substance abuse treatment shall be by an entity approved by the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, pursuant to article 80 of title 27, C.R.S.

(2) Any contract entered into for a specialized restitution and community service program pursuant to this section shall meet the following criteria:

- (a) The goals of the program shall include, but shall not be limited to:
 - (I) A level of supervision for each offender appropriate to ensure public safety;
 - (II) The reimbursement to the victim and to society for the damage caused by the offender’s crime through restitution and community service performed by the offender;
 - (III) The reduction of any substance abuse by any offender placed in the program, with the ultimate goal of abstinence from the use of drugs or alcohol by each such offender;
 - (IV) The reduction of recidivism by offenders who have completed the program;
 - (V) The development of employment skills and the attainment of meaningful employment by any offender placed in the program;

(VI) The use of peer support and accountability for any offender placed in the program, and the continuation of services and ongoing participation in the program to maintain the offender's progress;

(VII) The enhancement of the educational skills of any offender placed in the program, including the enhancement of self-care and self-sufficiency capabilities.

(b) (I) The program shall consist of three phases as follows:

(A) The first phase shall be intensive residential treatment;

(B) The second phase shall consist of residential treatment in conjunction with gradual reentry into the community;

(C) The third phase shall consist of nonresidential treatment.

(II) The first and second phases may continue for up to nine months, and the third phase may continue for up to twelve months or longer if restitution and community service have not been completed. The degree of supervision during the third phase shall be designed to decrease in intensity as the offender responds to the program and becomes substantially reestablished in the community.

(III) Victim restitution and community service shall be a primary emphasis in the second and third phases.

Source: L. 92: Entire article added, p. 263, § 2, effective July 1. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 720, § 6, effective July 1. L. 94: (1) amended, p. 2653, § 131, effective July 1. L. 2010: (1) amended, (SB 10-175), ch. 188, p. 784, § 27, effective April 29.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994.

17-27.9-103. Offenders who may be sentenced to the specialized restitution and community service program. (Repealed)

Source: L. 92: Entire article added, p. 264, § 2, effective July 1. L. 93: (1) amended and (4) added, p. 1173, § 2, effective July 1; (2)(b) amended, p. 720, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor's note: In 2002, this section was relocated to § 18-1.3-302.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-27.9-104. Contracts with providers - amounts - loans. (1) Any provider who contracts with the executive director of the department of public safety to provide specialized restitution and community service programs pursuant to section 17-27.9-102 shall be reimbursed on a per diem rate for residential supervision and a monthly rate for nonresidential supervision which rate shall be the final rate proposed by the provider during the competitive bidding process.

(2) Any offender who has the ability to pay all or any part of the cost of the offender's treatment and room and board pursuant to this article through assets or through any employment during the second or third phase of the program shall be ordered to make such payments to the provider. Any moneys collected by the provider pursuant to this subsection (2) shall be used to offset payments made to the provider pursuant to subsection (1) of this section. The amount of any such payments shall be set by the probation department after considering the offender's expenses for family support, victim restitution, and other living expenses.

(3) Any provider who contracts with the executive director of the department of public safety to provide specialized restitution and community service programs pursuant to section 17-27.9-102 may use the payments which such provider receives pursuant to this section to match federal or private grants in order to fund the provision of additional specialized restitution and community service programs, so long as matching such grants does not cause a reduction in the available bed space and so long as matching such grants does not bind the general assembly to fund such programs in future years.

Source: L. 92: Entire article added, p. 265, § 2, effective July 1. L. 93: (1) amended and (3) added, p. 1174, § 3, effective July 1.

17-27.9-105. Evaluation of specialized restitution and community service programs. (1) The director of the division of criminal justice shall conduct annual evaluations of each specialized restitution and community service program under which services are provided pursuant to this article. Evaluations shall include the consideration of the physical facility for each program, the financial operation of each program, and the effectiveness of each program in meeting the goals and requirements set forth in this article. The division of criminal justice shall develop specific evaluation criteria for each specialized restitution and community service program throughout the state after consultation with the local corrections board in the community where such program is located. Any provider that fails to meet the evaluation criteria within a reasonable time shall be subject to the termination of any contract entered into with such provider pursuant to this article.

(2) Repealed.

Source: L. 92: Entire article added, p. 265, § 2, effective July 1. L. 96: (2) repealed, p. 1267, § 185, effective August 7.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1996 act repealing subsection (2), see section 1 of chapter 237, Session Laws of Colorado 1996.

17-27.9-106. Executive director of department - authority to accept funds - cash fund created. The executive director of the department of public safety is hereby authorized to accept any grants or donations from any private or public source for the purpose of administering specialized restitution and community service programs pursuant to this article. Any such grants or donations shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the specialized restitution and community service cash fund, which fund is hereby created. The moneys in the fund shall be subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly and, in accordance with section 24-36-114, C.R.S., all interest derived from the deposit and investment of this fund shall be credited to the general fund.

Source: L. 92: Entire article added, p. 266, § 2, effective July 1.

ARTICLE 28

Restitution to Victims of Crime

Editor's note: (1) Prior to the repeal and reenactment of this title in 1977, the substantive provisions of this article were contained in article 28 of title 27.

(2) For additional historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor's note at the beginning of this title.

Cross references: For administrative proceedings to compensate victims of crime, see article 4.1 of title 24; for restitution to victims as a condition of probation, see § 18-1.3-205; for restitution as a condition of parole, see § 17-2-201 (5) (c); for restitution to victims of theft, see § 18-4-401; for restitution by delinquent children under the "Colorado Children's Code", see § 19-2-918; for charges for bad checks received as a restitution payment ordered as a condition of a plea agreement, see § 16-7-304; for charges for bad checks received as a restitution payment ordered as a condition of a deferred prosecution, see § 16-7-404.

17-28-101.	Legislative declaration.	17-28-103.	Victim-offender conferences -
17-28-102.	Establishment of restitution programs.		pilot program.

17-28-101. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly finds and declares that:

- (a) The number of victims of crime increases daily;
- (b) These victims suffer undue hardship by virtue of physical, mental, and emotional injury or loss of property;
- (c) Persons found guilty of causing such suffering are under a moral and legal obligation to make adequate restitution and restoration to those injured by their conduct;
- (d) Restitution and restoration provided by criminal offenders to their victims may be instruments of rehabilitation for offenders and may contribute to the healing and improved emotional well-being of their victims.

(2) The purpose of this article is to encourage the establishment of programs to provide for restitution to and restoration of victims of crime by offenders who are sentenced, or who have been released on parole, or who are being held in local correctional and detention facilities. It is the intent of the general assembly that restitution be utilized wherever feasible to restore losses to the victims of crime and to aid the offender in reintegration as a productive member of society. It is also the purpose of this article to promote establishment of victim-offender conferences in the institutions under the control of the department of corrections, using restorative justice practices as defined in section 18-1-901 (3) (o.5), C.R.S.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 947, § 10, effective August 1. L. 2011: Entire section amended, (HB 11-1032), ch. 296, p. 1400, § 2, effective August 10.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-28-101 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-28-102. Establishment of restitution programs. The department shall, as a means of assisting in the rehabilitation of persons committed to its care, including persons placed in community correctional facilities or programs, establish programs and procedures whereby such persons may contribute toward restitution of those persons injured as a consequence of their criminal acts.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 947, § 10, effective August 1. L. 87: Entire section amended, p. 1826, § 6, effective August 27. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 1266, § 184, effective August 7.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-28-102 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1996 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 237, Session Laws of Colorado 1996.

17-28-103. Victim-offender conferences - pilot program. The department is authorized to establish a pilot program, when funds become available, in its correctional facilities to facilitate victim-initiated victim-offender conferences whereby a victim of a crime may request a facilitated conference with the offender who committed the crime, if the offender is in the custody of the department. After such a pilot program is established, the department may establish policies and procedures for the victim-offender conferences using volunteers to facilitate the conferences. The volunteers shall complete the department's volunteer and facility-specific training programs and complete high-risk victim-offender training and victim advocacy training. The department shall not compensate or reimburse a volunteer or victim for any expenses nor otherwise incur any additional expenses to establish or operate the victim-offender conferences pilot program. If a pilot program is available, and subsequent to the victim's or the victim representative's request, the department shall arrange such a conference only after determining that the conference would be safe and only if the offender agrees to participate. The purposes of the conference shall be to enable the victim to meet the offender, to obtain answers to questions only the offender can answer, to assist the victim in healing from the impact of the crime, and to promote a sense of remorse and acceptance of responsibility by the offender that may contribute to his or her rehabilitation.

Source: L. 2011: Entire section added, (HB 11-1032), ch. 296, p. 1401, § 3, effective August 10.

ARTICLE 29
Physical Labor by Inmates

Cross references: For other provisions concerning work by inmates, see §17-20-117 and article 24 of this title.

17-29-101.	Legislative declaration.	17-29-105.	Minimum security off-
17-29-102.	Definitions.		grounds work programs -
17-29-103.	Executive director to establish		authorized.
	work program.
17-29-104.	Offenders in work program.
	(Repealed)

17-29-101. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the people of this state would benefit from a program to reclaim and maintain the land and resources of public entities within this state; that the executive director has custody over inmates, both male and female, who could be utilized as a labor force in such a program; that such a program would reinforce the rehabilitation of such inmates, provide work skills, and instill a work ethic in the inmates, thereby facilitating their readjustment to society; and that work assignments involving physical labor will assist the executive director and the wardens in the management of correctional facilities under their supervision. To these ends, it is the purpose of this article to create within the department physical labor work programs, including an intensive labor work program for all inmates sentenced to the department, including repeat offenders and parole violators as well as those inmates who demonstrate behavior inconsistent with the rules of the department or any of its facilities, which utilize the physical labor of inmates. The executive director or the executive director’s designee may appoint facility wardens, responsible for the administration of correctional facilities, to perform the duties and functions set forth in this article.

Source: L. 81: Entire article added, p. 965, § 1, effective June 10. L. 97: Entire section amended, p. 28, § 5, effective March 20. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 848, § 46, effective May 24.

17-29-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

- (1) “Able-bodied offender” has the same meaning as set forth in section 17-24-103 (1).
- (2) “Work program” means a work program established pursuant to the provisions of this article.

Source: L. 81: Entire article added, p. 965, § 1, effective June 10.

17-29-103. Executive director to establish work program. (1) The executive director may establish an intensive labor work program at all facilities, utilizing the physical labor of able-bodied offenders, which will be directed toward the reclamation and maintenance of land and resources, including but not limited to those of any federal, state, or local governmental agency or nonprofit agency within this state, and which will be administered by the various wardens responsible for the administration of any correctional facility. Such intensive labor work program shall be operated on an incentive basis so that an offender assigned to the intensive labor work program who demonstrates that he or she is willing to modify his or her behavioral patterns, to cooperate in his or her rehabilitation, and to learn both a work ethic and a job skill becomes eligible for reassignment from the intensive labor work program.

(2) Immediately after the evaluation and diagnosis required by section 16-11-308 (2), C.R.S., and initial placement at a correctional facility, every able-bodied offender may, by departmental classification action, be assigned to and shall participate in the intensive labor work program for a period of not less than thirty days; except that the executive director or the wardens responsible for the administration of correctional facilities may waive or delay an offender's initial assignment to the intensive labor work program for the good of the department. Offenders assigned to the intensive labor work program will be compensated at a rate set in accordance with the regulations of the department concerning offender pay, including but not limited to provisions concerning deductions and reimbursement for care claims.

(3) The executive director is specifically authorized to assign such other able-bodied offenders whose behavior is inconsistent with the rules established by the executive director or the executive director's designee to the intensive labor work program for such periods of time as may best serve the offenders and assist the executive director in the management of correctional facilities under the supervision of the executive director. Eligibility for reassignment from the intensive labor work program to such educational or vocational work programs as are consistent with the diagnosis and evaluation conducted pursuant to article 40 of this title will be determined by departmental classification action after reviewing the offender's willingness to modify behavioral patterns, to commit to cooperating in rehabilitation, and to learn both a work ethic and a job skill. Offenders assigned to the intensive labor work program pursuant to this section will also be compensated at a rate set in accordance with the regulations concerning offender pay promulgated by the department.

(4) The executive director shall establish rules to implement this article.

Source: L. 81: Entire article added, p. 966, § 1, effective June 10. L. 97: Entire section amended, p. 28, § 6, effective March 20. L. 2000: (1) and (2) amended, p. 848, § 47, effective May 24.

17-29-104. Offenders in work program. (Repealed)

Source: L. 81: Entire article added, p. 966, § 1, effective June 10. L. 95: Entire section repealed, p. 876, § 10, effective July 1.

17-29-105. Minimum security off-grounds work programs - authorized. (1) The executive director may establish an off-grounds work program for any appropriate minimum and minimum-restrictive inmates. The purpose of the program is to provide employment opportunities for such inmates, to reinforce the rehabilitation of such inmates, and to provide inmates with the necessary skills and appropriate work ethics in reentering the work force and their communities. Under the program, inmates may be assigned to appropriate work assignments requested by any federal, state, or local governmental agency or nonprofit agency. Appropriate work assignments shall be determined by the executive director. Requests from agencies and agency agreements with the department shall comply with criteria established by the executive director pursuant to section 17-20-115; except that such criteria may include but is not limited to the following requirements:

(a) That a requesting agency outline in detail any work to be performed by inmates, the period of time for completing the project, and the respective responsibilities of the requesting agency and the department of corrections in connection with the project agreement;

(b) That a requesting agency provide any necessary materials, equipment, and transportation or defray operational costs of state vehicles;

(c) That appropriate security be provided at all times. In connection with this requirement, agencies may contract with the department of corrections for the department to provide such security.

(d) That a requesting agency ensure that any person who supervises an inmate in connection with a work project be trained by department of corrections personnel to supervise correctional inmates. Such training may be provided by department of corrections personnel.

(e) That the number of inmates supervised by one person not exceed ten;

(f) That a requesting agency comply with any reporting requirements established by the executive director in connection with an off-grounds work project and the inmates participating in such project;

(g) That an inmate receive security clearance to leave a correctional facility by the classification officer or committee and receive approval from the executive director;

(h) That inmates be compensated in accordance with the provisions of this title and with the Colorado department of corrections inmate pay regulation, including, but not limited to, provisions with respect to deductions and reimbursement for care claims.

(2) No project shall be undertaken or agreement made for any project that results in any personal benefit or profit for a private individual as opposed to the public.

(3) The executive director may appoint one or more designees to perform the duties and functions set forth in this section.

Source: L. 95: Entire section added, p. 876, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2000: IP(1) amended, p. 849, § 48, effective May 24.

ARTICLE 30

Interdepartmental Cooperation Concerning Offenders

17-30-101. Interdepartmental cooperation concerning offenders. (Repealed)

17-30-101. Interdepartmental cooperation concerning offenders. (Repealed)

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 978, § 1, effective May 8. L. 95: (1) repealed, p. 1098, § 19, effective May 31. L. 99: (2) repealed, p. 623, § 19, effective August 4.

ARTICLE 30.5

Interdepartmental Agreements to Consolidate Parole and Probation Offices

17-30.5-101. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2000: Entire article repealed, p. 849, § 49, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This article was added in 1991. For amendments to this article prior to its repeal in 2000, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume.

ARTICLE 31

Volunteerism in the Juvenile and Adult Criminal Justice System

17-31-101. Legislative declaration.
17-31-102. Definitions.
17-31-103. Volunteers - rehabilitation and 17-31-104. transition - programs.

Right to visit offenders.

17-31-101. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds it necessary to provide for and encourage the implementation of programs within the state's correctional facilities, the probation division of the judicial department, the parole division within the department of corrections, the division of youth corrections within the department of human services, and the department of public safety that enable volunteers to effectively assist with the rehabilitation and transition of adult and juvenile offenders. The general assembly further finds that the maximum use of volunteers should be encouraged to complement the regular staffs of such adult and juvenile corrections, parole, and probation divisions and that volunteers should be encouraged to participate in existing programs for adult and juvenile offenders in those divisions. The general assembly finds that such volunteers should be allowed, where practical and within the safety and security requirements of the applicable institution or program, to meet with and freely communicate with offenders to assist with the rehabilitation and transition of such offenders, in order to establish support groups and systems outside of the correctional facility.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 980, § 1, effective May 14. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 2653, § 132, effective July 1. L. 2008: Entire section amended, p. 1104, § 6, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994.

17-31-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Approved volunteer organization" means an organization which has screened and trained volunteers for working with adult and juvenile offenders in correctional facilities and in parole and probation programs of the judicial department, the department of corrections, the department of human services, and the department of public safety prior to January 1, 1990, or pursuant to guidelines for training volunteers established by either the executive director of the department of corrections, the executive director of the department of human services, the executive director of the department of public safety, or the chief justice of the supreme court. Such guidelines shall address the issues of liability, supervision, support, and training of volunteers.

(2) "Division" means the division or department directing or administering any public or private correctional institution or detention facility in which offenders are housed or treated, any probation program within each judicial district, or any juvenile or adult parole program, including but not limited to, the judicial department, the department of public safety and the division of criminal justice therein, the department of corrections and the division of adult parole therein, and the department of human services and the division of youth corrections therein.

(3) "Institution" means any of the following:

- (a) A correctional facility, as that term is defined in section 17-1-102 (1.7);
- (b) A community corrections program, as that term is defined in section 17-27-102 (3);
- (c) A halfway house, as that term is defined in section 19-1-103 (62), C.R.S.;
- (d) A diagnostic and evaluation center, as that term is defined in section 19-1-103 (41), C.R.S.;

(e) A receiving center, as that term is defined in section 19-1-103 (90), C.R.S.;

(f) A diagnostic center, as that term is defined in section 17-40-101 (1.5);

(g) Any jail operated by a county or a city and county;

(h) A minimum security facility, as that term is defined in section 17-25-101 (2).

(4) "Offender" means any person who has been convicted of or who has received a deferred sentence for a felony or misdemeanor who is under the authority of an agency.

(5) "Volunteer" means any person who has completed the training from an approved volunteer organization and gives his services without any express or implied promise of remuneration.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 980, § 1, effective May 14. L. 93: (3)(b) amended, p. 720, § 8, effective July 1. L. 94: (1) and (2) amended, p. 2653, § 133, effective July 1. L. 96: (3)(c) to (3)(e) amended, p. 1691, § 23, effective January 1, 1997. L. 2000: (2) amended, p. 858, § 69, effective May 24. L. 2008: (2) amended, p. 1104, § 7, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994.

17-31-103. Volunteers - rehabilitation and transition - programs. (1) Each division shall facilitate, where practicable, the use of volunteers to assist and participate in the development and implementation of programs for the rehabilitation and transition of and growth of support groups and systems for adult and juvenile offenders in the following institutions and programs:

- (a) Any correctional facility or county or city and county jail;
- (b) Any community correctional facility or program operated pursuant to article 27 of this title;
- (c) The adult parole program of the division of adult parole within the department;
- (d) The juvenile parole program of the division of youth corrections within the department of human services;
- (e) Any intensive supervision program operated by the department or operated by a local government under contract with the department pursuant to section 17-27.5-101;
- (f) Any work release or education release program pursuant to section 18-1.3-207, C.R.S.;
- (g) Any intensive supervision probation program, established by the judicial department pursuant to section 18-1.3-208, C.R.S.;
- (h) Any adjunct probation services program pursuant to section 16-11-214, C.R.S.;
- (i) The juvenile diversion program established and administered by the division of criminal justice of the department of public safety.
- (j) (Deleted by amendment, L. 92, p. 2174, § 25, effective June 2, 1992.)
- (2) Each division may implement programs in addition to those set forth in subsection (1) of this section which utilize volunteers to assist in such division with such division's parole, probation, or other offender rehabilitation functions.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 981, § 1, effective May 14. L. 92: (1)(j) amended, p. 2174, § 25, effective June 2. L. 94: (1)(d) amended, p. 2654, § 134, effective July 1. L. 96: (1)(e) amended, p. 843, § 4, effective May 23. L. 2000: (1)(c) amended, pp. 849, 858, §§ 50, 70, effective May 24. L. 2002: (1)(f) and (1)(g) amended, p. 1509, § 175, effective October 1. L. 2008: (1)(d) amended, p. 1104, § 8, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Amendments to subsection (1)(c) by sections 50 and 70 of House Bill 00-1133 were harmonized.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (1)(f) and (1)(g), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

17-31-104. Right to visit offenders. (1) A volunteer who has completed minimum training from an approved volunteer organization may visit any offender or offenders to whom such volunteer has been assigned at any institution and in any program utilizing volunteers as set forth in section 17-31-103, subject to reasonable times and for purposes within such guidelines as may be prescribed by the division of adult parole within the department, if such volunteer presents no security risk to such institution or program and has received basic training in volunteer services. Nothing in this section shall restrict the right of a warden of any facility or program from denying access to a facility or program to a volunteer seeking to visit any offender or offenders.

(2) The rights set forth and recognized under subsection (1) of this section are subject to the right of any offender to refuse such visitation.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 981, § 1, effective May 14. L. 94: (1) amended, p. 604, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1) amended, pp. 849, 858, §§ 51, 71, effective May 24.

Editor's note: Amendments to subsection (1) by sections 51 and 71 of House Bill 00-1133 were harmonized.

ARTICLE 32

Correctional Education Program

17-32-101.	Short title.		and objectives - performance objectives - evaluation - transfers of custody - reports.
17-32-102.	Legislative declaration.
17-32-103.	Definitions.
17-32-104.	Division of correctional education - advisory board to the division. (Repealed)	17-32-106.	Powers and duties of the program.
17-32-105.	Development of correctional education program - goals	17-32-107.	Correctional education program fund.

17-32-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Correctional Education Program Act of 1990".

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 971, § 1, effective July 1.

17-32-102. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that illiteracy is a problem in today's society and a particular problem among persons in correctional facilities.

(2) The general assembly further finds and declares that:

(a) Illiteracy and cognitive and vocational deficiencies among persons in the custody of the department contribute to their inability to successfully reintegrate into society upon their release from custody and the likelihood of their return to criminal activity; and

(b) Research demonstrates a clear relationship between employment of such persons and a reduction in their recidivism.

(3) It is therefore the intent of the general assembly in enacting this article to:

(a) Develop and implement a comprehensive competency-based educational and vocational program to combat illiteracy and develop marketable employment skills among persons in correctional facilities so they can become productive members of society when they are reintegrated into society; and

(b) Ensure that state funding is provided to educational and vocational programs that meet performance objectives, provide market-relevant training, and are proven to increase the likelihood that persons who are released from a correctional facility will successfully reintegrate into society.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 971, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 850, § 52, effective May 24. L. 2010: Entire section amended, (HB 10-1112), ch. 57, p. 205, § 1, effective August 11.

17-32-103. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Correctional education program" means the comprehensive competency-based educational and vocational program for persons in the custody of the department developed and implemented pursuant to the provisions of this article in order to ensure that each such person reaches maximum proficiency and readiness for reintegration into society.

(2) and (3) Repealed.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 971, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2000: (2) and (3) repealed, p. 850, § 53, effective May 24. L. 2010: (1) amended, (HB 10-1112), ch. 57, p. 206, § 2, effective August 11.

17-32-104. Division of correctional education - advisory board to the division. (Repealed)

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 972, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: (2)(e) repealed, p. 630, § 3, effective April 14. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 850, § 54, effective May 24.

17-32-105. Development of correctional education program - goals and objectives - performance objectives - evaluation - transfers of custody - reports. (1) On and after July 1, 1990, the correctional education program shall have responsibility for the provision of educational services to persons in correctional facilities under the control of the department and for the development and implementation of a comprehensive competency-based educational and vocational program, which program shall conform to the goals and objectives outlined in this subsection (1). The correctional education program may be implemented in phases with the goals and objectives implemented in all facilities in the order specified in this subsection (1); except that the goal and objective stated in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) shall be implemented in all correctional facilities no later than July 1, 1991, and the entire program shall be completely implemented in all correctional facilities no later than July 1, 1992. The program shall continue to operate instructional services currently offered in correctional facilities until such services are incorporated in or replaced by instructional services offered under the correctional education program. The correctional education program shall encompass the following goals and objectives:

(a) First, to ensure that every inmate in a correctional facility shall receive appropriate academic services mandated by federal or state statutes, regulations, or orders;

(b) Second, to ensure that every person in a correctional facility who has an expectation of release from custody within five years and lacks basic and functional literacy skills receive adult basic education instruction in accordance with the provisions of subsection (3) of this section;

(c) Third, to provide every person in a correctional facility who has an expectation of release from custody within five years with the opportunity to achieve functional literacy, specifically the ability to read and write the English language and the ability to perform routine mathematical functions prior to his or her release;

(d) Fourth, to provide every person in a correctional facility who has an expectation of release from custody within five years and who has demonstrated the intellectual capacity with the opportunity to obtain the equivalent of a high school education. A person who wishes to receive a standard high school diploma shall meet the graduation requirements established by the school district where he or she was last enrolled or pass an equivalency examination. To be eligible to receive credit for completion of a course required for the receipt of a high school diploma, a person shall have satisfied the requirements for such course established by the school district where he or she was last enrolled.

(e) Fifth, to ensure that every person in a correctional facility who has an expectation of release from custody within five years has an opportunity to acquire at least entry-level marketable vocational skills in one or more occupational fields for which there is a demonstrable demand in the economy of this state;

(f) Sixth, to ensure that every person in a correctional facility be released possessing life management skills which will allow him to function successfully in a free society;

(g) Seventh, to provide every person in a correctional facility who demonstrates college-level aptitudes with the opportunity to participate in college-level academic programs that may be offered within the correctional facility. Unless financial assistance for costs of the programs is provided through programs described in subsection (4) of this section or through private or federally funded grants or scholarships, costs associated with the college-level academic programs shall be borne entirely by the person participating in the program.

(2) The correctional education program developed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall provide that training in the fundamentals of personal health be an integral part of all instructional services offered in such program. Such training shall include instruction in personal hygiene, general health, and substance abuse education. The program shall also provide courses of instruction in the evening in order to accommodate those persons in work programs.

(3) (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (3), any person in a correctional facility who lacks basic and functional literacy skills, as determined through the use of a literacy test approved by the state board of education, shall be required to complete sequential course work sufficient to allow the inmate to pass a competency test or the test of general education development or both. If a composite test score of functional literacy is not attained, the program may require the inmate to continue to receive adult basic education instruction.

(b) A person in a correctional facility who lacks basic and functional literacy skills shall be required to attend adult basic education instruction unless such person:

- (I) Is serving a life sentence or is under sentence of death;
- (II) Is specifically exempted by the program from participation for security or health reasons;
- (III) Is housed at a community correctional facility;
- (IV) Is determined, through testing, to have attained a functional literacy level;
- (V) Is, because of a disability, at a maximum level of proficiency;
- (VI) Refuses, in writing, to participate in adult basic education instruction; or
- (VII) Fails to make "positive progress" after a minimum of twenty hours.

(4) This section shall not affect the eligibility of any person for educational training programs, vocational programs, or other programs expressly created under federal or state statutes, regulations, or orders.

(5) On or before December 31, 2010, the department shall develop a plan for each educational or vocational program offered pursuant to this article to meet the following performance objectives:

(a) The department is encouraged to use a vocational skills assessment to determine the vocational needs of each offender who is eligible to participate in a vocational program. To the extent practicable, the department shall assign each such offender to a vocational program based on this assessment.

(b) The program shall use a curriculum or a set of training practices that is:

(I) Approved by the department of education created in section 24-1-115, C.R.S., or the state board for community colleges and occupational education created in section 23-60-104, C.R.S.; or

(II) Described as part of an agreement or contract entered into pursuant to section 17-32-106 (1) (b).

(c) The program shall provide offenders training and competency in marketable skills that are relevant and likely to be in demand in the workplace as determined by data provided to the department by the department of labor and employment pursuant to subsection (6) of this section.

(6) On or before October 1, 2010, and on or before October 1 of each year thereafter, the department of labor and employment created in section 24-1-121, C.R.S., shall provide the department with data on current market trends and labor needs in Colorado to assist the department in providing educational and vocational programs that satisfy the performance objective described in paragraph (c) of subsection (5) of this section.

(7) When considering an offender for transfer, the department shall take the offender's enrollment in an educational or vocational program into consideration unless the offender is granted parole or is placed into a community corrections program pursuant to article 27 of this title. If the department transfers an offender enrolled in an educational or vocational program to another facility, the department is encouraged to give the offender priority for placement in a comparable educational or vocational program if such a program exists at the facility.

(8) The department shall annually report the following information concerning educational and vocational programs offered pursuant to this article:

(a) A list of the specific programs offered at each state-operated facility and private prison that houses offenders on behalf of the department;

(b) The number of instructors and the number of instructor vacancies, by program and facility;

- (c) The annual capacity of each program;
- (d) The annual enrollment of each program, including the number of offenders who were placed on a waiting list for the program and the average length of time spent on the waiting list by each such offender;
- (e) The number of offenders who successfully completed each program in the previous fiscal year;
- (f) The number of offenders who enrolled in each program but failed to successfully complete the program in the previous fiscal year, including for each such offender the reason for the offender's noncompletion;
- (g) The percentage of parolees who are employed full-time, employed part-time, or unemployed at the end of the previous fiscal year;
- (h) A summary of the results of any program evaluations or cost-benefit analyses performed by the department; and
- (i) The total amount of state and federal funding allocated by the department during the most recently completed fiscal year for vocational and educational programs, including information concerning the allocation of each source of funding and the amount of funding received by each program.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 973, § 1, effective July 1. L. 93: (3)(b)(V) amended, p. 1634, § 17, effective July 1. L. 2000: IP(1), (1)(a), (3)(a), and (3)(b)(II) amended, pp. 850, 859, §§ 55, 72, effective May 24. L. 2009: (1)(g) amended, (HB 09-1264), ch. 117, p. 494, § 1, effective August 5. L. 2010: IP(1), (1)(b), (1)(c), (1)(d), (1)(e), and (4) amended and (5), (6), (7), and (8) added, (HB 10-1112), ch. 57, p. 206, § 3, effective August 11. L. 2011: (5)(c) amended, (HB 11-1303), ch. 264, p. 1157, § 31, effective August 10.

17-32-106. Powers and duties of the program. (1) In connection with the development and implementation of the correctional education program, the program shall have the following powers and duties:

- (a) To promulgate rules and regulations necessary to implement the correctional education program;
- (b) To enter into agreements and contracts with school districts, charter schools, nonpublic schools, community colleges, junior colleges, state colleges and universities, trade unions, private occupational schools, private businesses, the department of labor and employment created in section 24-1-121, C.R.S., state and local government agencies, and private agencies as may be deemed appropriate for the purpose of providing instructional services necessary to implement the correctional education program. Agreements and contracts for the provision of instructional services shall expressly state the educational goals and objectives of the program and the specific requirements for instructional services.
- (c) To submit a budget request for the correctional education program for inclusion in the budget request for the department as a separate line item. Such line item shall be the department's total budget request for correctional education funding from the general fund and shall replace or include any such previous request for instructional or educational funding. Such budget request shall itemize the amount of the budget to be funded from the general fund of the state and the amount to be funded from moneys in the correctional education program fund created in section 17-32-107. No other funds from the general assembly shall be allocated to the department for any education program.
- (d) To accept moneys from the federal government as well as contributions, grants, gifts, bequests, and donations from individuals, private organizations, and foundations and do all things necessary, not inconsistent with this article or any other laws of this state, in order to avail itself of such federal moneys under any federal legislation. All moneys accepted by the program shall be transmitted to the state treasurer for credit to the correctional education program fund.
- (e) To enter into agreements with state agencies, as appropriate, in order to receive any funding or moneys available for correctional education;

(f) To expend moneys appropriated to the program by the general assembly, including moneys in the correctional education program fund, for the purpose of implementing the correctional education program;

(g) Repealed.

(h) To enter into negotiations with the department of human services for the purpose of coordinating and offering education services to juveniles in the custody of that department. The executive directors of the departments of corrections and human services shall each submit a proposed plan to the governor and general assembly, no later than January 1, 1992, for integrating such juveniles into the correctional education program.

(i) To exercise any other powers or perform any other duties that are consistent with the purposes for which the program was created and that are reasonably necessary for the fulfillment of the program's responsibilities under this article.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 975, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: (1)(h) amended, p. 2654, § 135, effective July 1. L. 96: (1)(g) repealed, p. 1266, § 183, effective August 7. L. 2000: IP(1), (1)(d), (1)(f), and (1)(i) amended, p. 851, § 56, effective May 24. L. 2010: (1)(b) amended, (HB 10-1112), ch. 57, p. 208, § 4, effective August 11.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994. For the legislative declaration contained in the 1996 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 237, Session Laws of Colorado 1996.

17-32-107. Correctional education program fund. There is hereby created in the state treasury the correctional education program fund, which shall be administered by the program and that shall consist of all moneys received by the program from the federal government and from contributions, grants, gifts, bequests, and donations from individuals, private organizations, and foundations. The moneys in the fund shall be subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly to the program for the purpose of developing and implementing a correctional education program. Any moneys not appropriated or not expended at the end of the fiscal year shall remain in the fund and shall not be transferred to or revert to the general fund of the state. Any interest earned on the investment or deposit of moneys in the fund shall remain in the fund and shall not be credited to the general fund of the state.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 976, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 851, § 57, effective May 24.

ARTICLE 33

Reentry Program

17-33-101. Colorado reentry program.

17-33-101. Colorado reentry program. (1) The department of corrections shall administer appropriate programs for offenders prior to and after release to assist offenders with reentry into society based upon the assessed need as determined by the director of the department of corrections and suitability of individual offenders for such services. The department of corrections shall administer the reentry programs in collaboration with the division of adult parole in the department of corrections and the youthful offender system in the department of corrections.

(2) The department of corrections shall design the reentry program to reduce the possibility of the offender returning to prison, to assist the offender in rehabilitation, and to provide the offender with life management skills that allow him or her to function successfully in society.

Source: L. 2004: Entire article added, p. 448, § 1, effective April 13.

DIAGNOSTIC PROGRAMSARTICLE 40*Colorado Diagnostic Program

Editor's note: (1) Prior to the repeal and reenactment of this title in 1977, the substantive provisions of this article were contained in article 40 of title 27.

(2) For additional historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title, see the editor's note at the beginning of this title.

17-40-101.	Definitions.	17-40-105.	Appointment of personnel to the program.
17-40-102.	Program established.	17-40-106.	Responsibilities of the superintendent.
17-40-103.	Examination of offenders - report.	17-40-107.	Transfer of prisoners for examination - assignment.
17-40-104.	Responsibility to the program of court imposing sentence.

17-40-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Correctional institution" means the correctional facilities at Canon City, the correctional facilities at Buena Vista, or any other institution established for the rehabilitation of male or female offenders.

(1.5) "Diagnostic center" means the diagnostic center located within the city and county of Denver.

(2) "Diagnostic services" means diagnostic examination and evaluation programs, including medical and dental evaluations, psychological testing, and academic and vocational assessment. "Diagnostic services" also includes identification of special needs, such as protective custody, services for persons who have mental illness or developmental disabilities, and special arrangements for those deemed potentially disruptive to institutional safety and operation.

(3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 94, p. 605, § 12, effective July 1, 1994.)

(4) "Superintendent" means the administrative head of the diagnostic center.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 947, § 10, effective August 1. L. 78: (1.5) added and (4) amended, p. 357, § 3, effective April 27. L. 79: (1), (1.5), and (4) amended, p. 699, § 67, effective July 1. L. 86: (1.5) and (2) amended, p. 767, § 1, effective May 8. L. 94: (1.5), (3), and (4) amended, p. 605, § 12, effective July 1. L. 2006: (2) amended, p. 1399, § 48, effective August 7.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-40-101 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-40-102. Program established. (1) There is hereby established the Colorado diagnostic program, referred to in this article as the "program".

(2) The primary function and purpose of the program shall be to provide a diagnostic examination and evaluation of all offenders sentenced by the courts of this state, so that each such offender may be assigned to a correctional institution or a program established pursuant to article 27.7 of this title which has the type of security and, to the extent possible, appropriate programs of education, employment, and treatment available, which are designed to accomplish maximum rehabilitation of such offender and to prepare an offender for placement into as productive an employment as possible following imprisonment.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 948, § 10, effective August 1. L. 78: (2) amended, p. 357, § 4, effective April 27. L. 90: (2) amended, p. 965, § 2, effective June 7.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-40-102 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

Section does not mandate that a particular classification be given, and accordingly does not confer a liberty interest. Klein v. Pyle, 767 F. Supp. 215 (D. Colo. 1991).

Applied in Ramos v. Lamm, 485 F. Supp. 122 (D. Colo. 1979); People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981).

17-40-103. Examination of offenders - report. (1) As soon as possible after July 1, 1974, each offender entering the diagnostic center shall receive appropriate diagnostic services, and each offender's treatment and employment needs shall be identified. Information provided pursuant to section 17-40-104 shall be considered in structuring the rehabilitation program. An offender shall be assigned to the assessment program for a period not to exceed sixty days; except that an offender may be held for an additional thirty days upon approval of the executive director. Upon completion of the recommended rehabilitation report, it shall be transmitted by the superintendent to the executive director, who, within fifteen days, shall cause the offender to be:

(a) Assigned to a correctional institution or to a program established pursuant to article 27.7 of this title, unless otherwise prohibited by law, based upon the examination and study of the offender; or

(b) Upon order of the court, returned to the court for the purpose of granting probation or other modification of sentence.

(2) A copy of the recommended rehabilitation report shall be shown and explained to the offender upon request; except that the executive director may withhold any information he deems to be detrimental to the rehabilitation of the offender.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed to restrict or deny the power of the court to grant an application for postconviction review pursuant to section 18-1-410, C.R.S.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 948, § 10, effective August 1. L. 78: IP(1) amended, p. 357, § 5, effective April 27. L. 90: (1)(a) amended, p. 965, § 3, effective June 7. L. 94: IP(1) amended, p. 605, § 13, effective July 1. L. 97: IP(1) amended, p. 27, § 4, effective March 20.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-40-103 as it existed prior to 1977.

Cross references: For the requirement that sentenced persons be confined in the diagnostic center, see § 16-11-308 (2).

ANNOTATION

The legislative intent of this section is to give the executive director of the department of corrections ultimate responsibility for placing of inmates in particular facilities. Thus, the court could recommend sentencing to an out-of-state facility, but it could not order such placement. People v. Brack, 821 P.2d 928 (Colo. App. 1991).

Diagnostic evaluation report may be used for possible reconsideration of sentence. People v. District Court, 636 P.2d 689 (Colo. 1981).

Applied in Ramos v. Lamm, 485 F. Supp. 122 (D. Colo. 1979).

17-40-104. Responsibility to the program of court imposing sentence. Before or at the same time any offender is transported to the diagnostic center, the sentencing court shall transmit to the superintendent of the program any available presentence report, offense report, or diagnostic or clinical information and any recommendation the court may deem appropriate.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 948, § 10, effective August 1. L. 78: Entire section amended, p. 357, § 6, effective April 27. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 700, § 68, effective July 1. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 605, § 14, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-40-104 as it existed prior to 1977.

ANNOTATION

By its plain terms, this section makes no reference to information that must be reflected on the mittimus. Thus, in sentencing an offender directly to the department of corrections, a court is not required to include information concerning good time credit on the mittimus. Therefore, the court's failure to do so, even when the defendant has waived the presentence report, is not error. People v. Fitzgerald, 973 P.2d 708 (Colo. App. 1998).

17-40-105. Appointment of personnel to the program. Subject to the provisions of section 13 of article XII of the state constitution, the executive director shall appoint the superintendent. The superintendent shall appoint such supervisors, psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, correctional specialists, and other officers and employees as are deemed necessary. No inmate of any correctional institution shall be appointed to any task directly involved with the diagnostic services provided by the program. This shall not prohibit tasks performed by inmates in custodial capacities and food service duties and similar tasks approved by the executive director.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 948, § 10, effective August 1. L. 78: Entire section amended, p. 358, § 7, effective April 27. L. 94: Entire section amended, p. 606, § 15, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-40-105 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-40-106. Responsibilities of the superintendent. (1) The superintendent shall be responsible for the administration of diagnostic services and the supervision of the employees of the program.

(2) The superintendent shall be responsible for the management, control, regulation, and operation of the physical facilities and for the reception, discipline, and confinement of all offenders.

(3) The superintendent or superintendent's designee shall separate all offenders in the diagnostic program from the offenders in the correctional institution.

(4) (a) The superintendent may implement a mental illness screening program to screen offenders entering the diagnostic center. If the superintendent chooses to implement a mental illness screening program, the superintendent shall use the standardized screening instrument developed pursuant to section 16-11.9-102, C.R.S., and conduct the screening in accordance with procedures established pursuant to said section.

(b) Prior to implementation of a mental illness screening program pursuant to this subsection (4), if implementation of the program would require an increase in appropriations, the superintendent shall submit to the joint budget committee a request for funding in the amount necessary to implement the mental illness screening program. If implementation of the mental illness screening program would require an increase in appropriations, implementation of the program shall be conditional upon approval of the funding request.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 949, § 10, effective August 1. L. 78: (2) and (3) amended, p. 358, § 8, effective April 27. L. 94: (1) and (3) amended, p. 606, § 16, effective July 1. L. 2002: (4) added, p. 574, § 3, effective May 24.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-40-106 as it existed prior to 1977.

17-40-107. Transfer of prisoners for examination - assignment. The executive director may transfer any offender to the program for study and examination and, upon completion thereof, shall cause the offender to be assigned pursuant to this article.

Source: L. 77: Entire title R&RE, p. 949, § 10, effective August 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 27-40-107 as it existed prior to 1977.

ARTICLE 41Colorado Prerelease Program*17-41-101 to 17-41-104. (Repealed)

Editor's note: (1) Section 17-41-104 provided for the repeal of this article, effective July 1, 1984. (See L. 81, p. 968.)

(2) This article was added in 1981. For amendments to this article prior to its repeal in 1984, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONSARTICLE 42*Miscellaneous Provisions

- 17-42-101. Freedom of worship.
17-42-102. American Indians - freedom of worship.

17-42-101. Freedom of worship. (1) All persons who are confined to a correctional facility as defined in section 17-1-102 shall have the right to worship according to the dictates of their consciences, and such persons shall be afforded a reasonable opportunity to freely exercise their religious beliefs without fear of retaliation or discrimination for the free exercise thereof. The practice of religion by any particular sect may not be curtailed or prohibited unless such practices threaten the reasonable security interests of the correctional facility.

(2) Upon the request of any inmate, and to the extent practicable and consistent with reasonable security considerations, religious facilities shall be made available in a nondiscriminatory manner. Services shall be held and advice and ministration given within the buildings or grounds of the correctional facility where the inmate is confined. Attendance at any services so provided shall be voluntary.

(3) The department shall permit access to objects of a religious nature where possession of such objects would not unduly burden the reasonable security interests of the correctional facility. Prison officials shall accord appropriate respect for sacred objects. When the reasonable security interests of the correctional facility necessitate the inspection of any sacred object, such inspection shall be done visually.

(4) In order to provide for and attend to the spiritual needs of inmates, the department shall permit inmates to consult with and receive spiritual advice and ministration from a spiritual leader.

(5) This section shall not require the department of corrections to construct additional facilities, remodel or reconfigure existing structures, or hire additional employees to meet the directives of this section.

Source: L. 92: Entire article added, p. 250, § 1, effective May 26.

17-42-102. American Indians - freedom of worship. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that American Indian religions and religious beliefs pre-date the creation of the United States constitution; however, understanding of and respect for American Indian religious practices is not widespread among non-indigenous persons. The general assembly further finds that serious problems in the practice of religious freedom persist for the American Indian and particularly for American Indians who are incarcerated. Therefore, in order to protect this most basic freedom for American Indians who are incarcerated, traditional religious and ceremonial practices of American Indians should be permitted in correctional facilities to the extent that such practices do not impinge on the reasonable security interests of the correctional facilities to which such Indians are confined.

(2) American Indians who are confined to a correctional facility as defined in section 17-1-102 and who practice an American Indian religion as defined in subsection (5) of this section shall have access on a regular basis to the following:

- (a) American Indian traditional spiritual leaders;
- (b) Items and materials utilized in religious ceremonies; and
- (c) American Indian religious facilities.

(3) Access of American Indians to spiritual leaders, religious items and materials, and religious facilities shall be comparable to access to clergy, religious items and materials, and religious facilities which is afforded to inmates who practice Judeo-Christian religions.

(4) The provisions of this section shall not be construed as requiring prison authorities to permit or prohibit access to peyote or American Indian religious sites.

(5) For purposes of this section:

(a) "American Indian" means an individual of aboriginal ancestry who is a member of an Indian tribe. "American Indian" includes any individual who is an Alaska native or any individual who is a native Hawaiian.

(b) "American Indian religion" means any religion which is practiced by American Indians and the origin and interpretation of which is from a traditional American Indian culture or community.

(c) "Indian tribe" means any tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community of Indians, including any Alaska native village as defined in the "Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act", federal Public Law 92-203, as amended, which is recognized as eligible for the special programs and services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

(d) "Native Hawaiian" means any individual who is a descendant of the aboriginal people who, prior to 1778, occupied and exercised sovereignty in the area that now comprises the state of Hawaii.

Source: L. 92: Entire article added, p. 251, § 1, effective May 26.

Editor's note: Subsections (5)(b), (5)(c), and (5)(d), as enacted by Senate Bill 92-197, were relettered on revision in 2004 to conform with statutory alphabetization format.

TITLE 18
CRIMINAL CODE

$$4 - 2x_1 + 4$$

$$= 8 - 2x_1 + 4$$

TITLE 18

CRIMINAL CODE

Editor's note: This title was numbered as chapter 40, C.R.S. 1963. The substantive provisions of this title were repealed and reenacted in 1971, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For amendments to this title prior to 1971, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note beginning on page vii in the front of this volume. For a detailed comparison of this title, see the comparative tables located in the back of the index.

- Art. 1. Provisions Applicable to Offenses Generally, 18-1-101 to 18-1-1109.
- Art. 1.3. Sentencing in Criminal Cases, 18-1.3-101 to 18-1.3-1407.
- Art. 1.4. Class 1 Felonies Committed on or after July 1, 1995, and Prior to July 12, 2002, 18-1.4-101 and 18-1.4-102.
- Art. 1.5. Criminal Justice Commission (Repealed).
- Art. 1.7. Treatment of Persons with Mental Illness Involved in the Criminal Justice System (Repealed).
- Art. 1.8. Interagency Task Force on Trafficking in Persons (Repealed).
- Art. 1.9. Continuing Examination of the Treatment of Persons with Mental Illness Who are Involved in the Justice System, 18-1.9-101 to 18-1.9-107.
- Art. 2. Inchoate Offenses, 18-2-101 to 18-2-401.
- Art. 3. Offenses Against the Person, 18-3-101 to 18-3-602.
- Art. 3.5. Unlawful Termination of Pregnancy, 18-3.5-101 and 18-3.5-102.
- Art. 4. Offenses Against Property, 18-4-101 to 18-4-802.
- Art. 5. Offenses Involving Fraud, 18-5-101 to 18-5-905.
- Art. 5.5. Computer Crime, 18-5.5-101 and 18-5.5-102.
- Art. 6. Offenses Involving the Family Relations, 18-6-101 to 18-6-805.
- Art. 6.5. Wrongs to At-risk Adults, 18-6.5-101 to 18-6.5-107.
- Art. 7. Offenses Relating to Morals, 18-7-101 to 18-7-801.
- Art. 8. Offenses - Governmental Operations, 18-8-101 to 18-8-804.
- Art. 9. Offenses Against Public Peace, Order, and Decency, 18-9-101 to 18-9-313.
- Art. 10. Gambling, 18-10-101 to 18-10-108.
- Art. 11. Offenses Involving Disloyalty, 18-11-101 to 18-11-205.
- Art. 12. Offenses Relating to Firearms and Weapons, 18-12-101 to 18-12-216.
- Art. 13. Miscellaneous Offenses, 18-13-101 to 18-13-130.
- Art. 14. Hotel Facility Rates: Posting - Notice, 18-14-101 to 18-14-104.
- Art. 15. Offenses - Making, Financing, or Collection of Loans, 18-15-101 to 18-15-109.
- Art. 16. Purchasers of Valuable Articles, 18-16-101 to 18-16-110.
- Art. 17. Colorado Organized Crime Control Act, 18-17-101 to 18-17-109.
- Art. 18. Uniform Controlled Substances Act of 1992, 18-18-101 to 18-18-605.
- Art. 18.5. Methamphetamine Abuse Prevention, Intervention, and Treatment and the Response of the Criminal Justice System, 18-18.5-101 to 18-18.5-106.
- Art. 19. Drug Offender Surcharge, 18-19-101 to 18-19-104.
- Art. 20. Offenses Related to Limited Gaming, 18-20-101 to 18-20-115.
- Art. 21. Sex Offender Surcharge, 18-21-101 to 18-21-103.
- Art. 22. Juvenile Offender Surcharge, 18-22-101 to 18-22-103.
- Art. 23. Gang Recruitment Act, 18-23-101 and 18-23-102.
- Art. 24. Crimes Against Children Surcharge, 18-24-101 to 18-24-103.

ARTICLE 1

Provisions Applicable to Offenses Generally

Law reviews: For article, "Criminal Law", which discusses Tenth Circuit decisions relating to criminal law, see 61 Den. L.J. 255 (1984); for article, "Criminal Law", which discusses Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with criminal law, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 125 (1985); for a discussion of Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with criminal law, see 66 Den. U. L. Rev. 711 (1989) and 67 Den. U. L. Rev. 691 (1990); for article, "Felony Sentencing in Colorado", see 18 Colo. Law. 1689 (1989); for article, "1990 Criminal Law Legislative Update", see 19 Colo. Law. 2049 (1990).

PART 1

PURPOSE AND SCOPE OF CODE -
CLASSIFICATION OF OFFENSES

- 18-1-101. Citation of title 18.
- 18-1-102. Purpose of code, statutory construction.
- 18-1-102.5. Purposes of code with respect to sentencing.
- 18-1-103. Scope and application of code.
- 18-1-104. "Offense" defined - offenses classified - common-law crimes abolished.
- 18-1-105. Felonies classified - presumptive penalties. (Repealed)
- 18-1-106. Misdemeanors classified - penalties. (Repealed)
- 18-1-107. Petty offenses classified - penalties. (Repealed)
- 18-1-108. Offenses not classified. (Repealed)
- 18-1-109. Penalty not fixed by statute - punishment. (Repealed)
- 18-1-110. Payment and collection of fines for class 1, 2, or 3 misdemeanors and class 1 or 2 petty offenses - release from incarceration. (Repealed)

PART 2

JURISDICTION AND PLACE OF TRIAL

- 18-1-201. State jurisdiction.
- 18-1-202. Place of trial.

PART 3

WHEN PROSECUTION BARRED BY FORMER PROCEEDINGS

- 18-1-301. Second trial barred by former prosecution for same offense.
- 18-1-302. Second trial barred by former prosecution for different offense.
- 18-1-303. Second trial barred by prosecution in another jurisdiction.
- 18-1-304. Former prosecution not a bar.

PART 4

RIGHTS OF DEFENDANT

- 18-1-401. Purpose.
- 18-1-402. Presumption of innocence.
- 18-1-403. Legal assistance and supporting services.
- 18-1-404. Preliminary hearing or waiver - dispositional hearing.
- 18-1-405. Speedy trial.
- 18-1-406. Right to jury trial.
- 18-1-407. Affirmative defense.
- 18-1-408. Prosecution of multiple counts for same act.
- 18-1-409. Appellate review of sentence for a felony.
- 18-1-409.5. Appellate review of sentence not within the presumptive range. (Repealed)
- 18-1-410. Postconviction remedy.
- 18-1-411. Postconviction testing of DNA - definitions.
- 18-1-412. Procedure for application for DNA testing - appointment of counsel.
- 18-1-413. Content of application for DNA testing.
- 18-1-414. Preservation of evidence.
- 18-1-415. Testing - payment.
- 18-1-416. Results of the DNA test.
- 18-1-417. Ineffective assistance of counsel claims - waiver of confidentiality.

PART 5

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL CULPABILITY

- 18-1-501. Definitions.
- 18-1-502. Requirements for criminal liability in general and for offenses of strict liability and of mental culpability.
- 18-1-503. Construction of statutes with respect to culpability requirements.
- 18-1-503.5. Principles of criminal culpability.
- 18-1-504. Effect of ignorance or mistake upon culpability.

18-1-505. Consent.

PART 8

PART 6

RESPONSIBILITY

PARTIES TO OFFENSES - ACCOUNTABILITY

18-1-601. Liability based upon behavior.
 18-1-602. Behavior of another.
 18-1-603. Complicity.
 18-1-604. Exemptions from liability based upon behavior of another.

18-1-801. Insufficient age.
 18-1-802. Insanity.
 18-1-803. Impaired mental condition.
 18-1-804. Intoxication.
 18-1-805. Responsibility - affirmative defense.

PART 9

DEFINITIONS

18-1-605. Liability based on behavior of another - no defense.
 18-1-606. Criminal liability of business entities.
 18-1-607. Criminal liability of an individual for corporate conduct.

18-1-901. Definitions.

PART 10

ORDERS AND PROCEEDINGS AGAINST DEFENDANT

18-1-1001. Protection order against defendant.
 18-1-1002. Criminal contempt proceedings
 - notice to district attorney.

PART 11

JUSTIFICATION AND EXEMPTIONS
FROM CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY

PRESERVATION OF DNA EVIDENCE

18-1-701. Execution of public duty.
 18-1-702. Choice of evils.
 18-1-703. Use of physical force - special relationships.
 18-1-704. Use of physical force in defense
 of a person.
 18-1-704.5. Use of deadly physical force against an intruder.
 18-1-705. Use of physical force in defense of premises.
 18-1-706. Use of physical force in defense
 of property.
 18-1-707. Use of physical force in making an arrest or in preventing an escape.
 18-1-708. Duress.
 18-1-709. Entrapment.
 18-1-710. Affirmative defense.
 18-1-711. Immunity for persons who suffer or report an emergency drug or alcohol overdose event - definitions.

18-1-1101. Definitions.
 18-1-1102. Scope.
 18-1-1103. Duty to preserve DNA evidence.
 18-1-1104. Manner and location of preservation of DNA evidence.
 18-1-1105. Law enforcement agency request for permission to dispose of evidence - procedures.
 18-1-1106. Defendant request for disposition of or waiver of preservation of DNA evidence - procedures.
 18-1-1107. Victim request for disposition of DNA evidence - procedures.
 18-1-1108. Notice - form and sufficiency.
 18-1-1109. Court data collection - DNA evidence cases - repeal. (Repealed)

PART 1

PURPOSE AND SCOPE OF CODE -
CLASSIFICATION OF OFFENSES

18-1-101. Citation of title 18. (1) This title shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Criminal Code"; within this title, the "Colorado Criminal Code" is sometimes referred to as "this code".

(2) The portion of any section, subsection, paragraph, or subparagraph contained in this code which precedes a list of examples, requirements, conditions, or other items may be referred to and cited as the "introductory portion" of the section, subsection, paragraph, or subparagraph.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 388, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-101.

ANNOTATION

Caption "criminal code" complies with constitutional requirements concerning titles. The caption "criminal code" is broad enough to embrace every offense against the law that can be classified as a misdemeanor or felony as well as criminal pleading and practice, and fully complies with the constitutional requirements concerning titles to legislation. Heller v. People, 2 Colo. App. 459, 31 P. 773 (1892) (decided under G.S. § 1616).

Although a child under the age of 10 cannot be found guilty of a crime, such a child can commit a crime. Therefore, an adult can be found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a minor where the minor is under the age of 10. People v. Miller, 830 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1991).

18-1-102. Purpose of code, statutory construction. (1) This code shall be construed in such manner as to promote maximum fulfillment of its general purposes, namely:

(a) To define offenses, to define adequately the act and mental state which constitute each offense, to place limitations upon the condemnation of conduct as criminal when it is without fault, and to give fair warning to all persons concerning the nature of the conduct prohibited and the penalties authorized upon conviction;

(b) To forbid the commission of offenses and to prevent their occurrence through the deterrent influence of the sentences authorized; to provide for the rehabilitation of those convicted and their punishment when required in the interests of public protection;

(c) To differentiate on reasonable grounds between serious and minor offenses, and prescribe penalties which are proportionate to the seriousness of offenses and which permit recognition of differences in rehabilitation possibilities as between individual offenders;

(d) To prevent arbitrary or oppressive treatment of persons accused or convicted of offenses and to identify certain minimum standards for criminal justice which, within the concept of due process of law, have the stature of substantive rights of persons accused of crime;

(e) To promote acceptance of responsibility and accountability by offenders and to provide restoration and healing for victims and the community while attempting to reduce recidivism and the costs to society by the use of restorative justice practices.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 388, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-102. L. 2011: (1)(e) added, (HB 11-1032), ch. 296, p. 1401, § 4, effective August 10.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For case note, "Interjurisdictional Merger of Sentences: The Need for an Interstate Compact", see 49 U. Colo. L. Rev. 473 (1978). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Construction. Criminal statutes are to be construed strictly in favor of the accused. People v. Roybal, 618 P.2d 1121 (Colo. 1980); People v. Russell, 703 P.2d 620 (Colo. App. 1985).

Sentencing court should tailor the sentence to the defendant, keeping in mind past record, potential for rehabilitation, and protection of the public as well. People v. Alvarez, 187 Colo. 290, 530 P.2d 506 (1975).

Sentencing discretion reposes in court. It is the court, and not the probation department, in whom sentencing discretion is reposed. People v. Edwards, 198 Colo. 52, 598 P.2d 126 (1979).

Sentencing involves an exercise in judicial discretion and, accordingly, a sentencing judge has wide latitude in arriving at a final decision. People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980).

The trial court has wide discretion in sentencing and, absent a finding of abuse of discretion, an appellate court will not substitute its judgment for that of the trial judge. People v. Madonna, 651 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1982).

The trial court has broad discretion in sentencing one convicted of a felony. All relevant factors may be considered to determine which alternative is most appropriate to meet the sentencing goals and policies of deterrence, punishment, rehabilitation, and protection of the public. Absent a finding of an abuse of discretion, an appellate court will not substitute its judgment on appeal. Adair v. People, 651 P.2d 389 (Colo. 1982).

Record must clearly justify action of sentencing judge where a sentence is imposed for an extended term. People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980).

Considerations in appellate review of sentence. In an appellate review of a sentence, a claim of excessiveness generally requires a consideration of the nature of the offense, the character of the offender, and the public interest in safety and deterrence. People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980).

When an offender has committed offenses in a number of different jurisdictions, the sentence imposed should "promote maximum fulfillment" of the legislative directives in the sentencing statutes. People v. Lewis, 193 Colo. 203, 564 P.2d 111 (1977).

Applied in People v. Wilson, 43 Colo. App. 68, 599 P.2d 970 (1979); People v. Martinez, 628 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1981).

18-1-102.5. Purposes of code with respect to sentencing. (1) The purposes of this code with respect to sentencing are:

(a) To punish a convicted offender by assuring the imposition of a sentence he deserves in relation to the seriousness of his offense;

(b) To assure the fair and consistent treatment of all convicted offenders by eliminating unjustified disparity in sentences, providing fair warning of the nature of the sentence to be imposed, and establishing fair procedures for the imposition of sentences;

(c) To prevent crime and promote respect for the law by providing an effective deterrent to others likely to commit similar offenses;

(d) To promote rehabilitation by encouraging correctional programs that elicit the voluntary cooperation and participation of convicted offenders;

(e) To select a sentence, a sentence length, and a level of supervision that addresses the offender's individual characteristics and reduces the potential that the offender will engage in criminal conduct after completing his or her sentence; and

(f) To promote acceptance of responsibility and accountability by offenders and to provide restoration and healing for victims and the community while attempting to reduce recidivism and the costs to society by the use of restorative justice practices.

Source: L. 79: Entire section added, p. 668, § 15, effective July 1. L. 2011: (1)(c) and (1)(d) amended and (1)(e) added, (HB 11-1180), ch. 96, p. 282, § 1, effective August 10; (1)(c) and (1)(d) amended and (1)(f) added, (HB 11-1032), ch. 296, p. 1402, § 5, effective August 10.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For comment, "Criminal Sentencing in Colorado: Ripe for Reform", see 65 U. Colo. L. Rev. 685 (1994).

Sentencing is a discretionary decision which requires weighing of various factors and striking a fair accommodation between the defendant's need for rehabilitation or corrective treatment and society's interest in safety and deterrence. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Sentencing, by its very nature, is a discretionary act that is not subject to scientific precision. Flower v. People, 658 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1983).

A judge has wide latitude in reaching his decision on a particular sentence. People v. Martinez, 628 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1981).

Sentencing is a complex process which requires the exercise of the sound discretion of the sentencing judge. People v. Beland, 631 P.2d 1130 (Colo. 1981).

The discretion implicit in the sentencing decision is not an unrestricted discretion devoid of reason or principle. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Some of the more common factors to be considered in sentencing are: The gravity of the offense in terms of harm to person or property or in terms of the culpability requirement of the law; the defendant's history of prior criminal conduct; the degree of danger the defendant might present to the community if released forthwith; the likelihood of future criminality in the absence of corrective incarceration or treatment; the prospects for rehabilitation under some less drastic sentencing alternative, such as probation; and the likelihood of depreciating the seriousness of the offense were a less drastic sentencing alternative chosen. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980); People v. Reed, 43 P.3d 644 (Colo. 2001).

Judge's sentencing discretion limited by general assembly. Although a judge has broad discretion in tailoring a sentence to accommodate various factors, the sentence must be consistent with legislatively imposed limits and constraints. People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981).

In order to achieve the purposes of sentencing, the general assembly has required the sentencing court to consider and weigh, prior to the imposition of the sentence, the nature and elements of the offense, the character and record of the offender, and all aggravating or mitigating circumstances surrounding the offense and the offender, including those specifically found by the court to be extraordinary. People v. Manley, 707 P.2d 1021 (Colo. App. 1985).

Purposes of sentencing are to punish a defendant in relation to the seriousness of the offense, to assure fair and consistent treatment of all convicted offenders, to deter others likely to commit similar offenses, and to promote the defendant's rehabilitation. People v. Reed, 43 P.3d 644 (Colo. 2001).

Sentencing decision should reflect rational selection from various sentencing alternatives in a manner consistent with the dominant aims of the sentencing process. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Proper and fair sentence is one that can be reasonably explained. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Sentence must bear some proportionality to severity of offense for which it is imposed, notwithstanding the need for public protection. People v. Martinez, 628 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1981); People v. Piro, 701 P.2d 878 (Colo. App. 1985).

Three considerations of concern to judge when setting sentence are the need to protect society at large and deter potential offenders, to punish the convicted offender, and to rehabilitate him. People v. Bravo, 630 P.2d 612 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jordan, 630 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1981); People v. Watkins, 684 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1984).

Defendant's behavior deemed relevant factor. A defendant's behavior during judicial proceedings and while in custody may well become relevant facts for the court to consider as part of the factors it weighs in sentencing. Smith v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1981).

Judge must consider rehabilitation needs of individual defendant. People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981).

While rehabilitation is a preferred goal, it is only one factor which must be considered in tailoring a sentence to each individual case. People v. Jordan, 630 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1981).

Sentence must be supported by reasons in record. Hereafter in felony convictions involving the imposition of a sentence to a correctional facility the sentencing judge must state on the record the basic reasons for the imposition of sentence. The statement need not be lengthy, but should include the primary factual considerations bearing on the judge's sentencing decision. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Particularly where sentence involves restrictive form of deprivation. Requirement that sentencing judge state on the record the basic reasons for imposing a sentence is particularly essential in those cases where the sentence involves a very restrictive form of deprivation, such as a term of confinement to a correctional facility. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Failure to state reasons creates obstacle to appellate review. The failure of a sentencing judge to state on the record the basic reasons for the selection of a particular sentence creates a burdensome obstacle to effective and meaningful appellate review of sentences. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Factors in appellate review of extended term of confinement. In evaluating the propriety or intrinsic fairness of an extended term of confinement, an appellate court focuses on the nature of the offense, the character of the offender and the public interest and determines whether the record establishes a clear justification for the sentence imposed. People v. Scott, 630 P.2d 615 (Colo. 1981).

No vacation or modification unless abuse of discretion. On review, an appellate court may not vacate or modify a sentence imposed by a trial court unless it appears that the trial judge clearly abused his discretion in imposing the sentence. People v. Beland, 631 P.2d 1130 (Colo. 1981).

Although judiciary has exclusive authority to impose sentences, such sentences must be within the limits determined by the general assembly which has the exclusive authority to define crimes and impose punishment. People v. Schwartz, 823 P.2d 1386 (Colo. App. 1991).

No abuse of discretion. In light of the facts and the nature of the crimes, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing consecutive sentences for aggravated robbery and second degree kidnapping. People v. Fuller, 791 P.2d 702 (Colo. 1990).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing a sentence of twice the maximum presumptive range. The sentence was appropriate because the defendant had committed an especially vicious attack in violation of a restraining order, and the court gave due consideration to the defendant's rehabilitative potential and employment history. People v. Hayward, 55 P.3d 803 (Colo. App. 2002).

Because the sentence imposed was within the range required by law and was based on appropriate considerations supported by the record, trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing an aggravated sentence. People v. Martinez, 179 P.3d 23 (Colo. App. 2007).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in sentencing a defendant convicted of second degree murder, theft, and attempted theft to imprisonment for 45 years despite the fact the defendant tested positive for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV). People v. Baca, 852 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in People v. Wylie, 44 Colo. App. 38, 605 P.2d 494 (1980); People v. Hostetter, 44 Colo. App. 44, 606 P.2d 80 (1980); People v. Hamling, 634 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Phillips, 652 P.2d 575 (Colo. 1982); People v. Turman, 659 P.2d 1368 (Colo. 1983); Rocha v. People, 713 P.2d 350 (Colo. 1986).

18-1-103. Scope and application of code. (1) Except as otherwise expressly provided by sections 18-1.3-402 and 18-1.3-504, or unless the context otherwise requires, the provisions of this code govern the construction of and punishment for any offense defined in any statute of this state, whether in this title or elsewhere, and which is committed on or after July 1, 1972, as well as the construction and application of any defense to a prosecution for such an offense.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by section 18-1-410, the provisions of this code do not apply to or govern the construction of, prosecution for, and punishment for any offense committed prior to July 1, 1972, or the construction and application of any defense to a prosecution for such an offense. Such an offense shall be tried and disposed of according to the provisions of law existing at the time of the commission thereof in the same manner as if this code had not been enacted. All pending actions shall proceed to final disposition in the same manner as if this code had not been enacted.

(3) The provisions of this code do not bar, suspend, or otherwise affect any right or liability to damages, penalty, forfeiture, or other remedy authorized by law to be recovered or enforced in a civil action for any conduct which this code makes punishable; and the civil injury is not merged in the offense.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 389, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-103. L. 73: p. 533, § 1. L. 95: (3) amended, p. 16, § 8, effective March 9. L. 2002: (1) amended, p. 1509, § 176, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

The only purpose of this section was to ensure that the substantive crime definitions and penalty provisions in the repealed chapter 40 of Colorado Revised Statutes 1963, rather than those in this title, would continue in force as to crimes committed prior to July 1, 1972. People v. Montera, 195 Colo. 118, 575 P.2d 1294 (1978).

The provisions of this section are not jurisdictional in nature, therefore, the protections of this section may be waived by entry of a voluntary and knowing plea of guilty. People v. Sandreschi, 849 P.2d 873 (Colo. App. 1992).

The reference in subsection (2) to "this code" must be read to refer only to the "Colorado Criminal Code" of which it is a part. People v. Montera, 195 Colo. 118, 575 P.2d 1294 (1978).

Application of subsection (2). Subsection (2) applies only to the criminal code, and not to the code of criminal procedure. People v. Loger, 188 Colo. 291, 535 P.2d 210 (1975).

1 U.S.C. § 109 nullifies abatement of indictments and prosecutions for acts committed under former code. Because subsection (2) does not obviate prosecutions for illegal activities occurring before July 1, 1972, 1 U.S.C. § 109 operates to nullify any abatement of an indictment and subsequent prosecution for criminal acts committed under the former criminal code. United States v. Smaldone, 485 F.2d 1333 (10th Cir. 1973), cert. dismissed, 416 U.S. 917, 94 S. Ct. 1625, 40 L. Ed.2d 286, cert. denied, 416 U.S. 936, 94 S. Ct. 1934, 40 L. Ed.2d 286 (1974).

Section 18-1-405 not applicable to offense committed prior to July 1, 1972. The speedy trial provision of § 18-1-405 does not apply to an action where the alleged offense was committed prior to July 1, 1972. People v. Reliford, 186 Colo. 6, 525 P.2d 467 (1974).

Nor § 18-1-409. Since the offense for which the defendant was sentenced was committed prior to July 1, 1972, the right of appeal under § 18-1-409 is not available to him. People v. Knight, 185 Colo. 364, 525 P.2d 425 (1974).

Preemption of municipal ordinance by code. Where state assault statute was repealed when criminal code took effect on July 1, 1972, and defendant was charged with violation of municipal assault ordinance occurring on July 7, 1972, municipal assault ordinance was not preempted, on July 7, by state assault ordinance; however, it could be argued that municipal assault ordinance was preempted by assault provisions of criminal code. City of Lakewood v. District Court, 181 Colo. 69, 506 P.2d 1228 (1973).

Where defense requested instruction defining "intentionally" in terms of new statute which became effective July 1, 1972, but offense had occurred prior to that time, trial court did not err in refusing such request. People v. Crawford, 191 Colo. 504, 553 P.2d 827 (1976).

Body execution statute unconstitutional under fourteenth amendment. Kinsey v. Preeson, 746 P.2d 542 (Colo. 1987).

Applied in People v. Marlott, 191 Colo. 304, 552 P.2d 491 (1976); Barreras v. People, 636 P.2d 686 (Colo. App. 1981).

18-1-104. "Offense" defined - offenses classified - common-law crimes abolished.

(1) The terms "offense" and "crime" are synonymous and mean a violation of, or conduct defined by, any state statute for which a fine or imprisonment may be imposed.

(2) Each offense falls into one of eleven classes. There are six classes of felonies as defined in section 18-1.3-401, three classes of misdemeanors as defined in section 18-1.3-501, and two classes of petty offenses as defined in section 18-1.3-503.

(3) Common-law crimes are abolished and no conduct shall constitute an offense unless it is described as an offense in this code or in another statute of this state, but this provision does not affect the power of a court to punish for contempt, or to employ any sanction authorized by law for the enforcement of an order lawfully entered, or a civil judgment or decree; nor does it affect the use of case law as an interpretive aid in the construction of the provisions of this code.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 389, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-104. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 829, § 39, effective July 1. L. 2002: (2) amended, p. 1510, § 177, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (2), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-104 is similar to former § 40-1-1, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Common-law rule. Colorado has statutorily adopted the common-law rule that a crime consisted of the union of an act and intent. Gallegos v. People, 159 Colo. 379, 411 P.2d 956 (1966).

Courts are not precluded from reliance upon the common law in amplification of sections of the criminal code. People v. Berry, 703 P.2d 613 (Colo. App. 1985).

The common law may be used in aid of the meaning to be given statutory language, when such language is not defined in the statute. Allen v. People, 175 Colo. 113, 485 P.2d 886 (1971).

Where a statute does not define a crime, but merely gives to it its common-law name or designation, resort must be had to the common law to ascertain what acts constitute the crime in question. Thompson v. People, 181 Colo. 194, 510 P.2d 311 (1973).

When the general assembly defines a crime and sets forth the intent necessary to commit the crime, the courts cannot alter the elements or substitute a different animus or intent. People v. Kanan, 186 Colo. 255, 526 P.2d 1339 (1974).

The definition of a crime is the same as that of a misdemeanor, each consisting of a violation of a public law. Hoffman v. People, 72 Colo. 552, 212 P. 848 (1923).

"Crime" includes all grades of public offenses, which at the common law are often classified as treason, felony, and misdemeanor. Hoffman v. People, 72 Colo. 552, 212 P. 848 (1923).

The violation of a municipal ordinance does not come within the definition of this section and is neither a crime nor a misdemeanor. City of Greeley v. Hamman, 12 Colo. 94, 20 P. 1 (1888).

Violation of a no-contact order issued by a municipal court pursuant to authority in §§ 14-4-101 to 14-4-105, is a crime under § 18-6-803.5. People v. Rhorer, 967 P.2d 147 (Colo. 1998).

Contempt of court. Although the general assembly in 1971 abolished all common law crimes in Colorado, it reserved to the courts the power to punish contempt by enacting this section. People v. Barron, 677 P.2d 1370 (Colo. 1984).

The power to define criminal conduct and to establish the legal components of criminal liability is vested with the general assembly.

Rowe v. People, 856 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1993).

In addition to establishing the essential components of criminal liability, it is within the prerogative of the general assembly to establish affirmative defenses based on principles of justification or excuse. Rowe v. People, 856 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1993).

Within constitutional limitations, the general assembly also may restrict an affirmative defense to a particular crime. Rowe v. People, 856 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1993).

Applied in People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981); City of Greenwood Vill. v. Fleming, 643 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1982).

18-1-105. Felonies classified - presumptive penalties. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 390, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-105. L. 72: p. 267, § 4. L. 73: p. 531, § 83. L. 74: (1) and (2) amended, p. 409, §§ 26, 27, effective April 11; (3) and (4) added, p. 251, § 3, effective January 1, 1975. L. 76: (1) amended, p. 548, § 7, effective July 1. L. 77: Entire section R&RE, p. 867, § 15, effective July 1, 1979. L. 79: (1), (6), and (7) R&RE and (1)(c) amended, pp. 669, 700, §§ 16, 69, effective July 1. L. 81: (1)(b), (1)(c), and (7) amended and (8) and (9) added, pp. 969, 970, 972, 986, §§ 1, 1, 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 82: (8) repealed, p. 312, § 3, effective July 1. L. 84: (1)(a) amended, p. 513, § 5, effective July 1. L. 85: (9)(d) added, p. 675, § 4, effective June 7; (1)(a)(II), (2), and (4) amended and (1)(a)(III), (1)(a)(IV), (9)(a)(VI), and (9)(e) added, pp. 622, 652, 655, 667, 675, §§ 5, 7, 1, 3, effective July 1. L. 86: (9)(a)(VII), (9)(a)(VIII), and (9)(f) added, p. 769, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 87: (9)(a)(IV.5) added, p. 606, § 9, effective April 16. L. 88: (1)(a)(III), IP(9)(a), (9)(d)(I), and (9)(e)(I) amended, (1)(b)(IV), (1)(b)(VI) to (1)(b)(VIII), and (10) added, and (1)(b)(V) added and amended, pp. 680, 681, 716, 711, 1439 §§ 3, 5, 2, 4, 14, 44, effective July 1. L. 89: (1)(a)(III)(A), (1)(a)(IV), (1)(b)(I), (2), and (9)(a)(V) amended and (1)(b)(V) to (1)(b)(VIII) repealed, pp. 829, 861, §§ 40, 156, effective July 1. L. 90: (11) added, p. 989, § 1, effective April 16; (9)(a)(IV), (9)(a)(IV.5), (9)(a)(VI), and (9)(a)(VII) repealed and (9.5) added, p. 955, §§ 27, 25, effective June 7. L. 91: (4) and (10) amended, p. 404, §§ 5, 6, effective June 6. L. 92: (11) repealed, p. 393, § 25, effective July 1. L. 93: (1)(a)(IV), (1)(c), and (10) amended and (1)(a)(V) and (9.7) added, pp. 1983, 54, 1730, 1981, §§ 8, 19, 12, 7, 9, effective July 1. L. 95: (1)(a)(V)(D) amended, p. 879, § 15, effective May 24; (4) amended, p. 1293, § 3, effective July 1. L. 96: (1)(a)(III)(A) and (1)(b)(II) amended and (1)(a)(III)(E) added, p. 1841, § 4, effective July 1; (9)(a)(III) amended, p. 736, § 7, effective July 1. L. 97: (9)(a)(IX), (9.5)(a.5), (9.5)(c.5), and (9.5)(c.7) added, p. 1546, §§ 17, 18, effective July 1; (1)(b)(IV) amended, p. 1009, § 11, effective August 6. L. 98: (1)(a)(V)(C) amended, p. 399, § 6, effective April 21; (1)(a)(VI) added, p. 1447, § 38, effective July 1; (9)(g) added, p. 1264, § 1, effective July 1; (1)(a)(V)(C), (1)(a)(V)(D), (1)(c), and (9)(e)(I) amended and (1)(a)(V)(C.3), (1)(a)(V)(C.5), (1)(b)(II.5), (9)(e.5), and (9.7)(c) added, pp. 1289, 1290, §§ 4, 5, 6, 7, effective November 1. L. 99: (9.5)(a) amended and (9.7)(b)(XIII) added, pp. 800, 794, §§ 22, 3, effective July 1. L. 2000: IP(9.7)(b), (9.7)(b)(I), (9.7)(b)(II), and (9.7)(b)(III) amended, p. 702, § 25, effective July 1; (1)(a)(III)(A.5) added, p. 1107, § 3, effective August 2; (12) added, p. 1049, § 12, effective September 1. L. 2001: (13) added, p. 1009, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1)(a)(V)(C) and (1)(a)(V)(C.3) amended and (1)(a)(V)(C.7) added, p. 124, § 1, effective March 26; (1)(a)(V)(C.7) amended, p. 1192, § 41, effective July 1; (9)(e.5) amended, p. 758, § 3, effective July 1; (1)(a)(V)(C.7) amended and entire section repealed, pp. 1566, 1463, §§ 387, 3, effective October 1. L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: (4) amended, p. 15, § 7, effective July 12.

Editor's note: This section was relocated to § 18-1.3-401 in 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1)(a)(V)(C.7) and repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

18-1-106. Misdemeanors classified - penalties. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 390, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-106. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 700, § 70, effective July 1. L. 87: Entire section amended, p. 626, § 1, effective April 1. L. 88: (1) amended and (1.5) added, p. 717, § 3, effective July 1. L. 89: (1.5)(a) amended, p. 1643, § 4, effective June 5. L. 93: (1) amended and (3) added, pp. 55, 1984, §§ 20, 10, effective July 1. L. 97: (3)(b) amended, p. 1539, § 1, effective July 1; (1.5) amended, p. 1009, § 12, effective August 6. L. 98: IP(3)(b) amended and (3)(b)(V) added, p. 1231, § 1, effective July 1. L. 99: (3)(b)(1.5) added, p. 347, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2000: (3)(b)(1.5) and (3)(b)(II) amended, p. 703, § 26, effective July 1; (4) added, p. 1108, § 4, effective August 2; (5) added, p. 1049, § 13, effective September 1. L. 2001: (3)(b)(III) and (3)(b)(V) amended and (3)(b)(VI) added, p. 568, § 3, effective May 29; (6) added, p. 1010, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2002: (3)(b)(VI) amended, p. 1186, § 21, effective July 1; entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section was relocated to § 18-1.3-501 in 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

18-1-107. Petty offenses classified - penalties. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 390, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-107. L. 73: p. 499, § 5. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 700, § 71, effective July 1. L. 81: Entire section amended, p. 2025, § 17, July 14. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 55, § 21, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 1049, § 14, effective September 1. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section was relocated to § 18-1.3-503 in 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

18-1-108. Offenses not classified. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 391, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-108. L. 76, Ex. Sess.: 10, § 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 671, § 21, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1985, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 1050, § 15, effective September 1. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section was relocated to § 18-1.3-504 in 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

18-1-109. Penalty not fixed by statute - punishment. (Repealed)

Source: L. 72: p. 268, § 5. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-109. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 701, § 72, effective July 1. L. 85: Entire section amended, p. 657, § 6, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1985, § 12, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 1050, § 16, effective September 1. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section was relocated to § 18-1.3-505 in 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

18-1-110. Payment and collection of fines for class 1, 2, or 3 misdemeanors and class 1 or 2 petty offenses - release from incarceration. (Repealed)

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 886, § 1, effective April 6. L. 97: (3) amended, p. 1571, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section was relocated to § 18-1.3-506 in 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

PART 2

JURISDICTION AND PLACE OF TRIAL

18-1-201. State jurisdiction. (1) A person is subject to prosecution in this state for an offense which he commits, by his own conduct or that of another for which he is legally accountable, if:

(a) The conduct constitutes an offense and is committed either wholly or partly within the state; or

(b) The conduct outside the state constitutes an attempt, as defined by this code, to commit an offense within the state; or

(c) The conduct outside the state constitutes a conspiracy to commit an offense within the state, and an act in furtherance of the conspiracy occurs in the state; or

(d) The conduct within the state constitutes an attempt, solicitation, or conspiracy to commit in another jurisdiction an offense prohibited under the laws of this state and such other jurisdiction.

(2) An offense is committed partly within this state if conduct occurs in this state which is an element of an offense or if the result of conduct in this state is such an element. In homicide, the "result" is either the physical contact which causes death or the death itself; and if the body of a criminal homicide victim is found within the state, the death is presumed to have occurred within the state.

(3) Whether an offender is in or outside of the state is immaterial to the commission of an offense based on an omission to perform a duty imposed by the law of this state.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 391, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-201.

ANNOTATION

By this section, Colorado has modified the common-law rule of limited territorial jurisdiction by enlarging its power to prosecute crimes that may originate outside the state. People v. Martinez, 37 Colo. App. 71, 543 P.2d 1290 (1975); People v. Cullen, 695 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1984).

Jurisdiction not limited by district. Criminal jurisdiction over felony offenses committed in Colorado extends to all the district courts of Colorado. People v. Joseph, 920 P.2d 850 (Colo. App. 1995).

Criminal jurisdiction over felonies committed in Colorado generally extends to all district courts of the state. People v. Burgess, 946 P.2d 565 (Colo. App. 1997); People v. Brown, 70 P.3d 489 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Sharp, 155 P.3d 577 (Colo. App. 2006).

Issue of sovereign jurisdiction a legal question for the trial court. Where determination of jurisdiction depends upon a resolution of disputed facts, the issue must be submitted to the jury with an appropriate instruction, regardless of whether raised by defendant. However, no plain error results from a failure to submit the issue to the jury if the uncontested facts overwhelmingly support jurisdiction. People v. Cullen, 695 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1984).

Larceny may be prosecuted at place goods stolen or brought. Larceny is considered a continuing crime and every asportation considered a new taking; thus larceny could be prosecuted not only at the place where the goods were stolen, but also wherever the goods were subsequently brought. People v. Martinez, 37 Colo. App. 71, 543 P.2d 1290 (1975).

Theft committed partly within state. Where there was evidence presented that defendant exercised control over stolen chain saws in Colorado without authorization, the offense of theft was "committed partly within this state" as contemplated by subsection (2), and, therefore, in accordance with subsection (1)(a) defendant "is subject to prosecution in this state" for that offense. People v. Martinez, 37 Colo. App. 71, 543 P.2d 1290 (1975).

Delivery of goods not "conduct" for purposes of subsection (2). People v. Tinkle, 714 P.2d 919 (Colo. App. 1985).

An omission to act in accordance with a custody decree is sufficient to confer jurisdiction on charges of second degree kidnapping. People v. Haynie, 826 P.2d 371 (Colo. App. 1991).

Defendant's alleged expatriation under the Expatriation Act of 1868 does not remove personal jurisdiction from a state court in a criminal prosecution where the offense was committed in that state. People v. Jones, 140 P.3d 325 (Colo. App. 2006).

Applied in People v. Warren, 196 Colo. 75, 582 P.2d 663 (1978); People v. Rice, 40 Colo. App. 357, 579 P.2d 647 (1978).

18-1-202. Place of trial. (1) Except as otherwise provided by law, criminal actions shall be tried in the county where the offense was committed, or in any other county where an act in furtherance of the offense occurred.

(2) If a person committing an offense upon the person of another is in one county and his victim is in another county at the time of the commission of an act constituting an element of the offense, the offense is committed and trial may be had in either of said counties.

(3) In a case involving the death of a person, the offense is committed and the offender may be tried in any county in which the cause of death is inflicted, or in which death occurs, or in which the body of the deceased or any part of such body is found.

(4) Theft of property is committed and the offender may be tried in any county in which he exercised control over the property.

(5) If the commission of an offense commenced outside the state is consummated within this state, the offense is committed and the offender shall be tried in the county where the offense is consummated.

(6) If an offense is committed in or upon any automobile, trailer, railroad car, aircraft, or other vehicle of transportation passing within or over this state, the offense is deemed to have been committed and the offender may be tried in any county through or over which the vehicle of transportation passed.

(7) (a) When multiple crimes are based upon the same act or series of acts arising from the same criminal episode and are committed in several counties, the offender may be tried in any county in which any one of the individual crimes could have been tried, regardless of whether or not the counties are in the same judicial district.

(b) (I) For purposes of this subsection (7), when a person commits one of the offenses listed in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b) on two or more occasions within a six-month period, it may be considered part of the same criminal episode. Nothing in this subsection (7) shall bar prosecution of an offense that could have been joined in another prosecution.

(II) The provisions of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) shall apply to the following offenses:

- (A) Theft, as defined in section 18-4-401;
- (B) Theft of rental property, as defined in section 18-4-402;
- (C) Theft by receiving, as defined in section 18-4-410;
- (D) Criminal mischief, as defined in section 18-4-501;
- (E) Fraud by check, as defined in section 18-5-205;
- (F) Defrauding a secured creditor or debtor, as defined in section 18-5-206;
- (G) Failure to pay over assigned accounts, as defined in section 18-5-502;
- (H) Concealment or removal of secured property, as defined in section 18-5-504;
- (I) Failure to pay over proceeds, as defined in section 18-5-505;
- (J) Unauthorized use of a financial transaction device, as defined in section 18-5-702;
- (K) Computer crime, as defined in section 18-5-5-102;
- (L) Procuring food or accommodation with intent to defraud, as defined in section 12-44-102, C.R.S.;
- (M) Trafficking in food stamps, as defined in section 26-2-306, C.R.S.;
- (N) Unlawful use of a patient personal needs trust fund, as defined in section 25.5-6-206, C.R.S.;
- (O) Criminal tampering with a motor vehicle, as defined in section 42-5-103, C.R.S.;
- (P) Theft of motor vehicle parts, as defined in section 42-5-104, C.R.S.;
- (Q) Theft in connection with assistive technology, as described in section 6-1-409, C.R.S.;
- (R) Theft of farm products, as defined in section 12-16-118, C.R.S.;

(S) Fraud in connection with obtaining public assistance, as described in section 26-1-127, C.R.S.;

(T) Fraud in connection with obtaining food stamps, as described in section 26-2-305, C.R.S.;

(U) An offense described in part 1 of article 5 of this title;

(V) Forgery, as defined in sections 18-5-102 and 18-5-104; and

(W) Identity theft, as defined in section 18-5-902.

(c) (I) For an indictment or information that includes an offense described in article 5 of this title, the offender may be tried in a county where the offense occurred, in a county where an act in furtherance of the offense occurred, or in a county where a bank, savings and loan, credit union, or government agency processed a document or transaction related to the offense.

(II) For the purpose of this section, “processed” means to physically handle a document or to make a written or electronic entry in a permanent or temporary record of the transaction, whether the entry is made manually or through automated means.

(8) An inchoate offense is committed and the offender may be tried in any county in which any act which is an element of the offense, including formation of the agreement in conspiracy, is committed.

(9) When a person in one county solicits, abets, agrees, aids, or attempts to aid another in the planning or commission of an offense in another county, the offense is committed and the offender may be tried for the offense in either county, or in any other county in which the principal offense could be tried.

(10) When an offense is committed on the boundary line between two counties, or so close thereto as to be difficult to readily ascertain in which county the offense occurred, the offense is committed and the offender may be tried for the offense in either county.

(11) Proof of the county in which the offense occurred or which county is the proper place for trial pursuant to this section shall not constitute an element of any offense and need not be proven by the prosecution at trial unless required by the statute defining the offense. Any challenge to the place of trial pursuant to this section shall be made by motion in writing no later than twenty-one days after arraignment, except for good cause shown. The court shall determine any such issue prior to the commencement of the trial and the selection of a jury. If the court finds that trial is not proper in the county in which the charges were filed, the court shall transfer the case to a court of appropriate jurisdiction in the proper county. Failure to challenge the place of trial as provided in this subsection (11) shall constitute a waiver of any objection to the place of trial. Pursuant to section 16-12-102 (2), C.R.S., the prosecution may file an interlocutory appeal of a decision transferring the case to another county.

(12) If a person commits the offense of failure to register as a sex offender as provided in section 18-3-412.5, the offense is committed and the offender may be tried in the county in which the offender was released from incarceration for commission of the offense requiring registration, in the county in which the offender resides, in the county in which the offender completed his or her last registration, or in the county in which the offender is apprehended.

(13) If a person commits identity theft as described in section 18-5-902, identity theft is committed and the offender may be tried in any county where a prohibited act was committed, in any county where an act in furtherance of the offense was committed, or in any county where the victim resides during all or part of the offense. For purposes of this subsection (13), a business entity resides in any county in which it maintains a physical location.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 391, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-202. L. 84: (10) added, p. 536, § 4, effective July 1. L. 87: (7) amended, p. 606, § 10, effective April 16. L. 92: (3) amended and (11) added, p. 402, § 12, effective June 3. L. 95: (12) added, p. 469, § 17, effective July 1. L. 98: (7) amended, p. 793, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2002: (12) amended, p. 1181, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2003: (7)(b)(II) amended and (7)(c) added, p. 976, § 15, effective April 17; (7)(b)(II)(S) and (7)(b)(II)(T) amended and (7)(b)(II)(V) added, p. 1019, § 1, effective April 17. L. 2004: (7)(c)(I) amended, p. 1738, § 3, effective July 1.

L. 2006: (7)(b)(II)(N) amended, p. 2005, § 60, effective July 1; (7)(b)(II)(W) and (13) added, p. 1317, §§ 2, 1, effective July 1. L. 2011: (12) amended, (SB 11-007), ch. 107, p. 335, § 1, effective August 10; (12) amended, (HB 11-1278), ch. 224, p. 964, § 8, effective August 10. L. 2012: (11) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 862, § 101, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) Amendments to subsection (7)(b)(II) by Senate Bill 03-147 and House Bill 03-1020 were harmonized.

(2) Subsection (7)(b)(II)(V) was originally numbered as (7)(b)(II)(U) in House Bill 03-1020 but has been renumbered on revision for ease of location.

(3) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (11) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

Cross references: For similar provisions concerning the place of trial, see Crim. P. 18; for change of venue, see part 1 of article 6 of title 16; for the place of trial of an action for violation of a custody order, see § 18-3-304 (4).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Procedure in Colorado — A Summary and Recommendations for Improvement", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 221 (1950). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law", see 34 Dicta 98 (1957). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 38 Dicta 65 (1961).

Venue provisions are solely for the benefit of the defendant and may be waived. People v. Taylor, 732 P.2d 1172 (Colo. 1987); People v. Rice, 579 P.2d 647 (Colo. App. 1978); People v. Joseph, 920 P.2d 850 (Colo. App. 1995).

Entry of plea forecloses objection. Once the accused subjects himself or herself to the authority of the court by offering a guilty plea, any further objection to venue is deemed waived. Vigil v. People, 310 P.2d 552 (Colo. 1957); People v. Joseph, 920 P.2d 850 (Colo. App. 1995).

The propriety of venue is a matter of law and fact, not discretion. Therefore, a court must take evidence and make specific findings when it severs counts that are not triable under the court's jurisdiction. People v. Reed, 132 P.3d 347 (Colo. 2006).

Authority of district attorney is a technical matter subject to waiver. Just as a defendant may waive objections to venue, he or she may also waive any objection to the authority of the district attorney to bring a criminal charge. People v. Joseph, 920 P.2d 850 (Colo. App. 1995).

Larceny may be prosecuted where goods stolen or brought. Larceny is considered a continuing crime and every asportation considered a new taking; thus larceny could be prosecuted not only at the place where the goods were stolen, but also wherever the goods were subsequently brought. People v. Martinez, 37 Colo. App. 71, 543 P.2d 1290 (1975).

Out-of-state theft. The Colorado courts have jurisdiction over the offense of theft which originated in the state of New Mexico. People v.

Martinez, 37 Colo. App. 71, 543 P.2d 1290 (1975).

Theft committed partly in state. Where there was evidence presented that defendant exercised control over stolen chain saws in Colorado without authorization, the offense of theft was "committed partly within this state" as contemplated by § 18-1-201(2), and, therefore, in accordance with § 18-1-201(1)(a) defendant "is subject to prosecution in this state" for that offense. People v. Martinez, 37 Colo. App. 71, 543 P.2d 1290 (1975).

Under subsection (9), drug transaction crime starting in one county and completed in an adjacent county may be tried in either county even though almost all of the transaction occurred in the adjacent county. People v. Ray, 109 P.3d 996 (Colo. App. 2004).

Crime committed on highway. Under the provisions of this section where a criminal offense is committed on a public highway between two counties the trial may be had in either county. Stone v. People, 71 Colo. 162, 204 P. 897 (1922) (decided under R.S. 08, § 1908).

Where the "cause of death" is administered in one city when a defendant causes a bomb to be placed in the airplane, out of his custody and beyond his control, with the intent and for the purpose of causing the death of a passenger on the plane, the death is undoubtedly the result of defendant's unlawful act, and this having occurred in the city the venue is there properly laid pursuant to this section, and the trial court there unquestionably has jurisdiction. Graham v. People, 134 Colo. 290, 302 P.2d 737 (1956) (decided under §§ 39-9-1 and 40-2-12, CRS 53).

Venue in a kidnapping case may be either in the county in which the offense was committed or in any county through which the person kidnapped was taken or kept while under confinement or restraint. Claxton v. People, 164 Colo. 283, 434 P.2d 407 (1967) (decided under § 40-2-47, C.R.S. 1963).

Where an accused is charged with multiple crimes arising from the same criminal episode and which were committed in several counties, charges can be filed in any county in which any of the individual charges could be filed so long as such offenses were committed within the same judicial district since this section does not broaden the authority of the district attorney to file charges based on crimes committed outside the judicial district. People v. Taylor, 732 P.2d 1172 (Colo. 1987); People v. Cortez, 737 P.2d 810 (Colo. 1987).

This section does not limit the situs of a crime to the county in which the offense is committed but also includes any county where an act in furtherance of the offense occurred. People v. Taylor, 732 P.2d 1172 (Colo. 1987); People v. Bobo, 897 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1995); People v. Joseph, 920 P.2d 850 (Colo. App. 1995); People v. Shackley, 248 P.3d 1204 (Colo. 2011).

Although some evidence against defendant was seized in a different county, there was a reasonable inference that the seized evidence was used to commit the crimes that were alleged to have been committed in the county where the trial occurred; therefore, venue was proper. People v. Richardson, 181 P.3d 340 (Colo. App. 2007).

Filing or preparing tax returns in one county is not an act “in furtherance of the offense” of criminal impersonation. Change of venue to county where work was performed was proper. People v. Nevarez-Zambrano, 222 P.3d 329 (Colo. 2010).

Under subsection (11), the prosecution is not required to prove venue as an element of the offense. Therefore, an erroneous allegation of venue does not constitute reversible error. People v. Brown, 70 P.3d 489 (Colo. App. 2002).

Applied in People v. Gould, 193 Colo. 176, 563 P.2d 945 (1977); People v. Donahue, 41 Colo. App. 70, 578 P.2d 671 (1978); People v. Rice, 40 Colo. App. 357, 579 P.2d 647 (1978); People v. Beck, 42 Colo. App. 69, 593 P.2d 371 (1979); People v. Freeman, 668 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1983); People v. Cortez, 703 P.2d 648 (Colo. App. 1985), aff’d, 737 P.2d 810 (Colo. 1987); People v. Felgar, 58 P.3d 1122 (Colo. App. 2002).

PART 3

WHEN PROSECUTION BARRED BY FORMER PROCEEDINGS

Cross references: For constitutional provisions concerning double jeopardy, see § 18 of art. II, Colo. Const.

Law reviews: For article, “Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986”, which discusses cases relating to double jeopardy, see 15 Colo. Law. 1572 (1986).

18-1-301. Second trial barred by former prosecution for same offense. (1) If a prosecution is for a violation of the same provision of law and is based upon the same facts as a former prosecution, it is barred by the former prosecution under the following circumstances:

(a) The former prosecution resulted in an acquittal. There is an acquittal if the prosecution resulted in a finding of not guilty by the trier of fact or in a determination that there was insufficient evidence to warrant a conviction. A finding of guilty of a lesser included offense is an acquittal of the greater inclusive offense even though the conviction is subsequently set aside.

(b) The former prosecution was terminated by a final order or judgment for the defendant that has not been set aside, reversed, or vacated, and that necessarily required a determination inconsistent with a fact or a legal proposition that must be established for conviction of the offense.

(c) The former prosecution resulted in a conviction. There is a conviction if the prosecution resulted in a judgment of conviction that has not been reversed or vacated, a verdict of guilty that has not been set aside and that is capable of supporting a judgment, or a plea of guilty accepted by the court. In the latter two instances, failure to enter judgment must be for a reason other than a motion of the defendant.

(d) The former prosecution was improperly terminated. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2) of this section, there is an improper termination of a prosecution if the termination is for reasons not amounting to an acquittal, and it takes place after the jury is sworn if the case is tried by a jury or after the first prosecution witness is sworn if trial is by court following waiver of jury trial.

(2) Termination is not improper under any of the following circumstances:

(a) The defendant consents to the termination or waives his right to object to the termination. The defendant is deemed to have waived all objections to a termination of the trial unless his objections to the order of termination are made of record at the time of the entry thereof.

(b) The trial court finds that:

(I) The termination is necessary because it is physically impossible to proceed with the trial in conformity with the law; or

(II) There is a legal defect in the proceedings that would make any judgment entered upon a verdict reversible as a matter of law; or

(III) Prejudicial conduct has occurred in or outside the courtroom making it unjust either to the defendant or to the state to proceed with the trial; or

(IV) The jury is unable to agree upon a verdict; or

(V) False statements of a juror on voir dire prevent a fair trial.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 396, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-401.

ANNOTATION

Jeopardy does not attach if an information is insufficient in form and substance to sustain a conviction. People v. Garner, 187 Colo. 294, 530 P.2d 496 (1975).

Jeopardy attaches upon guilty plea. Jeopardy attaches to a county court prosecution when the defendant enters a plea of guilty. Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

Jeopardy attaches upon court's acceptance of a plea of guilty, and the attachment of jeopardy is what triggers the statutory bar of subsection (2) of § 18-1-408. Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981).

Jeopardy attaches after first prosecution witness is sworn in, so, because no witnesses had yet been sworn in in the habitual criminal proceeding when the trial court dismissed the charges, jeopardy was not considered to have attached. People v. Barnum, 217 P.3d 908 (Colo. App. 2009).

Compulsory joinder broader than "same offense" principle or collateral estoppel. The compulsory joinder requirement of subsection (2) of § 18-1-408 is broader than both the "same offense" principle of double jeopardy as codified in this section and the collateral estoppel effect of a prior determination of an ultimate fact as outlined in § 18-1-302. Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981); Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

Protection from reprosecution where proceedings improperly terminated. Where defendants had completed a full trial and all charges had been submitted to the jury, and the jury returned a verdict on only one of the numerous charges, dismissal of the jury without further instruction or deliberation on the remaining charges is an improper termination of the proceedings, and the defendants are protected from reprosecution on those charges. Ortiz v. District Court, 626 P.2d 642 (Colo. 1981).

Where trial judge, despite objections of defense attorney, erroneously declared a mistrial sua sponte because a key staff member resigned, the docket was crowded, and the trial ran longer than was anticipated, second trial was barred by double jeopardy. The court's reasons for declaring a mistrial were not substantial enough to warrant a finding of "manifest necessity". People v. Berreth, 13 P.3d 1214 (Colo. 2000).

Where the court gave defendant a choice between a mistrial and a continuance, defendant's response that he did not request either was sufficient to preserve his objection. Paul v. People, 105 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2005).

Trial court did in fact declare a mistrial based on jury deadlock. Although the trial court did not expressly declare a mistrial at the time the jury returned the unsigned verdict form, the record showed that the court and the parties understood that a mistrial had been declared. People v. Richardson, 184 P.3d 755 (Colo. 2008).

Applied in People v. Bartsch, 37 Colo. App. 52, 543 P.2d 1273 (1975); People v. Hoinville, 191 Colo. 357, 553 P.2d 777 (1976).

18-1-302. Second trial barred by former prosecution for different offense. (1) Although a prosecution is for a violation of a different provision of law than a former prosecution or is based on different facts, it is barred by the former prosecution under the following circumstances:

(a) The former prosecution resulted in an acquittal or a conviction as defined in section 18-1-301 (1) (a) and (1) (c) and the subsequent prosecution is for:

(I) Any offense of which the defendant could have been convicted under the allegation of the complaint, information, or indictment of the first prosecution; or

(II) The same conduct, unless the offense of which the defendant was formerly convicted or acquitted and the offense for which he is subsequently prosecuted each requires proof of a fact not required by the other and the law defining each of the offenses is intended to prevent a substantially different harm or evil or the second offense was not consummated when the former trial began.

(b) The former prosecution was terminated by an acquittal or by a final order or judgment for the defendant that has not been set aside, reversed, or vacated and that necessarily required a determination inconsistent with a fact that must be established for conviction of the second offense.

(c) The former prosecution was improperly terminated, as improper termination is defined in section 18-1-301 (1) (d) and (2), and the subsequent prosecution is for an offense of which the defendant could have been convicted had the former prosecution not been improperly terminated.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 397, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-402.

ANNOTATION

This section must be read to deal with multiple prosecutions in the same jurisdiction since § 18-1-303 sets out the circumstances in which a second trial in Colorado is barred by a former prosecution in another jurisdiction. Clearly, this section cannot be construed to bar separate prosecutions for different state and federal offenses arising out of the same series of transactions, for such trials could not be held in the same court. People v. Hines, 194 Colo. 284, 572 P.2d 467 (1977).

The test of double jeopardy as to different offenses is not whether the criminal intent is one and the same and inspiring the whole transaction, but whether separate acts have been committed with the requisite criminal intent and are such as are made punishable. Conviction and sentences for two distinct offenses did not put appellees twice in jeopardy where the Colorado statutes separately define the offenses of burglary and assault with intent to rob. Burglary is a crime against property; it is the unlawful entering of a dwelling house or building with the intent to commit larceny or other felony. Assault with intent to rob is a crime directed against a person; it is an unlawful attempt coupled with a present ability to commit a violent injury on the person, with the specific intent to commit robbery. The offenses were separate and independent and the imposition of two consecutive sentences were within the law and did not constitute a violation of any federally protected right. Trujillo v. Patterson, 266 F. Supp. 901 (D. Colo. 1966), aff'd per curiam, 389 F.2d 1003 (10th Cir. 1967).

Collateral estoppel is an integral part of the concept of double jeopardy. People v. Horvat, 186 Colo. 202, 527 P.2d 47 (1974).

Simply stated, collateral estoppel bars re-litigation between the same parties of issues actually determined at a previous trial. People v. Horvat, 186 Colo. 202, 527 P.2d 47 (1974).

Subsection (1)(a)(II) is designed to protect a defendant from having to relitigate an issue of ultimate fact once it has been determined by a valid and final judgment. When a previous judgment was based on a general verdict, a court is required to examine the record, taking into account the pleadings, evidence, charge, and other relevant matters, and conclude whether a rational jury could have grounded its verdict upon an issue other than that which the defendant seeks to foreclose. People v. Matheson, 671 P.2d 968 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section protects a defendant from having to relitigate a factual issue once it has been determined by a valid and final judgment. The doctrine of collateral estoppel generally precludes a later trial if a rational fact-finder could not have grounded its earlier verdict upon an issue other than that upon which a later conviction would necessarily be based. People v. Allen, 944 P.2d 541 (Colo. App. 1996).

Collateral estoppel and invalidity of dual sovereignty in Colorado barred trial. Where defendant was tried in a municipal court for reckless and careless driving in violation of that municipality's traffic code, he could not later be tried in district court for feloniously inflicting bodily injury while under the influence of intoxicating liquor by operating and driving a motor vehicle in a reckless, negligent, or careless manner, in violation of the state code, because of the doctrine of collateral estoppel, and because dual sovereignty is no longer valid in Colorado. People v. Horvat, 186 Colo. 202, 527 P.2d 47 (1974).

Compulsory joinder broader than "same offense" principle or collateral estoppel. The compulsory joinder requirement of § 18-1-408

(2) is broader than both the "same offense" principle of double jeopardy as codified in § 18-1-301 and the collateral estoppel effect of a prior determination of an ultimate fact as outlined in this section. Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981); Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

This statutory prohibition against a later prosecution does not apply if the offense in the later prosecution necessarily requires proof of a fact not required by the former prosecution and the law defining each offense is intended to prevent a substantially different harm or evil. People v. Allen, 944 P.2d 541 (Colo. App. 1996).

Effect of acquittal upon lesser included offense. It is the character of the evidence which must control in determining whether the lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit rape can stand alone or fall on acquittal of forcible rape. Miera v. People, 164 Colo. 254, 434 P.2d 122 (1967).

Applied in People v. Williams, 651 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1982); People v. Garcia, 698 P.2d 801 (Colo. 1985).

18-1-303. Second trial barred by prosecution in another jurisdiction. (1) If conduct constitutes an offense within the concurrent jurisdiction of this state and of the United States, or another state, or of a municipality, a prosecution in any other of these jurisdictions is a bar to a subsequent prosecution in this state under either of the following circumstances:

(a) The first prosecution resulted in a conviction or an acquittal as defined in section 18-1-301 (1) (a) and (1) (c), and the subsequent prosecution is based on the same conduct, unless:

(I) The offense for which the defendant was formerly convicted or acquitted requires proof of a fact not required by the offense for which he is subsequently prosecuted and the law defining each of the offenses is intended to prevent a substantially different harm or evil; or

(II) The second offense was not consummated when the former trial began.

(b) The former prosecution was terminated by an acquittal or by a final order or judgment for the defendant that has not been set aside, reversed, or vacated and that necessarily required a determination inconsistent with a fact that must be established for conviction of the offense for which the defendant is subsequently prosecuted.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 397, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-403.

ANNOTATION

Dual sovereignty no longer viable in Colorado. In early cases the courts recognized the concept of dual sovereignty for the purposes of prosecution and punishment of an accused in both a state and municipal court for the same act. The concept of dual sovereignty is no longer viable in Colorado. People v. Horvat, 186 Colo. 202, 527 P.2d 47 (1974).

Subsection (1)(a) specifically defines the capacity of the state to prosecute when there has been a previous prosecution in a municipality. People v. Talarico, 192 Colo. 445, 560 P.2d 90 (1977).

Effect of previous prosecution in municipal court. Where defendant was tried in a municipal court for reckless and careless driving in violation of that municipality's traffic code, he could not later be tried in district court for feloniously inflicting bodily injury while under the influence of intoxicating liquor by operating and driving a motor vehicle in a reckless, negligent, or careless manner, in violation of the state code, because of the doctrine of collateral estoppel, and because dual sovereignty is no longer valid in Colorado. People v. Horvat, 186 Colo. 202, 527 P.2d 47 (1974).

Where defendant struck one man and also allegedly hit another man, and the assault on the first man resulted in the filing of charges for the violation of two municipal ordinances, to which the defendant pleaded guilty, and where the district attorney filed a felony complaint in the Denver county court and charged the defendant with first-degree assault and second-degree burglary, and the felony assault charge predicated on the acts which allegedly caused the injuries to the second man was dismissed by the county court judge, and the district attorney then filed a direct information in the district court, charging the defendant with first-degree assault, this section did not justify dismissal of the felony assault charge against the defendant. People v. Mendoza, 190 Colo. 519, 549 P.2d 766 (1976).

Jeopardy does not attach when a charge is dismissed on grounds unrelated to a defendant's criminal liability. Where, prior to the commencement of trial, a federal charge was dismissed on the basis of a finding of incompetency to stand trial, jeopardy did not attach; consequently, state prosecution did not amount to "subsequent prosecution". Chatfield v. Colo. Court of Appeals, 775 P.2d 1168 (Colo. 1989).

A complete defense to a subsequent state prosecution is provided by this section; it does not function to deprive a district court of jurisdiction over a defendant or a charged offense. Chatfield v. Colo. Court of Appeals, 775 P.2d 1168 (Colo. 1989).

Prosecution by Indian tribal court bars a subsequent Colorado prosecution where the requirements of this section are met. People v. Morgan, 785 P.2d 1294 (Colo. 1990).

Exception in this section for previously tried offenses which require proof of different facts than the subsequently tried offense does not include facts required to establish jurisdiction and venue or facts concerning the dates of the conduct. People v. Morgan, 785 P.2d 1294 (Colo. 1990).

Federal acquittal or conviction based on same conduct is a bar to state prosecution unless federal action requires proof of a fact not required by state offense. People v. Esch, 786 P.2d 462 (Colo. App. 1989).

Defendant's federal prosecution under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) and subsequent state conviction for first degree murder for the same incident do not constitute double jeopardy. The RICO conviction required proof of facts not necessary for the state murder conviction, and the two laws seek to prohibit substantially different evils. People v. Gladney, 250 P.3d 762 (Colo. App. 2010).

Applied in People v. Hines, 194 Colo. 284, 572 P.2d 467 (1977); Blum v. County Court, 631 P.2d 1191 (Colo. App. 1981).

18-1-304. Former prosecution not a bar. (1) A former prosecution is not a bar within the meaning of sections 18-1-301 to 18-1-303, if the former prosecution:

(a) Was before a court that lacked jurisdiction over the defendant or the offense; or
(b) Was procured by the defendant without the knowledge of the appropriate prosecuting official and with the intent to avoid the sentence that otherwise might be imposed; or

(c) Resulted in a judgment of conviction that was set aside, reversed, or vacated upon appeal or in any other subsequent judicial proceeding.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 398, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-404.

PART 4

RIGHTS OF DEFENDANT

18-1-401. Purpose. It is the intent of this part 4 to confer upon every person accused of an offense the benefits arising from said part 4 as a matter of substantive right, in implementation of minimum standards of criminal justice within the concept of due process of law.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 398, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-501.

ANNOTATION

Applied in People v. Aragon, 665 P.2d 137 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Germany, 674 P.2d 345 (Colo. 1983).

18-1-402. Presumption of innocence. Every person is presumed innocent until proved guilty. No person shall be convicted of any offense unless his guilt thereof is proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 398, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-502.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Presumption of Innocence.
- III. Proof Beyond Reasonable Doubt.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 89 (1963).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-402 is similar to former § 40-2-20 C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The policy of the government is to punish only those who violate the law and to protect the innocent in all cases. Criminal prosecutions are not to be regarded or conducted as contests between individuals respecting civil rights, wherein advantages not reaching the merits may be gained by one party over another. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Legislature's competence to establish culpability and justification not impaired. Constitutional mandate requiring the prosecution to establish all essential elements of a crime beyond a reasonable doubt does not impair the legislature's competence to establish the statutory constituents of criminal culpability for various offenses and to formulate particular rules of justification or excuse for acts that otherwise might be criminally punishable. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

Accused presumed innocent until guilt proved beyond reasonable doubt. The prosecution in a criminal case must establish the guilt of the accused by proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and until the prosecution meets that burden, the accused is presumed to be innocent. People v. Hill, 182 Colo. 253, 512 P.2d 257 (1973); Vega v. People, 893 P.2d 107 (Colo. 1995).

Section provides foundation of criminal justice system. The presumption of innocence, coupled with proof of each element of the charge beyond a reasonable doubt, provides the foundation for a system of criminal justice. People v. Kanan, 186 Colo. 255, 526 P.2d 1339 (1974).

Component parts of due process of law. Proof beyond a reasonable doubt and presumption of innocence are principles of law applicable to criminal cases which have been so universally accepted and applied as to have become component parts of the term "due process of law". People v. Hill, 182 Colo. 253, 512 P.2d 257 (1973).

The presumption of innocence has meaning independent of the concept of proof beyond a reasonable doubt which relates to the burden of proof. People v. Hill, 182 Colo. 253, 512 P.2d 257 (1973).

Combining in one instruction the instructions on presumption of innocence, burden of proof, and reasonable doubt did not amount to an abuse of discretion, where no prejudice has been shown. People v. Sharpe, 183 Colo. 64, 514 P.2d 1138 (1973).

II. PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE.

Purpose of presumption of innocence. The presumption of innocence was developed for the purpose of guarding against the conviction of an innocent person. It was not developed for the purpose of aiding the guilty to escape punishment. It is nevertheless perfectly plain that the presumption, together with the related rule on the burden of proof, in guarding against the conviction of an innocent person, may in some cases prevent the conviction of a person who is actually guilty. Thus, where the prosecution is unable to muster evidence sufficient to overcome the presumption, there will be an acquittal, even though the defendant is actually guilty. This is a calculated risk which society is willing to take. It does so because it regards the acquittal of guilty persons less objectionable than the conviction of innocent persons. The implication that society is just as anxious to convict the guilty as it is to acquit the innocent is false; otherwise there would be no presumption of innocence. Martinez v. People, 172 Colo. 82, 470 P.2d 26 (1970).

Presumption of guilt raised by implications of defendant's prior criminality held prejudicial error. People v. Bugarin, 181 Colo. 62, 507 P.2d 875 (1973).

It is not proper to raise a presumption of guilt on the ground that, having committed one crime, the depravity it exhibits makes it likely defendant would commit another. White v. People, 177 Colo. 386, 494 P.2d 585 (1972).

A presumption of guilt should not be generated against an accused by showing that he committed a crime indicative that he is a depraved person who likely would commit the crime for which he is being tried. Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

Prosecution's closing argument misstating the presumption of innocence was erroneous. Prosecution's statements in closing argument that defendant "sits here in front of you a guilty man" and that the presumption of innocence "we had when we started this case is gone" were flawed because a defendant retains a presumption of innocence throughout the trial process. The presumption remains until after a jury returns a guilty verdict. People v. McBride, 228 P.3d 216 (Colo. App. 2009).

Failure to instruct on the presumption of innocence constitutes a denial of due process of law and deprived defendant of his constitutional right to a fair trial. People v. Hill, 182 Colo. 253, 512 P.2d 257 (1973).

Failure to instruct the jury as to the presumption of innocence is plain error. People v. Aragon, 665 P.2d 137 (Colo. App. 1982).

Instruction on the presumption of innocence is salutary, in that it guarantees that the defendant's liberty will not be lost precipitously and that the state will be put to the proper test in securing a conviction in a criminal case. People v. Hill, 182 Colo. 253, 512 P.2d 257 (1973).

Instruction on presumption of innocence held inappropriate. Renfrow v. People, 176 Colo. 160, 489 P.2d 582 (1971); Brown v. People, 177 Colo. 397, 494 P.2d 587 (1972); English v. People, 178 Colo. 325, 497 P.2d 691 (1972).

Recommended instruction on the presumption of innocence should read: "The law presumes every person charged with crime to be innocent. This presumption of innocence remains with the defendant throughout the trial and should be given effect by you unless and until, by the evidence introduced before you, you are convinced the defendant is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt." Martinez v. People, 172 Colo. 82, 470 P.2d 26 (1970).

Instruction was not erroneous. Zamora v. People, 175 Colo. 340, 487 P.2d 1116 (1971).

Submitting erroneous instruction requires reversal only if objected to. Submitting to the jury an erroneous instruction on the presumption of innocence would ordinarily require reversal, but only if the defendant objected to the instruction. People v. Simmons, 182 Colo. 350, 513 P.2d 193 (1973).

III. PROOF BEYOND REASONABLE DOUBT.

Law reviews. For comment on Jones v. People (146 Colo. 40, 360 P.2d 686 (1961)), see 34 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 243 (1962).

The reasonable doubt which authorizes an acquittal is as to the defendant's guilt, not his innocence. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Prosecution bears initial burden of proof. Before the accused can be convicted of murder, or called upon to produce evidence in justification or mitigation of such an offense, the prosecution must make out such a case as will, under the law, sustain a verdict of guilty. Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 P. 852 (1886).

Burden extends to all essential elements of crime. It is axiomatic that the burden of proof rests upon the prosecution throughout the trial to prove beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of all essential elements necessary to constitute the offense charged. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Prosecutor must establish fair account of transaction. The policy of the law, as evinced by the presumption of innocence and the doctrine of reasonable doubt, would require the public prosecutor to introduce such proof as will give a fair account of the transaction. This being done, it devolves upon the defendant to produce in evidence such matters of mitigation, justification or excuse, if any such exist, as may tend to explain his action and show the necessity thereof; otherwise a verdict of guilty must necessarily be returned against him. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

He cannot be compelled to search for and put in evidence all the facts connected with the transaction, or exculpatory facts in the prisoner's favor. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

All matters showing justification or excuse must be considered in favor of accused. When the circumstances surrounding the commission of the homicide are produced in evidence by the state, all matters, if any, which go to justify or excuse the killing must be considered in favor of the defendant; and if sufficient to manifest that the accused was justified or excused in committing the homicide, he is not bound to prove it by affirmative evidence in his own behalf. Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 P. 852 (1886).

As to all facts in evidence properly constituting part of the res gestae, they are to be considered by the jury, in passing upon the question of guilt or innocence, without discrimination as to the rules of evidence, whether introduced by the prosecutor or the defendant. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

The rule relating to the res gestae applies to all defenses which traverse the averments of the indictment and go to the essence of the guilt charged against the accused. Within this class may be mentioned self-defense, provocation, heat of blood, and, generally, all matters growing out of the res gestae which go to justify, extenuate or excuse the crime charged, including the defense of alibi. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

The burden is never on the defendant to show that he did not commit the crime. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Defendant's only burden is to raise a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jury as to his guilt from all the evidence of the case. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Burden on accused to raise reasonable doubt of sanity. While up to the point of establishing an unjustifiable homicide the prosecution carries the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt, sanity is presumed. He who relies upon its absence must then produce evidence which will at least raise a reasonable doubt of its existence. Shank v. People, 79 Colo. 576, 247 P. 559 (1926).

The killing having been established, the defendant had the burden of proving the effect of his mental condition as a mitigating circumstance in the perpetration of the killing. Jones v. People, 146 Colo. 40, 360 P.2d 686 (1961); Jones v. People, 155 Colo. 148, 393 P.2d 366 (1964).

Burden of establishing defendant's capacity to form specific criminal intent. Once some evidence from either the prosecution or the defense raises the issue of impaired mental condition, the burden devolves upon the prosecution to establish beyond a reasonable doubt the defendant's capacity to form the specific intent required for the offense as well as the defendant's guilt as to all essential elements of the crime charged against him. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

The accused is not required by this section to prove circumstances of mitigation or excuse beyond a reasonable doubt, or to the extent of satisfactorily establishing his defense. Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 P. 852 (1886); Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Nor by a preponderance of evidence. When the killing is proved the burden does not devolve on the accused to show anything to the satisfaction of the jury by a fair preponderance of the evidence. Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889).

In a substantial number of cases insanity is the only defense relied upon and as a practical matter the accused could be deprived of essential and time-honored safeguards and could be required to establish his innocence by a preponderance of the evidence, if provisions requiring proof of sanity by a preponderance of the evidence were upheld. People ex rel. Juhan v. District Court, 165 Colo. 253, 439 P.2d 741 (1968).

Defense need only raise reasonable doubt of guilt. The accused is only required to prove excuse or mitigation as any other facts are required to be proved; and if the matters relied on be supported by such proof are such as would produce a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jury as to the guilt of the prisoner, when the whole evidence concerning the transaction comes to be considered by the jury, the rule of law is that there must be an acquittal. Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 P. 852 (1886); Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

The accused has the burden of showing circumstances of mitigation or circumstances that justify or excuse the homicide. If the showing be sufficiently strong to create a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused as to any grade of offense included in the indictment, the accused is entitled to the benefit thereof. Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889).

It is not incumbent upon the defendant to prove anything to the satisfaction of the jury; rather, it is sufficient if he, by any evidence in the case, succeeds in raising a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jury of the truth of any essential element of the charge against him. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Due process of law requires prosecution to establish all essential elements of crime beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

Prejudice inevitable when instruction reduces prosecution's obligation of proof. Prejudice to the defendant is inevitable when the court instructs the jury in such a way as to reduce the prosecution's obligations to prove each element of its case beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Kanan, 186 Colo. 255, 526 P.2d 1339 (1974).

Instruction on reasonable doubt held fair statement of its legal meaning. People v. Focht, 180 Colo. 259, 504 P.2d 1096 (1972).

Instructions held erroneous. Any instruction, whatever its language, which in effect imposes upon the defendant the burden of affirmatively showing that no crime has been committed constitutes reversible error, since it clearly deprives him of the benefit of a reasonable doubt as to his guilt which may arise from all the evidence. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

18-1-403. Legal assistance and supporting services. Except as provided in section 16-5-501, C.R.S., all indigent persons who are charged with or held for the commission of a crime are entitled to legal representation and supporting services at state expense, to the extent and in the manner provided for in articles 1 and 2 of title 21, C.R.S.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 398, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-503. L. 81: Entire section amended, p. 928, § 2, September 1. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 1016, § 4, effective May 23.

Cross references: For other provisions concerning legal counsel for the indigent, see § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const., and Crim. P. 44.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986", which discusses cases relating to the right to counsel, see 15 Colo. Law. 1578 (1986).

Annotator's note. For other annotations concerning legal counsel for the indigent, see § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const., and Crim. P. 44.

Implementation of ABA standards. The general assembly, in adopting this section, was endeavoring to meet and implement the ABA standards for criminal justice relating to providing defense services. Brown v. District Court, 189 Colo. 469, 541 P.2d 1248 (1975).

For the right of defendant to have counsel appointed for appeal, see In re Griffin, 152 Colo. 347, 382 P.2d 202 (1963).

Motion within discretion of court. The granting or denial of a motion to provide supporting services to counsel for an indigent defendant in a criminal prosecution is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court. Brown v. District Court, 189 Colo. 469, 541 P.2d 1248 (1975); People v. Marquiz, 685 P.2d 242 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 726 P.2d 1105 (Colo.

1986); People v. Tafoya, 703 P.2d 663 (Colo. App. 1985).

Must demonstrate need for appointment of expert witness. Having failed to demonstrate any particularized and reasonable need for the appointment of investigatory, expert, or other defense services, defendant was not entitled to the appointment of expert witnesses. Brown v. District Court, 189 Colo. 469, 541 P.2d 1248 (1975).

Defendant entitled to have his expert take fingerprints from a plastic bag containing cocaine seized from his car, however, he was not entitled to require the state to conduct such fingerprint analysis. People v. Roy, 948 P.2d 99 (Colo. App. 1977).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to provide, at state expense, a private interpreter to translate out-of-court discussions between defendant and his attorney where legal representation was supplied by a pro bono attorney rather than a public defender. People v. Cardenas, 62 P.3d 621 (Colo. 2002).

Applied in Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Buck, 168 Colo. 499, 452 P.2d 6 (1969).

18-1-404. Preliminary hearing or waiver - dispositional hearing. (1) Every person accused of a class 1, 2, or 3 felony by direct information or felony complaint has the right to demand and receive a preliminary hearing within a reasonable time to determine whether probable cause exists to believe that the offense charged in the information has been committed by the defendant. In addition, only those persons accused of a class 4, 5, or 6 felony by direct information or felony complaint which felony requires mandatory sentencing or is a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, or is a sexual offense under part 4 of article 3 of this title, shall have the right to demand and receive a preliminary hearing within a reasonable time to determine whether probable cause exists to believe that the offense charged in the information or felony complaint was committed by the defendant. The procedure to be followed in asserting the right to a preliminary hearing, and the time within which demand therefor must be made, as well as the time within which the hearing, if demanded, shall be had, shall be as provided by rule of the supreme court of the state of Colorado. A failure to observe and substantially comply with such rule is a waiver of the right to a preliminary hearing.

(2) (a) No person accused of a class 4, 5, or 6 felony by direct information or felony complaint, except those which require mandatory sentencing or which are crimes of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406, or which are sexual offenses under part 4 of article 3 of this title, shall have the right to demand or receive a preliminary hearing; except that such person shall participate in a dispositional hearing for the purposes of case evaluation and potential resolution.

(b) Any defendant accused of a class 4, 5, or 6 felony who is not otherwise entitled to a preliminary hearing pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), may demand and shall receive a preliminary hearing within a reasonable time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, if the defendant is in custody; except that, upon motion of either party, the court shall vacate the preliminary hearing if there is a reasonable showing that the defendant has been released from custody prior to the preliminary hearing.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 398, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-504. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 1272, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1) and (2)(a) amended, p. 1510, § 178, effective October 1.

Cross references: (1) For the rule of the supreme court on preliminary hearings, see Crim. P. 5. (2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (1) and (2)(a), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Primary purpose of the preliminary hearing is to determine whether probable cause exists to support the prosecution's charge that the accused committed a specific crime. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

The preliminary hearing is held for the limited purpose of determining if probable cause exists to believe that the crime or crimes charged were committed by the defendant. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

Although a preliminary hearing provides the defendant with an early opportunity to question the government's case, it is not designed to alter the basic proposition that an accused is entitled to one trial on the merits of the charge. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

The preliminary hearing was created as a screening device to afford the defendant an opportunity to challenge the sufficiency of the prosecution's evidence to establish probable cause before an impartial judge. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

Prosecution not required to lay out all witnesses and evidence. A preliminary hearing is a screening device and does not require that the prosecution lay out for inspection and for full examination all witnesses and evidence. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

Judge must draw all reasonable inferences favorable to the prosecution at a preliminary hearing. People ex rel. Russel v. Hall, 620 P.2d 34 (Colo. 1980).

A trial court commits reversible error when it resolved the inferences arising from conflicting testimony in a preliminary hearing in the defendant's favor. People v. Williams, 628 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1981).

Standard of review in determining if probable cause had been established requires that the evidence be sufficient to induce a person of ordinary prudence and caution conscientiously to entertain a reasonable belief that the defendant may have committed the crimes charged. People ex rel. Russel v. Hall, 620 P.2d 34 (Colo. 1980).

18-1-405. Speedy trial. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, if a defendant is not brought to trial on the issues raised by the complaint, information, or indictment within six months from the date of the entry of a plea of not guilty, he shall be discharged from custody if he has not been admitted to bail, and, whether in custody or on bail, the pending charges shall be dismissed, and the defendant shall not again be indicted, informed against, or committed for the same offense, or for another offense based upon the same act

The standards for determining probable cause at a preliminary hearing are: (1) Probable cause is established when the evidence is sufficient to induce a person of ordinary prudence and caution to a reasonable belief that the defendant committed the crimes charged; (2) the evidence presented must be viewed in the light most favorable to the prosecution; (3) if testimony conflicts, the trial court must draw an inference for the prosecution; and (4) the preliminary hearing is a screening device and not a trial. People v. Williams, 628 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1981).

Hearsay evidence and other evidence, which would be incompetent if offered at the time of trial, may be the bulk of evidence at a preliminary hearing. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

Hearsay evidence, which would otherwise be inadmissible at the trial, may be considered for purposes of establishing probable cause. People v. Williams, 628 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1981).

Admissibility of confessions and evidence not resolved as required at trial. The admissibility of a confession at a preliminary hearing, which is alleged to be involuntary or the admissibility of evidence that may have been seized in violation of amendment 4 of the U.S. Const. need not be resolved on the same basis that would be required when such motion is properly before the trial court or at the time of the trial. People v. Quinn, 183 Colo. 245, 516 P.2d 420 (1973).

Waiver admits evidence sufficient to establish probable cause. If the defendant elects to waive the preliminary hearing and to proceed to trial, the waiver operates as an admission by the defendant that sufficient evidence does exist to establish probable cause that the defendant committed the crimes charged. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

Right to hearing may not be restored once waived. Under the Colorado rules of criminal procedure and the statutes of this state, a district court is not vested with the power to restore a defendant's statutory right to a preliminary hearing once the defendant had waived that right in county court bind-over proceedings. People ex rel. Farina v. District Court, 184 Colo. 406, 521 P.2d 778 (1974).

or series of acts arising out of the same criminal episode.

(2) If trial results in conviction which is reversed on appeal, any new trial must be commenced within six months after the date of the receipt by the trial court of the mandate from the appellate court.

(3) If a trial date has been fixed by the court, and thereafter the defendant requests and is granted a continuance for trial, the period within which the trial shall be had is extended for an additional six-month period from the date upon which the continuance was granted.

(3.5) If a trial date has been fixed by the court and the defendant fails to make an appearance in person on the trial date, the period within which the trial shall be had is extended for an additional six-month period from the date of the defendant's next appearance.

(4) If a trial date has been fixed by the court, and thereafter the prosecuting attorney requests and is granted a continuance, the time is not thereby extended within which the trial shall be had, as is provided in subsection (1) of this section, unless the defendant in person or by his counsel in open court of record expressly agrees to the continuance or unless the defendant without making an appearance before the court in person or by his counsel files a dated written waiver of his rights to a speedy trial pursuant to this section and files an agreement to the continuance signed by the defendant. The time for trial, in the event of such agreement, is then extended by the number of days intervening between the granting of such continuance and the date to which trial is continued.

(5) To be entitled to a dismissal under subsection (1) of this section, the defendant must move for dismissal prior to the commencement of his trial and prior to any pretrial motions which are set for hearing immediately before the trial or prior to the entry of a plea of guilty to the charge or an included offense. Failure to so move is a waiver of the defendant's rights under this section.

(5.1) If a trial date is offered by the court to a defendant who is represented by counsel and neither the defendant nor his counsel expressly objects to the offered date as being beyond the time within which such trial shall be had pursuant to this section, then the period within which the trial shall be had is extended until such trial date and may be extended further pursuant to any other applicable provisions of this section.

(6) In computing the time within which a defendant shall be brought to trial as provided in subsection (1) of this section, the following periods of time shall be excluded:

(a) Any period during which the defendant is incompetent to stand trial, or is unable to appear by reason of illness or physical disability, or is under observation or examination at any time after the issue of the defendant's mental condition, insanity, incompetency, or impaired mental condition is raised;

(b) The period of delay caused by an interlocutory appeal whether commenced by the defendant or by the prosecution;

(c) A reasonable period of delay when the defendant is joined for trial with a codefendant as to whom the time for trial has not run and there is good cause for not granting a severance;

(d) The period of delay resulting from the voluntary absence or unavailability of the defendant; however, a defendant shall be considered unavailable whenever his whereabouts are known but his presence for trial cannot be obtained, or he resists being returned to the state for trial;

(e) The period of delay caused by any mistrial, not to exceed three months for each mistrial;

(f) The period of any delay caused at the instance of the defendant;

(g) The period of delay not exceeding six months resulting from a continuance granted at the request of the prosecuting attorney, without the consent of the defendant, if:

(I) The continuance is granted because of the unavailability of evidence material to the state's case, when the prosecuting attorney has exercised due diligence to obtain such evidence and there are reasonable grounds to believe that this evidence will be available at the later date; or

(II) The continuance is granted to allow the prosecuting attorney additional time in felony cases to prepare the state's case and additional time is justified because of exceptional circumstances of the case and the court enters specific findings with respect to the justification;

(h) The period of delay between the new date set for trial following the expiration of the time periods excluded by paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (d), and (f) of this subsection (6), not to exceed three months;

(i) The period of delay between the filing of a motion pursuant to section 18-1-202 (11) and any decision by the court regarding such motion, and if such decision by the court transfers the case to another county, the period of delay until the first appearance of all the parties in a court of appropriate jurisdiction in the county to which the case has been transferred, and in such event the provisions of subsection (7) of this section shall apply.

(7) If a trial date has been fixed by the court and the case is subsequently transferred to a court in another county, the period within which trial must be had is extended for an additional three months from the date of the first appearance of all of the parties in a court of appropriate jurisdiction in the county to which the case has been transferred.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 398, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-505. L. 79: (2) amended, p. 725, § 1, effective October 1. L. 85: (4) and (5) amended and (5.1) and (6)(h) added, pp. 622, 623, § 6, 7, effective July 1. L. 87: (3.5) added, p. 606, § 11, effective April 16. L. 88: (3.5) amended, p. 664, § 4, effective July 1. L. 92: (6) amended and (7) added, p. 402, § 13, effective June 3. L. 94: (6)(a) amended, p. 1716, § 4, effective July 1. L. 99: (6)(a) amended, p. 404, § 7, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Scope of Right to Speedy Trial.
- III. Enforcement of Right.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, "Right of a Federal Prisoner to a Speedy Trial on a State Charge", see 12 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 214 (1940). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For article, "Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986", which discusses cases relating to speedy trials, see 15 Colo. Law. 1595 and 1617 (1986). For article, "Justice Delayed is Justice Denied", see 21 Colo. Law. 2195 (1992). For article, "The Ins and Outs, Stops and Starts of Speedy Trial Rights in Colorado—Part I", see 31 Colo. Law. 115 (July 2002). For article, "The Ins and Outs, Stops and Starts of Speedy Trial Rights in Colorado—Part II", see 31 Colo. Law. 59 (August 2002).

Annotator's note. (1) For other annotations concerning speedy trials, see § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const., and Crim. P. 48.

(2) Since § 18-1-405 is similar to former § 39-7-12, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Purpose of section. It is not the purpose of this section to enable the guilty to escape, but to prevent unnecessary delays on the part of the prosecution. This section was intended to give effect to that provision of our bill of rights which guarantees one accused of a criminal offense a speedy trial. Henwood v. People, 57 Colo. 544, 143 P. 373 (1914).

This section is not concerned with the crime, nor with the punishment therefor, but is intended to prevent any unreasonable detention of an accused preliminary to his trial. The accomplishment of this purpose does not require final action on the criminal charge. People v. Henwood, 65 Colo. 566, 179 P. 874 (1919).

The fundamental right of an accused to a speedy trial arises from § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const. This section must be regarded as having been enacted for the purpose of rendering the constitutional guaranty effective and providing a method of securing the right declared. Ex parte Schechtel, 103 Colo. 77, 82 P.2d 762 (1938), overruled on other grounds in Watson v. People, 700 P.2d 544 (Colo. 1985).

This section is intended to implement the constitutional right to a speedy trial by requiring dismissal of the case whenever the defendant is not tried within the six-month period and the delay does not qualify for one of the express exclusionary categories set out in the statute. People v. Deason, 670 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1983); People v. Marez, 916 P.2d 543 (Colo. App. 1995).

The obvious purpose of both the rule of criminal procedure and this section is to prevent dillydallying on the part of the district attorney or the court in a criminal proceeding. People v. Bates, 155 Colo. 277, 394 P.2d 134 (1964).

The right to a speedy trial is not only for the benefit of the accused, but also for the protection of the public. It is essential that an early determination of guilt be made, so that the innocent may be exonerated and the guilty punished. Jaramillo v. District Court, 174 Colo. 561, 484 P.2d 1219 (1971); People v. Martin, 732 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1987).

Intent of this section is to prevent unnecessary prosecutorial and judicial delays. People v. Cerrone, 867 P.2d 143 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd on other grounds, 900 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1995).

The speedy trial provisions are designed to foster more effective prisoner treatment and rehabilitation by eliminating, as expeditiously as possible, the uncertainties surrounding outstanding criminal charges. Simakis v. District Court, 194 Colo. 436, 577 P.2d 3 (1978).

An accused person's right to a speedy trial is ultimately grounded on the federal and state constitutions, and statutes relating to speedy trial are intended to render these constitutional guarantees more effective. Simakis v. District Court, 194 Colo. 436, 577 P.2d 3 (1978).

The right of an accused to a speedy trial is an important civil right, and when the constitutional mandate is invoked the matter should receive careful consideration by the courts. Ex parte Russo, 104 Colo. 91, 88 P.2d 953 (1939).

Section guarantees speedy trial. Under this section and under § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const., a defendant in a criminal action is entitled to a speedy trial, and, generally speaking, he may not be held without trial for a period beyond that fixed by law. Ex parte Schechtel, 103 Colo. 77, 82 P.2d 762 (1938).

It does not limit the constitutional right of an accused person to have a speedy public trial. Hicks v. People, 148 Colo. 26, 364 P.2d 877 (1961).

Trial in violation of defendant's speedy trial rights not permitted. A court would be proceeding without jurisdiction if it was to try a criminal defendant in violation of his rights under the Colorado speedy trial statute and the rules of the Colorado supreme court. Hampton v. District Court, 199 Colo. 104, 605 P.2d 54 (1980).

Court's practice of postponing arraignment until all pretrial matters are concluded thwarts purpose of this section and Crim. P. 48(b). People v. Chavez, 779 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1989).

Meaning of subsection (1). The phrase "brought to trial on the issues raised by the . . . information", as used in this section, refers to a trial which resolves the ultimate guilt or innocence of the accused as to the charges filed against him and not a sanity trial, even when the defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity. People v. Deason, 670 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1983).

Subsection (2) is ambiguous because it is silent on the remedy if a new trial does not occur within six months. In order to effectuate the intent of the statute, the dismissal remedy from subsection (1) must be imported into subsection (2). In addition, it is necessary to import the provisions of subsection (6) into subsection (2) in order to avoid an absurd result. People v. Mosley, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

An accused is "brought to trial" when the court calls the case for trial and the attorneys are ready to proceed. People v. Peltz, 697 P.2d 766 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 728 P.2d 1271 (Colo. 1986).

Commencement of a sanity trial is not the functional equivalent of a trial on the merits for purposes of satisfying the state's speedy trial obligation. People v. Deason, 670 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1983).

Section applies in juvenile proceedings. Trial courts are bound by the statutory and constitutional speedy trial requirements in juvenile as well as adult proceedings; fundamental fairness requires no less. P.V. v. District Court, 199 Colo. 357, 609 P.2d 110 (1980); People in Interest of T.F.B., 199 Colo. 474, 610 P.2d 501 (1980).

Burden of compliance with time requirements is on prosecution and trial court. People v. Lopez, 41 Colo. App. 206, 587 P.2d 792 (1978); Marquez v. District Court, 200 Colo. 55, 613 P.2d 1302 (1980).

If trial court fails to cause such record to be made, dismissal of charges is required, even after jury has returned verdict of guilty. People v. Scales, 745 P.2d 259 (Colo. App. 1987), rev'd on other grounds, 763 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1988).

It is duty of both prosecutor and trial judge to secure and protect defendant's right to speedy trial. People v. Chavez, 779 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1989); Fisher v. County Court, 796 P.2d 65 (Colo. App. 1990).

Even where defendant moves for change of venue. Where the defendant successfully moved for a change of venue, and the case was delayed because the trial judge did not designate a new venue and set a date or trial, such delay is attributable to the state since it is the responsibility of the district attorney and the trial court to cause the case to be brought to trial within the prescribed time limits. People v. Colantonio, 196 Colo. 242, 583 P.2d 919 (1978).

Burden of compliance with speedy trial statute includes making a record sufficient for an appellate court to determine statutory compliance. Marquez v. District Court, 200 Colo. 55, 613 P.2d 1302 (1980).

The constitutional right to a speedy trial derived from the federal and Colorado constitutions, is distinct from the statutory speedy trial right and the determination as to one does not necessarily dispose of the other. People v. Harris, 914 P.2d 425 (Colo. App. 1995).

This statutory language is mandatory and leaves no room for court discretion. Its preface confines exceptions only to those delineated in the statute. Carr v. District Court, 190 Colo. 125, 543 P.2d 1253 (1975).

The language of this section is mandatory and leaves no discretion for a court to fashion exceptions to the six-month rule apart from those delineated in the statute. Harrington v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 225 (1977).

The language of this section is mandatory unless the period of delay fits within or can be inferred from one of its exclusionary provisions. People v. Martin, 732 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1987).

If defendant is not tried within six months of entering plea of not guilty, and defendant has not waived speedy trial rights and no extensions or exclusions are allowable, charges must be dismissed. Tongish v. Arapahoe County Court, 775 P.2d 63 (Colo. App. 1989).

If no statutory exception or constitutional right justifies a delay and the defendant has taken no action to either cause or consent to a delay, noncompliance with the speedy trial requirements of this section must result in dismissal of the charges against the defendant. People v. Arledge, 938 P.2d 160 (Colo. 1997).

This section and Crim. P. 48(b) clarify and simplify the parameters of the constitutional right to a speedy trial. Carr v. District Court, 190 Colo. 125, 543 P.2d 1253 (1975); People v. Cisneros, 193 Colo. 141, 563 P.2d 355 (1977); People v. Chavez, 779 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1989).

This section and Crim. P. 48(b) were designed to render the federal and state constitutional rights to a speedy trial more effective. Sweet v. Myers, 200 Colo. 50, 612 P.2d 75 (1980); People v. Sanchez, 649 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1982).

Crim. P. 48(b) was designed to substantially conform to this section. Carr v. District Court, 190 Colo. 125, 543 P.2d 1253 (1975).

Since Crim. P. 48(b) is the procedural counterpart to the speedy trial statute and is virtually identical to this section, the resolution of a speedy trial issue is the same whether the analysis proceeds from the statute or the rule. People v. Deason, 670 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1983).

Effect of Crim. P. 48(b). Trial within the time period prescribed by Crim. P. 48(b) does not preclude raising the defendant's right to a speedy public trial as embodied in § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const. Casias v. People, 160 Colo. 152, 415 P.2d 344 (1966).

For the applicability of Crim. P. 48(b), see Rhodus v. People, 160 Colo. 407, 418 P.2d 42 (1966); Ferguson v. People, 160 Colo. 389, 417 P.2d 768 (1966); Lucero v. People, 161 Colo. 568, 423 P.2d 577 (1967); Maes v. People, 169 Colo. 200, 454 P.2d 792 (1969); Lucero v. People, 173 Colo. 94, 476 P.2d 257 (1970).

Right to a speedy trial has been formulated to force the prosecution to try a defendant promptly in compliance with the statutes, rules, and constitutional requirements of each case.

People ex rel. Coca v. District Court, 187 Colo. 280, 530 P.2d 958 (1975).

Right to speedy trial attaches with filing of a formal charge. People v. Chavez, 779 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1989).

Where determination that delays in bringing defendant to trial involved resolutions of fact questions, the district attorney could not appeal such determinations. People v. Murphy, 183 Colo. 106, 515 P.2d 107 (1973).

Section parallels C.M.C.R. 248(b). This section, also enacted as Crim. P. 48(b), is the parallel rule to C.M.C.R. 248(b). Bachicha v. Municipal Court, 41 Colo. App. 198, 581 P.2d 746 (1978).

Subsection (5.1) does not apply to acts committed before July 1, 1985, but which continue thereafter. People v. Newton, 764 P.2d 1182 (Colo. 1988).

This section, and not the Uniform Mandatory Disposition of Detainers Act (UMDDA), §§ 16-14-101 to 16-14-108, applies to the retrial of charges on convictions overturned on appeal. The UMDDA applies only to untried charges, and the charges against this defendant, while still pending, were not untried. People v. Campbell, 885 P.2d 327 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in People v. Flowers, 190 Colo. 453, 548 P.2d 918 (1976); People v. Reliford, 39 Colo. App. 474, 568 P.2d 496 (1977); People v. Trujillo, 41 Colo. App. 223, 586 P.2d 235 (1978); People v. Gonzales, 198 Colo. 546, 603 P.2d 139 (1979); People v. Peek, 199 Colo. 3, 604 P.2d 23 (1979); People v. Boos, 199 Colo. 15, 604 P.2d 272 (1979); People ex rel. Freed v. County Court, 42 Colo. App. 272, 592 P.2d 1355 (1979); People v. Williams, 628 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1981); People v. Small, 631 P.2d 148 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jones, 631 P.2d 1132 (Colo. 1981); People v. Mann, 646 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1982); People in Interest of D.M., 650 P.2d 1350 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Olds, 656 P.2d 705 (Colo. 1983); People v. Ashton, 661 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Harding, 671 P.2d 975 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Jones, 677 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1983); Snyder v. Moss, 703 P.2d 1311 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Mascarenas, 706 P.2d 404 (Colo. 1985); People v. Goodpaster, 742 P.2d 965 (Colo. App. 1987).

II. SCOPE OF RIGHT TO SPEEDY TRIAL.

Incarceration of defendant outside state did not make him unavailable for purposes of speedy trial considerations, unless the prosecution can show that despite diligent efforts defendant's presence could not be secured. Watson v. People, 700 P.2d 544 (Colo. 1985); People v. Byrne, 762 P.2d 674 (Colo. 1988).

Diligent efforts found lacking. See People v. Byrne, 762 P.2d 674 (Colo. 1988).

Trial within required period not preclusion of assertion of right. A defendant is not precluded from asserting his constitutional right to a speedy trial simply because the trial was held within the required statutory period; the defendant, however, has the burden of proving that his constitutional speedy trial right has been denied. Gelfand v. People, 196 Colo. 487, 586 P.2d 1331 (1978).

A defendant is entitled to be tried within six months of the entry of a plea of not guilty. People v. Slender Wrap, Inc., 36 Colo. App. 11, 536 P.2d 850 (1975).

Speedy trial is calculated separately for each criminal complaint. When charges in a complaint are properly dismissed within the speedy trial period without prejudice, they are a nullity. If defendant is arraigned under new charges, even if they are identical to the dismissed charges, the speedy trial period begins anew. Huang v. County Court of Douglas County, 98 P.3d 924 (Colo. App. 2003).

When charges are dismissed without prejudice within the speedy trial period and defendant is later charged with the same or similar counts, the speedy trial clock begins anew unless the district attorney dismissed the charges and refiled them to avoid a speedy trial violation. When the court dismissed the original charges against defendant when victim did not show up for trial within the speedy trial period against the wishes of the prosecution and defendant did not object, there is no basis to claim district attorney sought dismissal of the original charges to avoid a speedy trial violation. People v. Walker, 252 P.3d 551 (Colo. App. 2011).

Court and prosecutor's joint responsibility to avoid useless delays. It is the joint responsibility of the district attorney and the trial court to assiduously avoid any occasion for a useless and unnecessary delay in the trial of a criminal case. People v. Murphy, 183 Colo. 106, 515 P.2d 107 (1973).

Ad hoc balancing test used to determine whether right to speedy trial has been denied. People v. Spencer, 182 Colo. 189, 512 P.2d 260 (1973); People v. Chavez, 779 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1989).

The test includes four factors: The length of the delay, the reason for the delay, the defendant's assertion or demand for a speedy trial, and the prejudice to the defendant. People v. Spencer, 182 Colo. 189, 512 P.2d 260 (1973); People v. Chavez, 779 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1989); People v. Fears, 962 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1997).

Statutory speedy trial period held to exclude period of time reasonably necessary to reset the case for trial after issuance of remittitur following appeal of case on constitutional grounds. People in Interest of N.P., 768 P.2d 707 (Colo. 1989) (decided under law in effect prior to 1985 amendment).

Speedy trial statute tolled with regard to all counts of the charging document when the people file an original proceeding seeking reinstatement of one or more counts of a multi-count charging document. People v. Beyette, 711 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1986).

Time taken to complete appeal is excluded from six-month speedy trial period, but only the time of defendant's absence and a reasonable time to reschedule the hearing may be excluded. People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 933 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1997).

The six-month speedy trial period for commencing a new trial after initial conviction was reversed on appeal was tolled while defendant's C.A.R. 21 proceeding was being considered by the supreme court; therefore, the period of delay caused by the C.A.R. 21 proceeding is excluded from the six-month speedy trial period. People v. Powell, 917 P.2d 298 (Colo. App. 1995).

Appeal of trial court's ruling that death penalty statute was unconstitutional, although not technically "interlocutory," was not improperly filed and ultimately was accepted and decided by the Colorado Supreme Court pursuant to C.A.R. 21. Therefore, speedy trial period was tolled during the pendency of the appeal. People v. Fears, 962 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1997).

Stay of proceedings pending appeal is one means, but not the exclusive means, for tolling of the speedy trial period to occur. People v. Fears, 962 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1997).

Right guaranteed although defendant is out on bail or parole. Under former provision, the lapse of the prescribed time after the issuance of a capias and arrest of the defendant without an application to postpone or delay the trial entitles him to his discharge, notwithstanding the fact that he has been out on bail. Van Buren v. People, 7 Colo. App. 136, 42 P. 599 (1895).

The fact that the accused during almost the whole time of the delay was at large upon bail does not divest him of his right to the speedy trial guaranteed by the constitution and the provisions of this section. Ex parte Miller, 66 Colo. 261, 180 P. 749 (1919).

The parole status of a federal prisoner is without effect on the conduct of officials charged with the prosecution of an indictment against the prisoner for the violation of a state law. Ex parte Schechtel, 103 Colo. 77, 82 P.2d 762 (1938), overruled in Watson v. People, 700 P.2d 544 (Colo. 1985).

The fact that defendant was at large under bond manifestly does not divest him of the right to that speedy trial which is guaranteed by § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const. Hicks v. People, 148 Colo. 26, 364 P.2d 877 (1961).

The right to a speedy trial is not dissipated by the fact that the defendant is granted bail.

Jaramillo v. District Court, 174 Colo. 561, 484 P.2d 1219 (1971).

Section cannot be invoked where defendant has not been apprehended. One charged with a criminal offense may not invoke the provisions of this section concerning speedy trials where he has not been apprehended, and committed for trial. Ex parte Russo, 104 Colo. 91, 88 P.2d 953 (1939).

Or where delay caused by defendant. One charged with a criminal offense may not successfully invoke his right to a speedy trial where the delay of which he complains was occasioned by his avoidance of arrest, it appearing that the prosecution proceeded reasonably as to time after defendant was apprehended. Ex parte Russo, 104 Colo. 91, 88 P.2d 953 (1939).

A person is not entitled to be discharged if he requested a postponement of his trial or otherwise caused the delay. People v. Bates, 155 Colo. 277, 394 P.2d 134 (1964).

The record does not disclose that defendant was in anywise denied the speedy public trial guaranteed him by the constitution where at least certain delays in getting to trial were of his own making. Lucero v. People, 161 Colo. 568, 423 P.2d 577 (1967).

Both § 18-1-405 and Crim. P. 48 exclude delay which is caused by, agreed to, or created at the instance of the defendant. Saiz v. District Court, 189 Colo. 555, 542 P.2d 1293 (1975).

Because sufficient time for trial preparation is a necessary requirement for the effective assistance of counsel, and the substitution of counsel was made at the instance of defendant, continuing the trial date outside the speedy trial deadline was not a violation of his statutory right to a speedy trial. People v. Brewster, 240 P.3d 291 (Colo. App. 2009).

In the absence of a showing of bad faith on the part of the prosecutor in endorsing a witness on the day of the trial, the delay resulting from the defendant's tactical decision to seek a continuance as a result of the late endorsement is chargeable to her. People v. Steele, 193 Colo. 187, 563 P.2d 6 (1977).

Both competency examinations requested by defense counsel for the benefit of the defendant and scheduling delays to accommodate defense counsel are attributable to the defendant. Jones v. People, 711 P.2d 1270 (Colo. 1986).

Where defendant held in another jurisdiction pending extradition to a foreign state makes no effort to disclose his whereabouts to prosecuting authorities in a county in which charges are pending against him, and where such authorities are unaware of the pending extradition proceedings, the period of delay until the defendant returns to the state is attributable to the defendant and must be excluded from the applicable six-month speedy trial period. People v. Moye, 635 P.2d 194 (Colo. 1981).

When a defendant fails to make a scheduled bond appearance before the trial court, the six-month speedy trial period is tolled until he makes himself available to the court, even where some of the time he is unavailable due to being incarcerated in another jurisdiction. People v. Moye, 635 P.2d 194 (Colo. 1981).

The provisions of this section cannot be used to the advantage of a defendant who violates his bond, fails to appear at the trial, and absconds from the state. People v. Martin, 732 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1987).

Six-month period was tolled during period of time that defendant was being processed in federal system, at which time defendant was unable to appear on scheduled trial date in state trial; defendant's failure to appear for trial on the state charges could only be attributed to defendant and, therefore, constituted a waiver of his right to speedy trial. People v. Marquez, 739 P.2d 917 (Colo. App. 1987).

Defendant's speedy trial time was tolled by his voluntary request for speedy disposition of detainer filed against him by authorities in another state, and by his subsequent removal to that state, where defendant's actions precluded Colorado authorities from objecting to his removal. People v. Yellen, 739 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1987).

Subsection (6) includes any delays agreed to by defendant or requested by his attorney. Scheduling delays to accommodate defense counsel are attributable to the defendant. People v. Hamer, 689 P.2d 1147 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Marez, 916 P.2d 543 (Colo. App. 1995).

Defendant's speedy trial rights were not violated when, in response to the testimony of defendant's mental health expert during a suppression hearing that defendant's statements were involuntary because of a mental disorder, prosecution requested, and was granted, three month continuance in order to arrange for expert testimony and analyze the alleged mental disorder. People v. Whalin, 885 P.2d 293 (Colo. App. 1994).

The time necessary to determine the People's appeal after the trial court granted the defendant's motion to dismiss certain charges was chargeable to the defendant and therefore excluded from the speedy trial computations. People v. Warner, 930 P.2d 564 (Colo. 1996).

A motion by the defendant's attorney for a continuance, made in open court with the consent of the defendant, is a request for a continuance, governed by subsection (3), rather than a mere delay, governed by subsection (6). In the absence of a showing of bad faith on the part of the prosecution in the late disclosure of evidence bearing on the credibility of one of its prospective witnesses, the legal consequence of defense counsel's request for a continuance was to extend the period within which the trial could be commenced for an additional six months from the date of the continuance. People v. Duncan, 31 P.3d 874 (Colo. 2001).

Delay caused by briefing and determining defendant's motion to dismiss properly charged to defendant. Williamsen v. People, 735 P.2d 176 (Colo. 1987).

Delay due to substitution of counsel. Continuances made necessary because of the substitution of counsel may, depending upon the particular circumstances of the case, be chargeable to the defendant. People v. Scales, 763 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1988).

Substitution was appropriate when caused by defendant's refusal to cooperate with defense attorney and continuance resulting therefrom was properly charged to the defendant. People v. Scales, 763 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1988).

Trial court's ruling, which disqualified defendant's former attorneys for ethical conflict and which caused need for continuance so that new attorney could prepare, did not deprive defendant of speedy trial rights, where defendant agreed to continuance. People v. Lewis, 739 P.2d 861 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Monroe, 907 P.2d 690 (Colo. App. 1995).

Determination that delay was caused by substitution of counsel not supported by record and not properly chargeable to defendant. Defendant's actions did not require a substitution of counsel, he was not counseled by the court on a need for a continuance and he expressed no understanding of such a need, and the court did not attempt to find other counsel who could meet the deadline. People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 933 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1997).

Substitution may cause defendant to be tried after speedy trial date. Delay may be charged to defendant if court finds the defendant will not receive effective assistance of counsel without a postponement. People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 933 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1997).

Continuance to allow third attorney to prepare for trial was properly chargeable to defendant where defendant had engaged in a pattern of noncooperation with his attorneys and failure to continue the trial date would have given the defendant a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel. The fact that the trial court delayed in appointing the third attorney due to a competency evaluation of the defendant in another case did not change this result. People v. Rocha, 872 P.2d 1285 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where defendant requested a continuance because of the unavailability of his fingerprint expert, the delay was attributable to the defendant and it does not make the granting of an earlier continuance an abuse of discretion. People v. Madsen, 743 P.2d 437 (Colo. App. 1987).

Charges not dismissed where defendant's expressed understanding of computation of time period differs from statute. Where defendant's expressed understanding was that the six-month period of the speedy trial statute would commence to run at the end of defendant's continuance, the failure to try defendant within six months of the granting of the continuance does not entitle him to dismissal of charges. Baca v. District Court, 198 Colo. 486, 603 P.2d 940 (1979).

Delays analyzed to ascertain what part due to defendant. In computing the time chargeable to a defendant in connection with speedy trial determinations, any prolonged lapse of time which causes a trial date to be extended should be carefully analyzed by the trial court to ascertain what part, if any, was due to delays at the request of or for the benefit of the defendant, and the time involved in such delays is properly chargeable to a defendant. People v. Murphy, 183 Colo. 106, 515 P.2d 107 (1973).

Period of delay was excluded from the speedy trial period under the provisions of subsection (6)(c). The trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to grant a severance, therefore the continuance granted to the codefendant was chargeable to the defendant, and the defendant was not denied his right to a speedy trial. People v. Backus, 952 P.2d 846 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Reynolds, 159 P.3d 684 (Colo. App. 2006).

Defendants' delay in asserting their right to a speedy trial is entitled to strong evidentiary weight in determining whether the defendants were denied their constitutional right to a speedy trial. People v. Spencer, 182 Colo. 189, 512 P.2d 260 (1973).

Delay caused by extradition attributable to prosecution. Delay initiated by the issuance of the governor's arrest warrant and subsequent extradition to another state is attributable to the people. People v. Wimer, 43 Colo. App. 237, 604 P.2d 1183 (1979).

Delay caused by defendant's waiver of extradition not attributable to defendant. Delay in bringing defendant to trial which is caused by defendant's waiver of extradition to another state is not attributable to the defendant within the meaning of this section. People v. Wimer, 43 Colo. App. 237, 604 P.2d 1183 (1979).

Motion for continuance of arraignment date containing waiver. Where petitioner moved to continue his arraignment date and his written motion contained a statement to the effect that "the Defendant waives his right to a speedy trial", this statement was intended only as a waiver of the right to challenge any speedy trial violation caused by the request for a continuance of the arraignment date and was not effective with respect to any subsequently occurring statutory speedy trial violation. Sweet v. Myers, 200 Colo. 50, 612 P.2d 75 (1980).

Section not invoked where grant of new trial extends original limitation. Where defendant's first trial was completed before the expiration of the period fixed by statute, and a new trial was thereafter granted, the new trial may be set beyond such period. Ferguson v. People, 160 Colo. 389, 417 P.2d 768 (1966).

Or where defendant moves for separate trial. Where a trial is not had as required by this section, but practically every continuance is made with the express consent of a defendant's counsel, and where a defendant moves for a separate trial, such motion being filed, heard and denied after the expiration of such period, the defendant cannot avail himself of the benefits of the statute. Gallegos v. People, 139 Colo. 166, 337 P.2d 961 (1959), overruled in Villafranca v. People, 194 Colo. 472, 573 P.2d 540 (1978).

Or where delay caused by detention by another sovereign power. The constitutional right of one charged with the commission of a crime to a speedy trial is not violated by failure of the state to put him on trial while he is in the custody of the United States serving a sentence for violation of federal laws, and in such circumstances there is no obligation imposed upon the prosecuting authorities of the state to apply to the federal government for a return of such prisoner to the state for trial on the state charge. Ex parte Schechtel, 103 Colo. 77, 82 P.2d 762 (1938), overruled in Watson v. People, 700 P.2d 544 (Colo. 1985).

But not where defendant is incarcerated by same sovereign. A sovereign may not deny an accused person a speedy trial in a court also of that sovereign by reason of the circumstance that the accused is incarcerated in a penal institution of that sovereign under a prior conviction and sentence of that sovereign. Rader v. People, 138 Colo. 397, 334 P.2d 437 (1959).

Prosecutor had duty to obtain defendant's presence. Where the district attorney was aware that the defendant was being held in custody in another county concerning a different charge, the district attorney had the burden of obtaining the presence of the defendant and delay due to defendant's absence is not chargeable to defendant for purposes of computing speedy trial requirements. People v. Murphy, 183 Colo. 106, 515 P.2d 107 (1973).

Chronic trial congestion does not excuse the respondents' failure to bring petitioners to trial within the six-month time limit imposed by this section. Carr v. District Court, 190 Colo. 125, 543 P.2d 1253 (1975).

Docket congestion merely factor to consider. Although it is clear that docket congestion would not warrant a retrial later than the three-month maximum period for delay caused by a mistrial, it is a factor in determining the reasonableness of the delay within the statutory and procedural time periods of subsection (6)(e) and Crim. P. 48(b)(6)(V). Pinelli v. District Court, 197 Colo. 555, 595 P.2d 225 (1979).

Delay due to congested docket not caused by defendant. Neither the trial court's decision to conduct a hearing, nor the court's congested docket when the hearing date arrived, produce delays that were "caused at the instance of the defendant." People v. Bell, 669 P.2d 1381 (Colo. 1983).

When a trial court continues a case due to docket congestion, but makes a reasonable effort to reschedule within the speedy trial period, and defense counsel's scheduling conflict does not permit a new date within the speedy trial deadline, the resulting delay is attributable to defendant. The period of delay is excludable from time calculations for purposes of the applicable speedy trial provision. Hills v. Westminster Mun. Court, 245 P.3d 947 (Colo. 2011).

When the defendant pleads "not guilty by reason of insanity" and is thus entitled to a separate trial on the sanity issue, he must be brought to trial on that issue within six months from the date of entry of the plea or defendant's last continuance under subsection (3). People v. Haines, 37 Colo. App. 302, 549 P.2d 786 (1976).

Once the sanity trial is ended and the defendant is found to be sane, he must then be brought to trial on the other issues of the crime charged within the statutory six months from the judgment in the sanity trial. People v. Haines, 37 Colo. App. 302, 549 P.2d 786 (1976).

Period from time of commitment until filing of final psychiatric report excludable. When a defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity, the period from the time of commitment until the filing of the final psychiatric report, if filed within a reasonable time, is excludable for purposes of the six-month period. People v. Renfrow, 193 Colo. 131, 564 P.2d 411 (1977).

Commitment to institution not necessary for exclusion of time for psychiatric reports. The defendant need not be committed to an institution for examination before a reasonable time can be excluded from the speedy trial computation for filing of psychiatric reports. People v. Brown, 44 Colo. App. 397, 622 P.2d 573 (1980).

Defendant confined to mental institution. When a defendant is confined to a mental institution or hospital for observation or examination prior to a determination of mental competency, he cannot complain of a denial of his constitutional right to a speedy trial because of the delay occasioned by that confinement. People v. Jones, 677 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1983), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 711 P.2d 1270 (Colo. 1986).

For an example of the computation of six-month period where defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity, see Sanchez v.

District Court, 200 Colo. 33, 612 P.2d 519 (1980).

Exclusions from six-month period. Subsection (6)(a) excludes from the six-month term in which a trial must commence only that period of delay required for the sanity examination and the filing of a timely report with the court. People v. Deason, 670 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1983).

The period excluded from speedy trial computation under subsection (6) does not end upon the filing of a report that a defendant is competent to proceed, but rather when the court makes a determination that the defendant is restored to competency. People v. Harris, 914 P.2d 425 (Colo. App. 1995).

Defendants not denied right. Where the record reflects that the defendants made no demand for a speedy trial until 14 months expired and showed no prejudice as a result of the delay and that the delay occurred to permit the defendants to obtain expert testimony and prepare for trial, and moreover, the defendants were free on bond at all times prior to trial, the defendants were not denied their constitutional right to a speedy trial. People v. Spencer, 182 Colo. 189, 512 P.2d 260 (1973).

Because criminal proceedings are suspended during the entire time a defendant is incompetent and may not resume until a judicial determination is made that the defendant has been restored to competency, there is no basis upon which to find that the period in which a defendant is "incompetent" under subsection (6) ends in any manner other than in accord with the procedures of the former §16-8-113. People v. Harris, 914 P.2d 425 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court retains jurisdiction to correct erroneous judgment. In a criminal proceeding where the trial court has jurisdiction of the person of the defendant and of the subject matter and has entered an erroneous judgment, such court retains jurisdiction to correct, modify, or alter such erroneous judgment notwithstanding expiration of the term of court at which the erroneous judgment was pronounced. Under former provision, the fact that there had been a considerable lapse of time and that many terms of court had intervened was held to be immaterial. Villalon v. People, 145 Colo. 327, 358 P.2d 1018 (1961).

For the effect of refile of information as result of change in circumstances, see Schiffner v. People, 173 Colo. 123, 476 P.2d 756 (1970).

Delay chargeable to defendant. In computing the time within which a defendant must be brought to trial, in order for the delay to be charged to the defendant, it must be attributable to affirmative action on defendant's part, or to defendant's express consent to the delay, or to other affirmative conduct evidencing such consent. Tasset v. Yeager, 195 Colo. 190, 576 P.2d 558 (1978).

Any delays resulting from a defendant's attempt to meet the conditions of a plea bargain, such as the time allocable to defendant's efforts to qualify for a deferred judgment, should be charged to the defendant. People v. Luevano, 670 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1983).

Defendant's attempt to effect plea bargain by applying for probation attributable to defendant and tolls running of speedy trial period under subsection (6)(f). People v. Madsen, 707 P.2d 344 (Colo. 1985).

Delay not attributable to defendant where a continuance is granted to prosecution as a sanction against the defense for his failure to disclose any defenses other than his not guilty plea, and for his failure to identify his intent to cross-examine the prosecution's witnesses. People v. Castro, 835 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1992).

Or where trial judge instituted reconsideration of a recusal motion, previously denied, and judge recused himself three days prior to trial. At this point, the judge could not require the defendant to waive speedy trial and no part of the subsequent delay was chargeable to the defendant. People v. Arledge, 938 P.2d 160 (Colo. 1997).

Key to interpreting subsection (6)(f) is to determine whether the defendant caused the delay. If the delay is caused by, agreed to, or created at the instance of the defendant, it will be excluded from the speedy-trial calculation made by the court. People v. Bell, 669 P.2d 1381 (Colo. 1983).

"Material evidence" for purposes of subsection (6)(g)(I) means evidence that has a logical connection with consequential facts. The prosecution has the burden of proving the evidence is material. In order to satisfy that burden, the prosecution must provide the court with enough specificity and information on the record to show that the unavailable evidence is material to the prosecution's case. The court had sufficient information to exercise its independent judgment to determine that the evidence was material. People v. Roberts, 146 P.3d 589 (Colo. 2006).

No evidence of a lack of due diligence under subsection (6)(g)(I) where prosecution had prior knowledge of the victim's pregnancy and did not obtain a subpoena. The prosecution asserted to the trial court that, when the trial was originally scheduled, it was anticipated that the victim would have delivered her baby and been available for trial. The trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that the extension of the victim's pregnancy beyond her original expected due date was the cause of her nonappearance. People v. Scialabba, 55 P.3d 207 (Colo. App. 2002).

Appeal tolls speedy trial period. The period of time necessary to go through the appellate process, where the appeal stems from a dismissal upon the defendant's motion, tolls the statutory speedy trial period. People v. Jamerson, 198 Colo. 92, 596 P.2d 764 (1979); People v. Daley, 97 P.3d 295 (Colo. App. 2004).

Delay caused by interlocutory appeal excluded. This section and Crim. P. 48 exclude from the computation of the time in which a defendant shall be brought to trial the period of delay caused by an interlocutory appeal. People v. Medina, 40 Colo. App. 490, 583 P.2d 293 (1978).

"Interlocutory appeal" construed. An original proceeding initiated in good faith by either the defense or the prosecution constitutes an "interlocutory appeal" for purposes of the speedy trial statute. People v. Ferguson, 653 P.2d 725 (Colo. 1982); People v. Beyette, 711 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1986).

Prosecution's appeal of a trial court's partial dismissal at a preliminary hearing of a multi-count information is an interlocutory appeal that tolls the running of the speedy trial period. People v. Gallegos, 946 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1997).

Appeal of disqualification of district attorney did not have a substantial effect on prosecution's case where special prosecutor was appointed. As such, appeal of the disqualification was not an interlocutory appeal. People v. Witty, 36 P.3d 69 (Colo. App. 2000).

Even a second interlocutory appeal, if initiated in good faith, tolls the statute regardless of the fact that it is later dismissed. People v. Morgan, 681 P.2d 970, (Colo. App. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 881, 105 S. Ct. 248, 83 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1984).

New trial order pursuant to motion treated as reversal on appeal. A new trial order pursuant to a new trial motion is similar to a reversal on appeal for purposes of the speedy trial provisions. People v. Jamerson, 196 Colo. 63, 580 P.2d 805 (1978); People v. Jamerson, 198 Colo. 92, 596 P.2d 764 (1979).

Measurement of six-month period upon filing of amended complaint. When the prosecution files an amended complaint charging new material after the defendant's initial guilty plea, the period of time for dismissal under the speedy trial provisions is measured from the second guilty plea unless the prosecution has shown bad faith in amending the complaint. If the amended complaint does not charge new material, the time period is measured from the original guilty plea. Amon v. People, 198 Colo. 172, 597 P.2d 569 (1979).

Period of delay caused by mistrial not includable. The computation of the six-month period allowed for in this section and Crim. P. 48(b)(1) shall not include any period of delay caused by a mistrial, and the extension provided following a mistrial is part of the period of delay caused thereby. Pinelli v. District Court, 197 Colo. 555, 595 P.2d 225 (1979).

Three-month exclusion from period following mistrial. Subsection (6)(e) and Crim. P.

48(b)(6)(V) grant the prosecution a three-month exclusion in which to retry a case after a mistrial, provided that the delays are reasonable. People v. Pipkin, 655 P.2d 1360 (Colo. 1982); Mason v. People, 932 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1997).

The general assembly intended to grant no more than three months as an exclusion from the speedy trial period, which is one-half of the statutory speedy trial period, following a mistrial. People v. Pipkin, 655 P.2d 1360 (Colo. 1982).

Mistrials due to prosecutor's actions not treated differently. Neither Crim. P. 48(b)(6)(V) nor subsection (6)(e) treats mistrials due to the prosecutor's actions differently than mistrials due to other reasons. People v. Erickson, 194 Colo. 557, 574 P.2d 504 (1978).

Prosecutor must request additional time upon change of venue. When a change of venue is granted after arraignment, it is incumbent upon the prosecuting attorney to make a motion to obtain additional time to bring the defendant to trial because of the exceptional circumstances of the case. People v. Colantonio, 196 Colo. 242, 583 P.2d 919 (1978).

District attorney's motion for continuance insufficient basis for justifying delay. Where the record indicated that the respondent court granted the district attorney's motion to continue the July 30, 1979, trial date solely on the basis of the district attorney's written motion which contained only the unsupported allegation that a material witness would be unavailable for trial on July 30, 1979, and there was no showing of due diligence or that the witness would be available at a later trial date, the delay between July 30, 1979, and November 1, 1979, was not properly excludable from the statutory speedy trial period under subsection (6)(g)(I), and where defendant had plead not guilty on April 20, 1979, the petitioner was entitled to a dismissal of the charges against him under subsection (1). Sweet v. Myers, 200 Colo. 50, 612 P.2d 75 (1980).

Forfeiture action under Colorado public nuisance statute is civil in nature and therefore is not subject to constitutional or statutory speedy trial provisions applicable to criminal prosecutions. People v. Milton, 732 P.2d 1199 (Colo. 1987).

Where defendant is present when trial date is set and does not object to the setting of a trial date beyond the time required by statute, an extension of the statutory deadline to the date actually set for trial results. People v. Velarde, 790 P.2d 903 (Colo. App. 1989).

Defendant was not denied right to speedy trial where he was counseled at length by trial court and appeared to have understood the need for a continuance caused by substitution of counsel and where neither the prosecution nor the judiciary was responsible for the delay. People v. Cerrone, 867 P.2d 143 (Colo. App. 1993).

III. ENFORCEMENT OF RIGHT.

Defendant must enter a plea before he may take advantage of the restriction of this section and Crim. P. 48(b)(1). People v. Wilkinson, 37 Colo. App. 531, 555 P.2d 1167 (1976).

Six-month limitation runs from date plea entered. The six-month limitation of both this section and Crim. P. 48(b)(1) runs from the date that defendant's plea is entered. People v. Wilkinson, 37 Colo. App. 531, 555 P.2d 1167 (1976).

A defendant must be brought to trial within six months from the date of the entry of a plea of not guilty, except as otherwise provided by subsection (6)(a). Sanchez v. District Court, 200 Colo. 33, 612 P.2d 519 (1980).

Rule that defendant must be brought to trial within six months from the date of the entry of a plea of not guilty equally applies where a defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity. Sanchez v. District Court, 200 Colo. 33, 612 P.2d 519 (1980).

Computation of six-month time provision found in People v. Hampton, 696 P.2d 765 (Colo. 1985).

The special time limitations of § 24-60-501 prevail, when conflicts arise, over the more general criminal procedure provisions of this section and Crim. P. 48. Simakis v. District Court, 194 Colo. 436, 577 P.2d 3 (1978).

"Uniform Mandatory Disposition of Detainers Act" controls over general speedy trial provisions. The "Uniform Mandatory Disposition of Detainers Act" is a special statute designed to foster more effective prisoner treatment and rehabilitation; thus, when there is a conflict with the general speedy trial provisions, § 16-14-101 et seq., this section, § 24-60-501 et seq., and Crim. P. 48, the provisions of the uniform act control. People v. Swazo, 199 Colo. 486, 610 P.2d 1072 (1980).

Policies of this section same as §§ 16-14-101 to 16-14-108. The policies underlying this section and Crim. P. 48 are the same as those relative to the "Uniform Mandatory Disposition of Detainers Act", §§ 16-14-101 to 16-14-108. People v. Lopez, 41 Colo. App. 206, 587 P.2d 792 (1978).

The six-month period commences upon the arraignment for the last information. People v. Dunhill, 40 Colo. App. 137, 570 P.2d 1097 (1977); Meehan v. County Court, Jefferson Co., 762 P.2d 725 (Colo. App. 1988).

It is the shared responsibility of the trial court and the prosecution to schedule the suppression hearing for a date within the six-month speedy trial period so that, if the motion were granted, a new trial could commence within the six-month period. People v. Zedack, 93 P.3d 629 (Colo. App. 2004).

The length of delay "caused by any mistrial" must be calculated to include the days on which the aborted trial or trials were in progress.

People v. Erickson, 194 Colo. 557, 574 P.2d 504 (1978).

The entire period of delay caused by a mistrial is to be "excluded" from the computation of the time within which a defendant must be tried. People v. Thimmes, 643 P.2d 778 (Colo. App. 1981).

Delay excluded may be longer than period of absence. The excludable period of delay resulting from defendant's absence, may, in some cases, be longer than merely the period of defendant's absence. People v. Alward, 654 P.2d 327 (Colo. App. 1982), cert. dismissed, 677 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1984).

Factors authorized a continuance and thereby extended the speedy trial time where a period of delay was attributable to the inability of the prosecution, despite its exercise of due diligence, to obtain the victim's presence for trial and prosecution demonstrated the victim would be available to testify at a later date. People v. Grenemyer, 827 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendant's right to speedy trial not violated where defendant asked for a continuance to review evidence produced by the prosecution concerning the credibility of a prospective witness and there was no indication of bad faith by the prosecution in producing the evidence just prior to trial. The legal consequence of the defendant's request for a continuance was to extend the period within which trial could be commenced for an additional six months from the date of the continuance, as provided in subsection (3). People v. Duncan, 31 P.3d 874 (Colo. 2001).

Speedy trial right not violated where trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding prosecutors had acted with due diligence in seeking to obtain presence of out-of-state witnesses for trial and a continuance was warranted. People v. Wolfe, 9 P.3d 1137 (Colo. App. 1999).

The speedy trial statute is not violated in a case where there is no evidence a sheriff acted in bad faith in violating a segregation order that resulted in a delay of the defendant's criminal proceedings and a defendant's waiver of a statutory speedy trial right. People v. McMurtry, 101 P.3d 1098 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 122 P.3d 237 (Colo. 2005).

The intent of the general assembly was to exclude a reasonable time period from the speedy trial period following the absence or unavailability of the defendant when the delays are such that might reasonably result from the defendant's absence. People v. Martin, 732 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1987).

Six-month period includes a reasonable period of time in which to reschedule and prepare for trial a case that has been postponed from its original trial date due to the voluntary absence of the defendant. People v. Martin, 732 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1987).

Factors to be considered in determining whether the trial delay is reasonable include the difficulty in locating witnesses, the problem of overcrowded dockets, and the potential abuse of the speedy trial period by defendants who attempt to run time off the speedy trial period before absconding from the state. People v. Martin, 732 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1987).

Defendant's motion for severance shortly before trial constitutes an exceptional circumstance allowing consideration of docket congestion in determining the reasonable period of delay that tolls statute. People v. Runningbear, 753 P.2d 764 (Colo. 1988).

In order to determine if the defendant was entitled to have the charges against him dismissed for violating his rights to a speedy trial, the court must determine whether there was a delay that should be attributable to the defendant's absence and whether the trial delay caused by such absence was reasonable. People v. Martin, 732 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1987).

Whether jeopardy has attached is irrelevant. If the court is forced to dismiss the jurors or prospective jurors and reschedule the trial, whether jeopardy has yet attached is irrelevant in computing the length of delay excluded due to mistrial. People v. Erickson, 194 Colo. 557, 574 P.2d 504 (1978).

Effect of escape on running of six-month rule. The defendant was not denied a speedy trial under this section, as his escape stopped the running of the six-month rule, and that the time did not again commence to run until the district attorney had actual knowledge of his return to custody. People v. Gillings, 39 Colo. App. 387, 568 P.2d 92 (1977).

Exclusion of period fairly attributable to defendant's voluntary unavailability. Subsection (6)(d) contemplates an exclusion from the speedy trial period not only for the time of the defendant's actual absence or unavailability but also for any additional period of delay that may be fairly attributable to the defendant as a result of his voluntary unavailability. People v. Sanchez, 649 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1982); People v. Milton, 732 P.2d 1199 (Colo. 1987).

In determining what delay can be attributable to the absence or unavailability of the defendant, each case must be viewed individually, and the determination is dependent upon the facts of the specific case. People v. Martin, 732 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1987).

Such delay may include the time required to reschedule the defendant's trial. People v. Gray, 710 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1985).

Defendant has burden to prove he has been denied speedy trial. People v. Chavez, 779 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1989).

Accused must move for dismissal or discharge. To properly raise the question the accused may apply for his discharge or for dismissal for lack of a speedy trial. Jaramillo v. District Court, 174 Colo. 561, 484 P.2d 1219 (1971).

In accordance with the express language of subsection (5), defendant waived his right to a speedy trial by failing to move for dismissal of charges prior to entering a guilty plea. This did not, however, automatically waive the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial. Moody v. Corsentino, 843 P.2d 1355 (Colo. 1993).

The objection that the defendant has not had a speedy trial must itself be speedily raised when the case is moved for trial. Keller v. People, 153 Colo. 590, 387 P.2d 421 (1963).

Failure to move for dismissal prior to beginning of trial is a waiver of the statutory right to speedy trial. People v. Drake, 748 P.2d 1237 (Colo. 1988).

A juvenile's failure to request dismissal on speedy trial grounds before the beginning of the adjudicatory trial will result in the waiver of the juvenile's speedy trial rights under this section. People ex rel. J.M.N., 39 P.3d 1261 (Colo. App. 2001).

Defendant's attorney did not object to the trial date on speedy trial grounds until the date of trial. The defendant waived his ability to claim that his right to a speedy trial had been violated. People of City of Aurora v. Allen, 885 P.2d 207 (Colo. 1994).

Right to speedy trial may be waived. The defendant's failure to object to the date set for pre-trial motions hearing constituted his consent to the trial schedule that was offered, subject only to the condition that the actual trial commence within a reasonable time thereafter. A defendant cannot stand mute and allow a trial schedule to be adopted without registering his complaint that such schedule violates his speedy trial rights. People v. Atkins, 885 P.2d 243 (Colo. App. 1994); People v. Franco, 74 P.3d 357 (Colo. App. 2002).

Subsection (5) does not require the defendant to demand his right at the earliest possible time. Harrington v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 225 (1977).

Subsection (5) merely requires that the defendant make such a demand prior to the commencement of his trial, which, in most cases, would certainly be after the trial setting. Harrington v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 225 (1977).

Defendant's failure to demand dismissal prior to trial pursuant to alleged denial of speedy trial rights normally waives any speedy trial objection after conviction. People v. Marquez, 739 P.2d 917 (Colo. App. 1987).

Effect of the failure of the prosecution and the trial court to comply with the speedy trial statute requires the dismissal of the charges against the defendant with prejudice. People v. Martin, 732 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1987).

Upon refusal of discharge, accused may apply for habeas corpus. Where a person is entitled to discharge under this section, but such discharge is denied him in the district court, he may at once apply for the writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Miller, 66 Colo. 261, 180 P. 749 (1919).

Right to speedy trial may be waived. The right to a speedy trial, both under this section and § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const., may certainly be waived. Keller v. People, 153 Colo. 590, 387 P.2d 421 (1963).

Defendant can waive his constitutional and statutory right to a speedy trial by his failure to make a timely objection. People v. O'Donnell, 184 Colo. 104, 518 P.2d 945 (1974).

Failure to object before trial is waiver. A defendant who has gone to trial without objection cannot by motion obtain his discharge on the ground that he was not tried within the time prescribed by this section. Heller v. People, 2 Colo. App. 459, 31 P. 773 (1892).

The failure to object in the trial court to the first trial being held and the subsequent request for a continuance by the defendant constitutes a waiver of the statutory and constitutional right to a discharge. Keller v. People, 153 Colo. 590, 387 P.2d 421 (1963).

The statutory right to a speedy trial can be waived, and it is waived by failure to make objection at the trial. Valdez v. People, 174 Colo. 268, 483 P.2d 1333 (1971).

Counsel's sending waiver form to defendant not waiver. An agreement by defense counsel to send a waiver form to the defendant cannot be interpreted as a waiver of defendant's right to a speedy trial. People v. Bell, 669 P.2d 1381 (Colo. 1983).

Written waiver not essential. The fact that the defendant did not execute a written waiver of her right to a speedy trial as required in the deferred prosecution statute and as she agreed to do in open court does not inure to her benefit. People v. Ybarra, 190 Colo. 409, 547 P.2d 925 (1976).

But affirmative conduct is. An express consent to the delay or other affirmative conduct evidencing such consent must be shown. Harrington v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 225 (1976); People v. Lopez, 41 Colo. App. 206, 587 P.2d 792 (1978); People v. Wimer, 43 Colo. App. 237, 604 P.2d 1183 (1979).

An express waiver or other affirmative conduct evidencing such a waiver must be shown. People v. Gallegos, 192 Colo. 450, 560 P.2d 93 (1977); Rance v. County Court, 193 Colo. 220, 564 P.2d 422 (1977).

Mere silence by a defense counsel at a trial setting shall not be construed as a waiver of the defendant's statutory right to a speedy trial. Harrington v. District Court, 38 Colo. 360, 559 P.2d 225 (1977); Rance v. County Court, 193

Colo. 220, 564 P.2d 422 (1977); People v. Lopez, 41 Colo. App. 206, 587 P.2d 792 (1978).

This section does not state that defendant's failure to object to a trial setting beyond the six-month period should be viewed as a delay attributable to the defendant. In fact, subsection (5) mandates that the only affirmative action required on the part of the defendant be that he move for a dismissal prior to trial. Harrington v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 225 (1977).

Failure of each defendant to interpose any objection to a trial setting in county court beyond the six-month speedy trial period did not waive his right to a speedy trial. Rance v. County Court, 193 Colo. 220, 564 P.2d 422 (1977).

Request for a pretrial conference in criminal case, without more, does not constitute waiver of speedy trial right nor a delay caused at defendant's instance to be excluded from speedy trial calculations. Rodman v. County Court, 694 P.2d 871 (Colo. App. 1984).

Waiver by defense attorney's setting trial date. Where a trial date is set at the request of the defendant's attorney to accommodate his schedule, the defendant waives any speedy trial claims as to this trial date. People v. Fetty, 650 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1982).

When defense counsel insists he could not try the case prior to expiration of the six-month speedy trial period, this is tantamount to a request for a continuance. People v. Chavez, 650 P.2d 1310 (Colo. App. 1982).

When a defendant's attorney participates in a trial date setting which is within six months of the plea entered on that day, regardless of an earlier plea, the defendant thereby acquiesces to subsection (6)(f) and the prosecution thus meets its burden of demonstrating compliance with the speedy trial statute. People v. Rogers, 706 P.2d 1288 (Colo. App. 1985).

To establish a waiver the record must demonstrate that defense counsel had notice of the trial date and had adequate opportunity to object. People v. Franco, 74 P.3d 357 (Colo. App. 2002).

Nothing in subsection (5.1) precludes an off-the-record trial setting, nor does the subsection specify that the defendant or defense counsel must be present. People v. Franco, 74 P.3d 357 (Colo. App. 2002).

A guilty plea waives a defendant's right to claim the improper denial of his or her statutory right to a speedy trial. People v. McMurtry, 122 P.3d 237 (Colo. 2005).

By entering an unconditional, voluntary guilty plea, a defendant waives the right to assert, either on appeal or by collateral attack, a violation of the statutory right to speedy trial. People v. Owen, 122 P.3d 1006 (Colo. App. 2005).

Defendant's attorney, without defendant's personal consent, may obtain a continuance of a trial setting subject to the discretion of the trial court and the continuance will extend the speedy trial deadline an additional six months from the granting of the continuance. People v. Anderson, 649 P.2d 720 (Colo. App. 1982).

Defendant's motion to dismiss, because defense counsel was unable to proceed on the scheduled trial date within the speedy trial period, was considered tantamount to a request for a continuance in order to protect the defendant's sixth amendment right to counsel. People v. Wilson, 972 P.2d 701 (Colo. App. 1998).

Compliance with speedy trial requirements is jurisdictional. Failure to comply with the requirements of the speedy trial act is jurisdictional in the sense that defendant may request mandatory dismissal of the charges upon expiration of the allotted time. People v. Anderson, 649 P.2d 720 (Colo. App. 1982).

Failure to comply not automatic deprivation of jurisdiction. However, failure to bring defendant to trial within the allotted time does not automatically deprive the trial court of jurisdiction because defendant's failure to demand dismissal prior to trial waives any speedy trial objection. People v. Anderson, 649 P.2d 720 (Colo. App. 1982).

Relief in nature of prohibition under C.A.R. 21, is appropriate remedy when a district court is proceeding without jurisdiction to try a defendant in violation of his right to a speedy trial. Marquez v. District court, 200 Colo. 55, 613 P.2d 1302 (1980).

Whether a speedy trial has been afforded is a judicial question. Casias v. People, 160 Colo. 152, 415 P.2d 344 (1966).

Exclusions and extensions applied concomitantly. Nothing prevents a court from applying concomitantly the exclusionary provisions of subsection (6) and the rule governing extensions in subsection (3) when it makes a speedy trial determination. People v. Luevano, 670 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1983).

Entry of negotiated plea which is later withdrawn tantamount to continuance. Where defendant enters negotiated plea which he later withdraws following the court's rejection of the plea agreement, it is appropriate to view such plea as a continuance requested by the defendant under subsection (3). People v. Madsen, 707 P.2d 344 (Colo. 1985).

The fact that defendant was allowed to withdraw his plea because the plea bargain could not be implemented is irrelevant for speedy trial analysis. People v. Cass, 68 P.3d 537 (Colo. App. 2002).

A speedy public trial is a relative concept in that the circumstances of each case determine whether or not it has been afforded. Casias v. People, 160 Colo. 152, 415 P.2d 344 (1966); Maes v. People, 169 Colo. 200, 454 P.2d 792 (1969).

Speedy public trial does not mean trial immediately after the accused is apprehended and indicted, but public trial consistent with the court's business. Maes v. People, 169 Colo. 200, 454 P.2d 792 (1969).

Defendants have the burden of proof that an expeditious trial was denied them. Casias v. People, 160 Colo. 152, 415 P.2d 344 (1966); Maes v. People, 169 Colo. 200, 454 P.2d 792 (1969).

A motion for discharge or for dismissal for want of due prosecution of a charge of crime must be sustained by the accused; he has the burden of showing that he was not afforded a speedy trial. Jaramillo v. District Court, 174 Colo. 561, 484 P.2d 1219 (1971).

The burden is upon the defendant to establish that he has been denied a speedy trial in violation of the statute or rule or that his constitutional right to a speedy trial requires dismissal. Saiz v. District Court, 189 Colo. 555, 542 P.2d 1293 (1975).

Prima facie showing of violation shifts burden of proof to prosecution. Where a defendant has shown a prima facie violation of this section with no evidence in the record to the contrary, the burden of showing compliance with the time requirements of the rule and statute rests with the trial court and the prosecution. People v. Wimer, 43 Colo. App. 237, 604 P.2d 1183 (1979).

Dismissal of charges. The people cannot indiscriminately dismiss and refile charges in order to avoid the mandate of this section and Crim. P. 48(b)(1). However, to be entitled to dismissal on these grounds, the defendant must affirmatively establish the existence of such a course of action on the part of the prosecution. People v. Wilkinson, 37 Colo. App. 531, 555 P.2d 1167 (1976); Meehan v. County Court, Jefferson Co., 762 P.2d 725 (Colo. App. 1988); People v. Kraemer, 795 P.2d 1371 (Colo. App. 1990).

Charges in an original information properly dismissed without prejudice within the speedy trial limits for that case become a nullity; upon defendant's arraignment under a subsequent information, speedy trial period begins anew. People v. Kraemer, 795 P.2d 1371 (Colo. App. 1990).

The speedy trial period is calculated separately for each criminal complaint brought against a defendant, and, generally, if the charges in a summons and complaint are properly dismissed without prejudice, that case becomes a nullity, and a new speedy trial period begins if and when the accused enters a plea to subsequently filed charges, unless the defendant can establish that the prosecution acted in bad faith to circumvent the speedy trial limits. Peo- ple in Interest of C.O., 870 P.2d 1266 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where original case was properly dismissed without prejudice by the county court, the speedy trial period started anew in the juvenile case, and the juvenile waived his right to speedy trial by not objecting when the juvenile trial was scheduled outside the speedy trial limits. People in Interest of C.O., 870 P.2d 1266 (Colo. App. 1994).

Dismissing a claim in an earlier case for the legitimate purpose of joinder does not support a conclusion that prosecutor was indiscriminately dismissing and refileing charges in order to avoid the speedy trial mandate. People v. Kraemer, 795 P.2d 1371 (Colo. App. 1990).

Finding of good cause for denial of motion for severance is specifically required by subsection (6)(c). Although court properly denied motion for severance on evidentiary grounds, under § 16-7-101, it was an abuse of discretion to deny motion for severance on speedy trial grounds under this section where court made no finding of good cause why severance should not be granted. People v. Hernandez, 829 P.2d 392 (Colo. App. 1991).

Insufficient proof. The burden of establishing that the prosecution indiscriminately dismissed and refiled charges in order to avoid the mandate of this section and Crim. P. 48(b)(1) is not satisfied by proof only that the district attorney sought and obtained a subsequent indictment for different offenses arising from the same transaction. People v. Wilkinson, 37 Colo. App. 531, 555 P.2d 1167 (1976); Meehan v. County Court, Jefferson Co., 762 P.2d 725 (Colo. App. 1988).

Dismissal of charges sufficient to protect defendant's rights. Where defendant's trial took place within six months of defendant's plea of not guilty to the charges in the second indictment, and while the trial was not held until more than six months after defendant's plea to the charges of the original indictment, those charges were dismissed by the trial court, such dismissal was sufficient to protect defendant's rights under this section and Crim. P. 48(b)(1). People v. Wilkinson, 37 Colo. App. 531, 555 P.2d 1167 (1976); Meehan v. County Court, Jefferson Co., 762 P.2d 725 (Colo. App. 1988).

Defendant waived right to speedy trial. Although the first trial which resulted in a mistrial took place beyond the period fixed by statute, the defendant waived any right to discharge he may have had under this section by going to trial without objection. Such an objection is a prerequisite to his claim for discharge under this section and under § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const., guaranteeing a speedy trial. Keller v. People, 153 Colo. 590, 387 P.2d 421 (1963); Keller v.

Tinsley, 335 F.2d 144 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 379 U.S. 938, 85 S. Ct. 342, 13 L. Ed. 2d 348 (1964).

Agreement by defendant and defense counsel at hearing within six-month period that defendant was responsible for 20 days of delay in bringing case to trial deemed express consent to a 19-day delay in the trial and waiver of any speedy trial claims. People v. Barnes, 636 P.2d 1323 (Colo. App. 1981).

Defendant expressly waived the requirements concerning trial within period fixed by statute. Under such circumstances, this section is not applicable. Wilson v. People, 156 Colo. 243, 398 P.2d 35 (1965).

Defendant's failure to object to the trial date or to seek an earlier trial date, and his request for a continuance, all operated to waive his constitutional and statutory rights to discharge because he was not brought to trial within the time limits set by this section. Adargo v. People, 159 Colo. 321, 411 P.2d 245 (1966); Adargo v. Patterson, 371 F.2d 822 (10th Cir. 1967).

Where the record does not disclose any objection to delay made by defendant at the time of trial and further and where defendant's motion for postconviction relief under Crim. P. 35(b) does not set forth any facts showing that the delay was in any manner oppressive or arbitrary nor that he was in any way deprived of any defense or that any witness was unavailable, the court is not required to hold an evidentiary hearing. Valdez v. People, 174 Colo. 268, 483 P.2d 1333 (1971).

Motion for discharge not waived. Rude v. People, 44 Colo. 384, 99 P. 317 (1909).

Delay justified discharge. In re Garvey, 7 Colo. 502, 4 P. 758 (1884); Rude v. People, 44 Colo. 384, 99 P. 317 (1909); Ex parte Miller, 66 Colo. 261, 180 P. 749 (1919).

Duty of court to dismiss if dismissal required because right denied. If the constitution, the statutes, the rules, or the case law requires dismissal of a prosecution because of a denial to right of a speedy trial, it is the duty of the trial court to order that the case be dismissed. People ex rel. Coca v. District Court, 187 Colo. 280, 530 P.2d 958 (1975).

Section does not apply to an action where the alleged offense was committed prior to July 1, 1972. People v. Reliford, 186 Colo. 6, 525 P.2d 467 (1974).

Defendant cannot be required to pursue his C.A.R. 21 proceeding in a separate action only at the expense of his right to a speedy trial. People v. Rosidivito, 940 P.2d 1038 (Colo. App. 1996).

Test in subsection (6)(g)(I) applied in People v. Koolbeck, 703 P.2d 673 (Colo. App. 1985).

18-1-406. Right to jury trial. (1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (7) of this section, every person accused of a felony has the right to be tried by a jury of twelve whose verdict shall be unanimous. In matters involving misdemeanors, the accused is entitled to be tried by a jury of six. In matters involving “petty offenses”, the accused has the right to be tried by a jury under the terms and conditions of section 16-10-109, C.R.S.

(2) Except as to class 1 felonies, the person accused of a felony or misdemeanor may waive a trial by jury by express written instrument filed of record or by announcement in open court appearing of record.

(3) A defendant may not withdraw a voluntary and knowing waiver of trial by jury as a matter of right, but the court, in its discretion, may permit withdrawal of the waiver prior to the commencement of the trial.

(4) Except as to class 1 felonies, the defendant in any felony or misdemeanor case may, with the approval of the court, elect, at any time before the swearing in of the jury, or after the swearing in of the jury and before verdict, with the agreement of the district attorney and the approval of the court, to be tried by a number of jurors less than the number to which he would otherwise be entitled.

(5) Upon request of the defendant in advance of the commencement of the trial, the defendant shall be furnished with a list of prospective jurors who will be subject to call in the trial.

(6) Either the district attorney or the defendant may challenge the array on the ground that there has been a material departure from the requirements of the law governing the selection of jurors, but such challenge shall be made in writing setting forth the particular grounds upon which it is based and shall be filed prior to the swearing in of the jury selected to try the case.

(7) Except as to class 1 felonies, with respect to a twelve-person jury, if the court excuses a juror for just cause after the jury has retired to consider its verdict, the court in its discretion may allow the remaining eleven jurors to return the jury’s verdict.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 400, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-506. L. 72: p. 268, § 6. L. 86: (1) amended, p. 769, § 3, effective July 1. L. 91: (4) amended, p. 405, § 7, effective June 6. L. 94: (1) amended and (7) added, p. 1716, § 5, effective July 1.

Cross references: For similar provisions concerning the right to trial by jury, see Crim. P. 23.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Criminal Procedure”, which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with the right to a jury trial, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 1982 (1985).

Annotator’s note. For other annotations concerning the right to trial by jury, see § 23 of art. II, Colo. Const., and Crim. P. 23.

Although there is a statutory right to a unanimous verdict in criminal cases in Colorado, the state constitution does not explicitly guarantee the right to a unanimous verdict. Nevertheless, there are some cases in which the jury may return a general verdict of guilty when instructed on alternative theories of principal and complicitor liability and in which the state constitution has provided a criminal defendant the right to a unanimous jury verdict. People v. Hall, 60 P.3d 728 (Colo. App. 2002).

Subsection (1) of this section and Crim. P. 23, which provide for six jurors in misdemeanor cases, are constitutional under § 23 of art. II of the Colorado Constitution. People v. Rodriguez, 112 P.3d 693 (Colo. 2005).

Jury to have at least six persons. One accused of a noncapital felony or class 1 misdemeanor who elects, pursuant to subsection (4), to be tried by a jury of less than 12 persons may not be tried by a jury of less than six persons. People ex rel. Hunter v. District Court, 634 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1981); People v. Byerley, 635 P.2d 542 (Colo. 1981).

Right to waive trial by jury is substantive in nature. Garcia v. People, 200 Colo. 413, 615 P.2d 698 (1980).

Even though subsection (2) fails to provide a procedure for waiving a jury trial in class 1 felonies, because the criminal defendant has a substantive right to waive a jury trial, the lack of a waiver procedure does not prohibit the waiver right of the criminal defendant. People v. Cisneros, 720 P.2d 982 (Colo. App. 1986).

Requirement of § 16-8-105 (2) that prosecution consent to waiver of jury in sanity trial applied to trial of defendant prosecuted for second degree murder rather than this subsequently enacted general statute which does not refer to prosecutor's consent to waiver of jury trial. People v. District Court, 731 P.2d 720 (Colo. 1987).

Colorado constitution does not afford criminal defendants the right to waive jury and be tried by the court. People v. District Court, 843 P.2d 6 (Colo. 1992); People v. District Court, 953 P.2d 184 (Colo. 1998).

A court exceeds its jurisdiction if it allows a defendant to waive his or her right to a jury trial over the objection of the district attorney based on defendant's claim that his due process rights would be violated by testifying and that he would be subject to impeachment about his past criminal convictions and his ties to drug use. It is not a due process violation to be subject to impeachment about prior criminal convictions; the choice to testify or not is part of adversarial trial process and does not create an unfair trial for the defendant. People v. McKeel, 246 P.3d 638 (Colo. 2010).

In construing the provisions of subsection (2) with § 16-10-101, requiring the prosecution to consent to waiver of jury trial, due process compels conclusion that prosecution alone cannot compel trial by jury where defendant may not receive a fair trial. People v. District Court, 843 P.2d 6 (Colo. 1992).

The right to a 12-person jury is purely statutory. The sixth and fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution guarantee the right to trial by jury, but do not, nor does the Colorado Constitution, guarantee the right to a 12-person jury. People v. Chavez, 791 P.2d 1210 (Colo. App. 1990).

Constitutional right to a jury of 12 lies only with felony cases and does not extend to misdemeanor cases. A defendant in a misdemeanor case does not have a constitutional right under art. II, § 23, of the Colorado Constitution to demand a 12-person jury. People v. Rodriguez, 112 P.3d 693 (Colo. 2005).

The statutory right to a 12-person jury could be waived by counsel's statements. The requirement that a defendant must make a written or oral "announcement" of his intention to waive a jury does not extend to a reduction in the number of jurors. People v. Chavez, 791 P.2d 1210 (Colo. App. 1990).

Allotment of right to select mode of trial made in unequivocal terms. When the general assembly has allotted to one party only, such as the accused in a criminal proceeding, the right to select the appropriate mode of trial, it has done so in unequivocal terms. S.A.S. v. District Court, 623 P.2d 58 (Colo. 1981).

Subsection (2) and Crim. P. 23(a)(5) are not reconcilable and directly conflict with each other because the rule provides an additional requirement not present in subsection (2), that the prosecutor's consent must be obtained as a condition before a defendant's oral request to waive his right to a jury trial may be allowed. Garcia v. People, 200 Colo. 413, 615 P.2d 698 (1980).

Subsection (2) controls over Crim. P. 23(a)(5). Garcia v. People, 200 Colo. 413, 615 P.2d 698 (1980).

Defendants voluntarily waived jury. Where, when the jury was assembled in the courtroom ready for trial, defendants' counsel orally announced that defendants had decided to waive their right to a jury trial, and the court inquired of each defendant if that was their desire and both indicated in the affirmative, and as a further precaution, the court then insisted that a written waiver of jury trial be prepared and be signed by each defendant and their counsel, which was done, it will be presumed that defendants understandingly, voluntarily, and deliberately decided to waive the jury. People v. Fowler, 183 Colo. 300, 516 P.2d 428 (1973).

Waiver precludes defendant's complaint that judge rules on evidence and renders verdict. Where the defendant voluntarily and with advice of counsel waived a jury trial, defendant in such circumstances cannot be heard to complain when he creates a situation which necessarily makes the trial judge both the one who decides the admissibility of evidence and the one who renders the verdict. People v. Thompson, 182 Colo. 198, 511 P.2d 909 (1973).

Judge attempted to use office to force defendant to waive right. When the trial judge couples his intervention into plea negotiations with threats of a longer sentence if the defendant goes to trial and is found guilty, he has attempted to use his office to force the defendant to waive his right to a jury trial or be penalized for exercising this constitutionally guaranteed right. People v. Clark, 183 Colo. 201, 515 P.2d 1242 (1973).

Applied in People v. Lichtenstein, 630 P.2d 70 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jones, 631 P.2d 1132 (Colo. 1981).

18-1-407. Affirmative defense. (1) "Affirmative defense" means that unless the state's evidence raises the issue involving the alleged defense, the defendant, to raise the issue, shall present some credible evidence on that issue.

(2) If the issue involved in an affirmative defense is raised, then the guilt of the defendant must be established beyond a reasonable doubt as to that issue as well as all other elements of the offense.

Cross references: For the affirmative defense of impaired mental condition, see §§ 16-8-103.5 and 18-1-803; for other provisions concerning affirmative defenses generally, see §§18-1-710 and 18-1-805; for affirmative defenses to particular crimes, see specific criminal provisions in articles 2 through 15 of this title.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 49 Den. L. J. 137 (1972). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For article, "Choice of Evils in Colorado", see 18 Colo. Law. 1117 (1989). For article, "Self-Defense in Colorado", see 24 Colo. Law. 2717 (1995).

Choice of evils is affirmative defense covered by this section. People v. Strock, 42 Colo. App. 404, 600 P.2d 91 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981); People v. Brandyberry, 812 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1990).

As is impaired mental condition. The issue of responsibility due to an impaired mental condition is an affirmative defense. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

Duress is affirmative defense. Bailey v. People, 630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981).

Justification is recognized as an affirmative defense to the charge of speeding but the defendant must present credible evidence as to the specific threat of injury and the lack of a reasonable alternative other than commission of the offense. People v. Dover, 790 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1990).

Heat of passion is affirmative defense. People v. Harris, 797 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1990).

The defense of alibi is not an affirmative defense and therefore no special instructions are necessary to inform the jury of the prosecution's burden to prove a defendant alleged to have committed an offense did commit that offense. People v. Huckleberry, 768 P.2d 1235 (Colo. 1989).

Because the defendant's tendered instruction improperly suggested that alibi was an affirmative defense, the trial court properly refused to give the tendered instruction based on People v. Huckleberry, 768 P.2d 1235 (Colo. 1989); however, the question of whether the trial court properly refused the instruction does not resolve the issue of whether the trial court erred in failing to provide a theory of the case instruction. People v. Nunez, 841 P.2d 261 (Colo. 1992).

Court, not jury, must determine whether affirmative defense is raised. People v. Fincham, 799 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1990).

When an exception is included in a statutory section defining the elements of the offense, it is usually the burden of the prosecution to prove the exception does not apply. However, when an exception is found in a separate clause or is clearly disconnected from the definition of the offense, it is the defendant's burden to claim it as an affirmative defense. People v. Reed, 932 P.2d 842 (Colo. App. 1996).

When an affirmative defense is raised by the defendant, the prosecution must prove each element of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt in addition to disproving beyond a reasonable doubt the affirmative defense. People v. Fincham, 799 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1990); Vega v. People, 893 P.2d 107 (Colo. 1995).

Jury instruction which is in conflict with the legislative intent of this section should not be used. People v. Rex, 689 P.2d 669 (Colo. App. 1984).

Instructions containing erroneous statements of law which improperly relegated to the jury the function of determining whether an affirmative defense was an issue in a case and which had the effect of relieving the prosecution of its burden of proof were at odds with standard jury instructions on affirmative defenses. Lybarger v. People, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Insanity is an affirmative defense to a crime. Once any credible evidence of insanity is introduced the prosecution bears the burden of proving the defendant's sanity beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Serravo, 823 P.2d 128 (Colo. 1992).

By the plain meaning of subsection (2), only when some credible evidence supports an affirmative defense is the prosecution required to disprove it as though it were another element of the defense. In the absence of express statutory language to the contrary, the threshold determination as to whether some credible evidence exists to support an affirmative defense is a matter of law for the court to decide. People v. Hill, 934 P.2d 821 (Colo. 1997).

Under subsection (2), a defendant has not "raised the issue" of the affirmative defense of insanity, in the sense that it has become an issue for consideration by the factfinder, until the court determines credible evidence on that issue has been presented. People v. Hill, 934 P.2d 821 (Colo. 1997).

Lawful possession of marihuana under § 18-18-406 (10) is an affirmative defense to charges of unlawful possession with intent to distribute marihuana and unlawful possession of eight or more ounces of marihuana. The provision provides a legal justification to what would otherwise be criminally culpable behavior. People v. Reed, 932 P.2d 842 (Colo. App. 1996).

To present an affirmative defense for abandonment to the jury, defendant must present

“some credible evidence” on the issue of the claimed defense. It is not necessarily the case, however, that the defense of abandonment is not available once defendant has injured the victim. O’Shaughnessy v. People, 2012 CO 9, 269 P.3d 1233.

Applied in People v. Villa, 43 Colo. App. 284, 605 P.2d 481 (1979); People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981)(justified physical force for disciplinary purposes as affirmative defense in child abuse prosecution); People v. Traubert, 625 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1981)(renunciation and abandonment as affirmative defense in prosecution for attempted second degree burglary); People v. Smith, 623 P.2d 404 (Colo. 1981); People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981); People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981); Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983); People v. Quintana, 665 P.2d 605 (Colo. 1983); People v. Turner, 680 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Huckleberry, 738 P.2d 17 (Colo. App. 1986).

18-1-408. Prosecution of multiple counts for same act. (1) When any conduct of a defendant establishes the commission of more than one offense, the defendant may be prosecuted for each such offense. He may not be convicted of more than one offense if:

(a) One offense is included in the other, as defined in subsection (5) of this section; or
(b) One offense consists only of an attempt to commit the other; or
(c) Inconsistent findings of fact are required to establish the commission of the offenses; or

(d) The offenses differ only in that one is defined to prohibit a designated kind of conduct generally and the other to prohibit a specific instance of such conduct; or

(e) The offense is defined as a continuing course of conduct and the defendant’s course of conduct was uninterrupted, unless the law provides that specific periods or instances of such conduct constitute separate offenses.

(2) If the several offenses are actually known to the district attorney at the time of commencing the prosecution and were committed within the district attorney’s judicial district, all such offenses upon which the district attorney elects to proceed must be prosecuted by separate counts in a single prosecution if they are based on the same act or series of acts arising from the same criminal episode. Any offense not thus joined by separate count cannot thereafter be the basis of a subsequent prosecution; except that, if at the time jeopardy attaches with respect to the first prosecution against the defendant the defendant or counsel for the defendant actually knows of additional pending prosecutions that this subsection (2) requires the district attorney to charge and the defendant or counsel for the defendant fails to object to the prosecution’s failure to join the charges, the defendant waives any claim pursuant to this subsection (2) that a subsequent prosecution is prohibited.

(3) When two or more offenses are charged as required by subsection (2) of this section and they are supported by identical evidence, the court upon application of the defendant may require the state, at the conclusion of all the evidence, to elect the count upon which the issues shall be tried. If more than one guilty verdict is returned as to any defendant in a prosecution where multiple counts are tried as required by subsection (2) of this section, the sentences imposed shall run concurrently; except that, where multiple victims are involved, the court may, within its discretion, impose consecutive sentences.

(4) When a defendant is charged with two or more offenses based on the same act or series of acts arising from the same criminal episode, the court, on application of either the defendant or the district attorney, may order any such charge to be tried separately, if it is satisfied that justice so requires.

(5) A defendant may be convicted of an offense included in an offense charged in the indictment or the information. An offense is so included when:

(a) It is established by proof of the same or less than all the facts required to establish the commission of the offense charged; or

(b) It consists of an attempt or solicitation to commit the offense charged or to commit an offense otherwise included therein; or

(c) It differs from the offense charged only in the respect that a less serious injury or risk of injury to the same person, property, or public interest or a lesser kind of culpability suffices to establish its commission.

(6) The court shall not be obligated to charge the jury with respect to an included offense unless there is a rational basis for a verdict acquitting the defendant of the offense charged and convicting him of the included offense.

(7) If the same conduct is defined as criminal in different enactments or in different sections of this code, the offender may be prosecuted under any one or all of the sections or enactments subject to the limitations provided by this section. It is immaterial to the prosecution that one of the enactments or sections characterizes the crime as of lesser degree than another, or provides a lesser penalty than another, or was enacted by the general assembly at a later date than another unless the later section or enactment specifically repeals the earlier.

(8) Without the consent of the prosecution, no jury shall be instructed to return a guilty verdict on a lesser offense if any juror remains convinced by the facts and law that the defendant is guilty of a greater offense submitted for the jury's consideration, the retrial of which would be barred by conviction of the lesser offense.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 400, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-508. L. 85: (3) amended, p. 661, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: (2) amended, p. 1049, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2000: (8) added, p. 452, § 6, effective April 24.

Cross references: For the sentencing of a defendant convicted of multiple crimes of violence arising out of the same incident, see § 18-1.3-406 (1)(a).

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Joinder and Election of Offenses.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Illustrative Cases.
- III. Lesser Included Offenses.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Legal Standard.
 - C. Jury Instructions.
 - D. Finding of Lesser Included Offenses.
 - E. Find Not Lesser Included Offense.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "By Leave of Court First Had", see 8 Dicta 14 (June 1931). For note, "Larceny, Embezzlement, and False Pretenses in Colorado — A Need for Consolidation", see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 446 (1951). For article, "Joinder of Criminal Charges, Election, Duplicity", see 30 Dicta 117 (1953). For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For article, "Criminal Procedure", which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with the failure to instruct or lessen included offense, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 191 (1985). For comment, "Diverging Views on the Merger of Criminal Offenses: Colorado Has Veered Off Course", see 66 U. Colo. L. Rev. 523 (1995). For article, "Lesser Included and Nonincluded Offenses and Jury Instructions", see 25 Colo. Law. 35 (June 1996).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-408 is similar to former § 39-3-4, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutional limitations. Insofar as this section is concerned, a defendant may be prosecuted for each offense that he allegedly commits, with certain well-defined limitations. The limitations are primarily those embodied within the constitutional concepts of double jeopardy, amendment V, U.S. Const., and § 18 of art. II, Colo. Const., impermissible joinder, and the doctrine of collateral estoppel. People v. Pinyan, 190 Colo. 304, 546 P.2d 488 (1976).

This section does not conflict with the double jeopardy clause of the United States Constitution. People v. Salas, 189 Colo. 111, 538 P.2d 437 (1975).

Notions of double jeopardy were the underpinnings of this statute. People v. District Court, 183 Colo. 101, 515 P.2d 101 (1973).

A defendant's double jeopardy rights are not violated when the court sentences a defendant to consecutive sentences based on separate incidents involving the same victim. People v. Shepard, 98 P.3d 905 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section does not apply to municipal code violations. The compulsory joinder bar has no application when the initial prosecution is in a municipal court for a municipal ordinance violation and the later prosecution is in a state court for state offenses based on different conduct but arising out of the same criminal episode as the ordinance violation. People v. Wright, 742 P.2d 316 (Colo. 1987); Priday v. People, 742 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1987).

As long as the criminal episode which is the basis for the municipal code violations and the state offenses gives rise to separate offenses, each of which requires proof of a fact which the other does not, the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy is not violated. People v. Wright, 742 P.2d 316 (Colo. 1987).

Compulsory joinder provisions extend further than constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy. Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981); Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983); People v. Taylor, 732 P.2d 1172 (Colo. 1987).

Statutory language of this section clearly recognizes that a district attorney's authority to initiate a criminal prosecution is limited to crimes committed within the geographical district served by the district attorney. People v. Taylor, 732 P.2d 1172 (Colo. 1987).

Term "judicial district", as used in this section, means that the offenses must have been committed within the same judicial district in which the accused has previously been subjected to a completed prosecution. People v. Taylor, 732 P.2d 1172 (Colo. 1987).

More than one felony conviction may be based upon same occurrence without running afoul of either federal or state double jeopardy prohibitions. People v. Opson, 632 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1980).

A defendant may be convicted for multiple offenses arising out of a single transaction if the defendant has violated more than one statute. People v. Martinez, 640 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1981).

That conduct may give rise to more than one offense is irrelevant so long as the offenses have not merged for purposes of double jeopardy. People v. Miller, 199 Colo. 32, 604 P.2d 36 (1979).

A single transaction that violates two criminal statutes may generally be prosecuted under either. People v. Fowler, 183 Colo. 300, 516 P.2d 428 (1973).

Subsection (3) requires the trial court to impose concurrent sentences, if two or more charged offenses arise from the same criminal episode. People v. Montanez, 944 P.2d 529 (Colo. App. 1996).

A court must impose concurrent sentences on crimes that are based upon identical evidence. The evidence supporting the attempted sexual assault was not identical to evidence for kidnapping, therefore, the court had discretion to impose consecutive sentences for the two crimes. People v. McAfee, 160 P.3d 277 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court did not err in determining that the prosecution was not required to elect between two counts of first degree burglary since each of the two counts consisted of different elements that were proved by evidence of different conduct, there were multiple victims, and, even if two counts were supported by identical evidence, defendant received concurrent sentences, thereby meeting the requirements of subsection (3). People v. Montanez, 944 P.2d 529 (Colo. App. 1996).

Prosecutor determines under which statute to proceed. A single transaction may give rise to the violation of more than one statute, and in such a situation it is a proper function of the prosecutor to determine under which of the statutes he wishes to prosecute. People v. James, 178 Colo. 401, 497 P.2d 1256 (1972).

Enactment of a specific criminal statute does not preclude prosecution under a general criminal statute unless a legislative intent to limit prosecution to the special statute is shown. People v. James, 178 Colo. 401, 497 P.2d 1256 (1972); People v. Tippet, 733 P.2d 1183 (Colo. 1987).

In a situation where a single transaction violates two criminal statutes, it is the proper function of the district attorney to determine under which of the statutes, he wishes to prosecute. People v. Fowler, 183 Colo. 300, 516 P.2d 428 (1973).

Prosecution under the general burglary statutes was precluded where the defendant's actions violated the specific provisions of criminal offenses included in the Limited Gaming Act of 1991. Because the Act invokes the full extent of the state's police powers, creates a comprehensive and thorough regulatory scheme to control limited gaming, and specifically defines criminal offenses related to gambling both in the Act and in sections reproduced verbatim in this title, the general assembly adequately demonstrated its intention that conduct violating the specific limited gaming provisions be prosecuted under those provisions only. People v. Warner, 930 P.2d 564 (Colo. 1996).

A defendant does not impliedly waive his right to rely upon the statute and rule by entering a plea of guilty in a county court case with knowledge that the district court case is pending. People v. Robinson, 774 P.2d 884 (Colo. 1989).

The right to imposition of concurrent sentences applies equally to a conviction arising from a trial or one arising from the entry and acceptance of a guilty plea. Construing statute to allow the imposition of a more severe sentence for a guilty plea than for a conviction resulting from trial would likely raise constitutional concerns. Juhl v. People, 172 P.3d 896 (Colo. 2007).

Right to compulsory joinder may be waived by raising the issue after jeopardy attaches in the second prosecution. People v. Wilson, 819 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1991).

"Single prosecution", as used in this section, means those proceedings from the commencement of the criminal action until further prosecution is barred. People v. District Court, 183 Colo. 101, 515 P.2d 101 (1973); Ruth v. County Court, 198 Colo. 6, 595 P.2d 237 (1979).

Where there are two separate and distinct offenses which violate the laws of two different jurisdictions, each offense must be prosecuted in the jurisdiction where the respective criminal acts occurred and neither offense could be tried in the court of the other jurisdiction.

People v. Pinyan, 190 Colo. 304, 546 P.2d 488 (1976).

Prosecution in both municipal and state systems not precluded. This section does not preclude prosecution in both municipal and state systems for crimes arising from the same criminal episode, at least in situations where there was no counterpart to the municipal offense under state law. People v. Talarico, 192 Colo. 445, 560 P.2d 90 (1977).

Where there was no knowledge or participation by the district attorney in the decision to prosecute different offenses in both the municipal and state systems, this section does not apply. People v. Talarico, 192 Colo. 445, 560 P.2d 90 (1977); Blum v. County Court, 631 P.2d 1191 (Colo. App. 1981).

Guilty plea to related charge bars subsequent prosecution. Crim. P. 8(a) and this section bar the prosecution of a defendant for two pending charges arising out of a single criminal episode after the defendant has pleaded guilty and has been sentenced for a third related charge. Ruth v. County Court, 198 Colo. 6, 595 P.2d 237 (1979).

The denial of a motion to dismiss for failure to comply with this section is appealable. County Court v. Ruth, 194 Colo. 352, 575 P.2d 1 (1977).

Concurrent sentence does not affect fines for separate counts. Although the defendant is concurrently sentenced, this has no effect on individual fines for separate counts. People v. Blair, 195 Colo. 462, 579 P.2d 1133 (1978).

Defendant's multiple convictions arise from crimes committed upon different victims and, therefore, evidence is not identical and prohibition against consecutive sentences in this section is not applicable. People v. Wafai, 713 P.2d 1354 (Colo. App. 1985), aff'd, 750 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1988) (decided under law in effect prior to 1985 amendment); People v. Grant, 30 P.3d 667 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd on other grounds, 48 P.3d 543 (Colo. 2002); People v. O'Dell, 53 P.3d 655 (Colo. App. 2001).

When determining whether to sentence two crimes of violence consecutively or concurrently in relation to § 16-11-309, the determining factor is whether the evidence supporting the convictions is identical. If the evidence supporting the convictions is not identical, the sentences are consecutive. People v. Jurado, 30 P.3d 769 (Colo. App. 2001).

The test for identical evidence is an evidentiary test rather than an elemental test. The court of appeals incorrectly interpreted "identical evidence" to entail an analysis of the evidence necessary to prove the elements of the offenses charged, rather than what evidence supports the conviction. Juhl v. People, 172 P.3d 896 (Colo. 2007).

Convictions not based upon identical evidence. Kidnapping occurred at a different time and in a different place than the sexual assault. People v. Glasser, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Because the evidence supporting the convictions for conspiracy and solicitation was identical, concurrent sentencing was required even though the crime of solicitation requires proof of inducement and conspiracy requires proof of an agreement and an act in furtherance thereof. The convictions here were based on the same acts: The planning by the members of the group to rob the home of the victim and the performance of that robbery. People v. Le, 74 P.3d 431 (Colo. App. 2003).

Convictions for first degree assault and vehicular assault were supported by identical evidence because both convictions were based on one distinct act rather than multiple acts separated by time or place. Consequently, pursuant to the mandate in subsection (3), the trial court lacked the authority to impose consecutive sentences where the convictions were supported by identical evidence. Juhl v. People, 172 P.3d 896 (Colo. 2007).

By waiving the establishment of a factual basis for the added second degree assault charge, defendant also waived right to rely on subsection (3). If defendant wanted to ensure that all of the sentences imposed pursuant to the plea bargain would be subject to concurrent sentencing mandate of subsection (3), defendant could have rejected any plea agreement that called for guilty pleas to multiple charges or by rejecting any plea agreement that did not include a stipulation for concurrent sentences. People v. Maestas, 224 P.3d 405 (Colo. App. 2009).

Unless multiple victims are involved, concurrent sentences are required where two or more convictions are based upon the same act or series of acts arising from the same criminal episode and the evidence supporting the counts is identical. People v. Farrell, 10 P.3d 672 (Colo. App. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 34 P.3d 401 (Colo. 2001).

Even though identical evidence is used for multiple convictions of felony murder and attempted aggravated robbery, the court may impose consecutive sentences because there were two separate victims involved. People v. Laurson, 15 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 2000).

Thus, where multiple victims are involved, the court may, within its discretion, impose consecutive sentences. People v. Trujillo, 114 P.3d 27 (Colo. App. 2004).

The mere possibility that the jury may have relied on identical evidence in returning more than one conviction is not sufficient to trigger the mandatory concurrent sentencing provision. There was sufficient evidence for the trial court to conclude that the two acts were sufficiently separate to justify consecutive sentencing. The mandatory concurrent sentencing provision is only implicated when the evidence supports no conclusion that the charges are based on identical evidence. People v. Muckle, 107 P.3d 380 (Colo. 2005) (overruling People v. Page, 907 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1995)).

Prosecutor not required to select specific instances of sexual assault on which the state would rely when there were numerous counts of sexual assault on a child. People v. Elinger, 754 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1987).

Court could properly impose consecutive sentences for multiple sexual exploitation convictions since the crime recognizes that each sexually exploitive image of a child constitutes a discrete act of victimization of the child. People v. Rabes, 258 P.3d 937 (Colo. App. 2010).

Conduct that violates a specific provision of the liquor code may only be filed under the penal provisions specifically provided by said code. People v. Bagby, 734 P.2d 1059 (Colo. 1987).

When the jury could have relied on identical evidence to support separate charges, and the record provides no basis to determine that each charge is supported by separate evidence, subsection (3) requires concurrent sentencing. People v. Brown, 119 P.3d 486 (Colo. App. 2004).

Imposition of concurrent or consecutive sentences lies in trial court's discretion if the multiple counts are not supported by identical evidence. People v. Fincham, 799 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing consecutive sentences where the conspiracy conviction was not based on the same evidence as the robbery convictions. People v. Sweeney, 78 P.3d 1133 (Colo. App. 2003).

Consecutive sentencing was proper for convictions of first degree sexual assault, second degree kidnapping, and second degree assault committed against one victim when evidence establishing each charge was not identical for purposes of subsection (3) and when taking into account the gravity of defendant's conduct toward both victims. People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2001).

When multiple victims are involved, court has discretion to impose consecutive sentences. People v. Hogan, 114 P.3d 42 (Colo. App. 2004).

More than one felony conviction may be based upon same occurrence. People v. Ball, 813 P.2d 759 (Colo. App. 1990).

When an identical act gives rise to multiple charges, the court must impose concurrent sentences for convictions on the multiple charges. People v. Blankenship, 30 P.3d 698 (Colo. App. 2000); People v. Dotson, 55 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2002).

Because defendant could not be convicted of first degree assault without proof that he committed a class 3 felony sexual assault under § 18-3-202 (1)(d), the latter offense was a lesser included offense of the first degree assault charge and he could not, therefore, be convicted of both offenses. People v. Moore, 860 P.2d 549 (Colo. App. 1993).

Court can deny request to include lesser included offense instruction where the record does not present any evidence leading to a rational basis for acquitting a defendant of the greater offense and convicting him or her of the lesser offense. People v. Cardenas, 25 P.3d 1258 (Colo. App. 2000).

A defendant may be convicted of more than one offense arising out of a single incident if the defendant has violated more than one statute. People v. Moore, 877 P.2d 840 (Colo. 1994); People v. Marquez, 107 P.3d 993 (Colo. App. 2004).

Assaults committed within a relatively short period of time did not constitute a continuing course of conduct. Each incident constituted a separate offense and the charges were not multiplicitous. People v. Quintano, 81 P.3d 1093 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd, 105 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2005).

Applied in People v. Hauschel, 37 Colo. App. 114, 550 P.2d 876 (1976); People v. Bielecki, 41 Colo. App. 256, 588 P.2d 377 (1978); People v. Hanes, 42 Colo. App. 527, 596 P.2d 395 (1978); People v. Taylor, 197 Colo. 161, 591 P.2d 1017 (1979); People v. Roberts, 43 Colo. App. 100, 601 P.2d 654 (1979); People v. Hardin, 199 Colo. 229, 607 P.2d 1291 (1980); People v. Scott, 615 P.2d 680 (Colo. 1980); People v. Knaub, 624 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Riddick, 626 P.2d 641 (Colo. 1981); People in Interest of R.G., 630 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Clerkin, 638 P.2d 808 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Williams, 651 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1982); People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982); People v. Williams, 654 P.2d 319 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Castro, 657 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1983); People v. Lowe, 660 P.2d 1261 (Colo. 1983); People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983); People v. Hepler, 665 P.2d 627 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Santisteven, 693 P.2d 1008 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Clements, 732 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Avila, 770 P.2d 1330 (Colo. App. 1988).

II. JOINDER AND ELECTION OF OFFENSES.

A. In General.

Offenses defined in terms of general and specific conduct. Subsection (1)(d) of this section is intended to deal with situations where the offenses themselves are defined in terms of general and specific kinds of conduct. People v. Miller, 199 Colo. 32, 604 P.2d 36 (1979).

Statutory elements to be satisfied to bar subsequent prosecution. This section can be broken down into the following elements, all of which must be satisfied in order for the bar to apply to a subsequent prosecution: (1) Several offenses committed within the same judicial district; (2) a prosecution against the offender; (3) prosecutorial knowledge of the several offenses at the commencement of the prosecution; (4) the several offenses arising from the same criminal episode; and (5) the offender previously having been subjected to a single prosecution. Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981); People v. Garcia, 735 P.2d 897 (Colo. App. 1986); Williamsen v. People, 735 P.2d 176 (Colo. 1987).

Test for "same criminal episode" under this section should be identical to the standard for joinder under Crim. P. (8)(a). Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981).

The term "same criminal episode" contemplates a joinder standard sufficiently broad to include offenses committed within the same unit of time at the same location, irrespective of whether these offenses are otherwise related to each other by some underlying unity of purpose or scheme. Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

Factors to consider when making the determination as to whether a series of acts arose from the same criminal episode include whether the physical acts were committed simultaneously or in close sequence, whether they occurred in the same place or closely related places, and whether they formed part of a schematic whole. Where the two incidents occurred at different times, at different places, with different victims, and under different circumstances and were not part of any schematic whole, it can be concluded that the two offenses did not arise from the same criminal episode. People v. Garcia, 735 P.2d 897 (Colo. App. 1986).

Test must be interpreted to include the condition that the offenses be connected in such a manner that prosecution of the offenses involve substantially interrelated proof. People v. Rogers, 742 P.2d 912 (Colo. 1987); People v. Miranda, 754 P.2d 377 (Colo. 1988); People v. Patrick, 773 P.2d 575 (Colo. 1989).

Where a six-day interval existed between the distribution, possession, and conspiracy offenses charged in the separate prosecutions and where there were other factual differences relating to the charges alleged in the separate prosecutions, proof of the offenses at issue involved evidence substantially different from the evidence underlying the former prosecution. People v. Miranda, 754 P.2d 377 (Colo. 1988).

Where the seizure of drugs from defendant's car occurred after defendant was arrested on an outstanding warrant and the car was impounded and inventoried, the drug possession charge did not arise from the same criminal episode as the speeding charges which were the initial cause for which defendant was stopped. People v. Herr, 868 P.2d 1121 (Colo. App. 1993).

Charges against the defendant were based on identical evidence when the defendant engaged in a continuous attack of the victim and there was no break in the time and change in circumstances between the inflicted wounds. People v. DeBoer, 829 P. 2d 447 (Colo. App. 1991).

The compulsive joinder rule did not bar subsequent prosecution for drug possession arising from the discovery of drugs in defendant's car where the district attorney was not involved in disposing of the original traffic infraction in county court. People v. Herr, 868 P.2d 1121 (Colo. App. 1993).

Required before dismissal. Trial court must determine extent to which two prosecutions would burden defendant with repetitive proof before it could dismiss for violation of compulsory joinder statute. People v. Rogers, 742 P.2d 912 (Colo. 1987).

The compulsory joinder bar of subsection (2) is applicable even though it might have been one of a series of criminal acts committed in several judicial districts as part of a single criminal episode. People v. Taylor, 732 P.2d 1172 (Colo. 1987).

Because § 42-4-1505.3 clearly contemplates separate trials and hearings where separate complaints alleging traffic infractions and crimes are filed, and the district attorney does not participate in the decision to "prosecute" traffic infractions, the compulsory joinder statute does not apply. Williamsen v. People, 735 P.2d 176 (Colo. 1987).

Section permitting joinder of offenses is a declaration of the common law on the subject of joinder of counts in one indictment. Bergdahl v. People, 27 Colo. 302, 61 P. 228 (1900).

This section permits the joinder of crimes or offenses which may be properly joined as consistent with the common-law rule upon the subject. At common law, disconnected and independent felonies might not be properly joined. White v. People, 8 Colo. App. 289, 45 P. 539 (1896).

This section is in reality but an embodiment of a well established principle of the common law, and is no broader than was that rule unless it be in the consolidation of causes, and confers no greater power than that enjoyed and exercised prior to the enactment of the statute. Cummins v. People, 4 Colo. App. 71, 34 P. 734 (1893).

Subsection (2) was adapted from the model penal code, section 108 (2). People v. Tulipane, 192 Colo. 476, 560 P.2d 94 (1977).

The purpose of subsection (2) was to prevent the bringing of successive prosecutions based upon essentially the same conduct. People v. Tulipane, 192 Colo. 476, 560 P.2d 94 (1977);

Brutcher v. District Court, 195 Colo. 579, 580 P.2d 396 (1978).

The evil which subsection (2) was designed to cure was harassment of the defendant by means of multiple prosecution for the same act. People v. Cooke, 186 Colo. 44, 525 P.2d 426 (1974); People v. Tulipane, 192 Colo. 476, 560 P.2d 94 (1977).

The concern of the general assembly in enacting this section was not an insufficient number of charges, but rather duplicitous charges which charge in the same count two or more separate offenses. People v. Cooke, 186 Colo. 44, 525 P.2d 426 (1974).

The purpose of the joinder statute is to "prevent vexatious prosecution and harassment of a defendant by a district attorney who initiates successive prosecutions for crimes which stem from the same criminal episode". Subsequent prosecution is permissible when the statute by its terms does not apply. County Court v. Ruth, 194 Colo. 352, 575 P.2d 1 (1977); Ruth v. County Court, 198 Colo. 6, 595 P.2d 237 (1979).

The purposes of compulsory joinder are to protect the accused against the oppressive effect of sequential prosecutions based on conduct occurring during the same criminal episode and to conserve judicial and legal resources that otherwise would be wasted in duplicative proceedings. Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981).

Compulsory joinder broader than "same offense" principle or collateral estoppel. The compulsory joinder requirement of subsection (2) of this section is broader than both the "same offense" principle of double jeopardy as codified in § 18-1-301 and the collateral estoppel effect of a prior determination of an ultimate fact as outlined in § 18-1-302. Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981).

Attachment of jeopardy triggers bar of subsection (2). Jeopardy attaches upon the court's acceptance of a plea of guilty, and the attachment of jeopardy is what triggers the statutory bar of subsection (2). Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981).

Compulsory joinder claim is waived if the defendant fails to raise the issue prior to the time at which jeopardy attaches in the second prosecution. People v. Bossert, 722 P.2d 998 (Colo. 1986); People v. Carey, 198 P.3d 1223 (Colo. App. 2008).

Compulsory joinder defense not waived. Where compulsory joinder defense was not available when prosecution of felony offense was initiated because second charge had not been filed, defendant did not waive compulsory joinder claim when he failed to raise issue within twenty days after arraignment on felony charge. People v. Rogers, 742 P.2d 912 (Colo. 1987).

Compulsory joinder section provides no exceptions to requirement of a single multiple-count prosecution. A juvenile faced with a misdemeanor charge and related traffic charges committed as part of the same act or series of acts should be afforded the protection of the compulsory joinder statute despite the fact that under the juvenile code a juvenile court has no authority to try traffic charges when such charges are the sole basis for a delinquency petition. Marquez v. County Court, 719 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1986).

Several counts based on one transaction proper. It was not error to consolidate two informations upon the statement of the district attorney that the several counts in the two informations referred to the same transaction, and where the evidence showed that such was the case. Short v. People, 27 Colo. 175, 60 P. 350 (1900).

Several cognate offenses growing out of the same transaction may be charged in separate counts in the same indictment or information. Roland v. People, 23 Colo. 283, 47 P. 269 (1896).

A single transaction may give rise to the violation of more than one statutory provision, and in such a situation separate offenses are perpetrated, each of which may be subject to prosecution. Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 413, 484 P.2d 110 (1971).

Since a dismissal of a felony complaint by a county court does not bar further prosecution, this statute does not prohibit the filing of a direct information joining any or all offenses arising from a criminal episode. People v. District Court, 183 Colo. 101, 515 P.2d 101 (1973).

Where the acts involved were committed at the same time or in immediate succession and at the same place, they arose out of the same criminal episode; therefore, it is appropriate to include the separate counts in a single information. People v. McGregor, 635 P.2d 912 (Colo. App. 1981).

All offenses alleged must be alleged in separate counts. Subsection (2) does not provide that all offenses upon which the prosecution desires to proceed must be alleged, but rather that all offenses which the district attorney does allege must be alleged in separate counts. People v. Cooke, 186 Colo. 44, 525 P.2d 426 (1974).

State's amendment to information adding charge of sale of narcotic drugs to conspiracy charge complied with provision which requires that all offenses against defendant be "prosecuted by separate counts in a single prosecution". People v. Wright, 678 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1984).

Each count must charge a distinct offense. When separate counts are charged in the same indictment, each count, to be valid, must be independent of the others, and in itself charge the defendant with a different and distinct offense. Roland v. People, 23 Colo. 283, 47 P. 269 (1896).

Not more than one offense should be charged in one count. Sweek v. People, 85 Colo. 479, 277 P. 1 (1929).

Duplicity in an indictment means the charging of two or more separate and distinct offenses in one count, not the charging of a single offense into which several related acts enter as ways and means of accomplishing the purpose. Leyba v. People, 174 Colo. 1, 481 P.2d 417 (1971).

Exception made in cases of embezzlement over period of time. Under this section an indictment which charges a clerk of the district court with failure to pay over a large number of jury and witness fees amounting to several thousand dollars is not defective as charging a number of offenses in one count because the fees were collected by him at various times in small amounts, nor because part of it was collected during each of three different appointments under which he acted in discharge of his official duties. Adams v. People, 25 Colo. 532, 55 P. 806 (1898).

It is proper for the prosecution in a charge of embezzlement to lump several items into one count of an information and to try them as a single transaction. Gill v. People, 139 Colo. 401, 339 P.2d 1000 (1959).

When counts may not be joined. Wherever the felonies are separate and distinct, are not provable by the same evidence, and have been committed at different times, so that they cannot be deemed to result from the same series of acts, they may not be joined in one indictment; and, if several indictments be found, the court cannot consolidate the causes. Cummins v. People, 4 Colo. App. 71, 34 P. 734 (1893).

If the actions or transactions covered by the information are so connected together as to bring them within the provisions of this section the same should be charged in separate counts of the information. If, on the other hand, they were separate, distinct, and disconnected acts and transactions, they should be charged in separate and distinct informations or indictments. Trask v. People, 35 Colo. 83, 83 P. 1010 (1905).

This section is undoubtedly clear as to the joinder of charges growing out of the same transaction or transactions that are connected; however, "transactions of the same class of crimes or offenses, which may be properly joined", presents a debatable question when a felony and misdemeanor are joined. Eckhardt v. People, 126 Colo. 18, 247 P.2d 673 (1952).

A motion to dismiss will lie. Upon a motion to quash the information interposed at the close of the state's case, at which time it appeared from the evidence that several offenses had been charged in one count, it is error not to sustain the motion. Trask v. People, 35 Colo. 83, 83 P. 1010 (1905).

The question of whether or not an information is duplicitous must be presented either by motion to quash or demurrer, and in limine.

Critchfield v. People, 91 Colo. 127, 13 P.2d 270 (1932).

Duplicity may be overcome by election of district attorney. If an information is duplicitous the defect is overcome where the district attorney in his opening statement elects to proceed on one specific charge. Critchfield v. People, 91 Colo. 127, 13 P.2d 270 (1932).

It is improper to include distinct offenses in the same indictment, and either in the case of duplicity or of misjoinder of counts, if objection is made in apt time, the court will in the one case quash the indictment, and in the other compel the prosecutor to elect on which count he will proceed. White v. People, 8 Colo. App. 289, 45 P. 539 (1896).

Subsection (3) relates to court's discretionary power requiring prosecutor to elect between multiple counts. Subsection (3) relates to the discretionary power of the trial court, upon motion of the defendant at the conclusion of all of the evidence, to require the prosecution to elect between multiple counts when they are supported by identical evidence. People v. Anderson, 187 Colo. 171, 529 P.2d 310 (1974).

Motion to compel election. A motion to compel a prosecutor to elect upon which count in an indictment he will proceed, when such indictment contains more than one count, each charging a felony, is a matter addressed to the discretion of the trial court. Roberts v. People, 11 Colo. 213, 17 P. 637 (1888).

Compelling election is discretionary with the court. Sarno v. People, 74 Colo. 528, 223 P. 41 (1924).

Motions to compel the prosecutor to elect upon which of several counts of a criminal information he will proceed are addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Smaldone v. People, 102 Colo. 500, 81 P.2d 385 (1938).

A motion to require the district attorney to elect upon which of two counts relating to the same transaction he desired to proceed generally is addressed to the sound discretion of the court. Sanders v. People, 109 Colo. 243, 125 P.2d 154 (1942); People v. Heller, 698 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 712 P.2d 1023 (Colo. 1986).

Defendant's remedy, in cases where two sections overlap and evidence is identical, is to move for an election as between counts as provided for by this section; and if no such application is filed, he is limited to the remedy of concurrent sentencing. People v. Blair, 195 Colo. 462, 579 P.2d 1133 (1978).

Knowledge and actions of deputies and assistants imputed to district attorney. Deputies and assistant district attorneys function only by virtue of the district attorney's authority, and their knowledge and official actions are imputed to the district attorney for purposes of the compulsory joinder statute. Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

Power of court to protect accused in this regard. When the evidence in this case disclosed that the defendant was being prosecuted under two counts for distinct and different felonies, the court should have interposed sua sponte to protect him from being tried and convicted upon both counts together. Not to do so was reversible error. White v. People, 8 Colo. App. 289, 45 P. 539 (1896).

Prosecutor need not elect where different counts properly joined. Where different counts are properly joined in a criminal information, the prosecutor is not obliged to elect one upon which he will proceed to trial. Smaldone v. People, 102 Colo. 500, 81 P.2d 385 (1938).

Prosecutor may go to jury on both counts. Where a criminal information embraces two counts, one for larceny and the other for receiving stolen goods, the same evidence being admissible to support both charges, the prosecutor is not required to elect, but may go to the jury on both. Smaldone v. People, 102 Colo. 500, 81 P.2d 385 (1938).

Or request jury be instructed verdict of guilt is returnable on one count only. Where two counts were based upon the same transaction, counsel may request the court to instruct the jury that a verdict of guilty could be returned on only one of the counts. Sanders v. People, 109 Colo. 243, 125 P.2d 154 (1942).

While a conviction on joined counts of confidence game and false pretenses predicated upon the same transaction cannot necessarily stand, the question is solved where the trial court instructs the jury that, if it finds the defendant guilty of confidence game it cannot find him guilty of false pretenses; that if it finds him guilty of false pretenses it cannot find him guilty of confidence game; and if it finds him guilty of conspiracy to commit one of the foregoing felonies, it cannot find him guilty of conspiracy to commit the other. Small v. People, 173 Colo. 304, 479 P.2d 386 (1970).

Subsection (3) requires concurrent sentences only where the counts of which the accused was convicted were supported by identical evidence. People v. Anderson, 187 Colo. 171, 529 P.2d 310 (1974); Qureshi v. District Court, 727 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1986); People v. Ellinger, 754 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Johnson, 74 P.3d 349 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Le, 74 P.3d 431 (Colo. App. 2003).

If, under the discretionary authority of subsection (3), the trial court chooses not to require the prosecution to elect, and the defendant is convicted on multiple counts based on identical evidence, then "the sentences imposed must run concurrently". People v. Anderson, 187 Colo. 171, 529 P.2d 310 (1974); People v. Tivis, 727 P.2d 392 (Colo. App. 1986).

The trial court has discretion to impose consecutive or concurrent sentences when a defendant is convicted of multiple offenses. Such authority is not affected by this section unless the crimes are supported by identical evidence. People v. Dixon, 950 P.2d 686 (Colo. App. 1997).

Evidence supporting different crimes is considered identical for purposes of this section when the same act or acts gave rise to both charges. People v. Dixon, 950 P.2d 686 (Colo. App. 1997).

No requirement that sentences run concurrently. Where the offenses for which a defendant are convicted are not based on the same act or series of acts arising from the same criminal episode, there is no requirement that the sentences for each offense run concurrently. People v. Early, 692 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1984); Qureshi v. District Court, 727 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1986).

Inapplicable to different theories of same crime. Subsection (3) applies only to cases charging several different offenses, and not to the various theories of first-degree murder. People v. Bowman, 669 P.2d 1369 (Colo. 1983).

Consecutive sentencing for same transaction improper. When the burglary and the larceny involve one transaction, typical of many burglary-larceny situations, consecutive, double sentencing for the same transaction is inherently wrong and basically unjust and evades the legislative intent. Maynes v. People, 169 Colo. 186, 454 P.2d 797 (1969). But see Trujillo v. Patterson, 266 F. Supp. 901 (D. Colo. 1966), aff'd per curiam, 389 F.2d 1003 (10th Cir. 1967).

Consecutive sentences for burglary and for larceny are improper. Maes v. People, 169 Colo. 200, 454 P.2d 792 (1969).

But consecutive sentences proper for multiple offenses occurring during one continuous criminal episode where offenses, although involving some common elements of proof, were nevertheless separate and distinct, and required proof of different facts to establish their disparate elements. People v. Martinez, 36 P.3d 154 (Colo. App. 2001).

Consecutive sentences may be imposed when the crimes require proof of different elements and are supported by different evidence. People v. Russom, 107 P.3d 986 (Colo. App. 2004).

Concurrent sentences are not prejudicial. The denial of a motion to compel election might constitute prejudicial error, but where the sentences run concurrently, there was no prejudice. Sanders v. People, 109 Colo. 243, 125 P.2d 154 (1942).

Law depends on facts in each particular case. The law relating to joinder and severance and that which permits consolidation of charges depends on the facts in each particular case. Hunter v. District Court, 193 Colo. 308, 565 P.2d 942 (1977).

Applicability to proceedings against juvenile. When a court has jurisdiction to entertain criminal proceedings against a juvenile under § 19-1-104(4)(b)(II), any additional charges arising out of the same act or series of acts can and must be prosecuted in that same action, even though they do not rise to the seriousness of class 3 felonies. People v. Jiminez, 651 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1982).

Compulsory joinder section provides no exceptions to requirement of a single multiple-count prosecution. A juvenile faced with a misdemeanor charge and related traffic charges committed as part of the same act or series of acts should be afforded the protection of the compulsory joinder statute despite the fact that under the juvenile code a juvenile court has no authority to try traffic charges when such charges are the sole basis for a delinquency petition. Marquez v. County Court, 719 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1986).

Where multiple convictions are erroneously entered based on identical evidence, the appropriate remedy is to sustain the conviction that gives maximum effect to the jury's verdicts and vacate the duplicate convictions. People v. Denton, 91 P.3d 388 (Colo. App. 2003).

Where defendant is convicted of multiple counts arising out of the same incident, but proof of each count was not based on identical evidence, the imposition of consecutive sentences was appropriate. People v. Jiron, 796 P.2d 499 (Colo. App. 1990).

This section is designed to protect an accused defendant from an oppressive second trial and to preserve judicial and legal resources. People v. McCormick, 859 P.2d 846 (Colo. 1993).

By extending the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy, this section establishes the specific circumstances under which a subsequent prosecution may be barred. People v. McCormick, 859 P.2d 846 (Colo. 1993).

This section contains five elements which must be satisfied before a subsequent prosecution is barred: (1) The offenses must have been committed in the same judicial district; (2) there must be a prosecution against the offender; (3) the prosecutor must have had knowledge of the several offenses at the commencement of the prosecution; (4) the offenses must have arisen out of the same criminal episode; and (5) the offender must have been previously subjected to a single prosecution. People v. McCormick, 859 P.2d 846 (Colo. 1993); Zipse v. County Ct. for Jefferson County, 917 P.2d 331 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Allen, 944 P.2d 541 (Colo. App. 1996).

In determining whether the third element has been met, the focus should be on prosecutorial knowledge at the commencement of the jeopardy phase of the criminal prosecution. People v. McCormick, 859 P.2d 846 (Colo. 1993).

This section does not bar a subsequent prosecution where the attorney had no knowledge and does not participate in the decision to prosecute the different offenses. People v. McCormick, 859 P.2d 846 (Colo. 1993); People v. Allen, 944 P.2d 541 (Colo. App. 1996).

For a subsequently charged offense to be properly barred, the offense must have been ready for prosecution prior to the first trial, in addition to the district attorney having knowledge of the offense. People v. McCormick, 859 P.2d 846 (Colo. 1993).

Wife's authority as a private party to seek contempt sanctions for violation of a restraining order was independent of district attorney's authority to file criminal charges. Contempt of court proceeding and prosecution for criminal trespass and misdemeanor menacing, therefore, were not subject to compulsory joinder pursuant to this section. People v. Allen, 944 P.2d 541 (Colo. App. 1996).

Absent contrary evidence, fact that police officers issue separate summonses and complaints for multiple misdemeanors or petty offenses arising out of the same criminal episode provides no basis in fact or law to impute the knowledge of the separate offenses to the district attorney. Zipse v. County Ct. for Jefferson County, 917 P.2d 331 (Colo. App. 1996).

B. Illustrative Cases.

Count for murder and one for manslaughter may be tried together. Where the first count of an indictment was for murder and the second for manslaughter, it was held that the prosecutor might proceed to trial upon both counts at the same time, and that he could not properly be required to elect upon which count he would rely, so long as it appeared from the evidence that the two counts related to the same transaction. Kelly v. People, 17 Colo. 130, 29 P. 805 (1892).

Counts for burglary, larceny, and related offenses. One indictment may contain a count for burglary and one for larceny. Parker v. People, 13 Colo. 155, 21 P. 1120 (1889).

An information charging defendants in separate counts with breaking ore from certain mines with intent to steal, and with removing ore from the same premises with intent to defraud, was properly consolidated for trial with an information charging the same defendants in separate counts with larceny and receiving stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen, where both informations and both counts in each information refer to one and the same transaction and constitute but one offense. Bergdahl v. People, 27 Colo. 302, 61 P. 228 (1900).

The stealing of several articles of property at the same time and place as one continuous transaction may be prosecuted as a single offense, although the several articles belonged to several owners. Sweck v. People, 85 Colo. 479, 277 P. 1 (1929).

Rape and assault to commit rape. When relating to the same transaction, completed rape and an assault to commit that offense rightly may be charged in separate counts of the same information. Abeyta v. People, 112 Colo. 195, 147 P.2d 481 (1944).

Joinder of count for assault on child under 16 with count for contributing to juvenile delinquency was proper. Warren v. People, 121 Colo. 118, 213 P.2d 381 (1949).

Two separate counts charging perjury were properly joined in one indictment where the two counts were admittedly based upon the same facts, and such facts would render defendants guilty under both sections. People v. Swanson, 109 Colo. 371, 125 P.2d 637 (1942).

Marijuana possession and motor vehicle offenses. Where a charge of possession of a marijuana concentrate involves an act which occurs at practically the same time and in the same place as the offenses of speeding and driving under the influence, the marijuana charge arises out of the "same criminal episode" as those other offenses for purposes of the compulsory joinder statute. Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

Concealed weapon and possession of controlled substance. Where a defendant enters a plea of guilty to a concealed weapons charge, the trial court can later dismiss a charge of possession of a controlled substance which arises out of the same criminal episode when the police and district attorney, through a field test, had probable cause to believe that the capsules seized contained barbiturates and when they could have and should have learned of the specific identity of the capsules prior to the time of the first preliminary hearing. People v. Deschamp, 662 P.2d 171 (Colo. 1983).

Second degree kidnapping and violation of custody. Where charges resulted from long family dispute and defendants took their children from guardians who had legal custody, trial court abused its discretion in not requiring district attorney to elect one charge or in not instructing jury that it could find defendants guilty of only one offense. People v. Tippet, 733 P.2d 1183 (Colo. 1987).

Court did not abuse its discretion by not requiring election between kidnapping and violation of custody where, in contrast with Tippet case, defendant never attempted to contact police or child welfare agency, never initiated proceeding to obtain custody, and apparently was motivated only by a desire to punish his former wife for the marital dissolution. People v. Metcalf, 926 P.2d 133 (Colo. App. 1996).

Second degree kidnapping and second degree kidnapping involving sexual assault are not separate offenses; therefore this section held not to apply. People v. Henderson, 810 P.2d 1058 (Colo. 1991); Lewis v. People, 261 P.3d 480 (Colo. 2011).

Either the crime of first degree sexual assault or the crime of sexual assault on a child, depending on the facts of the case, is necessarily a lesser included offense of second degree kidnapping including sexual assault. Defendant's conviction for at least one of such sexual assault crimes must merge into the defendant's conviction for second degree kidnapping including sexual assault. Because the two sexual assault crimes are not lesser included crimes of each other, and because the sexual assault elements in the kidnapping conviction are satisfied by proof of either of the sexual assault crimes, the defendant's conviction for only one of the sexual assault crimes must be vacated. People v. Henderson, 794 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1990).

There can be only one conviction for first degree murder when there is only one victim. People v. Fincham, 799 P. 2d 419 (Colo. App. 1990).

Convictions may not be entered for both second degree murder and first degree felony murder when there is only one victim. People v. Driggers, 812 P.2d 702 (Colo. App. 1991).

Defendant cannot be convicted of both felony murder and aggravated robbery when felony murder conviction is based upon offense of aggravated robbery. People v. Driggers, 812 P.2d 702 (Colo. App. 1991).

Defendant may not be simultaneously convicted of felony murder and the felony on which the felony murder conviction rests. Where a defendant is convicted of multiple felonies, all of which are alleged as the legal predicates for the commission of felony murder, only that felony that most directly contributes to the death of the victim should be vacated. People v. Huynh, 98 P.3d 907 (Colo. App. 2004).

Convictions for aggravated motor vehicle theft and attempted aggravated robbery are factually and legally inconsistent. People v. James, 981 P.2d 637 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion to elect between second degree murder and second degree assault. The two offenses are separate offenses having different elements, and in any event, the court sentenced defendant to concurrent sentences as required by subsection (3). People v. Fry, 74 P.3d 360 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 92 P.3d 970 (Colo. 2004).

III. LESSER-INCLUDED OFFENSES.

A. In General.

Burden on defendant not enough to make constructive notice unconstitutional. It is true that a prosecution's use of the lesser included offense doctrine places some burden upon a defendant to determine the specific charges that have been made against him. This fact, in itself, however, is not enough to make the constructive notice that is embodied in the greater charge unconstitutional. The effectiveness of many constitutional rights of an accused depends upon the self-initiative of the accused. People v. Cooke, 186 Colo. 44, 525 P.2d 426 (1974).

Defendant presumed on notice that he or she can be convicted of lesser included offense. The provisions of this section and Crim. P. 31(c) are embodiments of the rule at common law that a defendant was presumed to be on notice that he or she could be convicted of the crime charged or a lesser offense included therein. If this presumption of notice can be said to satisfy the sixth amendment guarantees of notice, the prosecution's right to an instruction on an offense necessarily included within the offense charged must be upheld. People v. Cooke, 186 Colo. 44, 525 P.2d 426 (1974).

One count may incorporate another count by reference. People v. Incerto, 180 Colo. 928, 505 P.2d 1309 (1973).

A defendant cannot be convicted of more than one offense if one offense is a lesser included offense of the other. People v. Hancock, 186 Colo. 30, 525 P.2d 435 (1974); People v. Martinez, 640 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Ball, 813 P.2d 759 (Colo. App. 1990); Armintrout v. People, 864 P.2d 576 (Colo. 1993); People v. Moore, 877 P.2d 840 (Colo. 1994); People v. Fisher, 904 P.2d 1326 (Colo. App. 1994); Litwinsky v. Zavaras, 132 F. Supp. 2d 1316 (D. Colo. 2001).

The rule of merger in Colorado treats an offense as lesser included when proof of the essential elements of the greater offense necessarily establishes the elements required to prove the lesser offense. Armintrout v. People, 864 P.2d 576 (Colo. 1993); Boulies v. People, 770 P.2d 1274 (Colo. 1989); Litwinsky v. Zavaras, 132 F. Supp. 2d 1316 (D. Colo. 2001).

The lesser included offense "merges" into the conviction of the greater offense, and the defendant cannot be separately punished for it. Litwinsky v. Zavaras, 132 F. Supp. 2d 1316 (D. Colo. 2001).

When defendant is convicted of multiple lesser included offenses, the court must vacate the conviction of the offense that most directly relates to the elements of the greater offense. People v. Halstead, 881 P.2d 401 (Colo. App. 1994).

When the trial court must vacate a conviction among multiple convictions, the court should enter as many convictions and impose the longest sentences that are legally possible to fully effectuate the jury's verdict. People v. Glover, 893 P.2d 1311 (Colo. 1995) (standard established subsequent to the decision in People v. Halstead annotated above).

Jury not required to acquit defendant of offense charged in order to consider lesser nonincluded offenses. People v. Skinner, 825 P.2d 1045 (Colo. App. 1991).

B. Legal Standard.

In determining whether an offense is a lesser included offense of another, a court applies the strict comparison of the elements test, comparing the elements of the statutes involved. People v. Rivera, 186 Colo. 24, 525 P.2d 431 (1974); People v. Chapman, 192 Colo. 322, 557 P.2d 1211 (1977); People v. Martinez, 640 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Ball, 813 P.2d 759 (Colo. App. 1990); Patton v. People, 35 P.3d 124 (Colo. 2001); Litwinsky v. Zavaras, 132 F. Supp. 2d 1316 (D. Colo. 2001); People v. Griffith, 58 P.3d 1111 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Delci, 109 P.3d 1035 (Colo. App. 2004); People v. Tallwhiteman, 124 P.3d 827 (Colo. App. 2005).

The test requires a comparison of the elements, not the evidence presented on those elements. Armintrout v. People, 864 P.2d 576 (Colo. 1993); People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994); People v. Delci, 109 P.3d 1035 (Colo. App. 2004).

"Evidentiary test" in determining what is a lesser included offense is that an offense is lesser included when the evidence of the two crimes, as shown at trial, establishes the elements of the lesser offense. People v. Rivera, 186 Colo. 24, 525 P.2d 431 (1974).

Statutory test better view and will be applied. The better view is that the statutes, and not the evidence, must establish the essential elements of the lesser included offense. In other words, in determining whether an offense is lesser included, the statutory test, which mandates that the greater offense must establish every essential element of the lesser included offense, will be applied. People v. Rivera, 186 Colo. 24, 525 P.2d 431 (1974).

Because the statutory test is easily and more uniformly applied and a defendant is entitled to fair notice of the charges against him, the only reasonable method of ensuring such notice is the statutes that set forth the constituent elements. It would be haphazard and unfair to say to a defendant that he must defend on the principal charge and any other charge that the evidence established. People v. Rivera, 186 Colo. 24, 525 P.2d 431 (1974).

The test to determine whether a lesser crime is included within a greater is: If the greater of two offenses includes all the legal and factual elements of the lesser, the greater includes the lesser; but if the lesser offense requires the inclusion of some necessary element not so included in the greater offense, the lesser is not necessarily included in the greater. People v. Futamata, 140 Colo. 233, 343 P.2d 1058

(1959); Howard v. People, 173 Colo. 209, 477 P.2d 378 (1970); People v. Velasquez, 178 Colo. 264, 497 P.2d 12 (1972); People v. Ellinger, 754 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Ager, 928 P.2d 784 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Ortiz, 155 P.3d 532 (Colo. App. 2006).

The “statutory elements test” is described as: If proof of the facts establishing the statutory elements of the greater offense necessarily establishes all of the elements of the lesser offense, the lesser offense is included for the purposes of subsection (5)(a). If, however, each offense necessarily requires proof of at least one additional fact that the other does not, the test is not satisfied. People v. Leske, 957 P.2d 1030 (Colo. 1998); People v. Griffith, 58 P.3d 1111 (Colo. App. 2002).

The test to be applied to determine whether there are two offenses or only one is whether each provision requires proof of a fact that the other does not. Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 413, 484 P.2d 110 (1971); People v. Wieckert, 191 Colo. 511, 554 P.2d 688 (1976), overruled on other grounds in Villafranca v. People, 194 Colo. 472, 573 P.2d 540 (1978).

An offense is included within another if it is impossible to commit one offense without also committing the other, or if the only difference between the charges is in the degree of mens rea required or in the severity of the injury inflicted by the criminal conduct. People v. Martinez, 640 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1981).

Greater offense includes a lesser offense when the establishment of the essential elements of the greater necessarily establishes all of the elements required to prove the lesser. People v. Chapman, 192 Colo. 322, 557 P.2d 1211 (1977).

It is the character of the evidence that must control in determining whether the lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit rape can stand alone or fall on acquittal of forcible rape. Miera v. People, 164 Colo. 254, 434 P.2d 122 (1967).

C. Jury Instructions.

A court should instruct a jury on a lesser included offense only when there is a rational basis, warranted by the evidence, for acquitting the defendant of the greater offense and convicting him or her of the lesser. People v. Hansen, 191 Colo. 175, 551 P.2d 710 (1976); People v. Bowers, 42 Colo. App. 467, 600 P.2d 95 (1979); People v. Lahr, 200 Colo. 425, 615 P.2d 707 (Colo. 1980); Bowers v. People, 617 P.2d 560 (Colo. 1980); People v. Nhan Dao Van, 681 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1984); People v. Bustos, 725 P.2d 1174 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Ramirez, 18 P.3d 822 (Colo. App. 2000); People v. Griffith, 58 P.3d 1111 (Colo. App. 2002).

When a jury could entertain a reasonable doubt of a defendant’s guilt of a greater offense, and simultaneously be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant’s guilt of a lesser included offense, the defendant is entitled to have the jury instructed on the lesser included offense. People v. Nhan Dao Van, 681 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1984); People v. Castro, 10 P.3d 700 (Colo. App. 2000).

A defendant is not entitled to an instruction on a lesser included offense unless there is some evidence that, if believed, would render the defendant guilty of the lesser included offense, rather than the specifically charged offense. Ortega v. People, 178 Colo. 419, 498 P.2d 1121 (1972).

Evidence must justify submission of lesser included offense to jury. The submission of a lesser degree or an included crime is justified only where there is some basis in the evidence for finding the accused innocent of the higher crime and yet guilty of the lower one. People v. Velasquez, 178 Colo. 264, 497 P.2d 12 (1972).

In determining whether a lesser nonincluded offense instruction is appropriate, a court should use the same legal standard used to determine whether a lesser included offense instruction is required. A lesser included offense instruction is required whenever there is a rational basis for the jury to acquit the defendant on the greater charge and convict on the lesser offense. People v. Moore, 902 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1994).

When prosecutor may obtain lesser included offense instruction. Mindful of the primacy of notice within the constitutional guarantee of due process of law and of the duty of the courts to safeguard this right, where the lesser included offense upon which the prosecution requested an instruction is easily ascertainable from the charging instrument and not so remote in degree from the offense charged that the prosecution’s request appears to be an attempt to salvage a conviction from a case that has proven to be weak, the prosecution may obtain a lesser included offense instruction over the defendant’s objection. People v. Cooke, 186 Colo. 44, 525 P.2d 426 (1974).

Before a lesser nonincluded offense may be submitted to a jury in a theory of the case instruction, there must be a rational basis for the jury to acquit the defendant of the offense charged and simultaneously find him guilty of the lesser offense. People v. Bustos, 725 P.2d 1174 (Colo. App. 1986).

A rational basis does not exist when the lesser offense instruction is inconsistent with defendant’s theory of defense. People v. Chavez, 190 P.3d 760 (Colo. App. 2007).

When the record failed to present any evidence that would lead to a rational basis for acquitting the defendant of the greater offense but convicting the defendant of the lesser offense, request to instruct jury on lesser included offense was properly denied. People v. Price, 969 P.2d 766 (Colo. App. 1998).

A criminal defendant who maintains his or her innocence at trial is not automatically barred from seeking jury instructions on a lesser included offense or on a related defense. If an instruction is given in that case, there must be a rational basis for it in the evidence presented at trial. After a review of the record, there was no rational basis in the evidence for the lesser included offense instruction or the voluntary intoxication instruction. Brown v. People, 239 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2010).

No error for trial court to fail to instruct jury on second and third degree criminal trespass as lesser offense of second degree burglary of a building since there was no rational basis for acquitting the defendant of the offense charged and convicting him of the included offense. People v. Romero, 694 P.2d 1256 (Colo. 1985).

It was not error for the trial court to refuse defendant's requested instruction that stated that false imprisonment was a lesser included offense of attempted second degree kidnapping since there was no rational basis, supported by the evidence, for acquitting the defendant of the greater offense charged and convicting him of the lesser included offense. People v. Arispe, 191 Colo. 555, 555 P.2d 525 (1976).

Subsection (8) prohibits the trial court to instruct the jury to return a guilty verdict on a lesser included offense without the prosecutor's consent if the jury has reached consensus as to the defendant's guilt but is deadlocked as to the degree of guilt. People v. Richardson, 184 P.3d 755 (Colo. 2008).

However, it does not prevent a jury from being presented with a verdict form that gives jurors the option of considering the charge and its lesser included offenses on an individual basis, and acquitting the defendant on some or all of them. People v. Richardson, 184 P.3d 755 (Colo. 2008).

Therefore, the verdict form that allowed the jurors to return a not guilty verdict only if they found defendant not guilty of first degree murder, second degree murder, manslaughter, and criminally negligent homicide was not required by subsection (8). People v. Richardson, 184 P.3d 755 (Colo. 2008).

Claim of innocence alone does not disentitle defendant to lesser included offense instruction. The instruction, however, must be supported by evidence at trial. There was no error in failing to instruct the jury on attempted first degree murder where victim's injuries were such that no rational jury could have found the shooter acted with anything but a premeditated intent to cause death. People v. Brown, 218 P.3d 733 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd, 239 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2010).

Instruction not required. Mere chance of the jury's rejection of uncontroverted testimony and conviction on a lesser charge does not necessitate an instruction on the lesser charge. People v. Campbell, 678 P.2d 1035 (Colo. App. 1983).

When the undisputed evidence clearly established the completed crime of second degree kidnapping, the trial court did not err in refusing to submit to the jury the defendant's instruction on the lesser offense of attempted second degree kidnapping. Apodaca v. People, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985).

Instruction on lesser offense when evidence supported conviction for greater offense. When the evidence supported a conviction for felony menacing, the fact that the trial court improperly submitted an instruction on misdemeanor menacing to the jury did not affect defendant's conviction for the lesser included offense of misdemeanor menacing. People v. Lahr, 200 Colo. 425, 615 P.2d 707 (1980).

Lesser offense instruction is properly refused when an element that distinguishes the greater offense from the lesser offense is uncontested. Defendant charged with aggravated robbery and felony murder was not entitled to lesser theft offense instruction because there was no evidence disputing the use of force against, and the killing of, the victim. People v. Villalobos, 159 P.3d 624 (Colo. App. 2006).

Error to refuse instruction on included offense. Where the evidence is sufficient to support a charge of assault with the intent to commit rape, and such as to justify a simultaneous acquittal of the charge of rape, refusal of a trial court to submit a verdict and instruction on assault with intent to commit rape is error. People v. Futamata, 140 Colo. 233, 343 P.2d 1058 (1959).

Trial court's refusal to give a lesser nonincluded offense instruction does not justify reversal if the court instructed on a comparable lesser nonincluded offense. People v. Rubio, 222 P.3d 355 (Colo. App. 2009).

Jury instruction that characterizes lesser nonincluded offenses as lesser included offenses is harmless error when jury does not convict defendant of any lesser nonincluded offenses. People v. Skinner, 825 P.2d 1045 (Colo. App. 1991).

D. Finding of Lesser Included Offenses.

For purposes of determining which of the underlying felonies constitutes the lesser included offense of felony murder, the felony that most directly contributes to the death of the victim should serve as the legal predicate for the felony murder conviction. Callis v. People, 692 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1984).

When conviction for felony murder is based upon kidnapping, conviction on the lesser included offense of kidnapping is precluded; however, defendant may be convicted on the separate crimes of kidnapping and first degree murder. People v. Fincham, 799 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1990); People v. McCormick, 881 P.2d 423 (Colo. App. 1994).

When conviction for felony murder was predicated on the death of a robbery victim, a simultaneous conviction for robbery is precluded. People v. Cook, 22 P.3d 947 (Colo. App. 2000).

Aggravated robbery within felony murder based on robbery victim's death. Where the defendant's conviction for felony murder is based upon the causation of the robbery victim's death during the course of the robbery, a charge of aggravated robbery of the same victim is a lesser included offense of the felony murder charge within the meaning of subsection (5)(c). People v. Raymer, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Rape within felony murder based on rape victim's death. Where first degree sexual assault victim is killed during the course of the assault, charge of first degree sexual assault is a lesser included offense of felony murder charge. People v. Horton, 683 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1984); Callis v. People, 692 P.2d 1045 (Colo. 1984); People v. Angelini, 706 P.2d 2 (Colo. App. 1985).

Under the circumstances present in the case, subsections (1)(a) and (5)(a) prohibit a judgment of conviction for attempted sexual assault in addition to a conviction for felony murder. People v. Blackmer, 888 P.2d 343 (Colo. App. 1994).

The predicate offenses for "felony" first degree assault under § 18-3-202 fit the statutory test for a lesser included offense. As such, the conviction of the predicate offense must merge into the conviction for "felony" first degree assault, even though the predicate offense is a more serious offense and carries a greater punishment. People v. Halstead, 881 P.2d 401 (Colo. App. 1994).

The trial court correctly merged defendant's conviction for first degree assault into one of his convictions for first degree sexual assault. People v. Cole, 926 P.2d 164 (Colo. App. 1996).

Since defendant could not be convicted of both felony assault and aggravated robbery (since commission of robbery is an element of the assault), the assault conviction, rather than the robbery conviction, should be vacated. People v. Fisher, 926 P.2d 170 (Colo. App. 1996).

Generally, the crimes of second degree murder and attempted second degree murder are, respectively, lesser included offenses of first degree murder or attempted first degree murder under any theory, and second degree murder is a lesser included offense of first degree murder by extreme indifference. Peo- ple v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

When jury convicted defendant of both extreme indifference murder and second degree murder and attempted murder, the trial court erred in applying the rule of lenity by vacating the more serious offenses instead of the lesser offenses. The proper course of action under such circumstances is to vacate the lesser offenses. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

Reckless endangerment is a lesser included offense of first degree assault with intent to cause serious bodily injury. People v. Tallwhiteman, 124 P.3d 827 (Colo. App. 2005).

Assault to rape is an included offense of the crime of rape, both include the necessary aggravated intent and both contain the element of assault. People v. Futamata, 140 Colo. 233, 343 P.2d 1058 (1959).

Unlawful sexual contact is a lesser included offense of sexual assault based on sexual intrusion. Proof of sexual intrusion requires proof of sexual contact with a person's intimate parts satisfying the strict elements test, and unlawful sexual contact involves less serious injury than sexual intrusion and lesser culpability than sexual assault. People v. Loyas, 259 P.3d 505 (Colo. App. 2010).

One who commits reckless driving necessarily has been guilty of careless driving, for the greater degree of negligence includes the lesser. People v. Chapman, 192 Colo. 322, 557 P.2d 1211 (1977).

In terms of subsection (5), careless driving "is established by proof of the same or less than all the facts required to establish ..." reckless driving. People v. Chapman, 192 Colo. 322, 557 P.2d 1211 (1977).

Reckless driving is a lesser included offense of vehicular eluding. People v. Pena, 962 P.2d 285 (Colo. App. 1997); People v. Esparza-Treto, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

Trial court erred when it failed to merge a conviction of reckless endangerment with a conviction for attempted first degree murder with extreme indifference. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

Assault, a predicate offense for first degree burglary, is a lesser included offense of first degree burglary. Therefore, the two counts merge. People v. Delci, 109 P.3d 1035 (Colo. App. 2004).

Attempt to induce child prostitution is a lesser included offense encompassed within the crime of inducement of child prostitution. People v. Hansen, 708 P.2d 468 (Colo. App. 1985).

Possession of an illegal weapon under § 18-12-102 (4) is a lesser included offense of possession of weapon by a previous offender under § 18-12-108 (1) when the same weapon is alleged in each charge. People v. Brown, 119 P.3d 486 (Colo. App. 2004).

In a case where the lesser included offense carries a higher penalty, the court must vacate the conviction carrying the lower penalty and impose the higher penalty in order to maximize the jury's verdict. People v. Delci, 109 P.3d 1035 (Colo. App. 2004).

E. Find Not Lesser Included Offense.

The crime of sexual assault on a child as part of a pattern of sexual abuse is not a lesser included offense of the crime of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust. In addition, neither of these are sentence enhancers for a person convicted of sexual assault on a child. All are separate crimes and each requires proof of facts not required by any of the others. People v. Valdez, 874 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1994).

Sexual assault on a child does not differ from sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust only in the respect that a less serious injury or risk of injury to the same person, property, or public interest or a lesser kind of culpability suffices to establish its commission. In fact, these offenses do not involve different degrees of culpability, injury, or risk of injury, but they do differ with respect to other elements. Because the offenses differ in ways other than those contemplated by subsection (5)(c), sexual assault on a child is not a lesser included offense of sexual assault by one in a position of trust. People v. Leske, 957 P.2d 1030 (Colo. 1998).

Conviction of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust does not encompass the offense of sexual assault on a child as a lesser included offense. Subsection (5)(a) does not require an "evidentiary test" for determining lesser included offenses. Instead, a "strict elements test", or a comparison of the statutory elements of the offenses in question, is required in order to determine whether an offense is lesser included. Applying this test, the language of sexual assault on a child offense requires that the victim be 15 years of age or younger, whereas the position of trust offense requires only that the victim be less than 18 years of age. Thus, each offense requires proof of a fact that the other does not, and sexual assault on a child is not a lesser included offense of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust. People v. Leske, 957 P.2d 1030 (Colo. 1998).

Second degree burglary not lesser included offense of first degree burglary because conviction of class 3 felony second degree burglary required proof of a fact beyond the proof required for first degree burglary, even though entry was made into only one condominium unit. People v. Ball, 813 P.2d 759 (Colo. App. 1990).

When defendant's burglary conviction for first degree burglary is vacated as to victim, defendant's conviction for third degree assault as to the same victim is not a lesser included offense and thus does not merge. People v. Fuentes, 258 P.3d 320 (Colo. App. 2011).

Burglary is an offense against property, and the general assembly intended the additional element of assault in the first degree burglary statute to modify and aggravate the offense of burglary and not to change the gravamen of the crime. People v. Fuentes, 258 P.3d 320 (Colo. App. 2011).

A single entry can support only one conviction of first degree burglary, even if multiple assaults occur. People v. Fuentes, 258 P.3d 320 (Colo. App. 2011).

Not error to impose consecutive sentences of 32 years for first degree assault and life sentence for murder. People v. Ager, 928 P.2d 784 (Colo. App. 1996).

Attempted first degree assault is not a lesser included offense of attempted first degree murder after deliberation. The use of a deadly weapon is an element of attempted assault in the first degree but not of attempted murder. People v. Petschow, 119 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2004).

Under former criminal code, assault with deadly weapon was not a lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit murder. People v. Rivera, 186 Colo. 24, 525 P.2d 431 (1974).

Heat of passion manslaughter is not a pure lesser included offense of either first or second degree murder because the greater inclusive offenses do not necessarily establish every essential element of this form of manslaughter. People v. Lewis, 676 P.2d 682 (Colo. 1984).

Attempted reckless manslaughter is not a lesser included offense of first degree assault with intent to cause serious bodily injury, because the fact that a defendant causes serious bodily injury to a person does not necessarily mean that he or she recklessly took a step toward causing the death of a person. People v. Tallwhiteman, 124 P.3d 827 (Colo. App. 2005).

Convictions do not merge when the elements required to be proven to convict defendant as a complicitor to an assault committed by another are not identical to those required to be proven to convict him of committing first degree assault as a principal. People v. Martinez, 1 P.3d 192 (Colo. App. 1999).

Second degree assault is not a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery because second degree assault requires proof of bodily injury and specific intent. People v. Dotson, 55 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2002).

Menacing is not a lesser included offense of second degree assault because the offenses differ with respect to both the culpability required and the injury or risk of the injury required. People v. Palmer, 944 P.2d 634 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 964 P.2d 524 (Colo. 1998).

Third degree assault not included in robbery. Third degree assault requires proof of bodily injury, an element not necessary to culpability under robbery; therefore, the former offense is not included within the latter. People v. Flores, 39 Colo. App. 556, 575 P.2d 11 (1977).

First degree criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of first degree burglary. However, it is a lesser nonincluded offense, and the trial court may instruct a jury on such offense over the objection of the defendant if the charging document provides notice that defendant might have to defend against that charge. People v. Satre, 950 P.2d 667 (Colo. App. 1997).

First degree criminal trespass is distinct from misdemeanor theft. People v. Martinez, 640 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1981).

When the essential elements of vehicular homicide are compared to those of criminally negligent homicide, it becomes clear that criminally negligent homicide is not a lesser included offense in a charge brought under § 18-3-106 (1)(b). People v. Nhan Dao Van, 681 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1984).

Reckless driving is not a lesser included offense of vehicular homicide and vehicular assault because reckless driving posed an additional risk of injury to other persons and property in the vicinity of the accident. People v. Clary, 950 P.2d 654 (Colo. App. 1997).

Eluding a police officer, as defined in § 42-4-1413, is not a lesser-included offense of vehicular eluding, as defined in § 18-9-116.5. People v. Fury, 872 P.2d 1280 (Colo. App. 1993) (decided prior to 1994 amendment relocating former § 42-4-1512 to § 42-4-1413); People v. Pena, 962 P.2d 285 (Colo. App. 1997); People v. Esparza-Treto, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

None of the elements of the offense of possession of drug paraphernalia are the same as those that relate to the charge of possession of a controlled substance, and thus a jury's finding that a defendant was guilty of the lesser offense would in no way tend to disprove the greater charge nor present a rational basis on which the jury could have chosen between them. People v. Bustos, 725 P.2d 1174 (Colo. App. 1986).

Possession of a controlled substance is not a lesser included offense of distribution of the same controlled substance. People v. Thurman, 948 P.2d 69 (Colo. App. 1997).

Information charging possession of narcotics with intent to sell was sufficient to advise the defendant that he must be prepared to controvert evidence of possession and to defend on that charge. Because possession is an essential element of possession with intent to sell, the defendant can scarcely claim surprise by the introduction of evidence establishing possession. People v. Cooke, 186 Colo. 44, 525 P.2d 426 (1974).

Rape and incest, as well as the other named kindred offenses, remain separate and distinct offenses. McGee v. People, 160 Colo. 46, 413 P.2d 901 (1966).

As do assault and kidnapping. The facts necessary to prove that the defendant was guilty of assault with a deadly weapon were not the same as those required to prove that the defendant was guilty of kidnapping. Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 413, 484 P.2d 110 (1971).

Sexual assault is not a lesser included offense of, and therefore not merged into, second degree kidnapping involving sexual assault. People v. Henderson, 810 P.2d 1058 (Colo. 1991); People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Ramirez, 140 P.3d 169 (Colo. App. 2005); Lewis v. People, 261 P.3d 480 (Colo. 2011).

Since reckless endangerment requires proof of an element that is not required to prove first degree assault on a peace officer, it is not a lesser included offense of such charge. The trial court did not err when it refused defendant's tendered jury instruction on reckless endangerment as a lesser included offense on that charge. People v. Delgado-Elizarras, 131 P.3d 1110 (Colo. App. 2005).

Arson is distinct from criminal mischief because each contains elements not required for the other. People v. Meyer, 952 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1997).

18-1-409. Appellate review of sentence for a felony. (1) When sentence is imposed upon any person following a conviction of any felony, other than a class 1 felony in which a death sentence is automatically reviewed pursuant to section 18-1.3-1201 (6), 18-1.3-1302 (6), or 18-1.4-102 (6), the person convicted shall have the right to one appellate review of the propriety of the sentence, having regard to the nature of the offense, the character of the offender, and the public interest, and the manner in which the sentence was imposed, including the sufficiency and accuracy of the information on which it was based; except that, if the sentence is within a range agreed upon by the parties pursuant to a plea agreement, the defendant shall not have the right of appellate review of the propriety of the sentence. The procedures to be employed in the review shall be as provided by supreme court rule.

(2) No appellate court shall review any sentence which is imposed unless, within forty-nine days from the date of the imposition of sentence, a written notice is filed in the trial court to the effect that review of the sentence will be sought; said notice must state the grounds upon which it is based.

(2.1) and (2.2) Repealed.

(3) The reviewing court shall have power to affirm the sentence under review, substitute for the sentence under review any penalty that was open to the sentencing court other than granting probation or other conditional release, or remand the case for any further proceedings that could have been conducted prior to the imposition of the sentence under review, and for resentencing on the basis of such further proceedings. No sentence in excess of the one originally imposed shall be given unless matters of aggravation in addition to those known to the court at the time of the original sentence are brought to the attention of the court during the hearing conducted under this section. If the court imposes a sentence in excess of the one first given, it shall specifically identify the additional aggravating facts considered by it in imposing the increased sentence.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 401, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-509. L. 76: (2) R&RE, p. 549, § 8, effective July 1. L. 79: (2.1) repealed and (2.2) R&RE, pp. 670, 672, §§ 17, 24, effective July 1; (1) amended, p. 675, § 2, effective August 1. L. 81: (2.2) repealed, p. 969, § 2, effective July 1. L. 91, 2nd Ex. Sess.: (1) amended, p. 14, § 2, effective September 20; (1) amended, p. 22, § 2, effective October 11. L. 93: (2) amended, p. 1460, § 4, effective June 6. L. 99: (1) amended, p. 799, § 21, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1) amended, p. 1510, § 179, effective October 1. L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: (1) amended, pp. 33, 34, §§ 29, 30, effective July 12. L. 2012: (2) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 862, § 102, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (2) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

Cross references: (1) For the supreme court rule concerning appellate review of felony sentences, see rule C.A.R. 4(c).

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1), see section 16 of chapter 1 of the supplement to the Session Laws of Colorado 2002, Third Extraordinary Session.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982).

The power to declare by statute what punishment may be assessed against those convicted of crime is legislative and not judicial. If the statute is not in violation of the constitution, then any punishment assessed by a court within the limits fixed thereby cannot be adjudged excessive. Walker v. People, 126 Colo. 135, 248 P.2d 287 (1952).

This section is constitutional. People v. Carter, 186 Colo. 391, 527 P.2d 875 (1974).

Not improper exercise of commutation reserved to executive. Appellate review of sentences by supreme court, before finality of judgment of conviction, as allowed by this section, is a proper judicial function and not an improper exercise of the power of commutation reserved to the executive department. People v. Carter, 186 Colo. 391, 527 P.2d 875 (1974).

This section is a constitutionally permitted expansion of appellate jurisdiction by the general assembly. People v. Carter, 186 Colo. 391, 527 P.2d 875 (1974).

And does not amount to a legislative grant of additional original jurisdiction to the supreme court. It is exactly what it expressly purports to be — an appellate review of sentencing — clearly within the jurisdiction of the supreme court under § 2 of art. VI, Colo. Const. People v. Carter, 186 Colo. 391, 527 P.2d 875 (1974).

This section sets the parameters for an appellate court's review of a defendant's sentence. People v. Williams, 916 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1996).

But this section does not limit sentencing following new trial, as opposed to remand after review of sentence. Where defendant did not seek a review of his sentence but, rather, appealed the judgment of conviction, this section did not bar sentencing of defendant as an habitual criminal. People v. Williams, 916 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1996).

This section does not preclude review of constitutional challenges. An eighth amendment challenge is of a different magnitude than a statutory challenge. The issue is not whether a particular sentence was a wise exercise of discretion, but whether it was so disproportionate as to constitute cruel and unusual punishment. People v. McCulloch, 198 P.3d 1264 (Colo. App. 2008).

Jurisdiction to review propriety of sentence. Neither the court of appeals nor the supreme court of Colorado has jurisdiction to review the propriety of a sentence except on direct appeal from the initial sentence and then only under the limitations established in § 18-1-409 and C.A.R. 4(c)(I). Mikkleson v. People, 199 Colo. 319, 618 P.2d 1101 (1980).

Good cause standard under C.A.R. 26(b) for an enlargement of time to file appeal encompasses the statutory deadline in this section. People v. Hill, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Propriety of imposing a consecutive sentence is reviewable on appeal under subsection (1) even though defendant's plea was subject to a sentencing cap. Review of the propriety of a sentence involves a review of the intrinsic fairness or appropriateness of the sentence itself taking into account the nature of the offense, the character of the offender, and the public interest. The question of whether the trial court was statutorily prohibited from imposing consecutive rather than concurrent sentences is not a matter of the intrinsic fairness or appropriateness of the sentence, but rather of whether the trial court exceeded its statutory authority in determining the sentence. Thus, subsection (1) does not preclude review of defendant's appeal. Juhl v. People, 172 P.3d 896 (Colo. 2007).

Filing of notice of appeal is jurisdictional prerequisite for appellate review of a lower court decision to deny a Crim. P. 35(a) motion. People v. Silvola, 198 Colo. 228, 597 P.2d 583 (1979); People v. Boesflug, 107 P.3d 1118 (Colo. App. 2004).

Review of denial of Crim. P. 35(b) motion. It is only in situations where the trial court has refused to consider any information in mitigation and does not make findings in support of its decision, that an error in denying a Crim. P. 35(b) motion is sufficient to invoke appellate jurisdiction. Mikkleson v. People, 199 Colo. 319, 618 P.2d 1101 (1980).

Only exception to rule that relief from sentence imposed lies only with executive. People v. Spann, 37 Colo. App. 152, 549 P.2d 427 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 193 Colo. 53, 561 P.2d 1268 (1977).

Mandates appellate court correction. This section not only permits but also directs the appellate court to mandate the correction of a sentence excessive in length, having due regard for the protection of the public interest, the nature of the offense, and the character of the offender as it relates to the probability of his rehabilitation. People v. Strong, 190 Colo. 189, 544 P.2d 966 (1976).

A sentencing hearing is a critical stage of a criminal proceeding. However, hearsay is admissible because of the substantial difference between the sentencing hearing and the trial itself. People v. Bruebaker, 189 Colo. 219, 539 P.2d 1277 (1975).

Sentencing decision should reflect rational selection from various sentencing alternatives in a manner consistent with the dominant aims of the sentencing process. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Proper and fair sentence is one that can be reasonably explained. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

A trial court has wide discretion in the imposition of a sentence. Rochon v. People, 134 Colo. 448, 306 P.2d 1080 (1957).

The choice of place of confinement is within the sound discretion of the court, just as is the length of term of imprisonment. People v. Weihs, 187 Colo. 124, 529 P.2d 317 (1974).

Of necessity the trial judge has wide latitude in imposing sentence. People v. Strong, 190 Colo. 189, 544 P.2d 966 (1976); People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980).

Sentencing by its very nature is a discretionary decision which requires the weighing of various factors and striking a fair accommodation between the defendant's need for rehabilitation or corrective treatment and society's interest in safety and deterrence. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

A sentencing judge has wide discretion in selecting the appropriate disposition. People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980).

The trial court has wide discretion in sentencing and, absent a finding of abuse of discretion, an appellate court will not substitute its judgment for that of the trial judge. People v. Madonna, 651 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1982).

Sentencing discretion reposes in court. It is the court, however, and not the probation department, in whom sentencing discretion is reposed. People v. Edwards, 198 Colo. 52, 598 P.2d 126 (1979).

Cause may be remanded for proper sentence. Where specifications of error principally stressed the question of whether punishment may be decreed properly for both rape and kidnapping offenses upon the theory that the evidence showed no more than a single continuous act, it was held that where sentence for kidnapping was excessive, the cause should be remanded to the district court for the imposition of a proper sentence for the kidnapping offense within the limits of the proper section. Abeyta v. People, 112 Colo. 49, 145 P.2d 884 (1944).

Or correction may be made in appellate court. An erroneous judgment of the district court sentencing one guilty of second degree murder to confinement in the penitentiary at hard labor for the remainder of his natural life may be corrected by appeal or other like proceeding in the appellate court. People ex rel. Best v. District Court, 115 Colo. 240, 171 P.2d 774 (1946).

Appellate court should not modify sentence imposed by trial judge unless record exhibits clear abuse of discretion by the trial judge in his determination. People v. Bruebaker, 189 Colo. 219, 539 P.2d 1277 (1975).

The supreme court of Colorado should not modify a sentence unless it appears that the trial court has failed to give appropriate consideration to both the needs of the defendant and those of society. People v. Cameron, 200 Colo. 279, 613 P.2d 1312 (1980).

Guidelines for appellate review. The appellate court's determination of whether a sentence is intrinsically unfair or excessive requires consideration of its propriety or fairness within the context of the nature of the offense, the character of the offender, and the public interest. People v. Piro, 671 P.2d 1341 (Colo. App. 1983).

Sentencing error where extraordinary aggravating circumstances not found. Judge erred in sentencing a 19-year old beyond the presumptive range because extraordinary aggravating circumstances justifying the sentence were not found even though the defendant was accused of committing five felonies in a nine-month period, including an arrest while on probation. People v. Jenkins, 674 P.2d 981 (Colo. App. 1983).

Guidelines for the determination of a sentence involve weighing several factors, including the nature of the offense, the character of the offender, rehabilitation of the defendant, the development of respect for law and deterrence of crime, and the protection of the public. People v. Bruebaker, 189 Colo. 219, 539 P.2d 1277 (1975); People v. Scott, 200 Colo. 402, 615 P.2d 35 (1980); People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980); People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980); People v. Magee, 626 P.2d 1139 (Colo. 1981).

In deciding what sentence is most appropriate, the trial judge must attempt to work out a fair accommodation between the need to protect society at large and to deter potential offenders, to punish the convicted offender, and to rehabilitate him. People v. Strong, 190 Colo. 189, 544 P.2d 966 (1976); People v. Cameron, 200 Colo. 279, 613 P.2d 1312 (1980).

The sentencing judge properly may consider the public interest in safety and deterrence in sentencing an offender, especially in crimes of serious personal violence. People v. Self, 200 Colo. 406, 615 P.2d 693 (1980).

Before imposing sentence, the trial court should consider the nature of the offense, the character of the offender, and the public interest in safety and deterrence. People v. Hunt, 632 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1981).

In reviewing the district court's imposition of sentence, the supreme court is to consider the following factors: The nature of the offense, the character of the offender, the public interest in safety and deterrence, and the sufficiency and accuracy of the information on which the sentence was based. People v. Mattas, 645 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1982).

Trial judge held to have properly considered evidence of the defendant's improved conduct while in prison, the nature of the offense, the character of the offender and the public interest in safety and deterrence in arriving at the decision to reduce the defendant's sentence. People v. Bridges, 662 P.2d 161 (Colo. 1983).

All factors to be considered in imposition of sentence. Although a sentencing court may consider a defendant's false testimony as probative of his rehabilitative potential, the fact that defendant may have lied under oath is insufficient justification, standing alone, to warrant the imposition of a maximum sentence. Equal weight must be given to all factors which comprise the goals of sentencing. People v. Wilson, 43 Colo. App. 68, 599 P.2d 970 (1979).

Although the absence of a prior felony conviction or significant criminal involvement, by itself, certainly may constitute a mitigating factor worthy of consideration, it is only one factor and is not conclusive on the sentencing decision. People v. Scott, 200 Colo. 402, 615 P.2d 35 (1980).

Sentence must be supported by reasons in record. In felony convictions involving the imposition of a sentence to a correctional facility, the sentencing judge must state on the record the basic reasons for the imposition of sentence. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Particularly where sentence involves restrictive form of deprivation. Requirement that sentencing judge state on the record the basic reasons for imposing a sentence is particularly essential in those cases where the sentence involves a very restrictive form of deprivation, such as a term of confinement to a correctional facility. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

A sentence for an extended term must be clearly justified in the record. People v. Scott, 200 Colo. 402, 615 P.2d 35 (1980); People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980).

Where a sentence of an extended duration is imposed, the record must establish a clear justification for the trial judge's action. People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980).

When sentence is within presumptive range without regard to crime of violence-bodily injury aggravator, defendant is not prejudiced by jury's finding that victim suffered bodily injury as to each count even though there was no evidence of bodily injury on one of the counts. People v. Anderson, 183 P.3d 649 (Colo. App. 2007).

Failure to state reasons creates obstacle to appellate review. The failure of a sentencing judge to state on the record the basic reasons for the selection of a particular sentence creates a burdensome obstacle to effective and meaningful appellate review of sentences. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Sentence may not be based on speculation. Speculation or conjecture regarding possible future facts is not accurate information upon which a sentence may be crafted. People v. Flower, 644 P.2d 64 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 658 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1983).

Consideration of trauma of witnesses is not proper factor. Any consideration of the trauma to the victims caused by their having to testify in determining the length of sentence would be error in light of defendant's fundamental right to require the prosecution to prove every element of the case. People v. Wilson, 43 Colo. App. 68, 599 P.2d 970 (1979).

In sentencing, the court's responsibility is to individualize a sentence and to tailor the sentence to fit the crime and the particular defendant who is before the court. People v. Bruebaker, 189 Colo. 219, 539 P.2d 1277 (1975).

Presentence investigation report should always be made part of record on appeal when review of the appropriateness of a sentence is sought. People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980).

Any imposition of the maximum or close to the maximum penalty must be supported by sound reasons in the record for a sentence that is too long tends to reenforce the criminal tendencies of the convicted defendant. People v. Strong, 190 Colo. 189, 544 P.2d 966 (1976); People v. Wilson, 43 Colo. App. 68, 599 P.2d 970 (1979).

A long sentence may sometimes be justified on the basis of the depravity of the crime for which the defendant has been convicted. People v. Strong, 190 Colo. 189, 544 P.2d 966 (1976).

Where a vicious or serious crime is committed by a hardened criminal, the need for a maximum or near-maximum sentence may be clearer still. People v. Strong, 190 Colo. 189, 544 P.2d 966 (1976).

Or because of repeated convictions. A long or even maximum sentence may also be justified where the defendant's past record reveals repeated convictions and where the public safety can only be assured if the offender is confined.

People v. Strong, 190 Colo. 189, 544 P.2d 966 (1976).

Trial court acted within its discretion when it accorded substantial weight to defendant's pattern of criminal behavior and the likelihood he would commit further crimes that would endanger the public, and the court made sufficient findings to exceed the presumptive sentence range. People v. Howell, 64 P.3d 894 (Colo. App. 2002).

Judgment and sentence not final until appellate remedies exhausted. For the purposes of reviewing and granting relief from sentences validly imposed, the judgment and sentence is not final until after appellate remedies for review have been exhausted. People v. Carter, 186 Colo. 391, 527 P.2d 875 (1974).

Defendant is entitled to the benefits of amendatory legislation which mitigates penalties for crimes, when relief is sought before finality has attached to the judgment of conviction. People v. Thornton, 187 Colo. 202, 529 P.2d 628 (1974).

Possible ameliorative benefits of an amended habitual criminal statute must be made available to a defendant notwithstanding the requirements of this section. People v. Vigil, 39 Colo. App. 371, 570 P.2d 13 (1977).

Defendant may seek such relief by direct appeal under section. A defendant, who is entitled to the benefits of amendatory legislation which mitigates penalties for crimes, when relief is sought before finality has attached to the judgment of conviction, may seek such relief by direct appeal under this section. People v. Thornton, 187 Colo. 202, 529 P.2d 628 (1974).

Section limited to felonies. Where the defendant was convicted of simple assault and was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $500, all within the statutory limits, even had the present statute on review of sentences been in effect, the sentence imposed would not be subject to review, for it is limited to felonies. People v. DeJesus, 184 Colo. 230, 519 P.2d 944 (1974).

No review for misdemeanor. There is no provision for appellate review of the propriety of a misdemeanor sentence. People v. Roberts, 668 P.2d 977 (Colo. App. 1983).

A minimum sentence is a prerequisite to appellate review. Otherwise, there is no means to determine whether the minimum given is three years greater than the minimum provided in the statute. Nugent v. District Court, 184 Colo. 353, 520 P.2d 592 (1974) (decided prior to the 1976 amendment to this section).

This section entitled defendant to benefits of §§ 16-11-101 and 16-11-304. Defendant, who was sentenced prior to the effective date of the 1973 amendments to §§ 16-11-101 and 16-11-304 — which legislation provided for the imposition of indeterminate sentences for class 4 and class 5 felonies — was entitled to the benefit of this legislation under relief sought by this section. People v. Thornton, 187 Colo. 202, 529 P.2d 628 (1974).

A defendant who was sentenced to a term with a fixed minimum and fixed maximum for conviction of a class 4 felony was entitled under this section to the benefits of §§ 16-11-101 and 16-11-304. People v. Race, 187 Colo. 204, 529 P.2d 629 (1974).

Failure to impose equal sentences on criminal confederates not violative of equal protection. Due to the individualized nature of sentencing, there is no rule that confederates in crime must receive equal sentences, nor that failure to impose equal sentences violates equal protection of the law under the Colorado or United States Constitutions. People v. Bruebaker, 189 Colo. 219, 539 P.2d 1277 (1975).

Contention that statutory penalties cruel and unusual not justifiable where sentence suspended. Where accused was given a suspended sentence and granted probation, his contention on appeal that the penalties statutorily prescribed for the offense of which he was convicted were "cruel and unusual punishments" did not present a justifiable question. People v. Summit, 183 Colo. 421, 517 P.2d 850 (1974).

Ten- to 15-year term for assault in the first degree was not excessive in light of appellant's active participation in the planning and execution of the crimes, and the violence involved in the attempt to flee the scene of the crimes and avoid capture by law enforcement officers. People v. Campbell, 188 Colo. 79, 532 P.2d 945 (1975).

Sentence may be imposed to run consecutively to sentence already imposed. A sentencing court has discretion to impose a sentence to be served concurrently with or consecutively to a sentence already imposed upon a defendant. People v. Flower, 644 P.2d 64 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 658 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1983); People v. Cullen, 695 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Martinez, 179 P.3d 23 (Colo. App. 2007).

But not to sentence not yet imposed. A trial court may not require a sentence otherwise properly imposed to be served consecutively to some other sentence not yet imposed in another pending case. People v. Flower, 644 P.2d 64 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 658 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1983).

Consecutive sentences for separate assaults not excessive. A defendant convicted by a jury on two counts of assault and sentenced on each count, the sentences to run consecutively, contended that the sentences amounted to excessive, cruel, and unusual punishment because the defendant must serve an entire term before being eligible for probation on the second consecutive term, and because the second assault following so closely upon the first assault amounted to one transaction. It was held that this was clearly not the case as the two victims were in two different places and were not assaulted contemporaneously. Harris v. People, 174 Colo. 483, 484 P.2d 1223 (1971).

Statute inapplicable where defendant sentenced in 1969 and rehearing held in 1970. People v. Jenkins, 180 Colo. 35, 501 P.2d 742 (1972).

Since the offense for which the defendant was sentenced was committed prior to July 1, 1972, the right of appeal under this section is not available to him. People v. Knight, 185 Colo. 364, 525 P.2d 425 (1974).

This section applies only to offenses committed after July 1, 1972. People v. Silvola, 198 Colo. 228, 597 P.2d 583 (1979).

Invoking fifth amendment at codefendant's trial. Where a defendant is appealing his sentence and fears that his testimony in the trial of his codefendant might be used at a subsequent hearing to enhance the sentence should it be vacated, he may invoke his fifth amendment right against self-incrimination. People v. Villa, 671 P.2d 971 (Colo. App. 1983).

Claim of unjust sentencing not allowed after plea bargain. Where trial court repeatedly reminded the defendant of what the sentence would be when it advised him, at the time of the acceptance of his plea of guilty, pursuant to Crim. P. 11, and at no time did the defendant or his counsel protest the sentence or raise an objection that the trial court was not properly exercising its discretion in imposing the sentence, the defendant could not, after benefitting from the plea bargain, claim on appeal that he has been unjustly sentenced. People v. Cunningham, 200 Colo. 303, 614 P.2d 886 (1980).

A sentence imposed within a range agreed upon by the parties pursuant to a plea bargain precludes challenging the sentence on appeal. Subsection (1) does not require a sentencing range or cap to confer a benefit or concession on the defendant. People v. Scofield, 74 P.3d 385 (Colo. App. 2002).

Section precludes review of sentence imposed within limits of the plea agreement. People v. Garcia, 55 P.3d 243 (Colo. App. 2002).

The plea agreement proviso in subsection (1) precludes nonconstitutional challenges to a sentencing proceeding by a defendant whose sentence did not exceed the cap agreed to in the plea agreement. People v. Lassek, 122 P.3d 1029 (Colo. App. 2005).

Statute creates single right to review the propriety of the sentence not a separate right to review of sentencing proceedings. While the manner in which the sentence was imposed is an enumerated factor that may affect the propriety of the sentence, there is no separate right to review of the manner of the sentencing. People v. Lassek, 122 P.3d 1029 (Colo. App. 2005).

For defendants whose sentences did not exceed the agreed cap, the proviso's prohibition against appellate review of the propriety of the sentence bars review of all statutory factors that may have affected propriety, including the manner in which the sentence was imposed. People v. Lassek, 122 P.3d 1029 (Colo. App. 2005).

Review not precluded if aggravating circumstances imposed on sentence but plea bargain did not include agreement that aggravating factors existed. Defendant cannot be said to have agreed to a sentence within an aggravated range if plea agreement merely identified the number of years the sentence was not to exceed, not an acknowledgment that aggravating factors existed. People v. Misenhelter, 121 P.3d 230 (Colo. App. 2004).

Sentence in a plea agreement can be subject to appellate review if there is no indication in the record that the defendant's agreement included any type of agreed sentencing range or cap under subsection (1). People v. O'Dell, 53 P.3d 655 (Colo. App. 2001).

Refusal to grant defendant credit for presentence confinement not error. People v. Magee, 626 P.2d 1139 (Colo. 1981).

An order of restitution becomes part of the sentence which, in accordance with Crim. P. 32(c), is part of the judgment of conviction. When a court orders a defendant, over his objection, to pay restitution to the victim or the victim's family as part of the judgment of conviction for a felony, the order of restitution is appealable pursuant to the statutory procedures applicable to the appellate review of a felony sentence. People v. Johnson, 780 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1989).

A fine was unconstitutionally excessive where the court failed to consider the particular financial circumstances of the defendant in setting the fine and the court set the fine in an amount that was so disproportionate to the defendant's circumstances that there could be no realistic expectation that the defendant would be able to pay the fine. People v. Malone, 923 P.2d 163 (Colo. App. 1995).

Statute as basis for jurisdiction. See People v. Pacheco, 41 Colo. App. 188, 581 P.2d 741 (1978); Triggs v. People, 197 Colo. 229, 591 P.2d 1024 (1979).

Rule of appellate review on filing notice of appeal of criminal sentence governs over conflicting statute which had not been amended after rule was changed. People v. Arevalo, 835 P. 2d 552 (Colo. App. 1992).

However, the statute prevails over a conflicting supreme court rule in substantive matters. People v. Prophet, 42 P.3d 61 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court violated defendant's statutory right when it imposed a harsher department of corrections sentence on resentencing than the original sentence to community corrections. The court imposed a sentence based on what it would have done if it had been the original sentencing court, in violation of subsection (3). People v. Hopkins, 190 P.3d 833 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applied in People v. Cushon, 189 Colo. 230, 539 P.2d 1246 (1975); People v. Walker, 189 Colo. 545, 542 P.2d 1283 (1975); People v. District Court, 196 Colo. 401, 586 P.2d 31 (1978); People v. Edwards, 198 Colo. 52, 598 P.2d 126 (1979); People in Interest of R.R., 43 Colo. App. 208, 607 P.2d 1013 (1979); People v. Espinosa, 200 Colo. 307, 614 P.2d 889 (1980); People v. Foster, 200 Colo. 283, 615 P.2d 652 (1980); People v. Martinez, 628 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1981); People v. Francis, 630 P.2d 82 (Colo. 1981); People v. District Court, 638 P.2d 65 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hamling, 634 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Fuller, 791 P.2d 702 (Colo. 1990).

18-1-409.5. Appellate review of sentence not within the presumptive range. (Repealed)

Source: L. 79: Entire section added, p. 670, § 18, effective July 1. L. 81: Entire section repealed, p. 969, § 2, effective July 1.

18-1-410. Postconviction remedy. (1) Notwithstanding the fact that no review of a conviction of crime was sought by appeal within the time prescribed therefor, or that a judgment of conviction was affirmed upon appeal, every person convicted of a crime is entitled as a matter of right to make applications for postconviction review. Except as otherwise required by subsection (1.5) of this section, an application for postconviction review must, in good faith, allege one or more of the following grounds to justify a hearing thereon:

(a) That the conviction was obtained or sentence imposed in violation of the constitution or laws of the United States or the constitution or laws of this state;

(b) That the applicant was convicted under a statute that is in violation of the constitution of the United States or the constitution of this state, or that the conduct for which the applicant was prosecuted is constitutionally protected;

(c) That the court rendering judgment was without jurisdiction over the person of the applicant or the subject matter;

(d) That the sentence imposed exceeded the maximum authorized by law, or is otherwise not in accordance with the sentence authorized by law;

(e) That there exists evidence of material facts, not theretofore presented and heard, which, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, could not have been known to or learned of by the defendant or his attorney prior to the submission of the issues to the court or jury, and which requires vacation of the conviction or sentence in the interest of justice;

(f) (I) That there has been significant change in the law, applied to the applicant's conviction or sentence, allowing in the interests of justice retroactive application of the changed legal standard.

(II) The ground set forth in this paragraph (f) may not be asserted if, prior to filing for relief pursuant to this paragraph (f), a person has not sought appeal of a conviction within the time prescribed therefor or if a judgment of conviction has been affirmed upon appeal.

(g) Any grounds otherwise properly the basis for collateral attack upon a criminal judgment; or

(h) That the sentence imposed has been fully served or that there has been unlawful revocation of parole, probation, or conditional release.

(1.5) An application for postconviction review in a class 1 felony case where a sentence of death has been imposed shall be limited to claims of newly discovered evidence and ineffective assistance of counsel; except that, for any sentence of death imposed on or after the date upon which the Colorado supreme court adopts rules implementing the unitary system of review established by part 2 of article 12 of title 16, C.R.S., any application for postconviction review in such case shall be governed by the provisions of part 2 of article 12 of title 16, C.R.S.

(2) (a) Except as otherwise required by paragraph (b) of this subsection (2), procedures to be followed in implementation of the right to postconviction remedy shall be as prescribed by rule of the supreme court of the state of Colorado.

(b) In any class 1 felony case where a sentence of death has been imposed, the district court shall expeditiously consider an application for postconviction remedy. It is the general assembly's intent that the district court give priority to cases in which a sentence of death has been imposed.

(3) (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (3), an appeal of any order by the district court granting or denying postconviction relief in a case in which a sentence of death has been imposed shall be to the Colorado supreme court as provided by section 13-4-102 (1) (h), C.R.S. The procedures to be followed in the implementation of such review shall be in accordance with any rules adopted by the Colorado supreme court in response to the legislative intent expressed in section 16-12-101.5 (1), C.R.S.

(b) In any class 1 felony case in which a sentence of death is imposed on or after the date upon which the Colorado supreme court adopts rules implementing the unitary system of review established under part 2 of article 12 of title 16, C.R.S., the procedures for appealing any order by the district court granting or denying postconviction relief and review by the Colorado supreme court of such order shall be governed by the provisions of part 2 of article 12 of title 16, C.R.S., and by such rules adopted by the supreme court.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 402, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-510. L. 73: p. 533, § 2. L. 75: (1)(f) amended, p. 211, § 28, effective July 16. L. 94: IP(1) and (2) amended and (1.5) and (3) added, p. 1474, § 2, effective July 1. L. 97: (1.5) and (3) amended, p. 1583, § 5, effective June 4.

Cross references: For limitations on collateral attacks, see § 16-5-402; for similar provisions concerning postconviction remedies, see Crim. P. 35.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment on People v. Herrera (183 Colo. 155, 516 P.2d 626 (1973)), see 46 U. Colo. L. Rev. 311 (1974); for article, "Crim. P. 35(c): Colorado Law Regarding Post-conviction Relief", see 22 Colo. Law. 729 (1993).

Interests of justice control. Unless otherwise required in the interests of justice, any grounds for postconviction relief which have been fully and finally litigated should not be relitigated. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

Proceedings where relief applicable. It is apparent on the federal constitutional level and on the state level, both as a matter of constitutional policy as expressed by the supreme court and of legislative policy, that criminal safeguards attach regardless of the formal designation of a proceeding if the proceeding substantively involves incarceration or other criminal sanctions. Mora v. District Court, 177 Colo. 381, 494 P.2d 596 (1972).

Relief granted where after-discovered evidence would render conviction uncertain. This section shows a legislative intent that in situations where it cannot be said with certainty that the jury would have convicted the defendant had it known the after-discovered evidence and where there is a possibility of perjury, at least for alleged crimes committed after July 1, 1972, postconviction relief may be granted. People v. Armstead, 179 Colo. 387, 501 P.2d 472 (1972).

The general assembly intended subsection (1)(f) to confer a right of review of sentences, to the end that sentences might be equalized in light of changes in the Colorado criminal laws. People v. Herrera, 183 Colo. 155, 516 P.2d 626 (1973).

But subsection (1)(f) invades the governor's exclusive power to grant a commutation after conviction as provided in § 7 of art. IV, Colo. Const., and therefore violates the doctrine of separation of powers embodied in art. III, Colo. Const. People v. Herrera, 183 Colo. 155, 516 P.2d 626 (1973); People v. Johnson, 185 Colo. 285, 523 P.2d 1403 (1974); People v. Rupert, 185 Colo. 288, 523 P.2d 1406 (1974); People v. Arellano, 185 Colo. 280, 524 P.2d 305 (1974); People v. Chavez, 185 Colo. 310, 524 P.2d 307 (1974); People v. Simms, 186 Colo. 447, 528 P.2d 228 (1974).

Relief from a sentence validly imposed may not be obtained through the judiciary after final conviction. People v. Rupert, 185 Colo. 288, 523 P.2d 1406 (1974).

After conviction and exhaustion of appellate remedies, relief from a validly imposed criminal sentence may not be obtained through the judiciary. People v. Arellano, 185 Colo. 280, 524 P.2d 305 (1974).

Trial court was without jurisdiction to grant postconviction relief from sentence imposed upon conviction for second-degree murder which became final on December 11, 1968. People v. Fulmer, 185 Colo. 366, 524 P.2d 606 (1974).

Because once a criminal conviction has become final, any remedy lies in the executive department by way of commutation. People v. Arellano, 185 Colo. 280, 524 P.2d 305 (1974);

People v. Chavez, 185 Colo. 310, 524 P.2d 307 (1974).

Where the governor has commuted defendant's sentence, the supreme court lacks jurisdiction to reduce or in any way alter or amend the sentence as commuted. People v. Simms, 186 Colo. 447, 528 P.2d 228 (1974).

Where appellant filed his motion for post-conviction remedy before his conviction had become final, the court had jurisdiction to entertain his motion for relief. People v. Thomas, 185 Colo. 395, 525 P.2d 1136 (1974).

Because a defendant whose conviction has not become final is entitled to the benefits of amendatory legislation mitigating the penalty for the crime of which he was convicted. McClure v. District Court, 187 Colo. 359, 532 P.2d 340 (1975); People v. Marlott, 191 Colo. 304, 552 P.2d 491 (1976); People v. Macias, 631 P.2d 584 (Colo. 1981).

A defendant is entitled to the benefits of amendatory legislation which mitigates penalties for crimes when the relief is sought before finality has attached to the judgment of conviction. Shook v. District Court, 188 Colo. 76, 533 P.2d 41 (1975); Litsey v. District Court, 193 Colo. 341, 565 P.2d 1343 (1977).

A defendant is entitled to the benefits of amendatory legislation mitigating the penalty for a crime where a defendant seeks relief from the sentence imposed before his conviction has become final. Naranjo v. District Court, 189 Colo. 21, 536 P.2d 36 (1975).

Sentence imposed by the trial court which did not afford the defendant the benefit of amendatory legislation was not a valid and legal sentence. As such, it was subject to correction by the trial court at any time. People v. Jenkins, 40 Colo. App. 140, 575 P.2d 13 (1977).

Where criminal statute declared unconstitutional. Where, within 120 days of imposition of sentence, the criminal statute underlying a conviction for disorderly conduct was declared unconstitutional, the court had jurisdiction to set aside the convictions and sentences and dismiss the charged offenses, even though the sentences for disorderly conduct were to be served concurrently with the sentences imposed for another offense for which defendants were properly convicted. People v. Henderson, 40 Colo. App. 147, 574 P.2d 872 (1977).

Subsection (1)(f) provides for the application of changed legal standards where there is a change in law mitigating penalties for crimes, and the application of the changed legal standards is mandatory. People v. Anderson, 187 Colo. 171, 529 P.2d 310 (1974).

Subsection (1)(f) is especially appropriate where a change in the law intervenes before conviction is had and sentence is imposed. People v. Thomas, 185 Colo. 395, 525 P.2d 1136 (1974).

Remedy not applicable to § 42-4-1202.

While this section provides for consideration of a significant change in the law upon review of a conviction of a crime, such review is not afforded to one who fails to comply with the implied consent statute, former § 42-4-1202 (3)(e), because no crime is involved there. Noe v. Dolan, 197 Colo. 32, 589 P.2d 483 (1979).

Repeal of § 16-11-101 (1)(d) effective three months after sentencing. Where the effective date (July 1, 1979) of the repeal of § 16-11-101 (1)(d) was more than three months after the defendant was sentenced under its provisions, the repeal did not entitle the defendant to relief under subsection (1)(f)(I). People v. Steelman, 200 Colo. 177, 613 P.2d 334 (1980).

When motions under subsection (1)(f) to be filed. Motions pursuant to Crim. P. 35(b) and subsection (1)(f) may be filed at any time before the conviction becomes final. Litsey v. District Court, 193 Colo. 341, 565 P.2d 1343 (1977).

No modification where old crimes repealed and replaced by new ones. It was clearly not the legislative intent behind this section to permit the modification of sentences where the earlier crimes have been subsequently repealed and substantially new crimes have been enacted in their place. People v. Marlott, 191 Colo. 304, 552 P.2d 491 (1976).

It was not the legislative intent behind this section to permit the modification of sentences where the earlier crimes have been subsequently repealed and substantially new crimes have been enacted in their place. People v. Lake, 195 Colo. 454, 580 P.2d 788 (1978).

Relitigation of a claim based on a change of law is specifically prohibited in a postconviction proceeding once a judgment of conviction has been affirmed upon appeal. People v. Banks, 924 P.2d 1161 (Colo. App. 1996).

Effect of § 16-5-402. Even though the Colorado criminal code grants a convicted offender the right to seek collateral review of a constitutionally flawed conviction, the effect of § 16-5-402 (1) is to immediately cut off this right for all persons whose convictions antedate the statute by an interval of time in excess of the statutory limitation period. Such retrospective elimination of an existing statutory right, which the general assembly itself has recognized as a matter of "substantive right" included "within the concept of due process of law", cannot be squared with the constitutional prohibition against retrospectively depriving a person of a statutory right without due process of law. People v. Germany, 674 P.2d 345 (Colo. 1983) (decided under former law).

Motion properly denied without evidentiary hearing where only issues of law raised. Where motion for postconviction relief of sentence reduction, alleging that the penalty for the degree of burglary of which defendant had been convicted had been reduced from five to 20 years to one to 10 years confinement in the state penitentiary, raised only issues of law, it was properly denied without an evidentiary hearing. People v. Martinez, 184 Colo. 155, 524 P.2d 73 (1974).

No error occurred in manner hearing conducted. Where court had no jurisdiction to deal with motion for postconviction relief, no error occurred in the manner in which the hearing on such motion was conducted. People v. Mankowsky, 187 Colo. 145, 529 P.2d 314 (1974).

When final conviction becomes basis for imposition of life sentence pursuant to the provisions of the habitual criminal statute, the supreme court has jurisdiction to determine whether that conviction may validly be considered under the terms of the recidivist statute. People v. Lake, 195 Colo. 454, 580 P.2d 788 (1978).

Defendant convicted of theft by receiving does not receive ameliorative benefit when retroactive application of amendatory legislation is clearly not intended by its own terms. Legislation that amended theft by receipt statute to provide that amendment shall apply to acts committed on or after July 1, 1985 makes it clear that amendatory legislation is to apply prospectively only. People v. McCoy, 764 P.2d 1171 (Colo. 1988).

Five-year grace period from the effective date of § 16-5-402 on July 1, 1984, was implied for person seeking to challenge a constitutionally flawed conviction under this section, where conviction predated the length of time specified as a limitation period in § 16-5-402. People v. Fagerholm, 768 P.2d 689 (Colo. 1989).

Time limitations in § 16-5-402 are supplementary to and not in conflict with § 18-1-410. People v. Wiedemer, 852 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1993).

Statute as basis for jurisdiction. See People v. White, 623 P.2d 868 (Colo. 1981).

Irreconcilable conflict exists between this section and § 16-5-402, and § 16-5-402 prevails as it is the later enacted statute. People v. Heitzman, 852 P.2d 443 (Colo. 1993).

Time bar in § 16-5-402 applies where defendant's motion is a collateral attack and is a request for post-conviction relief under this section. People v. Vigil, 983 P.2d 805 (Colo. App. 1999).

For purposes of postconviction review and collateral attack limitations, a "conviction" occurs when the trial court enters judgment and sentence is imposed, if there is no appeal; if an appeal is pursued, then the conviction is not final until the appellate process is exhausted. People v. Hampton, 857 P.2d 441 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 876 P.2d 1236 (Colo. 1994).

Applied in People v. McClure, 190 Colo. 250, 545 P.2d 1038 (1976); Salas v. District Court, 190 Colo. 447, 548 P.2d 605 (1976);

People v. Lobato, 192 Colo. 357, 559 P.2d 224 P.2d 1361 (1977); Tacorante v. People, 624 P.2d (1977); People v. Orr, 39 Colo. App. 289, 566 1324 (Colo. 1981).

18-1-411. Postconviction testing of DNA - definitions. As used in this section and in sections 18-1-412 to 18-1-416, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Actual innocence” means clear and convincing evidence such that no reasonable juror would have convicted the defendant.

(2) “Actual or constructive possession” means the biological evidence is maintained or stored on the premises of the law enforcement agency or at another location or facility under the custody or control of the law enforcement agency, including pursuant to an agreement or contract with the law enforcement agency and a third-party service provider, in Colorado or elsewhere.

(3) “DNA” means deoxyribonucleic acid.

(4) “Incarcerated” means physically housed in a department of corrections facility, a private correctional facility under contract with the department of corrections, or a county jail following a felony conviction, or in a juvenile facility following adjudication for an offense that would have been a felony if committed by an adult, or under parole supervision.

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 815, § 1, effective August 6.

18-1-412. Procedure for application for DNA testing - appointment of counsel.

(1) An incarcerated person may apply to the district court in the district where the conviction was secured for DNA testing concerning the conviction and sentence the person is currently serving.

(2) A motion filed pursuant to this section shall include specific facts sufficient to support a prima facie showing that post-conviction relief is warranted under the criteria set forth in section 18-1-413. The motion shall include the results of all prior DNA tests, regardless of whether a test was performed by the defense or the prosecution.

(3) If the motion, files, and record of the case show to the satisfaction of the court that the petitioner is not entitled to relief based on the criteria specified in section 18-1-413, the court shall deny the motion without a hearing and without appointment of counsel. The court may deny a second or subsequent motion requesting relief pursuant to this section.

(4) If the court does not deny the petitioner’s motion for testing, the court shall appoint counsel if the court determines the petitioner is indigent and has requested counsel. The court shall forward a copy of the motion for DNA testing to the district attorney.

(5) Counsel for the defendant may request the court to set the matter for a hearing, if, upon investigation of the petitioner’s motion for testing, counsel believes sufficient grounds exist to support an order for DNA testing. If the petitioner represents himself or herself, the court may set the matter for a hearing upon his or her request.

(6) Following a request for a hearing, the court shall allow the district attorney a reasonable amount of time, but not less than thirty-five days, to respond to the motion and any supplement filed by the petitioner’s counsel and to prepare for the hearing.

(7) A court shall not order DNA testing without a hearing, except upon written stipulation of the district attorney.

(8) The court shall deny a motion for production of transcripts unless the petitioner makes a prima facie showing that a transcript will be necessary at a hearing conducted pursuant to this section.

(9) Upon motion of the defendant or his or her counsel, the court shall order a database search by a law enforcement agency if the court determines that a reasonable probability exists that the database search will produce exculpatory or mitigating evidence relevant to a claim of wrongful conviction or sentencing. DNA profiles must meet current national DNA database index system eligibility standards and conform to current federal bureau of investigation quality assurance standards in order to be eligible for search against the state index system.

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 816, § 1, effective August 6. L. 2009: (9) added, (SB 09-241), ch. 295, p. 1582, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2012: (6) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 862, § 103, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (6) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

18-1-413. Content of application for DNA testing. (1) A court shall not order DNA testing unless the petitioner demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that:

(a) Favorable results of the DNA testing will demonstrate the petitioner's actual innocence;

(b) A law enforcement agency collected biological evidence pertaining to the offense and retains actual or constructive possession of the evidence that allows for reliable DNA testing;

(c) (I) Conclusive DNA results were not available prior to the petitioner's conviction; and

(II) The petitioner did not secure DNA testing prior to his or her conviction because DNA testing was not reasonably available or for reasons that constitute justifiable excuse, ineffective assistance of counsel, or excusable neglect; and

(d) The petitioner consents to provide a biological sample for DNA testing.

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 816, § 1, effective August 6.

18-1-414. Preservation of evidence. (1) A petitioner shall not be entitled to relief based solely on an allegation that a law enforcement agency failed to preserve biological evidence.

(2) (a) A court granting a motion for hearing pursuant to section 18-1-412 shall order the appropriate law enforcement agency to preserve existing biological evidence for DNA testing.

(b) If a law enforcement agency, through negligence, destroys, loses, or otherwise disposes of biological evidence that is the subject of an order pursuant to this subsection (2) before the evidence may be tested, the court shall set a hearing to determine whether a remedy is warranted. If the court determines that a remedy is warranted, the court may order whatever remedy the court finds is just, equitable, and appropriate. Nothing in this subsection (2) shall be construed to limit or eliminate the court's authority to order any remedy otherwise available under law for the destruction, loss, or disposal of evidence.

(c) For the purposes of this subsection (2), "negligence" means a departure from the ordinary standard of care.

(3) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, this section does not create a duty to preserve biological evidence. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (2) of this section, this section does not create a liability on the part of a law enforcement agency for failing to preserve biological evidence.

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 817, § 1, effective August 6. L. 2008: (2) and (3) amended, p. 1513, § 2, effective May 28.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2008 act amending subsections (2) and (3), see section 1 of chapter 322, Session Laws of Colorado 2008.

18-1-415. Testing - payment. All testing shall be performed at a law enforcement facility, and the petitioner shall pay for the testing. If the petitioner is indigent and represented by either the public defender or alternate defense counsel, and with the approval of the public defender or the alternate defense counsel, the costs of the testing shall be paid from their budget.

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 817, § 1, effective August 6. L. 2010: Entire section amended, (HB 10-1422), ch. 419, p. 2073, § 31, effective August 11.

18-1-416. Results of the DNA test. (1) Notwithstanding any law or rule of procedure that bars a motion for post-conviction review as untimely, a petitioner may use the results of a DNA test ordered pursuant to section 18-1-413 as the grounds for filing a motion for post-conviction review under section 18-1-410 and the Colorado rules of criminal procedure.

(2) The testing laboratory shall make the results of a DNA test ordered pursuant to section 18-1-413 available to the combined DNA index system and to any Colorado, federal, or other law enforcement DNA databases.

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 817, § 1, effective August 6.

18-1-417. Ineffective assistance of counsel claims - waiver of confidentiality.

(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, whenever a defendant alleges ineffective assistance of counsel, the defendant automatically waives any confidentiality, including attorney-client and work-product privileges, between counsel and defendant, and between the defendant or counsel and any expert witness retained or appointed in connection with the representation, but only with respect to the information that is related to the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance. After the defendant alleges ineffective assistance of counsel, the allegedly ineffective counsel and an expert witness may discuss with, may disclose any aspect of the representation that is related to the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance to, and may produce documents related to such representation that are related to the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance to the prosecution without the need for an order by the court that confidentiality has been waived.

(2) If the allegedly ineffective counsel or an expert witness has released his or her file or a portion thereof to defendant or defendant's current counsel, defendant or current counsel shall permit the prosecution to inspect and copy any or all portions of the file that are related to the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance upon request of the prosecution.

Source: L. 2005: Entire section added, p. 424, § 2, effective April 29.

PART 5

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL CULPABILITY

Law reviews: For article, "Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986", which discusses a case relating to erroneous malice presumption, see 15 Colo. Law. 1616 (1986).

18-1-501. Definitions. The following definitions are applicable to the determination of culpability requirements for offenses defined in this code:

(1) "Act" means a bodily movement, and includes words and possession of property.

(2) "Conduct" means an act or omission and its accompanying state of mind or, where relevant, a series of acts or omissions.

(3) "Criminal negligence". A person acts with criminal negligence when, through a gross deviation from the standard of care that a reasonable person would exercise, he fails to perceive a substantial and unjustifiable risk that a result will occur or that a circumstance exists.

(4) "Culpable mental state" means intentionally, or with intent, or knowingly, or willfully, or recklessly, or with criminal negligence, as these terms are defined in this section.

(5) "Intentionally" or "with intent". All offenses defined in this code in which the mental culpability requirement is expressed as "intentionally" or "with intent" are declared to be specific intent offenses. A person acts "intentionally" or "with intent" when his conscious objective is to cause the specific result proscribed by the statute defining the offense. It is immaterial to the issue of specific intent whether or not the result actually occurred.

(6) "Knowingly" or "willfully". All offenses defined in this code in which the mental culpability requirement is expressed as "knowingly" or "willfully" are declared to be general intent crimes. A person acts "knowingly" or "willfully" with respect to conduct or to a circumstance described by a statute defining an offense when he is aware that his conduct is of such nature or that such circumstance exists. A person acts “knowingly” or “willfully”, with respect to a result of his conduct, when he is aware that his conduct is practically certain to cause the result.

(7) “Omission” means a failure to perform an act as to which a duty of performance is imposed by law.

(8) “Recklessly”. A person acts recklessly when he consciously disregards a substantial and unjustifiable risk that a result will occur or that a circumstance exists.

(9) “Voluntary act” means an act performed consciously as a result of effort or determination, and includes the possession of property if the actor was aware of his physical possession or control thereof for a sufficient period to have been able to terminate it.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 403, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-601. L. 75: (3), (5), (6), and (8) R&RE, p. 616, § 1, effective July 21. L. 77: (4) amended and (5) and (6) R&RE, p. 959, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment on Trujillo v. People (133 Colo. 186, 292 P.2d 980 (1956)), see 28 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 409 (1956). For article, “Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code”, see 49 Den. L.J. 137 (1972). For article, “Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code”, see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Annotator’s note. Since § 18-1-501 (1) is similar to former § 40-1-2, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

General assembly may establish statutory constituents of criminal culpability. The constitutional mandate requiring the prosecution to establish all essential elements of a crime beyond a reasonable doubt does not impair the general assembly’s competence to establish the statutory constituents of criminal culpability for various offenses and to formulate particular rules of justification or excuse for acts that otherwise might be criminally punishable. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

Section 18-1-803 does not require evidence of any psychiatric abnormality or independent testimony to analyze the effect of a blow on the defendant’s mental state. This effect may be inferred from the evidence present. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Instruction on mental condition required if any evidence tends to establish impairment. An instruction on impaired mental condition is required if there is any evidence tending to establish that a blow to the defendant’s head impaired his mental condition sufficiently to preclude formation of a conscious objective to cause the victim’s death. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

The narcotics act is not governed by the definitions in the criminal code. People v. Quick, 190 Colo. 171, 544 P.2d 629 (1976).

“Criminal negligence”, as applied to homicide, means a failure to perceive, through a gross deviation from the standard of reasonable care, a substantial and unjustifiable risk that death will result from certain conduct. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

Intent is an act or purpose of the mind rarely discoverable except by the acts of the person committing them; consequently, acts which tend to prove a specific intent are direct evidence of that intent. Wechter v. People, 53 Colo. 89, 124 P. 183 (1912).

Circumstances attending an act give character to it, inasmuch as they evince the intention of the actor at the time of the act. Usually, the proof of a homicide will disclose the circumstances attending it, and the character of the crime is demonstrated by the same evidence which establishes it. Hill v. People, 1 Colo. 436 (1872).

Intention to commit an offense is manifested by circumstances attendant upon the commission of the offense. Arridy v. People, 103 Colo. 29, 82 P.2d 757 (1938).

Intent may be shown by inference from all the surrounding circumstances, if they are sufficient to prove this element beyond a reasonable doubt. However, if the circumstances themselves are insufficient or if the defendant feels required to rebut facts or inferences from other evidence adduced at trial detrimental to his position, it is axiomatic that, this being material, his offer should be allowed in as evidence. Gallegos v. People, 159 Colo. 379, 411 P.2d 956 (1966).

The mind of an alleged offender may be read from his acts, his conduct, and the reasonable inferences which may be drawn from the circumstances of the case. Maraggos v. People, 175 Colo. 130, 486 P.2d 1 (1971).

Intent is a state of mind existing at the time a person commits an offense; however, that intent is not required to be proven by direct substantive evidence, for to do so would make it impossible to convict in any case where there was not a culmination of the intent. Maraggos v. People, 175 Colo. 130, 486 P.2d 1 (1971).

Intent is a question of fact, provable like any other fact in issue in a criminal case. Wechter v. People, 53 Colo. 89, 124 P. 183 (1912).

Instructions on specific intent phrased in language of this section are proper and will be upheld by the supreme court. Blincoe v. People, 178 Colo. 34, 494 P.2d 1285 (1972).

Instruction defining "intentionally" properly refused. Where defense requested instruction defining "intentionally" in terms of new statute which became effective July 1, 1972, but offense had occurred prior to that time, trial court did not err in refusing such request. People v. Crawford, 191 Colo. 504, 553 P.2d 827 (1976).

Defendant cannot avoid his conviction of criminally negligent homicide on the ground that he did not intend death to result from his act. People v. Palumbo, 192 Colo. 7, 555 P.2d 521 (1976).

"Knowingly." The definition of "knowingly" in subsection (6) is an accurate expression of the common-law understanding of "knowingly". City of Englewood v. Hammes, 671 P.2d 947 (Colo. 1983).

The definition of "knowingly" or "willfully" in subsection (6) applied in People v. Riley, 708 P.2d 1359 (Colo. 1985); People v. Eastep, 884 P.2d 305 (Colo. 1994); People v. Parga, 964 P.2d 571 (Colo. App. 1998).

A person may be found to act "intentionally" even though the length of time for deliberation is not long. People v. Valenzuela, 825 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd, 856 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993).

A person acts intentionally if the person's "conscious objective" is to cause the specific result prohibited by statute. People v. Moore, 877 P.2d 840 (Colo. 1994); People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996); People v. Madison, 176 P.3d 793 (Colo. App. 2007).

Phrase "reasonably should be aware" is not the equivalent of "knowingly". People v. Etchells, 646 P.2d 950 (Colo. App. 1982); Espinoza v. People, 712 P.2d 476 (Colo. 1985).

Menacing is a general intent crime requiring only that the defendant be aware that the defendant's conduct is practically certain to cause the result. People v. Zieg, 841 P.2d 342 (Colo. App. 1992).

Omission of conduct-and-circumstance factor from instruction on "knowingly" held not error. No substantial rights of the defendant are seriously affected by the omission of the conduct-and-circumstance factor of the mental culpability requirement of "knowingly" from the instructions, as provided in subsection (6), where the instruction given refers to both conduct and result. If one is aware that his conduct will achieve a certain result, then of necessity he must also be aware of that conduct. People v. Clark, 662 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982).

A mental culpability instruction defining "knowingly" as an awareness by the defendant that his conduct is "practically certain to cause the result" would necessarily require the jury to be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that he also was aware that "his conduct is of such nature" and that "the circumstance exists" before he could be found guilty of these offenses. Although such an instruction is technically incomplete, the trial court's failure to instruct the jury on the conduct and circumstance components of "knowingly" is not plain error because the substantial rights of the defendant are not affected. People v. Dererra, 667 P.2d 1363 (Colo. 1983).

"Knowingly" instruction which is equivalent to negligence is error. Where the court's definition of "knowingly" permits a finding, not on the defendant's guilty knowledge, but rather on a basis that amounts to a negligence standard, that instruction is fundamentally flawed. People v. Freeman, 668 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1983).

Where an instruction permits the jury to find that the defendant acted intentionally on the basis of his actions alone, rather than on the precise "conscious objective" standard required by statute, the instruction is erroneous. People v. Freeman, 668 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1983).

Evidence of mental slowness may be offered to negate the culpable mental state for the crime charged. People v. Vanrees, 125 P.3d 403 (Colo. 2005).

Offenses requiring knowledge as the culpable mental state are not specific intent crimes. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

No requirement that "knowing conduct" be directed against person killed. There is no requirement that the "knowing conduct" essential to extreme indifference murder and second-degree murder be directed against the person actually killed. On the contrary, both offenses are general intent crimes, and as long as the offender knowingly acts in the proscribed manner and causes the death of another, he is guilty of the crime, even though the person killed is not the person against whom the criminal conduct was directed. People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981).

Willful and ordinary negligence distinguished. The demarcation between ordinary negligence and willful and wanton disregard is that in the latter the actor was fully aware of the danger and should have realized its probable consequences, yet deliberately avoided all precaution to prevent disaster. A failure to act in prevention of accident is but simple negligence; a mentally active restraint from such action is willful. Omitting to weigh consequences is simple negligence; refusing to weigh them is willful. Trujillo v. People, 133 Colo. 186, 292 P.2d 980 (1956).

Before defendant could be convicted of manslaughter under former provisions, there must have been evidence tending to prove he recklessly and wantonly failed to exercise the care and caution that a reasonably prudent person would have exercised under similar circumstances, and that his conduct was such as to indicate a reckless and wanton disregard for the safety of others. Ordinary or simple negligence was not sufficient to sustain the former charge of involuntary manslaughter. Bennett v. People, 155 Colo. 101, 392 P.2d 657 (1964).

“Recklessly” and “criminally negligent” distinguished. The difference between acting “recklessly” and being “criminally negligent” is the distinction between becoming aware of a risk yet consciously choosing to disregard it as opposed to negligently failing to become aware of the risk. People v. Bettis, 43 Colo. App. 104, 602 P.2d 877 (1979).

Instruction defining “recklessly” properly refused where it contained the term “accidentally”. People v. Bookman, 646 P.2d 924 (Colo. 1982).

Instruction defining “recklessly” pursuant to this section, rather than defining “reckless driving” under § 42-4-1401, was properly given as to an element of the offense of vehicular homicide involving reckless driving. The definition of “recklessly” in subsection (8) is contained in the criminal code and is plainly intended to be used in interpreting other statutory sections, such as vehicular homicide, within the criminal code. People v. Scarlett, 985 P.2d 36 (Colo. App. 1998).

“Recklessly” in second degree assault requires that a defendant consciously disregard a substantial and unjustifiable risk that a result will occur (or that a circumstance exists), not that a defendant disregard the result that ultimately occurs. Therefore, the People did not have to prove that defendant had knowledge of the existence of the specific deadly weapon held by the victim of the assault. People v. Brown, 677 P.2d 406 (Colo. App. 1983).

Conspiracy to commit reckless manslaughter is not a crime in Colorado. Palmer v. People, 964 P.2d 524 (Colo. 1998).

Finding of knowing or willful conduct sufficient for recklessness. A finding of knowing or willful conduct is sufficient to establish the culpable mental state of recklessness. People v. Yanaga, 635 P.2d 925 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Howard, 215 P.3d 1134 (Colo. App. 2008).

To determine whether a risk is substantial and unjustified, trier of fact must weigh the likelihood and potential magnitude of harm presented by the conduct and consider whether the conduct constitutes a gross deviation from the reasonable standard of care. People v. Hall, 999 P.2d 207 (Colo. 2000).

The phrase “starts or maintains a fire” in § 18-4-105 must be read in accordance with subsection (9) and § 18-1-502. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Intoxication provision applicable in analysis of “voluntary act”. Section 18-1-804 applies not only to the mental state of a defendant in general intent crimes but is also applicable in the analysis of a “voluntary act”, as that phrase is used in the definition of “criminal liability” in § 18-1-502. People v. Huskey, 624 P.2d 899 (Colo. App. 1980).

Different culpable mental states may exist simultaneously. People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981); People v. Howard, 215 P.3d 1134 (Colo. App. 2008).

For discussion of culpable mental state required for conviction of criminal attempt, see People v. Krovarz, 697 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1985).

Applied in McPhee v. People, 105 Colo. 539, 100 P.2d 148 (1940); Gallegos v. Tinsley, 139 Colo. 157, 337 P.2d 386 (1959); Mora v. People, 172 Colo. 261, 472 P.2d 142 (1970); People v. District Court, 185 Colo. 78, 521 P.2d 1254 (1974); People v. White, 191 Colo. 353, 553 P.2d 68 (1976); People v. Sexton, 192 Colo. 181, 555 P.2d 1151 (1976); People v. Cornelison, 192 Colo. 337, 559 P.2d 1102 (1977); People v. Washburn, 197 Colo. 419, 593 P.2d 962 (1979); People v. Vigil, 43 Colo. App. 121, 602 P.2d 884 (1979); People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981); People v. Frysig, 628 P.2d 1004 (Colo. 1981); People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981); People v. Brown, 632 P.2d 1025 (Colo. 1981); People v. Christian, 632 P.2d 1031 (Colo. 1981); People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981); People v. People, 635 P.2d 543 (Colo. 1981); People v. R.V., 635 P.2d 892 (Colo. 1981); People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981); People v. Padilla, 638 P.2d 15 (Colo. 1981); People v. Madson, 638 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1981); People v. Mack, 638 P.2d 257 (Colo. 1981); People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981); People v. Founds, 631 P.2d 1166 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982); Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983); People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983); People v. Giles, 662 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1983); People v. Heller, 698 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1984), rev’d on other grounds, 712 P.2d 1023 (Colo. 1986); People v. Lybarger, 700 P.2d 910 (Colo. 1985); People v. Breland, 728 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Bowman, 738 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. District Court, 779 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1989).

18-1-502. Requirements for criminal liability in general and for offenses of strict liability and of mental culpability. The minimum requirement for criminal liability is the performance by a person of conduct which includes a voluntary act or the omission to perform an act which he is physically capable of performing. If that conduct is all that is required for commission of a particular offense, or if an offense or some material element thereof does not require a culpable mental state on the part of the actor, the offense is one of "strict liability". If a culpable mental state on the part of the actor is required with respect to any material element of an offense, the offense is one of "mental culpability".

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 404, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-602.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 49 Den. L.J. 137 (1972). For article, "Criminal Prosecutions under the Colorado Securities Act", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 233 (1976). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

The minimum requirements for criminal liability are set out in this section. People v. Caddy, 189 Colo. 353, 540 P.2d 1089 (1975).

Conscious mental activity required. The minimal requirement for a "strict liability" offense is proof that the proscribed conduct was performed voluntarily — i.e., that such act must be the product of conscious mental activity involving effort or determination. People v. Rostad, 669 P.2d 126 (Colo. 1983).

Intoxication provision applicable in analysis of "voluntary act". Section 18-1-804 applies not only to the mental state of a defendant in general intent crimes but is also applicable in the analysis of a "voluntary act", as that phrase is used in the definition of criminal liability in this section. People v. Huskey, 624 P.2d 899 (Colo. App. 1980).

This section expressly removes any ambiguity as to the culpability requirement of § 18-4-105. That section states that if an offense does not require a culpable mental state on the part of the actor, the offense is one of strict liability. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Construed in accordance with this section, § 18-4-105 would be inapplicable to those situations in which there was no voluntary act or omission to perform an act within the physical capabilities of the person. Thus, the statute would not apply to a fire started by events beyond the actor's control. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

However, the phrase "starts or maintains a fire" in § 18-4-105 must be read in accordance with § 18-1-501(9) and this section. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Cruelty to animals as proscribed by § 35-42-112 held to be strict liability offense. People v. Wilhelm, 676 P.2d 702 (Colo. 1984).

Cruelty to animals as proscribed by § 18-9-202 held to be an offense of mental culpability. People v. Wilhelm, 676 P.2d 702 (Colo. 1984).

Applied in People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981); People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981); Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983); People v. Saiz, 660 P.2d 2 (Colo. App. 1982).

18-1-503. Construction of statutes with respect to culpability requirements.

(1) When the commission of an offense, or some element of an offense, requires a particular culpable mental state, that mental state is ordinarily designated by use of the terms "intentionally", "with intent", "knowingly", "willfully", "recklessly", or "criminal negligence" or by use of the terms "with intent to defraud" and "knowing it to be false" describing a specific kind of intent or knowledge.

(2) Although no culpable mental state is expressly designated in a statute defining an offense, a culpable mental state may nevertheless be required for the commission of that offense, or with respect to some or all of the material elements thereof, if the proscribed conduct necessarily involves such a culpable mental state.

(3) If a statute provides that criminal negligence suffices to establish an element of an offense, that element also is established if a person acts recklessly, knowingly, or intentionally. If recklessness suffices to establish an element, that element also is established if a person acts knowingly or intentionally. If acting knowingly suffices to establish an element, that element also is established if a person acts intentionally.

(4) When a statute defining an offense prescribes as an element thereof a specified culpable mental state, that mental state is deemed to apply to every element of the offense unless an intent to limit its application clearly appears.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 404, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-603. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 960, § 3, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Prosecutions under the Colorado Securities Act", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 233 (1976). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Specific intent is element of crime and is not presumed. Where a crime consists of an act combined with a specific intent, the intent is just as much an element of the crime as is the act. Mere general malice or criminal intent is insufficient, and the requisite specific intent must be shown as a matter of fact, either by direct or circumstantial evidence. The general rule that a criminal intention will be presumed from the commission of the unlawful act does not apply; and proof of the commission of the act does not warrant the presumption that accused had the requisite specific intent. Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 413, 484 P.2d 110 (1971).

Proof of specific intent. Specific intent is ordinarily inferable from the facts, and proof thereof is necessarily by circumstantial evidence. Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 413, 484 P.2d 110 (1971).

Mental state required may be implied. Because a crime ordinarily requires the conjunction of an act and a culpable mental state, legislative silence on the element of intent in a criminal statute is not to be construed as an indication that no culpable mental state is required. Rather, the requisite mental state may be implied from the statute. People v. Moore, 674 P.2d 354 (Colo. 1984).

If a statute merely implies a mens rea, that mental state must be deemed to apply to every element of the offense. People v. Trevino, 826 P.2d 399 (Colo. App. 1991). But see Gorman v. People, 19 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2000).

If there is no clear intent to limit the application of the culpable mental state to a particular element of the offense, it applies to all elements of the offense. People v. Coleby, 34 P.3d 422 (Colo. 2001).

Where the statute merely implies a mens rea, subsection (2), rather than subsection (4), applies. Thus, the implied mens rea may not apply to all elements of the offense, depending on the legislature's intent in criminalizing the offense. The implied mens rea for § 18-6-701, contributing to the delinquency of a minor, applies only to the defendant's actions in knowingly inducing, aiding, or encouraging a minor to violate the law, and not to whether the defendant knows the minor's age, because the intent of this offense is to protect the minor. Gorman v. People, 19 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2000).

Finding of knowing or willful conduct sufficient for recklessness. A finding of knowing or willful conduct is sufficient to establish the culpable mental state of recklessness. People v. Yanaga, 635 P.2d 925 (Colo. App. 1981).

Instruction errors inure to defendant's benefit. Where an instruction requires the prosecution to prove a higher degree of culpability than otherwise required by statute in relation to the various elements of the offense, any errors in the instruction inure solely to the defendant's benefit. People v. Mack, 638 P.2d 257 (Colo. 1981).

Subsection (2) inapplicable to violation of custody under § 18-3-304. The language of that section requiring intent is limited to the deprivation of custody of the child, and is not extended to the additional elements of the offense. People v. Metcalf, 926 P.2d 133 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in People v. Frysig, 628 P.2d 1004 (Colo. 1981); People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981); People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981); Bollier v. People, 635 P.2d 543 (Colo. 1981); People v. Smith, 638 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1981); People v. Walker, 634 P.2d 1026 (1981); People v. Mattas, 645 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1982); People v. Hart, 658 P.2d 857 (Colo. 1983); People v. Saiz, 660 P.2d 2 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Annan, 665 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Thompson, 756 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1988).

18-1-503.5. Principles of criminal culpability. (1) If the criminality of conduct depends on a child being younger than eighteen years of age and the child was in fact at least fifteen years of age, it shall be an affirmative defense that the defendant reasonably believed the child to be eighteen years of age or older. This affirmative defense shall not be available if the criminality of conduct depends on the defendant being in a position of trust.

(2) If the criminality of conduct depends on a child's being younger than eighteen years of age and the child was in fact younger than fifteen years of age, there shall be no defense that the defendant reasonably believed the child was eighteen years of age or older.

(3) If the criminality of conduct depends on a child being younger than fifteen years of age, it shall be no defense that the defendant did not know the child's age or that the defendant reasonably believed the child to be fifteen years of age or older.

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 859, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2007: (1) amended, p. 1687, § 4, effective July 1.

Cross references: For affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805.

ANNOTATION

Subsection (1) eliminates the culpable mental state as to age prescribed by § 18-6-403 (3), “knowingly”, and replaces it with that of subsection (1), “lack of reasonable belief”. People v. Bath, 890 P.2d 269 (Colo. App. 1994).

The affirmative defense created in this section applies to the offense of contributing to the delinquency of a minor under § 18-6-107. But where defendant did not raise this affirmative defense in a manner sufficient to meet the defendant’s initial burden, the trial court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury on this affirmative defense. People v. Hastings, 983 P.2d 78 (Colo. App. 1999), aff’d, 19 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2000); People v. Gorman, 983 P.2d 92 (Colo. App. 1999), aff’d, 19 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2000).

Subsection (1), by providing for the affirmative defense of reasonable belief, manifests a clear legislative intent that the culpable mental state of “knowingly” in § 18-6-403 does not apply to the age of the victim. People v. Bath, 890 P.2d 269 (Colo. App. 1994).

Subsection (2) limits an affirmative defense and creates a strict liability crime, both of which are within the constitutional power of the general assembly. People v. Salazar, 920 P.2d 893 (Colo. App. 1996).

By applying subsection (2), the trial court did not relieve the prosecution of its burden to prove essential elements of the offense charged. People v. Salazar, 920 P.2d 893 (Colo. App. 1996).

Legislative history relating to the adoption of subsection (2) and § 18-3-405 (1) demonstrates that the general assembly intended the offense of sexual assault on a child to be a strict liability offense. People v. Salazar, 920 P.2d 893 (Colo. App. 1996).

18-1-504. Effect of ignorance or mistake upon culpability. (1) A person is not relieved of criminal liability for conduct because he engaged in that conduct under a mistaken belief of fact, unless:

(a) It negates the existence of a particular mental state essential to commission of the offense; or

(b) The statute defining the offense or a statute relating thereto expressly provides that a factual mistake or the mental state resulting therefrom constitutes a defense or exemption; or

(c) The factual mistake or the mental state resulting therefrom is of a kind that supports a defense of justification as defined in sections 18-1-701 to 18-1-707.

(2) A person is not relieved of criminal liability for conduct because he engages in that conduct under a mistaken belief that it does not, as a matter of law, constitute an offense, unless the conduct is permitted by one or more of the following:

(a) A statute or ordinance binding in this state;

(b) An administrative regulation, order, or grant of permission by a body or official authorized and empowered to make such order or grant the permission under the laws of the state of Colorado;

(c) An official written interpretation of the statute or law relating to the offense, made or issued by a public servant, agency, or body legally charged or empowered with the responsibility of administering, enforcing, or interpreting a statute, ordinance, regulation, order, or law. If such interpretation is by judicial decision, it must be binding in the state of Colorado.

(3) Any defense authorized by this section is an affirmative defense.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 404, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-604.

Cross references: For other provisions concerning affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805; for affirmative defenses to particular crimes, see specific criminal provisions in articles 2 through 18 of this title.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Prosecutions under the Colorado Securities Act", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 233 (1976).

Section 18-2-101 and this section may be harmonized. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Subsection (1)(a) of this section and § 18-2-101(1) do not conflict. Darr v. People, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

No defense of impossibility in attempt prosecution. The general assembly intended that the defense of factual or legal impossibility not be available in an attempt prosecution. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Defendant may raise defense of general mistake of fact. A defendant may not rely on the defense of legal impossibility in a prosecution for attempted theft, but may raise the defense of general mistake of fact by alleging that he never believed the goods were stolen. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

18-1-505. Consent. (1) The consent of the victim to conduct charged to constitute an offense or to the result thereof is not a defense unless the consent negatives an element of the offense or precludes the infliction of the harm or evil sought to be prevented by the law defining the offense.

(2) When conduct is charged to constitute an offense because it causes or threatens bodily injury, consent to that conduct or to the infliction of that injury is a defense only if the bodily injury consented to or threatened by the conduct consented to is not serious, or the conduct and the injury are reasonably foreseeable hazards of joint participation in a lawful athletic contest or competitive sport, or the consent establishes a justification under sections 18-1-701 to 18-1-707.

(3) Unless otherwise provided by this code or by the law defining the offense, assent does not constitute consent if:

(a) It is given by a person who is legally incompetent to authorize the conduct charged to constitute the offense; or

(b) It is given by a person who, by reason of immaturity, mental disease or mental defect, or intoxication, is manifestly unable and is known or reasonably should be known by the defendant to be unable to make a reasonable judgment as to the nature or harmfulness of the conduct charged to constitute the offense; or

(c) It is given by a person whose consent is sought to be prevented by the law defining the offense; or

(d) It is induced by force, duress, or deception.

(4) Any defense authorized by this section is an affirmative defense.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 405, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-605. L. 81: (2) amended, p. 980, § 1, effective May 13.

ANNOTATION

Whether the victim consented to sexual contact is directly relevant to submission. Thus, if the victim consented to having sex with

If the defendant does every act within his power to commit an offense and would have committed the offense if the facts had been as he believed them to be, then he may not escape criminal liability. People v. Borrego, 738 P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1987).

A mistaken belief that one's conduct is legal does not relieve a person of criminal liability for engaging in proscribed conduct. Becker & Tenenbaum v. Eagle Restaurant, 946 P.2d 600 (Colo. App. 1997).

Mistake of law defense not available when acting upon unauthorized directions from sheriff. Sheriff is not empowered or authorized to place listening device without court order. Deputy sheriff, then, cannot rely upon such direction as a defense to his actions. People v. Lesslie, 24 P.3d 22 (Colo. App. 2000).

Reliance upon court opinion is not basis for mistake of law defense when opinion is clearly factually distinguishable. People v. Lesslie, 24 P.3d 22 (Colo. App. 2000).

Applied in People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981); People v. Castro, 657 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1983).

the defendant, the element of submission would be negated because the victim cannot both consent to sexual contact and be made to submit against her will to such contact. People v. Williams, 899 P.2d 306 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court committed reversible error by refusing defendants' request to instruct the jury on the affirmative defense of consent where the evidence bearing on the possible existence of consent, while not strong, at least satisfied the "scintilla" standard required for an instruction on an affirmative defense. People v. Cruz, 903 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1995).

Because the alleged victim's alleged consent would have "negative[d] an element of the [sexual assault] offense", the trial court was required to instruct the jury on the affirmative defense of consent. People v. Cruz, 903 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section does not impose a requirement that the jury be instructed on an affirmative defense of consent in a case under the first degree sexual assault statute which itself requires, in effect, that the prosecution prove a lack of consent. People v. Cruz, 923 P.2d 311 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court did not err in refusing to give jury instruction defining the affirmative defense of consent where proof of the elements of the charged offense necessarily required disproof of the issues raised by said defense. People v. Bush, 948 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1997).

PART 6

PARTIES TO OFFENSES - ACCOUNTABILITY

Law reviews: For article, "Colorado Law Concerning Accomplices and Complicity", see 18 Colo. Law. 2317 (1989); for article, "1992 Criminal Law Legislative Update", see 21 Colo. Law. 2200 (1992).

18-1-601. Liability based upon behavior. A person is guilty of an offense if it is committed by the behavior of another person for which he is legally accountable as provided in sections 18-1-602 to 18-1-607.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 406, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-701.

ANNOTATION

Applied in People v. Calvaresi, 198 Colo. 321, 600 P.2d 57 (1979); People v. R.V., 43 Colo. App. 349, 606 P.2d 1311 (1979); People v. R.V., 635 P.2d 892 (Colo. 1981).

18-1-602. Behavior of another. (1) A person is legally accountable for the behavior of another person if:

(a) He is made accountable for the conduct of that person by the statute defining the offense or by specific provision of this code; or

(b) He acts with the culpable mental state sufficient for the commission of the offense in question and he causes an innocent person to engage in such behavior.

(2) As used in subsection (1) of this section, "innocent person" includes any person who is not guilty of the offense in question, despite his behavior, because of duress, legal incapacity or exemption, or unawareness of the criminal nature of the conduct in question or of the defendant's criminal purpose, or any other factor precluding the mental state sufficient for the commission of the offense in question.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 406, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-702.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Applied in People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977).

18-1-603. Complicity. A person is legally accountable as principal for the behavior of another constituting a criminal offense if, with the intent to promote or facilitate the commission of the offense, he or she aids, abets, advises, or encourages the other person in planning or committing the offense.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 406, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-703. L. 97: Entire section amended, p. 1540, § 3, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Trial and Punishment.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Indictment or Information.
 - C. Evidence.
 - D. Instructions.
- III. Illustrative Cases.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 89 (1963). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-603 is similar to former § 40-1-12, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Common law. At common law an accessory before the fact is he who, being absent at the time of the actual perpetration of the offense, procures, counsels, commands, assists, or abets another to commit it. One who is present aiding and abetting the fact to be committed was considered a principal in the second degree. Komrs v. People, 31 Colo. 212, 73 P. 25 (1903).

If general assembly has power to forbid anything, it has power to forbid incitement thereto. People v. UMW, Dist. 15, 70 Colo. 269, 201 P. 54 (1921).

Purpose of section. Essence of accessory statute establishing guilt equal to that of principal is to punish for participation in the criminal act. People v. Grass, 180 Colo. 346, 505 P.2d 1301 (1973).

Complicity and conspiracy are not separate offenses with essentially identical elements. People v. Medina, 72 P.3d 405 (Colo. App. 2003).

Conspiracy distinguished. Under this section, a defendant is held accountable for a criminal offense committed by another if the defendant participates in the criminal act by intentionally aiding, abetting, or advising the other person in planning or committing the offense. In contrast, the essence of the crime of conspiracy is an illegal agreement or combination, plus an overt act in furtherance of that agreement. People v. Hood, 878 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1994).

Complicity is not a separate and distinct crime or offense. People v. R.V., 635 P.2d 892 (Colo. 1981).

Complicity is not a separate and distinct crime or offense under the criminal code and it is not necessary to specifically charge complicity. People v. Thompson, 655 P.2d 416 (Colo. 1982); People v. Thurman, 948 P.2d 69 (Colo. App. 1997).

Complicity is merely a theory by which a defendant becomes accountable for a criminal offense committed by another. People v. Thompson, 655 P.2d 416 (Colo. 1982); People v. Thurman, 948 P.2d 69 (Colo. App. 1997); People v. Medina, 72 P.3d 405 (Colo. App. 2003).

No fine or imprisonment may be imposed for complicity since it is merely a theory of law by which a defendant becomes accountable for a criminal offense committed through the conduct of another, the punishment is imposed for the underlying crime and not for complicity. People v. R.V., 635 P.2d 892 (Colo. 1981).

Conviction of defendant upheld on theory of complicity to criminally negligent homicide on basis that jury could find defendant guilty if it believed that defendant knew that the principal was about to engage in conduct that was a gross deviation from the standard of care that a reasonable person would exercise, even though the principal was not charged with criminally negligent homicide. Such knowledge on the part of the alleged complicitor is sufficient to meet the requirement that the complicitor had knowledge that the principal intended to commit the crime. People v. Wheeler, 772 P.2d 101 (Colo. 1989).

Accomplice liability tracks that degree of knowledge that the complicitor's actions of aiding and abetting evince, and, where the complicitor is engaged in a common enterprise with the principal, he or she may be held liable as a complicitor for reckless crimes. Grissom v. People, 115 P.3d 1280 (Colo. 2005).

Conviction as a complicitor, under the complicity statute, requires that: (1) The principal committed the crime; (2) the complicitor had knowledge that the principal intended to commit the crime; and (3) the complicitor aided or encouraged, with specific intent to aid or encourage, the principal's commission of the crime. People v. Wilson, 791 P.2d 1247 (Colo.

App. 1990); People v. Fisher, 904 P.2d 1326 (Colo. App. 1994).

A criminal defendant may be a complicitor to the crime of accessory by rendering assistance to another who is engaged in destroying evidence of a crime, even though the crime underlying the accessory charge may have been committed by the defendant. People v. Ager, 928 P.2d 784 (Colo. App. 1996).

Requirement that a defendant knew another person intended to commit a crime for purposes of being convicted as a complicitor is met where the principal consciously caused the prohibited sexual contact with the child. People v. Moore, 877 P.2d 840 (Colo. 1994).

Section distinguished from solicitation statute. Although encouragement of a criminal offense is prohibited under both § 18-2-301 and this section, the solicitation statute concerns incomplete acts, and the complicity statute covers consummated criminal offenses. Because the provisions proscribe distinguishable behavior, there is no violation of equal protection. Alonzi v. People, 198 Colo. 160, 597 P.2d 560 (1979).

Liability of accessory and associates governed by same principle. Where one is an accessory he of necessity must act in concert with some other or others and whether charged jointly or separately the legal consequences arising from his conduct and that of his associates are measured by the same principle. Bacino v. People, 104 Colo. 229, 90 P.2d 5 (1939).

There is no statutory distinction between accessories before the fact and principals. Noble v. People, 23 Colo. 9, 45 P. 376 (1896); Pacheco v. People, 96 Colo. 401, 43 P.2d 165 (1935); Harris v. People, 139 Colo. 9, 335 P.2d 550 (1959); Martinez v. People, 166 Colo. 524, 444 P.2d 641 (1968).

Thus, one who is an accessory to a crime is guilty of the same degree of crime as the principal. Atwood v. People, 176 Colo. 183, 489 P.2d 1305 (1971).

One who comes under this section is equivalent to a principal. People v. Saiz, 42 Colo. App. 469, 600 P.2d 97 (1979).

An accessory who stands by and aids, abets, or assists in the perpetration of a crime is deemed and considered as a principal and punished accordingly. Medina v. People, 168 Colo. 255, 450 P.2d 662 (1969).

An accessory standing by, aiding, abetting, or assisting in a kidnapping is guilty as a principal. Brady v. People, 175 Colo. 252, 486 P.2d 436 (1971).

An accessory to a crime of violence as defined by § 16-11-309 (2) may be charged, tried, and punished as a principal. People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981).

A person who intends to aid the principal in committing murder and who possesses the intent to murder a person is criminally liable for the killing of an unintended third party by the principal. To decide otherwise would defeat the purpose of the complicity statute, which provides that a complicitor is "legally accountable as principal". People v. Candelaria, 107 P.3d 1080 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 148 P.3d 178 (Colo. 2006).

It is not true that if one is not a conspirator he cannot be an accessory. Jacobs v. People, 174 Colo. 403, 484 P.2d 107 (1971).

One who merely aids and advises another in a legitimate matter is not an accessory within the meaning of this section. French v. People, 6 Colo. App. 311, 40 P. 463 (1895).

Definition of "abets" encompasses "encourages". Alonzi v. People, 198 Colo. 160, 597 P.2d 560 (1979).

A bystander is not required to endanger his own safety by interfering and giving help to prevent the commission of a crime, in order to avoid being held an accessory under this section. Farrell v. People, 8 Colo. App. 524, 46 P. 841 (1896).

Defendant's involvement as a conspirator and as a complicitor was tied to separate and distinct crimes, and the doctrine of merger did not apply. People v. Shannon, 189 Colo. 287, 539 P.2d 480 (1975).

Section applies to felony murder. A complicitor, being a principal, is included in the felony murder statute as one who commits or attempts to commit the underlying felony. People v. Saiz, 42 Colo. App. 469, 600 P.2d 97 (1979).

Colorado courts have recognized that complicity liability applies to attempt offenses. Thus, attempted murder is not an inchoate crime. People v. Candelaria, 107 P.3d 1080 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 148 P.3d 178 (Colo. 2006).

Applied in Polochio v. People, 76 Colo. 574, 233 P. 833 (1925); Stewart v. People, 83 Colo. 289, 264 P. 720 (1928); De Salvo v. People, 98 Colo. 368, 56 P.2d 28 (1936); Thompson v. People, 139 Colo. 15, 336 P.2d 93 (1959), cert. denied, 361 U.S. 972, 80 S. Ct. 606, 4 L. Ed.2d 552 (1960); Kelley v. People, 166 Colo. 322, 443 P.2d 734 (1968); Mingo v. People, 171 Colo. 474, 468 P.2d 849 (1970); Brady v. People, 175 Colo. 252, 486 P.2d 436 (1971); People v. Cox, 190 Colo. 326, 546 P.2d 956 (1976); People v. Brionez, 39 Colo. App. 396, 570 P.2d 1296 (1977); People v. Simien, 656 P.2d 698 (Colo. 1983).

II. TRIAL AND PUNISHMENT.

A. In General.

In order for a defendant to be accountable as a principal under this section, it must be shown (1) that the principal actually committed the robbery; (2) that defendant had knowledge that the principal intended to commit the crime; and (3) that defendant aided, abetted, or advised the principal in planning or committing the offense. People v. Martin, 192 Colo. 491, 561 P.2d 776 (1977); People v. Thompson, 655 P.2d 416 (Colo. 1982).

It is immaterial whether the principal was identified by name in the complicity count against the defendant. People v. Martin, 192 Colo. 491, 561 P.2d 776 (1977).

Formal agreement is not required. It is not necessary that persons implicated in crime shall have reached a formal or distinct agreement either orally or in writing as to the exact procedure in the accomplishment thereof. Harris v. People, 139 Colo. 9, 335 P.2d 550 (1959).

Defendant need not perform all acts necessary to offense. Where two or more are involved in the commission of a criminal offense and one helps the other, though not actually performing all the acts necessary to the commission of the offense, all are, nevertheless, principal offenders and are punishable as though all have committed the necessary acts. Reed v. People, 171 Colo. 421, 467 P.2d 809 (1970).

Absence from state at time of crime does not prevent conviction. That defendant charged as accessory in a criminal case was at all times during the happening of the events involved in the crime in another state does not invalidate conviction. Newton v. People, 96 Colo. 246, 41 P.2d 300 (1935).

No election required as to which defendant was accessory. There was no error in the trial court's refusing to compel the district attorney to elect, before the evidence was presented, as to which defendant was principal and which accessory. Block v. People, 125 Colo. 36, 240 P.2d 512 (1951), cert. denied, 343 U.S. 978, 72 S. Ct. 1076, 96 L. Ed. 1370, reh'g denied, 344 U.S. 848, 73 S. Ct. 6, 97 L. Ed. 659 (1952).

An accessory who stands by and aids in the perpetration of a crime may properly be charged as a principal, and in the case of codefendants it is unnecessary to spell out which one is the principal and which the accessory, nor is it necessary to characterize and classify the specific acts of each. Schreiner v. People, 146 Colo. 19, 360 P.2d 443, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 856, 82 S. Ct. 94, 7 L. Ed.2d 53 (1961).

In the case of codefendants it is unnecessary to spell out which one is the principal and which the accessory. McGregor v. People, 176 Colo. 309, 490 P.2d 287 (1971).

When two persons are charged with the same crime, the prosecution is not required to spell out which one is the principal and which is the accessory. People v. Scheidt, 182 Colo. 374, 513 P.2d 446 (1973).

Applied in People v. Saars, 196 Colo. 294, 584 P.2d 622 (1978); People v. Alonzi, 40 Colo. App. 507, 580 P.2d 1263 (1978).

B. Indictment or Information.

An accessory may be charged as principal. Voris v. People, 75 Colo. 574, 227 P. 551 (1924); Newton v. People, 96 Colo. 246, 41 P.2d 300 (1935); Pacheco v. People, 96 Colo. 401, 43 P.2d 165 (1935); Bacino v. People, 104 Colo. 229, 90 P.2d 5 (1939); Erwin v. People, 126 Colo. 28, 245 P.2d 1171 (1952); Harris v. People, 139 Colo. 9, 335 P.2d 550 (1959); Martinez v. People, 166 Colo. 524, 444 P.2d 641 (1968).

An accessory may be indicted and punished as a principal. People v. Zobel, 54 Colo. 284, 130 P. 837 (1913); Mulligan v. People, 68 Colo. 17, 189 P. 5 (1920); Harris v. People, 139 Colo. 9, 335 P.2d 550 (1959).

If accessories are under the law deemed and considered as principals, then they are principals insofar as the indictment, trial, and punishment are concerned. Mulligan v. People, 68 Colo. 17, 189 P. 5 (1920); Harris v. People, 139 Colo. 9, 335 P.2d 550 (1959).

The acts of the principal are the acts of the accessory, and the accessory may be charged and punished accordingly as a principal. Oaks v. People, 161 Colo. 561, 424 P.2d 115 (1967).

A person who aids, abets, or assists in the perpetration of a criminal offense becomes an accessory to that offense and is chargeable and punishable as a principal. Reed v. People, 171 Colo. 421, 467 P.2d 809 (1970).

An accessory who stands by and aids in the perpetration of a crime may properly be charged as a principal. McGregor v. People, 176 Colo. 309, 490 P.2d 287 (1971).

An accessory charged as a principal for an accessory is deemed and considered a principal, punishable as a principal, and plainly shall be charged as a principal. Fernandez v. People, 176 Colo. 346, 490 P.2d 690 (1971).

Nothing substantial was added to the charge by adding the charge that defendants had aided, counseled, and procured the burning, since, in Colorado, one who aids and abets or advises or encourages is deemed and considered a principal, and may be charged as a principal. People v. Buckner, 180 Colo. 65, 504 P.2d 669 (1972).

A defendant may be charged as the principal in a criminal transaction and subsequently tried as an accessory. People v. Scheidt, 182 Colo. 374, 513 P.2d 446 (1973).

One charged as a principal may be tried and convicted as a complicitor. People v. Mason, 642 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1982).

Proper charge satisfies constitution. All participants in the crime are made guilty of the crime under the statute, and therefore when properly charged with the crime, they are sufficiently advised of the accusation against them, within the requirement of the constitutional provision that accused shall have the right to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him. Mulligan v. People, 68 Colo. 17, 189 P. 5 (1920); Fernandez v. People, 176 Colo. 346, 490 P.2d 690 (1971).

Particulars in which he aided need not be recited. The particulars in which an accessory aided and abetted or advised and encouraged the principal need not be recited. Newton v. People, 96 Colo. 246, 41 P.2d 300 (1935); Martinez v. People, 166 Colo. 524, 444 P.2d 641 (1968).

In the case of codefendants it is unnecessary to characterize and classify the specific acts of the principal and the accessory. McGregor v. People, 176 Colo. 309, 490 P.2d 287 (1971).

It is ultimately the jury's responsibility to determine the specific role a defendant plays. People v. Scheidt, 182 Colo. 374, 513 P.2d 446 (1973).

C. Evidence.

Elements may be established by reasonable inference. That one charged as accessory to crime had knowledge of the principal's intention, coincided therewith, and cooperated in his efforts may be established by reasonable inference from other established facts and circumstances. Harris v. People, 139 Colo. 9, 335 P.2d 550 (1959).

In the trial of an alleged accessory, the state must show by some substantial proof, either directly or by conclusive circumstances, that the accessory had some knowledge of the principal's offense. Dressel v. People, 178 Colo. 115, 495 P.2d 544 (1972).

An admission by alleged principal may be introduced as evidence of the principal's guilt so long as all references to the defendant-accessory are effectively deleted. People v. Knapp, 180 Colo. 280, 505 P.2d 7 (1973).

Defendants' statements were admissible in prosecution for attempted theft where those statements were not offered to prove conspiracy, but rather to show each defendant's complicity in offense, and court made it clear that it considered any statement offered only as evidence against the defendant who made it. People v. Adams, 678 P.2d 572 (Colo. App. 1984).

Prosecutor at defendant-accessory's trial permitted to introduce evidence establishing principal's guilt. Before a defendant may be convicted as an accessory, the jury must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that his accomplice, as the principal, is also guilty of the crime, and in order to satisfy that burden of proof, the prosecution is allowed to introduce evidence otherwise inadmissible at the defendant-accessory's trial for the limited purpose of establishing the guilt of the principal. People v. Scheidt, 182 Colo. 374, 513 P.2d 446 (1973).

Principal's mental state not relevant. Only the defendant's mental state is relevant in proving a charge of complicity. Accordingly, it is no defense that the person with whom the defendant acted is legally not responsible for the crime. People v. McCoy, 944 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1996).

Evidence established intent. Where the evidence discloses that the defendants, acting in concert with another, inflicted stab wounds upon the complaining witness and other victims of the assault, a claim that a defendant had no specific intent to commit bodily injury on the person of the complaining witness, and therefore is not accountable for injuries to her, is without merit. Harris v. People, 139 Colo. 9, 335 P.2d 550 (1959).

Evidence sufficient to make a prima facie case. Whitman v. People, 161 Colo. 110, 420 P.2d 416 (1966).

D. Instructions.

Evidence warranting instruction on accessory. Erwin v. People, 126 Colo. 28, 245 P.2d 1171 (1952).

Where two persons are acting in concert, one holding the victims at bay, the other emptying the cash register, an instruction on accessory is in order. Schreiner v. People, 146 Colo. 19, 360 P.2d 443, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 856, 82 S. Ct. 94, 7 L. Ed.2d 53 (1961); Cruz v. People, 147 Colo. 528, 364 P.2d 561 (1961), cert. denied, 368 U.S. 978, 82 S. Ct. 483, 7 L. Ed.2d 440 (1962).

An accomplice or accessory instruction is applicable and proper where the evidence indicates that one of the defendants was standing by and was aiding, abetting, or assisting in the perpetration of the crime. Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968).

Where two or more persons jointly engage in the commission of a crime, the giving of an accessory instruction is proper. Tanksley v. People, 171 Colo. 77, 464 P.2d 862 (1970); McGregor v. People, 176 Colo. 309, 490 P.2d 287 (1971).

Complicity instruction given when joint crime. An instruction on complicity may be given when two or more people engage jointly in a crime. People v. Naranjo, 200 Colo. 11, 612 P.2d 1106 (1980); People v. Thurman, 948 P.2d 69 (Colo. App. 1997).

But court is not required to instruct jury that it must reach a unanimous decision as to whether defendant is convicted as a principal or as a complicitor. Committing a crime either as a principal or complicitor are alternative legal theories and two means of committing a single offense, and are not an impermissible definitional distinction pertaining to a party's status. People v. Hall, 60 P.3d 728 (Colo. App. 2002).

Instruction not error simply because possibility of inconsistent verdict. The trial court did not err by instructing on complicity and on sexual assault when the defendant was aided or abetted by others simply because the instructions, when given together, could lead to an inconsistent verdict. People v. Naranjo, 200 Colo. 11, 612 P.2d 1106 (1980).

If request made, court required to give limiting instruction. If a request is made for an instruction limiting the use of evidence introduced to establish guilt of principal, the court is required to caution the jury that the evidence can be considered only to show the guilt of the principal and not that of the defendant-accessory. People v. Scheidt, 182 Colo. 374, 513 P.2d 446 (1973).

If no request made, no duty to limit jury's consideration. Where the defendant failed to request a limiting instruction both at the time the evidence was introduced and at the close of the trial, absent such a request, there was no duty on the trial court to limit the jury's consideration of the testimony. People v. Scheidt, 182 Colo. 374, 513 P.2d 446 (1973).

Instruction on criminal responsibility held not erroneous. An instruction designed to inform the jury regarding the criminal responsibility of the persons engaged in the concerted common purpose of committing a felony, where the accessory, made a principal by statute, is tried under a separate information is not erroneous. Bacino v. People, 104 Colo. 229, 90 P.2d 5 (1939).

Instruction using phrase has "advised or encouraged" is not erroneous. Under the provisions of this section that an accessory is one who has "advised and encouraged, etc.", a court instruction using the phrase, has "advised or encouraged", held not erroneous. Voris v. People, 75 Colo. 574, 227 P. 551 (1924).

Instruction given was sufficient. Instruction given, which was couched in the language of the statute and which was read together with the courts' general reasonable doubt instruction, was sufficient to instruct jury properly on complicity. People v. Lillie, 707 P.2d 1043 (Colo. App. 1985).

Words "with intent to promote or facilitate" are not words of uncommon meaning which are apt to be misunderstood by a jury and therefore require further definition. People v. R.V., 635 P.2d 892 (Colo. 1981).

Failure of trial court to give cautionary instruction on accomplices does not constitute reversible error, where there was ample corroboration. Miller v. People, 92 Colo. 481, 22 P.2d 626 (1933).

Statutory definitions of mens rea not applicable to complicity. Since complicity is not a substantive crime, the statutory definitions of mens rea do not apply, and instructions defining the mens rea elements of "specific intent" and "intentionally or with intent" are not applicable to, or a necessary element of, the definition of complicity. People v. R.V., 635 P.2d 892 (Colo. 1981).

Erroneous instruction including mens rea is harmless error. The statutory definitions of mens rea are not necessary elements of complicity. Where an erroneous instruction on complicity requires the finding of a higher standard of culpability, such failure inures to the benefit of the defendant and constitutes harmless error. People v. Simien, 671 P.2d 1021 (Colo. App. 1983).

Asserted errors are not structural because the plain language of the pattern complicity instruction sufficiently reflects the complicitor's two mental state requirements under the complicity statute: (1) The defendant had the requisite mens rea for the underlying crime committed by the principal; and (2) the defendant intended that his own conduct would promote or facilitate the commission of the crimes committed by the principal. Bogdanov v. People, 941 P.2d 247 (Colo. 1997) (disapproved of by Supreme Court in Griego v. People, 19 P.3d 1 (Colo. 2001)).

An incorrect jury instruction in a criminal case is not a structural error; instead, such instruction is subject only to harmless or plain error review, following the U.S. supreme court precedent in Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1 (1999). Therefore, if a conviction is not attributable to the incorrect instruction, a conviction shall not be overturned and all contrary precedent is disapproved of. Griego v. People, 19 P.3d 1 (Colo. 2001) (disapproving on this point Cooper v. People, 973 P.2d 1234 (Colo. 1999), Bogdanov v. People, 941 P.2d 247 (Colo. 1997), People v. Vance, 933 P.2d 576 (Colo. 1997), People v. Villa-Villa, 983 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1999)).

"All or part of" language in the standard complicity instruction was not plain error, even though the defendant being charged with the underlying crime under a complicity theory did not actually commit any of the essential elements of that crime and one principal alone committed all elements of the crime. Bogdanov v. People, 941 P.2d 247 (Colo. 1997).

Evidence sufficient to warrant complicity instruction. Evidence led to a reasonable inference that defendant knew of the other man's possession and intent to distribute controlled substances and that defendant facilitated that conduct by allowing the other man to use his apartment for those purposes. People v. Chavez, 190 P.3d 760 (Colo. App. 2007).

Submission of complicity instruction was error and not harmless where there was no evidence with respect to the existence of an accomplice, despite strong evidence of defendant's guilt on the underlying offense. People v. Gonzales, 728 P.2d 384 (Colo. App. 1986).

Trial court erred in giving complicity instruction. Although the jury was instructed on first degree assault and sexual assault charges that, in order to convict, it must find that defendant's wife intended to commit the crime of sexual assault on a child, that defendant must have known that she intended to commit that crime, and that the defendant did not intentionally aid, abet, advise or encourage her in committing this crime, the evidence did not justify that the wife voluntarily committed sexual assault on her daughter or that defendant's actions were designed to aid her in carrying out such an intent. People v. Moore, 860 P.2d 549 (Colo. App. 1993).

But trial court erred in refusing to give complicity instruction where evidence supported theory that defendant and co-defendant had engaged jointly in crimes. Complicity instruction was warranted when there was evidence that defendant had previously confessed to shootings and admitted that co-defendant had driven car, and that neighborhood residents had seen two persons, a shooter and a driver, involved in the crimes. Despite defendant's assertion at trial that he had falsely admitted to the shootings and had switched roles with co-defendant, the evidence was sufficient to support a jury instruction on complicity. People v. Grant, 30 P.3d 667 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd on other grounds, 48 P.3d 543 (Colo. 2002).

Erroneous instruction on value of stolen property received. Where defendant received property knowing it to have been stolen, and subsequently received from the same parties additional property, fruits of a burglary committed at his suggestion but in which he did not participate, it was error for the trial court to instruct the jury that in arriving at the value of the property received they were limited to the value of such as was "shown to have been stolen prior to the time any knowledge thereof came to the defendant". People v. Spinuzza, 99 Colo. 303, 62 P.2d 471 (1936).

III. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Insufficient evidence to show occupant of automobile was accessory. Where two men were charged with causing death by operating a car in a reckless manner while intoxicated, and the only evidence supporting the charge that defendant was an accessory was that he was in the car and was under the influence of intoxicating liquor at the time of the accident, it could not be successfully contended from the evidence that defendant in any way aided and abetted in that regard. Quintana v. People, 106 Colo. 174, 102 P.2d 486 (1940).

Participant in robbery during which homicide is committed. If a homicide is committed by one of defendant's associates while engaged in a robbery in furtherance of a common purpose, defendant is guilty of murder in the first degree. Abshier v. People, 87 Colo. 507, 289 P. 1081 (1930).

To convict defendant of attempted murder as a complicitor, defendant must have had the culpable mental state required for attempted murder and must have intended that his own conduct promote or facilitate the commission of attempted first degree murder committed by the principal. People v. Candelaria, 107 P.3d 1080 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 148 P.3d 178 (Colo. 2006).

Culpability of participant in assault. Where defendants and another agree to embark upon an enterprise of stealing hubcaps from automobiles, stole a hubcap from a car belonging to one of the victims of their assault, and upon being pursued and overtaken attack their pursuers, severely cutting and beating them, the assault and the use of knives being concerted and participated in by all three thieves, all are guilty of assault with a deadly weapon. Harris v. People, 139 Colo. 9, 335 P.2d 550 (1959).

Where the evidence disclosed that only slight injury was inflicted on deceased in an altercation with defendant, and that thereafter deceased was severely beaten by a third party, resulting in his death, and there was no evidence that defendant participated therein or that there was an express or tacit understanding between defendant and such third party to injure deceased through a common unlawful purpose, defendant was not an accessory to the acts of such third party. Smith v. People, 142 Colo. 523, 351 P.2d 457 (1960).

Principles of complicity apply to sexual assault in the first degree such that if the actor or an accomplice is armed with and uses a deadly weapon then both may be found to have committed a class 2 felony. People v. Walford, 716 P.2d 137 (Colo. App. 1985).

Proof that the complicitor had some knowledge of the principal's offense may be sufficient. Evidence was sufficient to establish that defendant knew that his companion had a knife in his possession and planned to rob the male robbery victim after both men were informed by the woman victim that her husband was in the house. People v. Wilson, 791 P.2d 1247 (Colo. App. 1990).

Record supported jury's determination that defendant was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of first degree assault where defendant was a complicitor in the robbery of the victim, and in the course of or in furtherance of that crime, the victim was seriously injured by one of the individuals involved in the robbery. Defendant may be held responsible for that serious bodily injury whether or not he knew that someone else intended to inflict it. People v. Fisher, 904 P.2d 1326 (Colo. App. 1994) (decided under law as it existed prior to 1995 repeal of § 18-3-202 (1)(d)).

One agreeing in advance to buy stolen property. Under this section if one agrees in advance to buy stolen property, knowing that the property is to be stolen, he thereby encourages the perpetration of the theft, and if the crime is committed he is deemed and considered as principal and punished accordingly. Miller v. People, 92 Colo. 481, 22 P.2d 626 (1933); People v. Lamirato, 180 Colo. 250, 504 P.2d 661 (1972).

Where there was evidence presented at trial to the effect that the defendant had stated, prior to the theft, that he would take all the color television sets which could be provided, and there was evidence from which a jury could properly infer that the defendant knew that the television sets would be stolen, the evidence was sufficient to permit submission of the theft by taking count to the jury, it being properly instructed as to an accessory becoming liable as a principal. People v. Lamirato, 180 Colo. 250, 504 P.2d 661 (1972).

Purchaser from one knowingly unauthorized to sell liquor. Under this section each person presenting himself as a buyer from one knowingly unauthorized to sell liquor, became a participant in the act of selling. Walt v. People, 46 Colo. 136, 104 P. 89 (1909).

One who knowingly rents premises to be occupied for the purpose of prostitution, and which with his knowledge are conducted as a bawdy house, aids, abets, and assists in keeping and maintaining a house of ill-fame, for the obvious reason that by his affirmative act he knowingly aids another to commit that offense, and as this section makes him a principal, he may be proceeded against and punished accordingly. Griffin v. People, 44 Colo. 533, 99 P. 321 (1908).

Employee not liable for embezzlement of manager. A conviction for embezzlement by a warehouseman of property must be reversed when there is no evidence to show that the defendant actually took part in the crime and the prosecution failed to establish that the defendant had some knowledge that the manager had perpetrated the crime. Dressel v. People, 178 Colo. 115, 495 P.2d 544 (1972).

Complicity in arson. Evidence was sufficient to make prima facie case against two defendants as complicitors. People v. Calvaresi, 198 Colo. 321, 600 P.2d 57 (1979).

18-1-604. Exemptions from liability based upon behavior of another. (1) Unless otherwise provided by the statute defining the offense, a person shall not be legally accountable for behavior of another constituting an offense if he is a victim of that offense or the offense is so defined that his conduct is inevitably incidental to its commission.

(2) It shall be an affirmative defense to a charge under section 18-1-603 if, prior to the commission of the offense, the defendant terminated his effort to promote or facilitate its commission and either gave timely warning to law enforcement authorities or gave timely warning to the intended victim.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 406, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-704.

Cross references: For other provisions concerning affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805.

18-1-605. Liability based on behavior of another - no defense. In any prosecution for an offense in which criminal liability is based upon the behavior of another pursuant to sections 18-1-601 to 18-1-604, it is no defense that the other person has not been prosecuted for or convicted of any offense based upon the behavior in question or has been convicted of a different offense or degree of offense, or the defendant belongs to a class of persons who by definition of the offense are legally incapable of committing the offense in an individual capacity.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 406, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-705.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-605 is similar to former § 40-1-12, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

At common law a conviction of the principal was required to precede or accompany that of one charged as an accessory and the accessory was subject to the same punishment as the principal. Howard v. People, 97 Colo. 550, 51 P.2d 594 (1935).

The conviction of the principal is not a condition precedent to the conviction of an accessory after the fact, before, or during the fact. Oaks v. People, 161 Colo. 561, 424 P.2d 115 (1967).

An accessory is subject to independent prosecution and can be convicted even though principal actor has been neither charged nor convicted of an offense. Oaks v. Patterson, 278 F. Supp. 703 (D. Colo.), aff'd on other grounds, 400 F.2d 392 (10th Cir. 1968).

He may be convicted of a greater crime than the principal, who pled guilty to a lesser included crime, and according to the state, acted under influence of accessory when shooting decedent; such conviction does not deny accessory due process. Oaks v. Patterson, 278 F. Supp. 703 (D. Colo.), aff'd on other grounds, 400 F.2d 392 (10th Cir. 1968).

Dismissal of information as to principal does not justify discharge of accessory by court. The dismissal of an information as to a principal, and his discharge, does not justify the discharge of the accessory by the court of its own motion, against the protests of the district attorney. People v. Zobel, 54 Colo. 284, 130 P. 837 (1913).

Applied in People v. Fletcher, 37 Colo. App. 173, 546 P.2d 980 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 193 Colo. 314, 566 P.2d 345 (1977).

18-1-606. Criminal liability of business entities. (1) A business entity is guilty of an offense if:

(a) The conduct constituting the offense consists of an omission to discharge a specific duty of affirmative performance imposed on the business entity by law; or

(b) The conduct constituting the offense is engaged in, authorized, solicited, requested, commanded, or knowingly tolerated by the governing body or individual authorized to manage the affairs of the business entity or by a high managerial agent acting within the scope of his or her employment or in behalf of the business entity.

(2) As used in this section:

(a) "Agent" means any director, officer, or employee of a business entity, or any other person who is authorized to act in behalf of the business entity, and "high managerial agent" means an officer of a business entity or any other agent in a position of comparable authority with respect to the formulation of the business entity's policy or the supervision in a managerial capacity of subordinate employees.

(b) "Business entity" means a corporation or other entity that is subject to the provisions of title 7, C.R.S.; foreign corporations qualified to do business in this state pursuant to article 115 of title 7, C.R.S., specifically including federally chartered or authorized financial institutions; a corporation or other entity that is subject to the provisions of title 11, C.R.S.; or a sole proprietorship or other association or group of individuals doing business in the state.

(3) Every offense committed by a corporation prior to July 1, 1985, which would be a felony if committed by an individual shall subject the corporation to the payment of a fine of not less than one thousand dollars nor more than fifteen thousand dollars. For such offenses committed on or after July 1, 1985, the corporation shall be subject to the payment of a fine within the presumptive ranges authorized by section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (III). Every offense committed by a corporation which would be a misdemeanor or petty offense if committed by an individual shall subject the corporation to the payment of a fine within the minimum and maximum fines authorized by sections 18-1.3-501 and 18-1.3-503 for the particular offense of which the corporation is convicted. For an offense committed on or after July 1, 2003, a business entity shall be subject to the payment of a fine within the presumptive ranges authorized by section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (III). An offense committed by a business entity that would be a misdemeanor or petty offense if committed by an individual shall subject the business entity to the payment of a fine within the minimum and maximum fines authorized by sections 18-1.3-501 and 18-1.3-503 for the particular offense of which the business entity is convicted.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 406, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-706. L. 85: (3) amended, p. 658, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2002: (3) amended, p. 1511, § 180, effective October 1. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 982, § 18, effective April 17.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Prosecution of Employers for Workplace Deaths and Injuries", see 16 Colo. Law. 1974 (1987).

18-1-607. Criminal liability of an individual for corporate conduct. A person is criminally liable for conduct constituting an offense which he performs or causes to occur in the name of or in behalf of a corporation to the same extent as if that conduct were performed or caused by him in his own name or behalf.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 407, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-707.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Prosecution of Employers for Workplace Deaths and Injuries", see 16 Colo. Law. 1974 (1987).

A corporate officer may be criminally liable for embezzlement or larceny of property of third person through a corporate act where the act was performed by the individual officer, or at his direction, or by his permission. Hartson

v. People, 125 Colo. 1, 240 P.2d 907 (1951) (decided under CSA, C. 108, § 102).

It is not grounds for dismissal that defendant did not personally participate in every part of the transaction if, as the evidence indicates, he was the causative force behind acts performed in the corporation's name. People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977).

PART 7

JUSTIFICATION AND EXEMPTIONS
FROM CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY

18-1-701. Execution of public duty. (1) Unless inconsistent with other provisions of sections 18-1-702 to 18-1-710, defining justifiable use of physical force, or with some other provision of law, conduct which would otherwise constitute an offense is justifiable and not criminal when it is required or authorized by a provision of law or a judicial decree binding in Colorado.

- (2) A "provision of law" and a "judicial decree" in subsection (1) of this section mean:
 - (a) Laws defining duties and functions of public servants;
 - (b) Laws defining duties of private citizens to assist public servants in the performance of certain of their functions;
 - (c) Laws governing the execution of legal process;
 - (d) Laws governing the military service and conduct of war;
 - (e) Judgments and orders of court.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 407, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-801.

ANNOTATION

Defense not available to penitentiary guard accused of aiding escape. A penitentiary guard, accused of aiding an escape, whose theory of the case is that he was attempting to apprehend an escaped criminal by using undercover techniques is not entitled to a jury instruction on the affirmative defense of execution of public duty when his authority to make an arrest is limited to penitentiary grounds and there is no evidence he had any authorization to engage in undercover activities. People v. Roberts, 43 Colo. App. 100, 601 P.2d 654 (1979).

Defense not available to deputy sheriff when directed to perform an unauthorized act by sheriff. Deputy sheriff's installation of an eavesdropping device at the direction of the sheriff was not an execution of a public duty when sheriff did not have legal authority to place electronic listening device without court order. People v. Lesslie, 24 P.3d 22 (Colo. App. 2000).

18-1-702. Choice of evils. (1) Unless inconsistent with other provisions of sections 18-1-703 to 18-1-707, defining justifiable use of physical force, or with some other provision of law, conduct which would otherwise constitute an offense is justifiable and not criminal when it is necessary as an emergency measure to avoid an imminent public or private injury which is about to occur by reason of a situation occasioned or developed through no conduct of the actor, and which is of sufficient gravity that, according to ordinary standards of intelligence and morality, the desirability and urgency of avoiding the injury clearly outweigh the desirability of avoiding the injury sought to be prevented by the statute defining the offense in issue.

(2) The necessity and justifiability of conduct under subsection (1) of this section shall not rest upon considerations pertaining only to the morality and advisability of the statute, either in its general application or with respect to its application to a particular class of cases arising thereunder. When evidence relating to the defense of justification under this section is offered by the defendant, before it is submitted for the consideration of the jury, the court shall first rule as a matter of law whether the claimed facts and circumstances would, if established, constitute a justification.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 407, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-802.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment, "Civil Disobedience as the Lesser Evil", see 59 U. Colo. L. Rev. 961 (1988). For article, "Choice of Evils in Colorado", see 18 Colo. Law. 1117 (1989).

The "choice of evils" defense has its roots in the common-law doctrine of necessity, and has long been recognized in criminal law under the latter description. People v. Robertson, 36 Colo. App. 367, 543 P.2d 533 (1975).

This section is really no more than a codification of the common law on "justification defenses". United States v. Best, 476 F. Supp. 34 (D. Colo. 1979).

The statutory codification of the choice of evils defense has its roots in the common-law doctrine of necessity. People v. Strock, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981); Andrews v. People, 800 P.2d 607 (Colo. 1990).

Choice of evils defense may be found even though defendant has requisite intent of "knowingly" with respect to offense charged. People v. Trujillo, 682 P.2d 499 (Colo. App. 1984).

For this defense to be available, it must first be shown that defendant's conduct was necessitated by a specific and imminent threat of injury to his person under circumstances which left him no reasonable and viable alternative other than the violation of the law for which he stands charged. People v. Robertson, 36 Colo. App. 367, 543 P.2d 533 (1975); People v. Handy, 198 Colo. 556, 603 P.2d 941 (1979); People v. Strock, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981); Andrews v. People, 800 P.2d 607 (Colo. 1990).

Normal conditions of confinement will not support a defense of choice of evils pursuant to this section. People v. McKnight, 626 P.2d 678 (Colo. 1981).

Defense is available in prison escape situation where the prisoner is motivated by a definite, specific, and imminent threat of death or substantial bodily injury. People v. Strock, 42 Colo. App. 404, 600 P.2d 91 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981).

The choice of evils defense may be available to justify a prison escape if the facts of the case, as a matter of law, satisfy the conditions stated in this section. People v. McKnight, 626 P.2d 678 (Colo. 1981).

But only if escapee immediately reports duress, or choice of evils, which he faced to the proper authorities when a position of safety is reached. People v. Handy, 198 Colo. 556, 603 P.2d 941 (1979).

Where the charge is escape, the defendant must also show that the escape was committed without violence and that he voluntarily submitted to authorities as soon as a position of safety was reached. People v. McKnight, 626 P.2d 678 (Colo. 1981).

As condition for admitting evidence relating to defense, proper foundation must be laid. As a condition to the admission of evidence relating to the choice of evils defense, a proper foundation must be laid, as indicated by this section. People v. Strock, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981).

The choice of evils defense may only be invoked when an offer of proof is made that establishes the requisite statutory foundation. Andrews v. People, 800 P.2d 607 (Colo. 1990); People v. Brandyberry, 812 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1990).

Court may refuse to give choice of evils instruction when defendant fails to comply with procedural requirements of statute and was given reasonable opportunity to comply. People v. Al-Yousif, 206 P.3d 824 (Colo. App. 2006).

Choice of evils is potentially available as a defense to any criminal charge unless it is inconsistent with other enumerated affirmative defenses or other explicit provisions of the law. People v. Brandyberry, 812 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1990).

Once defense credibly raised, burden of proof shifts to prosecution. Choice of evils is an affirmative defense covered by § 18-1-407, which provides that once “some credible evidence” is presented to raise a defense, the burden is on the prosecution to disprove the defense beyond a reasonable doubt as to that issue as well as all other elements of the offense. People v. Strock, 42 Colo. App. 404, 600 P.2d 91 (1979), rev’d on other grounds, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981).

Evidence entitling defendant to choice of evils instruction. Where defense testimony indicated that three men wearing masks and carrying knives attempted to kill the defendant a few nights prior to the escape, that defendant was informed that there was a “contract on his life”, and that defendant’s cellmates received notes the night of the escape threatening them and the defendant, these facts, if believed by the jury, would show that the defendant was faced with specific and imminent threats mandating a choice of evils instruction. People v. Strock, 42 Colo. App. 404, 600 P.2d 91 (1979), rev’d on other grounds, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981); People v. Brandyberry, 812 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1990).

“Morality” and “advisability” of statute are not to be tried to jury. Subsection (2) of this section does nothing but emphasize that “morality” or “advisability” of a statute are not things to be tried to a jury. United States v. Best, 476 F. Supp. 34 (D. Colo. 1979).

Preliminary determination of admissibility to be decided by court rather than by the jury. United States v. Best, 476 F. Supp. 34 (D. Colo. 1979).

And preliminary ruling by court required. It was well within the province of the general assembly to require that a preliminary ruling by the court would serve as a prerequisite in invoking the defense of choice of evils. People v. Strock, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981).

Defense of choice of evils is very similar to duress and the foundation requirements set forth in the choice of evils statute was intended as a safeguard against abuse of the defense. People v. Strock, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981).

Before a choice of evils defense may be presented to the jury, the trial court must make an initial determination of whether the allegations of facts by the defendant, if proven, would constitute legal justification for the prohibited conduct. Andrews v. People, 800 P.2d 607 (Colo. 1990); People v. Brandyberry, 812 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1990).

The threat to defendant’s person must be so definite, specific, and imminent as to rise beyond mere speculation. People v. Robertson, 36 Colo. App. 367, 543 P.2d 533 (1975); People v. Handy, 198 Colo. 556, 603 P.2d 941 (1979).

The felon with a gun statute, § 18-12-108, must be read in pari materia with this section. People v. Blue, 190 Colo. 95, 544 P.2d 385 (1975).

Trial court finding that no emergency existed to justify a choice of evils defense did not conflict with a finding of an emergency sufficient to permit a reduced sentence. People v. Weiser, 789 P.2d 454 (Colo. App. 1989).

Test for sufficiency of offer of proof. A sufficient offer of proof must establish that: (1) All other potentially viable and reasonable alternative actions were pursued or shown to be futile; (2) the action taken had a direct causal connection with the harm sought to be prevented and would bring about the abatement of the harm; and (3) the action taken was an emergency measure pursued to avoid a specific, definite, and imminent injury about to occur. Andrews v. People, 800 P.2d 607 (Colo. 1990).

Offer of proof is insufficient if the defendants fail to show that their criminal actions, rather than legal actions taken by themselves and others, brought about the abatement of the harm or if the offer merely alleges that other persons have attempted to pursue reasonable alternatives or that the criminal action taken was a more effective alternative. Andrews v. People, 800 P.2d 607 (Colo. 1990).

Evidence of a generalized fear of future injury is not sufficient to warrant the invocation of a choice of evils defense. The evidence must affirmatively demonstrate the existence of a specific threat or likelihood of an imminent injury necessitating the actor’s conduct. People v. Brandyberry, 812 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1990); People v. Metcalf, 926 P.2d 133 (Colo. App. 1996).

A choice of evils defense cannot be based upon economic necessity. People v. Fontes, 89 P.3d 484 (Colo. App. 2003).

If a reasonable legal alternative was available to defendants as a means to avoid the threatened injury, they properly may be foreclosed from asserting a choice of evils defense. People v. Brandyberry, 812 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1990).

A defendant who seeks to assert a choice of evils defense must offer evidence that his conduct did not exceed that reasonably necessary to avoid the impending injury. People v. Brandyberry, 812 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1990).

18-1-703. Use of physical force - special relationships. (1) The use of physical force upon another person which would otherwise constitute an offense is justifiable and not criminal under any of the following circumstances:

(a) A parent, guardian, or other person entrusted with the care and supervision of a minor or an incompetent person, and a teacher or other person entrusted with the care and supervision of a minor, may use reasonable and appropriate physical force upon the minor or incompetent person when and to the extent it is reasonably necessary and appropriate to maintain discipline or promote the welfare of the minor or incompetent person.

(b) A superintendent or other authorized official of a jail, prison, or correctional institution may, in order to maintain order and discipline, use reasonable and appropriate physical force when and to the extent that he reasonably believes it necessary to maintain order and discipline, but he may use deadly physical force only when he reasonably believes it necessary to prevent death or serious bodily injury.

(c) A person responsible for the maintenance of order in a common carrier of passengers, or a person acting under his direction, may use reasonable and appropriate physical force when and to the extent that it is necessary to maintain order and discipline, but he may use deadly physical force only when it is reasonably necessary to prevent death or serious bodily injury.

(d) A person acting under a reasonable belief that another person is about to commit suicide or to inflict serious bodily injury upon himself may use reasonable and appropriate physical force upon that person to the extent that it is reasonably necessary to thwart the result.

(e) A duly licensed physician, advanced practice nurse, or a person acting under his or her direction, may use reasonable and appropriate physical force for the purpose of administering a recognized form of treatment that he or she reasonably believes to be adapted to promoting the physical or mental health of the patient if:

(I) The treatment is administered with the consent of the patient, or if the patient is a minor or an incompetent person, with the consent of his parent, guardian, or other person entrusted with his care and supervision; or

(II) The treatment is administered in an emergency when the physician or advanced practice nurse reasonably believes that no one competent to consent can be consulted and that a reasonable person, wishing to safeguard the welfare of the patient, would consent.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 408, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-803. L. 76: (1)(b) amended, p. 534, § 15, effective April 9. L. 81: (1)(b) to (1)(d) amended, p. 980, § 2, effective May 13. L. 2008: IP(1)(e) and (1)(e)(II) amended, p. 128, § 8, effective January 1, 2009.

Cross references: For the justified use of weapons or other aid to enforce obedience at state correctional facilities, see § 17-20-122; for the use of force in preventing escape from a detention facility, see § 18-1-707 (8); for provisions concerning child abuse, see §§ 18-6-401 and 19-3-102 and part 3 of article 3 of title 19; for the use of force in administering medication to persons with mental illness, see § 27-65-111 (5).

ANNOTATION

Parental privilege is common-law principle codified. The parental privilege set out in subsection (1)(a) and the definition of criminal child abuse in § 18-6-401 codify common-law principles concerning the limits of permissible parental chastisement. People v. Jennings, 641 P.2d 276 (Colo. 1982).

At common law, so long as the chastisement was moderate and reasonable in light of the child's age and condition, the misconduct being punished, the kind of punishment inflicted, the degree of harm done to the child and other relevant circumstances, the parent or custodian would incur neither civil nor criminal liability, even though identical behavior against a stranger would be grounds for an action in tort or prosecution for assault and battery or a similar offense. People v. Jennings, 641 P.2d 276 (Colo. 1982).

Prosecution must establish guilt of child abuse defendant beyond reasonable doubt. Where in a prosecution for child abuse the evidence raises the affirmative defense of justified physical force for disciplinary purposes, the prosecution must establish the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt as to that issue as well as all other elements of the offense. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

Acts similar in character admissible to negate claim of justification. Where all the prior acts of child abuse the prosecution sought to introduce into evidence were committed against the same person, each act was occasioned by normal childhood behavior on the part of the victim, each act was similar in severity in that noticeable bruises and marks were left on the child's body, each act took place while the child's mother was absent, and, finally, each act was followed by the defendant's explanation that it was for disciplinary purposes, the acts were sufficiently similar in character to be admissible for purposes of establishing criminal culpability and of negating any claim of accident or justification. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

Where statutory affirmative defense of reasonable and appropriate discipline was not raised by defense, failure to include the phrase "without justifiable excuse" in a jury instruction on crime of child abuse was not error. People v. Lybarger, 700 P.2d 910 (Colo. 1985).

Applied in People v. R.V., 43 Colo. App. 349, 606 P.2d 1311 (1979).

18-1-704. Use of physical force in defense of a person. (1) Except as provided in subsections (2) and (3) of this section, a person is justified in using physical force upon another person in order to defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of unlawful physical force by that other person, and he may use a degree of force which he reasonably believes to be necessary for that purpose.

(2) Deadly physical force may be used only if a person reasonably believes a lesser degree of force is inadequate and:

(a) The actor has reasonable ground to believe, and does believe, that he or another person is in imminent danger of being killed or of receiving great bodily injury; or

(b) The other person is using or reasonably appears about to use physical force against an occupant of a dwelling or business establishment while committing or attempting to commit burglary as defined in sections 18-4-202 to 18-4-204; or

(c) The other person is committing or reasonably appears about to commit kidnapping as defined in section 18-3-301 or 18-3-302, robbery as defined in section 18-4-301 or 18-4-302, sexual assault as set forth in section 18-3-402, or in section 18-3-403 as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, or assault as defined in sections 18-3-202 and 18-3-203.

(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, a person is not justified in using physical force if:

(a) With intent to cause bodily injury or death to another person, he provokes the use of unlawful physical force by that other person; or

(b) He is the initial aggressor; except that his use of physical force upon another person under the circumstances is justifiable if he withdraws from the encounter and effectively communicates to the other person his intent to do so, but the latter nevertheless continues or threatens the use of unlawful physical force; or

(c) The physical force involved is the product of a combat by agreement not specifically authorized by law.

(4) In a case in which the defendant is not entitled to a jury instruction regarding self-defense as an affirmative defense, the court shall allow the defendant to present evidence, when relevant, that he or she was acting in self-defense. If the defendant presents evidence of self-defense, the court shall instruct the jury with a self-defense law instruction. The court shall instruct the jury that it may consider the evidence of self-defense in determining whether the defendant acted recklessly, with extreme indifference, or in a criminally negligent manner. However, the self-defense law instruction shall not be an affirmative defense instruction and the prosecuting attorney shall not have the burden of disproving self-defense. This section shall not apply to strict liability crimes.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 409, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-804. L. 72: p. 274, § 1. L. 75: (2)(c) amended, p. 632, § 4, effective July 1. L. 79: (2)(c) amended, p. 726, § 1, effective July 1. L. 81: (2)(a) and (3)(a) amended, p. 981, § 3, effective May 13. L. 2000: (2)(c) amended, p. 703, § 27, effective July 1. L. 2003: (4) added, p. 795, § 1, effective March 25.

Cross references: For limitations on civil suits against persons using physical force in defense of a person or to prevent the commission of a felony, see § 13-80-119.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 38 Dicta 65 (1961). For comment on Vigil v. People (143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960)), see 33 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 430 (1961). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 89 (1963). For article, "Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 49 Den. L.J. 137 (1972). For note, "True Equality for Battered Women: The Use of Self-Defense in Colorado", see 70 Den. U. L. Rev. 117 (1992). For article, "Self-Defense in Colorado", see 24 Colo. Law. 2717 (1995).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-704 is similar to former § 40-2-15, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Doctrine of retreat is from common law. There is no statutory provision regarding the duty of a person to retreat before countering the use of force with force. The doctrine derives from the common law. People v. Watson, 671 P.2d 973 (Colo. App. 1983).

The common-law doctrine of retreat to the wall has been modified and is applicable in this jurisdiction only to cases where the defendant voluntarily enters into a fight, or the parties engage in mutual combat, or the defendant, being the assailant, does not endeavor in good faith to decline any further struggle before firing the fatal shot, and possibly to other similar cases. Harris v. People, 32 Colo. 211, 75 P. 427 (1904); Enyart v. People, 67 Colo. 434, 180 P. 722 (1919).

The defendant, if he did not provoke the assault, is not obliged to retreat or flee to save his life, but may stand his ground, and even, in some circumstances, pursue his assailant until the latter has been disarmed or disabled from carrying into effect his unlawful purpose, and this right of the defendant goes even to the extent, if necessary, of taking human life. Boykin v. People, 22 Colo. 496, 45 P. 419 (1896); Enyart v. People, 67 Colo. 434, 180 P. 722 (1919).

Court was correct in not instructing the jury on the mutual combat limitation. There must be a definite agreement to fight in place for the court to issue the instruction. Kaufman v. People, 202 P.3d 542 (Colo. 2009).

Subsection (2)(a) does not require the innocent victim of an assault to retreat before defending himself or herself. People v. Willner, 879 P.2d 19 (Colo. 1994).

The right of self-defense is a natural right and is based on the natural law of self-preservation. Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

Right to kill in self-defense is not limited to cases where assailant intends to commit a felony. Ritchey v. People, 23 Colo. 314, 47 P. 272 (1896).

Defendant was entitled to a jury instruction specifying that the defendant was justified in using deadly physical force if she reasonably perceived that the aggressor appeared about to commit a sexual assault upon her and a degree of force less than deadly physical force was inadequate. This section does not limit the actor's right to use deadly force to those situations in which the aggressor is committing or is about to commit sexual assault on someone other than the actor. People v. Garcia, 1 P.3d 214 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 28 P.3d 340 (Colo. 2001).

Right to kill in defense of another. Where a known felony is attempted upon a person, the party assaulted may repel force by force, and any other person present may interpose for preventing mischief, and if death ensues the party so interposing will be justified. The right thus to assist applies with peculiar force where a relationship exists, such as father, son, brother, or husband. Bush v. People, 10 Colo. 566, 16 P. 290 (1887).

A party who seeks a difficulty cannot avail himself of the doctrine of self-defense. Bush v. People, 10 Colo. 566, 16 P. 290 (1887).

The one invoking the right of self-defense cannot be the aggressor or assailant. Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

Right of self-defense is not lost if danger develops from mild argument. The mere fact that one has interjected himself into a crowd or into a mild situation, does not deprive him of the right of self-defense if the situation beginning with only an argument, develops to a point where he is being subjected to or threatened with such physical violence that he might have to resort to justifiable homicide to protect his person. Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

In order to justify theory of self-defense where the defendant used deadly force, he must have reasonably believed that a lesser degree of force was inadequate and that he or another person was in imminent danger of being killed or of receiving great bodily harm (now great bodily injury). People v. Ferrell, 200 Colo. 128, 613 P.2d 324 (1980).

Apparent necessity may justify application of doctrine of self-defense. The doctrine applies whether the danger is actual or only apparent; actual danger is not necessary in order to justify one in acting in self-defense. Apparent necessity, if well grounded and of such a character as to appeal to a reasonable person, under like conditions and circumstances, as being sufficient to require action, justifies the application of the doctrine of self-defense to the same extent as actual or real necessity. Young v. People, 47 Colo. 352, 107 P. 274 (1910).

Person assailed may act on appearances. When a person has reasonable grounds for believing, and does in fact actually believe, that danger of his being killed or of receiving great bodily harm is imminent, he may act on such appearances and defend himself, even to the extent of taking human life when necessary, although it may turn out that the appearances were false, or although he may have been mistaken as to the extent of the real or actual danger. Young v. People, 47 Colo. 352, 107 P. 274 (1910); People v. La Voie, 155 Colo. 551, 395 P.2d 1001 (1964).

One is entitled to act on appearances in using a deadly weapon to defend himself, but the appearances must be such as, taking into consideration the circumstances at the particular instant, would have caused a reasonable and prudent man to use such weapon for his protection. Henwood v. People, 57 Colo. 544, 143 P. 373, 1916A Ann. Cas. 1111 (1914).

Person coming to the aid of a third party is entitled to assert defense of others even if the third party is not entitled to assert self-defense. Person must only have a reasonable belief that intervention is necessary to protect the third party whom he or she believed was under attack. People v. Silva, 987 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1999).

Character of threat or provocation must be shown. To support the defense of self-defense, it must be shown that the provocation or threat occurred immediately prior to the homicide, and must be of such a character as to place the accused in sudden fear of his life or in fear of great bodily injury. English v. People, 178 Colo. 325, 497 P.2d 691 (1972).

Belief that lesser degree of force is inadequate must be reasonable, and a reckless perception that defendant needed to use the force he did was inconsistent with a reasonable perception, thus, court did not err in ruling that a self-defense instruction was unavailable. People v. Ellis, 30 P.3d 774 (Colo. App. 2001).

In construing subsection (3)(b), according words their plain and ordinary meaning, it is apparent that "initial" means first. People v. Beasley, 778 P.2d 304 (Colo. App. 1989).

When an initial aggressor withdraws from an encounter and effectively communicates his withdrawal to the initial victim, the aggressor becomes a victim entitled to act in self-defense should the initial victim retaliate for the attack. Thus, if the initial victim continues the attack, the victim then becomes the aggressor and is no longer entitled to act in self-defense. People v. Goedecke, 730 P.2d 900 (Colo. App. 1986).

In determining whether "initial aggressor" jury instruction is appropriate in case in which hostilities commence among a group of individuals and escalate to a conclusion without interruption, the conduct of the defendant in the context of the developing situation must be the focus of any analysis of defendant's right to self-defense. People v. Beasley, 778 P.2d 304 (Colo. App. 1989).

Not error for trial court to instruct jury on the initial aggressor exception to self-defense once the court determined to give the self-defense instruction requested by the defendant. People v. Montoya, 928 P.2d 781 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Roadcap, 78 P.3d 1108 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court may give an initial aggressor instruction if there is an inference that defendant initiated the physical conflict by using or threatening the imminent use of unlawful force. Although defendant's initial confrontation was insufficient to make defendant an initial aggressor, returning to the argument with a gun was sufficient. People v. Griffin, 224 P.3d 292 (Colo. App. 2009).

Court did not err in failing to define initial aggressor. Although the court may define the term, there is no basis for error in not defining it when it is unlikely the jury would have relied on the wrong event to apply the initial aggressor doctrine. People v. Griffin, 224 P.3d 292 (Colo. App. 2009).

When evidence is sufficient to raise a question of fact concerning defendant's right to come to the defense of another person who might have been the initial aggressor, it would be proper for the court to instruct the jury concerning the limitation on an initial aggressor's right to assert self-defense, and the right of defendant to act upon a reasonable belief under the circumstances. People v. Silva, 987 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1999).

If a participant determines to withdraw from combat and he effectively communicates that intent to his opponent or opponents, then the requisite intent to commit the crime charged has been abandoned. Under these circumstances, the right of self-defense must be reinstated because there is no requirement in Colorado that one "retreat to the wall" before defending himself. People v. Beasley, 778 P.2d 304 (Colo. App. 1989).

Even if a person is a trespasser, the person does not have to "retreat to the wall" before using deadly force to defend himself, unless the person was the initial aggressor. The pattern jury instruction, COLJI-Crim No. 7:68-7 (15) (1983), improperly suggests that a person who is not an initial aggressor may not use physical force to defend himself if the person is not "where he had a right to be". People v. Toler, 981 P.2d 1096 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd, 9 P.3d 341 (Colo. 2000).

But a trespasser who is subjected to lawful physical force by a property owner has no privilege under this section to use physical force in self-defense because the privilege applies only when the defendant faces unlawful force. Whether a defendant faces unlawful force will depend on whether the defendant entered the property unlawfully. In such a case, it is the better practice for the trial court to give an instruction to the jury indicating that, in determining whether a defendant unlawfully entered a dwelling and whether the defendant reasonably believed that unlawful force was used or imminent, the “make-my-day” provision in § 18-1-704.5 should be considered. People v. Hayward, 55 P.3d 803 (Colo. App. 2002).

Question for jury. Evidence held to clearly justify the submission to the jury of the question as to whether or not the deceased was a person who manifestly intended and endeavored in a violent, riotous, or tumultuous manner to enter the habitation of the defendant for the purpose of assaulting or offering personal violence to any person dwelling or being therein. Bailey v. People, 54 Colo. 337, 130 P. 832 (1913).

Use of word “enormous” instead of “great” in instruction is improper. In an instruction defining the bodily harm to prevent which one may justifiably kill his assailant, the use of the word “enormous” instead of “great” is improper. Ritchey v. People, 23 Colo. 314, 47 P. 272 (1896).

Instruction on use of deadly physical force is to be used only if the victim died. Because no victim died, instruction that defendant was justified in use of physical force if he used that degree of force which he reasonably believed to be necessary was proper. People v. Silva, 987 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1999).

Defendant entitled to instruction on lesser offense of manslaughter. Where during the trial for first degree murder defendant presented a plausible case for self-defense, which even if the jury deemed it to be an overreaction, nevertheless would negate the elements of murder, the trial court should have instructed the jury on the lesser offense of manslaughter, as defendant requested. People v. Miller, 187 Colo. 239, 529 P.2d 648 (1974).

Defendant entitled to have jury instructed on self-defense. A person charged with homicide and defending upon the ground of self-defense is entitled, upon request, to have the jury instructed, when there is conflicting testimony upon the evidence of apparent danger and apparent necessity to kill, as well as upon real danger and actual necessity, and in every aspect of the testimony. To refuse the instruction is a determination by the court of matter of fact, and deprives the accused of his constitutional right to a trial by jury. Young v. People, 47 Colo. 352, 107 P. 274 (1910).

A defendant is entitled to a self-defense instruction if there is any evidence in the record to support the theory that he acted in self-defense. People v. Dillon, 631 P.2d 1153 (Colo. App. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 655 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1982); People v. Smith, 682 P.2d 493 (Colo. App. 1983).

There is an intent element in the consideration of “deadly” physical force. Since defendant’s testimony created a dispute about whether he intended to produce death by use of force, the defendant is entitled to self-defense instructions related to both ordinary physical force and deadly physical force. People v. Vasquez, 148 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2006).

Defendant not entitled to jury instruction on self-defense where defendant did not admit to having engaged in the conduct that led to the charge and then offer self-defense as justification for his action. Also, defendant produced no evidence that he reasonably believed that unlawful force was about to be or was being used against him. People v. Whatley, 10 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2000).

The prosecution bears no burden in disproving self-defense when self-defense is not an affirmative defense. Self-defense is not an affirmative defense if the crime’s mental state is recklessness, criminal negligence, or extreme indifference; rather, it is an element-negating traverse. The court did not err in instructing the jury that the prosecution did not bear the burden of disproving self-defense in relation to the reckless manslaughter charge. People v. Pickering, __ P.3d __ (Colo. 2011) (overruling People v. Lara, 224 P.3d 388 (Colo. App. 2009) and People v. Taylor, 230 P.3d 1227 (Colo. App. 2009)).

Defense of others is an element-changing defense against extreme indifference murder, rather than a mere circumstance for the jury to consider, and must be portrayed as such in instructions to the jury. People v. Lara, 224 P.3d 388 (Colo. App. 2009), overruled on other grounds in People v. Pickering, __ P.3d __ (Colo. 2011).

Prosecution must disprove that defendant acted in reasonable defense of a person in order to prove the elements of extreme indifference murder when that defense is asserted with credible evidence at trial. People v. Lara, 224 P.3d 388 (Colo. App. 2009), overruled in People v. Pickering, __ P.3d __ (Colo. 2011).

Court violated defendant’s due process right by instructing jurors that prosecution “shall not have the burden of disproving self-defense”, when defense of others is asserted with credible evidence at trial. People v. Lara, 224 P.3d 388 (Colo. App. 2009), overruled in People v. Pickering, __ P.3d __ (Colo. 2011).

Self-defense instruction is not necessary in every case where force or the threat of force is used, but only where there is evidence in the record to support it. People v. Dillon, 655 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1982); People v. Janes, 962 P.2d 315 (Colo. App. 1998).

The trial court properly refused to instruct the theory of self-defense because there was no evidence that the defendant reasonably believed that unlawful physical force was imminent against him. People v. Laurson, 15 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 2000).

Even though the general assembly has defined self-defense in this section, it is not improper for the courts to instruct further upon the issue of self-defense. People v. Berry, 703 P.2d 613 (Colo. App. 1985).

The court's instruction for physical self-defense was sufficient. Generally, a jury instruction that tracks the statutory language is considered to be sufficient. People v. Grenier, 200 P.3d 1062 (Colo. App. 2008).

Self-defense instruction required for case involving unreasonable or excessive force during an arrest. Self-defense instruction is required when evidence has been presented that officers displayed weapons and were commanded to discharge them in course of effecting arrest and that their conduct was unreasonable or excessive under the circumstances. People v. Fuller, 781 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1989).

Defendant asserting self-defense, who was not initial aggressor, was entitled to jury instruction regarding no duty to retreat so as to dispel inference that lesser force would have been adequate. Idrogo v. People, 818 P.2d 752 (Colo. 1991); Cassels v. People, 92 P.3d 951 (Colo. 2004).

Defendant was entitled to a jury instruction on the doctrine of no retreat where, on cross examination, the prosecution elicited evidence that defendant had other choices besides killing her husband, implying that she could have retreated rather than kill him. Also, in closing, the prosecution argued that defendant had many choices besides using force upon her husband, including withdrawal from the situation. People v. Garcia, 1 P.3d 214 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 28 P.3d 340 (Colo. 2001).

Self-defense is available as an affirmative defense against charge of heat of passion manslaughter. The general assembly has recognized a reasonable person, suddenly and unexpectedly confronted with potentially deadly or gravely injurious conduct does not act unreasonably by instinctively and passionately striking out at the source of such provoking conduct. Sanchez v. People, 820 P.2d 1103 (Colo. 1991).

Instructions on self-defense held proper. Hinton v. People, 169 Colo. 545, 458 P.2d 611 (1969); People v. Willner, 879 P.2d 19 (Colo. 1994).

In a case where some of the evidence indicated that defendant killed in self-defense to protect his person, an instruction to the effect that a defendant may safely act upon appearances to avoid apprehended danger even though it develops later that the appearances were false and that there was in effect no danger to do him serious injury is appropriate. People v. Tapia, 183 Colo. 141, 515 P.2d 453 (1973).

Instruction held denial of right of self-defense. An instruction to the effect that in order for the doctrine of self-defense to apply, the jury must believe that deceased intended to assault or kill the inmates of the house is error as a denial of the right of self-defense as defined in this section. Bailey v. People, 54 Colo. 337, 130 P. 832 (1913).

Instruction held denial of right to present a defense. When no evidence was presented at trial that defendant intended to provoke a fight with the victims or their friend for the purpose of inflicting injury upon them under a guise of provocation, an instruction on the issue of provoking the victim as an exception to self-defense violated the defendant's right to present a defense. People v. Silva, 987 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1999).

Instruction on self-defense held deficient because it only stated that self-defense is an affirmative defense to the crime of manslaughter if the defendant had reasonable grounds to believe, and did believe, that he or another person was in imminent danger or being killed or receiving great bodily injury; the instruction failed to inform the jury that self-defense is an affirmative defense if the deceased had been committing or reasonably appeared about to commit first or second degree assault. People v. Janes, 982 P.2d 300 (Colo. 1999).

An instruction that defendant must retreat to the wall is erroneous. Where the jury is instructed that the defendant in every case must retreat to the wall before he is entitled to resort to self-defense, the error is manifest. Ritchey v. People, 23 Colo. 314, 47 P. 272 (1896); Enyart v. People, 67 Colo. 434, 180 P. 722 (1919).

Instruction on combat by agreement held deficient because it provided no guidelines as to elements which must be proved by prosecution. People v. Cuevas, 740 P.2d 25 (Colo. App. 1987).

Self-defense may be asserted as a defense to attempted heat of passion manslaughter. Thomas v. People, 820 P.2d 656 (Colo. 1991).

Defendant charged with heat of passion manslaughter may assert a claim of self-defense. Evidence of low IQ and physical and sexual abuse of the defendant in the past is admissible to prove the claim of self defense. People v. Young, 825 P.2d 1004 (Colo. App. 1991).

Self-defense is an available defense against a charge of obstructing a peace officer when a defendant reasonably believes that unreasonable or excessive force is being used by the peace officer. People v. Barrus, 232 P.3d 264 (Colo. App. 2009).

As is instruction that slayer must have had no other probable means of escape. It was error to charge the jury to the effect that to justify homicide on the plea of self-defense it must appear that the slayer had no other possible, or at least probable, means of escaping. Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889); Enyart v. People, 67 Colo. 434, 180 P. 722 (1919).

When the "make-my-day" statute (§18-1-704.5) is being used as an affirmative defense, it is error for a jury instruction to place the burden on the defendant to prove the affirmative defense. People v. Janes, 962 P.2d 315 (Colo. App. 1998).

Assertion of error for failure to give instruction not well taken. Where the record discloses that the defendant did not tender nor request the giving of an instruction on self-defense, nor did he assign the court's failure to give the instruction as a ground for new trial, nor was there evidence to support the giving of such an instruction, for all these reasons the assertion of error for failure to give such instruction is not well taken. People v. Lankford, 185 Colo. 445, 524 P.2d 1382 (1974).

Instruction on provocation of the victim given over defense objection held reversible error because the court failed to determine which issues were raised by the evidence prior to giving the instruction; accordingly, the error was not harmless because the giving of the instruction created a situation that could have been misleading and confusing to the jury. People v. Silva, 987 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1999).

Limitation of right to emergencies is erroneous. In a prosecution for murder an instruction on self-defense which advised the jury that the right of self-defense is based upon the law of necessity, and is only given in emergencies to persons who are attacked, was erroneous. Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

Limitation right of self-defense to persons who do not bring on the difficulty themselves is too broad a statement. Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

Defendant is entitled to present evidence of prior violent act of victim if: (1) The defendant contends that he acted in self-defense and there is competent evidence to support the contention; (2) either the act occurred or the defendant became aware of its occurrence within a reasonable time of the homicide; and (3) the defendant knew of the victim's prior violence at the time of the homicide. People v. Ferrell, 200 Colo. 128, 613 P.2d 324 (1980).

Spouse justified in aiding victimized spouse. A wife is clearly justified in attempting to aid her husband when he is the victim of an assault, and the husband's assailant who, as a result, then assaults the wife cannot claim that his actions were justified on the basis of self-defense. People v. Schliesser, 671 P.2d 993 (Colo. App. 1983).

Self-defense instruction is not appropriate where defendant presents evidence of "battered woman syndrome" but is on trial for contract-for-hire murder of her husband. People v. Yaklich, 833 P.2d 758 (Colo. App. 1991).

Self-defense instruction based on battered woman syndrome is not available in murder for-hire cases, regardless of the definition of "imminent" under this section. A defendant is entitled to an instruction embodying the defendant's theory of the case only if there is evidence to support the theory. In case where a wife hired her husband's killers, the wife's evidence that she suffered from battered woman syndrome was insufficient as a matter of law to support her theory that she was in imminent danger at the time her husband was killed. The trial court, therefore, erred in allowing a self-defense instruction. People v. Yaklich, 833 P.2d 758 (Colo. App. 1992).

Lay witness may offer opinion testimony on intent of victim if witness had sufficient opportunity to observe the person and draw a rational conclusion about the person's state of mind. People v. Jones, 907 P.2d 667 (Colo. App. 1995).

Whether use of knife in defense is excessive force is a jury question. People v. Smith, 682 P.2d 493 (Colo. App. 1983).

No error in refusing to instruct the jury regarding felony menacing where the record was devoid of any evidence or indication that the defendant could have held a reasonable belief that the man he threatened with a knife was engaged in the imminent use of unlawful physical force against defendant's brother. People v. Williams, 827 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in Hardy v. People, 133 Colo. 201, 292 P.2d 973 (1956); Maes v. People, 166 Colo. 15, 441 P.2d 1 (1968); People v. Thompson, 197 Colo. 299, 592 P.2d 803 (1979); People v. Jones, 675 P.2d 9 (Colo. 1984); People v. Reed, 695 P.2d 806 (Colo. App. 1984), cert. denied, 701 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1985).

18-1-704.5. Use of deadly physical force against an intruder. (1) The general assembly hereby recognizes that the citizens of Colorado have a right to expect absolute safety within their own homes.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 18-1-704, any occupant of a dwelling is justified in using any degree of physical force, including deadly physical force, against another person when that other person has made an unlawful entry into the dwelling, and when the occupant has a reasonable belief that such other person has committed a crime in the dwelling in addition to the uninvited entry, or is committing or intends to commit a crime against a person or property in addition to the uninvited entry, and when the occupant reasonably believes that such other person might use any physical force, no matter how slight, against any occupant.

(3) Any occupant of a dwelling using physical force, including deadly physical force, in accordance with the provisions of subsection (2) of this section shall be immune from criminal prosecution for the use of such force.

(4) Any occupant of a dwelling using physical force, including deadly physical force, in accordance with the provisions of subsection (2) of this section shall be immune from any civil liability for injuries or death resulting from the use of such force.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 662, § 1, effective June 6.

Cross references: For limitations on civil suits against persons using physical force in defense of a person or to prevent the commission of a felony, see § 13-80-119.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Self-Defense in Colorado", see 24 Colo. Law. 2717 (1995).

Prerequisite for immunity under this section is an unlawful entry into the dwelling, meaning a knowing, criminal entry. People v. McNeese, 892 P.2d 304 (Colo. 1995).

To be immune from prosecution under this section a defendant must establish by a preponderance of the evidence that he or she had a reasonable belief that the intruder was committing or intended to commit a crime against a person or property in addition to the uninvited entry. This inquiry focuses on the reasonable belief of the occupant, not on the actual conduct of the intruder. People v. McNeese, 892 P.2d 304 (Colo. 1995).

Sufficient evidence existed to support trial court's denial of defendant's pre-trial motion to dismiss on the basis defendant had not met his burden as established by the supreme court. People v. Janes, 962 P.2d 315 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court is authorized to dismiss criminal prosecution at pretrial stage when conditions of statute are satisfied, and this does not infringe upon prosecution's discretion to file charges. People v. Guenther, 740 P.2d 971 (Colo. 1987); Young v. District Court, 740 P.2d 982 (Colo. 1987).

Defendant bears burden of establishing right to immunity by preponderance of evidence when issue of immunity is raised at pretrial stage. People v. Guenther, 740 P.2d 971 (Colo. 1987); People v. Eckert, 919 P.2d 962 (Colo. App. 1996).

Fact that a homicide victim was on the defendant's porch does not permit the defendant to claim immunity from prosecution for unlawful entry to defendant's dwelling unless the court finds that defendant believed that the victim intended to commit a crime or use physical force against the defendant. People v. Young, 825 P.2d 1004 (Colo. App. 1991).

Defendant may still raise immunity as defense at trial when pretrial motion to dismiss is denied. People v. Guenther, 740 P.2d 971 (Colo. 1987).

For purposes of this section, the common areas of an apartment building do not constitute a dwelling. People v. Cushinberry, 855 P.2d 18 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where pretrial motion to dismiss on grounds of statutory immunity provided in this section is denied, defendant may raise it as an affirmative defense at trial. In such case, the burden of proof which is generally applicable to affirmative defenses would apply. People v. Malczewski, 744 P.2d 62 (Colo. 1987).

Section does not authorize an appeal from a pretrial order denying immunity. An order denying defendant's pretrial motion to dismiss under the "make-my-day" statute is not a final judgment and therefore not subject to appeal. In general, the jury's verdict subsumes the trial court's pretrial ruling. A defendant may, however, seek review prior to trial under C.A.R. 21. Wood v. People, 255 P.3d 1136 (Colo. 2011).

Because this section creates an immunity defense as well as an affirmative defense, and because the burden of proof for each defense is different, when raised at trial, this section poses special problems when instructing a jury. In such a case, instruction based on language from People v. McNeese, which dealt with pretrial immunity, must be put into context so as not to confuse or mislead the jury about the burden of proof with respect to an affirmative defense raised at trial. People v. Janes, 982 P.2d 300 (Colo. 1999).

Defendant did not establish by a preponderance of the evidence that he was entitled to immunity under this section where he could not show the struggle and wounding of the victim took place in defendant's bedroom of the house he shared with the victim. People v. Eckert, 919 P.2d 962 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court did not commit reversible error by refusing to instruct the jury that it need only determine whether the victim made an unlawful entry into a part of a dwelling that was occupied by defendant, as defendant failed to show that the bedroom was exclusively his province and that the victim's entry into the bedroom was unlawful. People v. Eckert, 919 P.2d 962 (Colo. App. 1996).

Instruction requiring jury to find that defendant had a reasonable belief that victim "had committed" a crime and omitting "was committing or intended to commit" a crime was erroneous but did not constitute plain error. There was no evidence that the victim's entry into defendant's house was unlawful and, therefore, no basis on which a reasonable jury could have otherwise acquitted defendant under this section. People v. Phillips, 91 P.3d 476 (Colo. App. 2004).

Jury instructions in error. Jury instruction that states that entry into a dwelling "must have been made in knowing violation of the law" could mislead the jury and thus is in error. Language is misleading in that it could be taken to mean that an intruder must know his or her conduct violates a criminal statute rather than that the intruder must not have a reasonable belief that his or her entry is licensed, invited, or otherwise privileged. People v. Zukowski, 260 P.3d 339 (Colo. App. 2010).

Jury instruction that states "[a]n entry made in the good faith belief that it is lawful, is not an entry made in knowing violation of the criminal law" allows an interpretation that the entry would not be unlawful under the make-my-day statute, and, thus, the instruction is also in error. An intruder may act under a mistaken belief of fact that he or she was lawfully on the premises and that this type of entry would not be unlawful under the make-my-day statute. A mistaken belief that an entry, although uninvited, is lawful does not make it lawful. People v. Zukowski, 260 P.3d 339 (Colo. App. 2010).

Trial court erred in interpreting subsection (2) as including the concept of "remain lawfully" within the statutory phrase "unlawful entry". Defendant failed to establish the legal elements of this section to bar prosecution where the victim was initially invited into defendant's residence and, after arguing, was later asked to leave. People v. Drennon, 860 P.2d 589 (Colo. App. 1993).

The reference to "uninvited entry" in subsection (2) refers back to the term "unlawful entry" used in the same subsection. People v. McNeese, 892 P.2d 304 (Colo. 1995).

Victim's entry was unlawful and uninvited for the purposes of statute providing immunity for use of force where wife of murder victim did not have authority to invite the decedent into defendant's apartment and was staying with the defendant on the condition that she not invite the victim into defendant's apartment. People v. McNeese, 865 P.2d 881 (Colo. App. 1993).

When this section is being used as an affirmative defense, it is error for a jury instruction to place the burden on the defendant to prove the affirmative defense. People v. Janes, 962 P.2d 315 (Colo. App. 1998).

Applied in People v. Arellano, 743 P.2d 431 (Colo. 1987).

18-1-705. Use of physical force in defense of premises. A person in possession or control of any building, realty, or other premises, or a person who is licensed or privileged to be thereon, is justified in using reasonable and appropriate physical force upon another person when and to the extent that it is reasonably necessary to prevent or terminate what he reasonably believes to be the commission or attempted commission of an unlawful trespass by the other person in or upon the building, realty, or premises. However, he may use deadly force only in defense of himself or another as described in section 18-1-704, or when he reasonably believes it necessary to prevent what he reasonably believes to be an attempt by the trespasser to commit first degree arson.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 409, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-805.

Cross references: For first degree arson, see § 18-4-102.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Self-Defense in Colorado", see 24 Colo. Law. 2717 (1995).

Common-law doctrine of retreat not applicable. Where the jury was told that though the defendant was in his place of business, and was in no way the aggressor, a deadly and unprovoked assault was made upon him by one armed with a loaded pistol, he was under duty to flee unless it was more dangerous to retreat than to fight, it was held a pernicious application of the common-law doctrine of retreat to the wall long since abrogated in this jurisdiction. Enyart v. People, 67 Colo. 434, 180 P. 722 (1919) (decided under R.S. 08, § 1634).

One cannot instantly kill in defense of property. While a man may use all reasonable and necessary force to defend his real and personal estate, of which he is in the actual possession, against another who comes to dispossess him without right, he cannot instantly carry his defense to the extent of killing the aggressor. If no other way is open, he must yield and get himself righted by resort to the law. Bush v. People, 10 Colo. 566, 16 P. 290 (1887) (decided under G. S. § 721).

This section is not, by its terms, inapplicable to unlawful entries where the trespassers happen to be police officers. People v. Lutz, 762 P.2d 715 (Colo. App. 1988).

18-1-706. Use of physical force in defense of property. A person is justified in using reasonable and appropriate physical force upon another person when and to the extent that he reasonably believes it necessary to prevent what he reasonably believes to be an attempt by the other person to commit theft, criminal mischief, or criminal tampering involving property, but he may use deadly physical force under these circumstances only in defense of himself or another as described in section 18-1-704.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 409, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-806.

Cross references: For theft, see part 4 of article 4 of this title; for criminal mischief, see § 18-4-501; for criminal tampering, see §§ 18-4-505 and 18-4-506.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Self-Defense in Colorado", see 24 Colo. Law. 2717 (1995).

One cannot instantly kill in defense of property. While a man may use all reasonable and necessary force to defend his real and personal estate, of which he is in the actual possession, against another who comes to dispossess him without right, he cannot instantly carry his defense to the extent of killing the aggressor. If no other way is open, he must yield and get himself righted by resort to the law. Bush v. People, 10 Colo. 566, 16 P. 290 (1887) (decided under G. S. § 721).

When instruction on defense appropriate. A defendant is entitled to a jury instruction on an affirmative defense only if evidence in the record supports it. Here record does not support entitlement to instruction. People v. Goedecke, 730 P.2d 900 (Colo. App. 1986).

18-1-707. Use of physical force in making an arrest or in preventing an escape.

(1) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, a peace officer is justified in using reasonable and appropriate physical force upon another person when and to the extent that he reasonably believes it necessary:

(a) To effect an arrest or to prevent the escape from custody of an arrested person unless he knows that the arrest is unauthorized; or

(b) To defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of physical force while effecting or attempting to effect such an arrest or while preventing or attempting to prevent such an escape.

(2) A peace officer is justified in using deadly physical force upon another person for a purpose specified in subsection (1) of this section only when he reasonably believes that it is necessary:

(a) To defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of deadly physical force; or

(b) To effect an arrest, or to prevent the escape from custody, of a person whom he reasonably believes:

(I) Has committed or attempted to commit a felony involving the use or threatened use of a deadly weapon; or

(II) Is attempting to escape by the use of a deadly weapon; or

(III) Otherwise indicates, except through a motor vehicle violation, that he is likely to endanger human life or to inflict serious bodily injury to another unless apprehended without delay.

(3) Nothing in subsection (2) (b) of this section shall be deemed to constitute justification for reckless or criminally negligent conduct by a peace officer amounting to an offense against or with respect to innocent persons whom he is not seeking to arrest or retain in custody.

(4) For purposes of this section, a reasonable belief that a person has committed an offense means a reasonable belief in facts or circumstances which if true would in law constitute an offense. If the believed facts or circumstances would not in law constitute an offense, an erroneous though not unreasonable belief that the law is otherwise does not render justifiable the use of force to make an arrest or to prevent an escape from custody. A peace officer who is effecting an arrest pursuant to a warrant is justified in using the physical force prescribed in subsections (1) and (2) of this section unless the warrant is invalid and is known by the officer to be invalid.

(5) Except as provided in subsection (6) of this section, a person who has been directed by a peace officer to assist him to effect an arrest or to prevent an escape from custody is justified in using reasonable and appropriate physical force when and to the extent that he reasonably believes that force to be necessary to carry out the peace officer's direction, unless he knows that the arrest or prospective arrest is not authorized.

(6) A person who has been directed to assist a peace officer under circumstances specified in subsection (5) of this section may use deadly physical force to effect an arrest or to prevent an escape only when:

(a) He reasonably believes that force to be necessary to defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of deadly physical force; or

(b) He is directed or authorized by the peace officer to use deadly physical force and does not know, if that happens to be the case, that the peace officer himself is not authorized to use deadly physical force under the circumstances.

(7) A private person acting on his own account is justified in using reasonable and appropriate physical force upon another person when and to the extent that he reasonably believes it necessary to effect an arrest, or to prevent the escape from custody of an arrested person who has committed an offense in his presence; but he is justified in using deadly physical force for the purpose only when he reasonably believes it necessary to defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of deadly physical force.

(8) A guard or peace officer employed in a detention facility is justified:

(a) In using deadly physical force when he reasonably believes it necessary to prevent the escape of a prisoner convicted of, charged with, or held for a felony or confined under the maximum security rules of any detention facility as such facility is defined in subsection (9) of this section;

(b) In using reasonable and appropriate physical force, but not deadly physical force, in all other circumstances when and to the extent that he reasonably believes it necessary to prevent what he reasonably believes to be the escape of a prisoner from a detention facility.

(9) "Detention facility" as used in subsection (8) of this section means any place maintained for the confinement, pursuant to law, of persons charged with or convicted of an offense, held pursuant to the "Colorado Children's Code", held for extradition, or otherwise confined pursuant to an order of a court.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 410, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-807. L. 75: (2)(b) R&RE, p. 616, § 2, effective July 21.

Cross references: For the "Colorado Children's Code", see title 19.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Self-Defense in Colorado", see 24 Colo. Law. 2717 (1995). For article, "Constitutional Issues in the Criminal Prosecution of Law Enforcement Officers", see 33 Colo. Law. 55 (March 2004). For article, "Police Use of Force Standards Under Colorado and Federal Law", see 36 Colo. Law. 47 (May 2007).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-707 is similar to former § 40-2-16, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Officer may use reasonable force to protect himself or detain offender. An officer who is making a lawful arrest, or has made an arrest, is justified in using such force as is reasonably necessary to secure and detain the offender, overcome his resistance, prevent his escape, recapture him if he escapes, and to protect himself from bodily harm; but he is never justified in using unnecessary force or treating his prisoner with wanton violence, or in resorting to dangerous means when the arrest could be effected otherwise. People ex rel. Little v. Hutchinson, 9 F.2d 275 (8th Cir. 1925).

Officer cannot use excessive force in making an arrest or bringing one into submission. McDaniel v. People, 179 Colo. 153, 499 P.2d 613, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1060, 93 S. Ct. 558, 34 L. Ed.2d 512 (1972).

Officer is not required to retreat. A police officer who is assaulted by one whom he is lawfully attempting to arrest is not required to retreat to the wall before resorting to such defensive measures as may reasonably seem necessary to protect himself against loss of life or great bodily injury. Boykin v. People, 22 Colo. 496, 45 P. 419 (1896).

Authority to take life based on apparent necessity. This section does not clothe an officer with authority to judge arbitrarily that it is necessary to take life in order to prevent the rescue of his prisoner. He is not warranted in taking life unless there is an apparent necessity for it and if he does so he is not permitted to take shelter behind his official character. Campbell v. People, 55 Colo. 302, 133 P. 1043 (1913).

Use of force is ordinarily a question for jury. An officer who intentionally uses more force than is reasonably necessary in making an arrest is oppressively discharging the duties of his office. What amounts to reasonable force depends upon the facts of each particular case and is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury. People ex rel. Little v. Hutchinson, 9 F.2d 275 (8th Cir. 1925); People v. Fuller, 756 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1987), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 781 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1989).

The question of the absence or existence of the necessity to take the life of a prisoner is finally for the jury. Campbell v. People, 55 Colo. 302, 133 P. 1043 (1913).

Police officer's actions were not within section. Where complaining witness remarked that the police officer was "some kind of a pig" when the officer twice refused to tell the complaining witness why he was being arrested and the officer reacted by pulling his revolver on the complaining witness, the officer's actions were not within the statute authorizing the use of deadly physical force. Johns v. District Court, 192 Colo. 462, 561 P.2d 1 (1977).

Before a private person can use physical force to effect an arrest pursuant to subsection (7), the arrest must first be authorized under § 16-3-201. People v. Joyce, 68 P.3d 521 (Colo. App. 2002).

In addition, the person on whom physical force is used under subsection (7) must have either committed a crime in the presence of or attempted escape from custody in the presence of the person using the physical force. People v. Joyce, 68 P.3d 521 (Colo. App. 2002).

18-1-708. Duress. A person may not be convicted of an offense, other than a class 1 felony, based upon conduct in which he engaged at the direction of another person because of the use or threatened use of unlawful force upon him or upon another person, which force or threatened use thereof a reasonable person in his situation would have been unable to resist. This defense is not available when a person intentionally or recklessly places himself in a situation in which it is foreseeable that he will be subjected to such force or threatened use thereof. The choice of evils defense, provided in section 18-1-702, shall not be available to a defendant in addition to the defense of duress provided under this section unless separate facts exist which warrant its application.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 411, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-808. L. 88: Entire section amended, p. 712, § 15, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Defense of choice of evils is very similar to duress and the foundation requirements set forth in the choice of evils statute was intended as a safeguard against abuse of the defense. People v. Strock, 623 P.2d 42 (Colo. 1981).

Defense available where imminent threat of use of unlawful force. Generally, where the threat of unlawful use of force is alleged, this defense is available only if the threat is one of present, impending, and imminent use of force, and a threat of future injury is not enough. People v. Maes, 41 Colo. App. 75, 583 P.2d 942 (1978).

Defendant must show specific and imminent threat. The defense of duress is unavailable unless a defendant shows a specific and imminent threat of injury to his person under circumstances which leave him no reasonable alternative other than the violation of the law for which he stands charged; mere speculation that injury may occur is not sufficient. Bailey v. People, 630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981); People v. Speer, 255 P.3d 1115 (Colo. 2011).

A defendant must make a threshold showing of: (1) An immediate threat of death or bodily injury; (2) a well-grounded fear the threat will be carried out; and (3) no reasonable opportunity to escape the threatened harm. People v. Preciado-Flores, 66 P.3d 155 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Speer, 255 P.3d 1115 (Colo. 2011).

Any threat must be more than mere speculation or a veiled threat of unspecified future harm. People v. Trujillo, 586 P.2d 235 (Colo. App. 1978); People v. Preciado-Flores, 66 P.3d 155 (Colo. App. 2002).

Prosecution to establish lack of duress. Because duress is an affirmative defense, the prosecution must establish, beyond a reasonable doubt, the defendant's guilt as to that issue. Bailey v. People, 630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981).

When an accused presents some credible evidence on the issue of duress, the prosecution must establish beyond a reasonable doubt the defendant's guilt as to that issue as well as all other elements of the offense. People v. Quintana, 665 P.2d 605 (Colo. 1983).

Whether threat is imminent is question of fact. The question whether a threat is imminent is, in all but the clearest of cases, to be decided by the trier of fact after considering all of the surrounding circumstances, including the defendant's opportunity and ability to avoid the harm. People v. Maes, 41 Colo. App. 75, 583 P.2d 942 (1978); People v. Speer, 216 P.3d 18 (Colo. App. 2007).

Where defendant improperly denied opportunity to present evidence on issue. Where a defendant was allowed to testify only about the most recent of a series of events occurring over a five-month period, he was unreasonably deprived of the opportunity to detail the evidence that would lend credence to his affirmative defense under this section. People v. Trujillo, 41 Colo. App. 223, 586 P.2d 235 (1978).

18-1-709. Entrapment. The commission of acts which would otherwise constitute an offense is not criminal if the defendant engaged in the proscribed conduct because he was induced to do so by a law enforcement official or other person acting under his direction, seeking to obtain evidence for the purpose of prosecution, and the methods used to obtain that evidence were such as to create a substantial risk that the acts would be committed by a person who, but for such inducement, would not have conceived of or engaged in conduct of the sort induced. Merely affording a person an opportunity to commit an offense is not entrapment even though representations or inducements calculated to overcome the offender's fear of detection are used.

Where evidence goes to defendant credibility rather than submissibility of defense.

Where a defendant testifies that he was specifically threatened with injury to himself and to his family if he refused to hold contraband or if he reported the incident to the authorities, his failure to identify the person who threatened him goes to the credibility of the explanation, rather than to the submissibility of the defense to the jury. People v. Maes, 41 Colo. App. 75, 583 P.2d 942 (1978).

Defense not available to escapee unless he immediately reports duress, or choice of evils, which he faced to the proper authorities when a position of safety is reached. People v. Handy, 198 Colo. 556, 603 P.2d 941 (1979).

The trial court erred in allowing jury instruction on the affirmative defense of duress in a contract for murder case where a wife claiming that she suffered from battered woman syndrome hired her husband's killers. There was no evidence that the defendant acted at the direction of another person. Although this section did not require that person act at the direction of another person at the time of the murder, case law required such a condition to exist. People v. Yaklich, 833 P.2d 758 (Colo. App. 1992).

No error in district court's rejection of defendant's proffered jury instruction concerning duress. Where it was undisputed that defendant had a gun and drove himself to the scene of the crime, the court found that there was no evidence from which a reasonable jury could conclude that defendant acted under duress. People v. Speer, 255 P.3d 1115 (Colo. 2011).

The common-law theory that control by the husband is presumed was abolished by statute. The law of this state requires the coercion by the husband to be proved. Dalton v. People, 68 Colo. 44, 189 P. 37 (1920) (decided under R. S. 08, § 1616).

Applied in People v. DeJesus, 184 Colo. 230, 519 P.2d 944 (1974); People v. Bailey, 41 Colo. App. 385, 590 P.2d 508 (1978).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Law", which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with the entrapment defense, see 61 Den. L.J. 272 (1984). For article, "The Entrapment Defense in Colorado", see 40 Colo. Law. 47 (January 2011).

Entrapment may be asserted as an affirmative defense only to acts that would otherwise constitute an offense and is not applicable to sentencing provisions such as the sentence enhancing provisions of § 18-18-107, which merely impact the degree of punishment imposed. Vega v. People, 893 P.2d 107 (Colo. 1995).

The defense of entrapment has long been recognized in Colorado when the prosecution, through its agents, in fact, induces, instigates, and causes a criminal offense to be committed. People v. Bucher, 182 Colo. 211, 511 P.2d 895 (1973).

States are free to define defense of entrapment as they choose, since it is not of constitutional stature. Bailey v. People, 630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981).

This section is patterned upon § 40.05 of article 40 N.Y. Penal Law Consol. Bailey v. People, 630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981).

Detection of crime distinguished from entrapment. A suspected person may be tested by being offered the opportunity to transgress the law in such a manner as is usual in the activity alleged to be unlawful. However, law enforcement officers may not induce persons, who would not otherwise have committed the crime, to violate the law. The former is legitimate "detection" of crime. The latter is "entrapment" to commit the crime in which the officer's conduct instigates the offense, the commission of which was nonexistent in the mind of the intended victim of the entrapment. Gonzales v. People, 168 Colo. 545, 452 P.2d 46 (1969).

To prove entrapment, the defense must show that the prosecution played the primary role. People v. Bucher, 182 Colo. 211, 511 P.2d 895 (1973).

Test of entrapment focuses on defendant's conduct. In determining whether the affirmative defense of entrapment exists, the court focuses on the conduct of the defendant. An examination is made of the circumstances surrounding the sale to see whether the officers merely afforded the defendant the opportunity to commit the offense, or whether the defendant had been improperly induced to do something he otherwise would not have done. People v. Williams, 654 P.2d 319 (Colo. App. 1982).

Entrapment is a subjective test that focuses on a defendant's state of mind. This section does not set forth general standards for police conduct. Thus, evidence of federal drug enforcement agency's system for rewarding and promoting agents was irrelevant to a narcotics case where entrapment issue was raised. People v. Aponte, 867 P.2d 183 (Colo. App. 1993); Vega v. People, 893 P.2d 107 (Colo. 1995).

While police methods are relevant to the defense of entrapment, police motives are not relevant because they do not impact the subjective state of mind of the defendant. However, such motives may be relevant for the purpose of establishing bias in DEA agents' testimony. Vega v. People, 893 P.2d 107 (Colo. 1995).

This section codifies subjective test, as the defendant's predisposition to commit the crime, rather than the conduct of the government agent, remains the dispositive factor in determining whether entrapment has occurred. People v. Sanchez, 40 Colo. App. 552, 580 P.2d 1270 (1978); People v. Bailey, 41 Colo. App. 385, 590 P.2d 508 (1978), aff'd, 630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981).

However, the carefully crafted requirements of the entrapment statute are swept aside by a jury instruction which selectively excerpted the statement from Bailey v. People (630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981)) that "the defendant's predisposition to commit the crime, rather than the conduct of the [police, is] the dispositive factor.", because statements from opinions do not necessarily translate with clarity into jury instructions. Evans v. People, 706 P.2d 795 (Colo. 1985).

This section creates a subjective test which is concerned with the state of mind of a particular defendant; it does not set general standards for police conduct. Thus, evidence of a law enforcement agency's internal reward system generally would not be relevant to whether a particular defendant was entrapped. People v. Vega, 870 P.2d 549 (Colo. App. 1993).

Section requires the defendant to admit committing the acts before being entitled to assert the defense of entrapment. The court did not err in refusing to give an instruction on the defense when the defendant denied committing the acts. People v. Hendrickson, 45 P.3d 786 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Grizzle, 140 P.3d 224 (Colo. App. 2006).

Elements of the defense: (1) The defendant must be a person who, but for the offered inducement offered, would not have conceived of or engaged in conduct of the sort induced; (2) the defendant must in fact have engaged in the proscribed conduct because he was induced to do so by a law enforcement official or other person acting under his direction, seeking to obtain evidence for the purpose of prosecution, and not as a result of the defendant's own predisposition; (3) the methods used to obtain such evidence must have been such as to create a substantial risk that this particular defendant would engage in the sort of conduct induced; and (4) the methods used must have been more persuasive than merely affording the defendant an opportunity to commit an offense, even when such an opportunity was coupled with representations or inducements calculated to overcome the defendant's fear of detection. Evans v. People, 706 P.2d 795 (Colo. 1985).

Predisposition and inducement are inextricably interwoven within the first three elements of the defense. Evans v. People, 706 P.2d 795 (Colo. 1985).

Existence of any predisposition on the part of the defendant must be determined first; then the extent of any such predisposition must be considered in relation to the character of the inducements to determine whether the second and third elements have been satisfied. Evans v. People, 706 P.2d 795 (Colo. 1985).

Prosecution must prove defendant not entrapped. The prosecution must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was not entrapped. People v. Williams, 654 P.2d 319 (Colo. App. 1982).

Prosecution may rely solely on the defendant's predisposition only if they are able to prove that the defendant would have committed the crime even if the police had offered no inducement more persuasive than merely affording the defendant an opportunity to commit the crime. Evans v. People, 706 P.2d 795 (Colo. 1985).

In reviewing the sufficiency of predisposition evidence, courts may rely upon evidence obtained after the government's initial contact with the defendant, so long as such evidence is relevant to the defendant's state of mind as it existed prior to the government's suggestion of the crime. People v. Sprouse, 983 P.2d 771 (Colo. 1999).

Intent to commit the crime must originate with the defendant. People v. Walker, 44 Colo. App. 249, 615 P.2d 57 (1980).

Entrapment operates where police originate criminal intent. Entrapment occurs only when the criminal conduct is the product of the creative activity of law enforcement officials, that is, only where the criminal design originates in the mind of the police officer and not with the accused. Gonzales v. People, 168 Colo. 545, 452 P.2d 46 (1969); People v. Hankin, 179 Colo. 70, 498 P.2d 1116 (1972).

One who is instigated, induced, or lured by an officer of the law or other person, for the purpose of prosecution, into the commission of a crime which he had otherwise no intention of committing may avail himself of the defense of entrapment. Gonzales v. People, 168 Colo. 545, 452 P.2d 46 (1969).

Notwithstanding aim of capturing old offenders. When detectives suggest the commission of a crime and instigate others to take part in its commission in order to arrest them while in the act, although the purpose may be to capture old offenders, their conduct is not only reprehensible, but criminal, and ought to be rebuked rather than encouraged by the courts. Gonzales v. People, 168 Colo. 545, 452 P.2d 46 (1969).

And not where officer merely supplies opportunity for crime. Defense of entrapment is not available where the officer or other person acted in good faith for the purpose of discovering or detecting a crime and merely furnished the opportunity for the commission thereof by one who had the requisite criminal intent. Gonzales v. People, 168 Colo. 545, 452 P.2d 46 (1969); People v. Bailey, 41 Colo. App. 385, 590 P.2d 508 (1978), aff'd, 630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981).

The Colorado courts have drawn a strong distinction between the seduction by a government agent of an innocent person into doing an unlawful act not contemplated by him, and a government agent affording an opportunity to one who has the intent and design to commit a criminal offense to do so. The first situation affords a complete defense to one charged with a crime under those circumstances, but the second is a perfectly proper tool in the arsenal of law enforcement agents. People v. Simmons, 179 Colo. 431, 501 P.2d 119 (1972).

Entrapment does not occur when government agent merely offers person the opportunity to commit the offense. People v. Lee, 180 Colo. 376, 506 P.2d 136 (1973).

When an undercover police agent merely provides one with the opportunity to transgress the law, there is no entrapment. People v. Ross, 182 Colo. 267, 512 P.2d 1154 (1973).

There is no entrapment when the representations of a government agent merely afford an opportunity for the defendant to commit a criminal act in the belief that the representations were true. People v. Adler, 629 P.2d 569 (Colo. 1981).

There is no entrapment if the police agent merely furnishes an opportunity for the criminal act to one ready and willing to commit it. People v. Walker, 44 Colo. App. 249, 615 P.2d 57 (1980).

The plain wording of this section indicates that the defense of entrapment cannot be established in those cases where the police merely furnish the defendant with an opportunity to commit a crime. People v. Jackson, 627 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1981).

The mere use of an undercover agent does not prove that the prosecution induced the crime and thereby vitiated any subsequent conviction of the crime. People v. Bucher, 182 Colo. 211, 511 P.2d 895 (1973).

Question of fact. Where many of the elements of entrapment are in the record in a libel case, but on the issue of good faith and belief in the truth of the statements made there is at least a doubt, summary judgment should not be granted. Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972).

Entrapment defense available where agent induced, instigated, and caused commission of offense. The defense of entrapment is available only where the defendant shows that law enforcement agents, in fact, induced, instigated, and caused a criminal offense to be committed. People v. Jackson, 627 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1981).

Entrapment not present simply because defendant initially approached victim with humanitarian intentions. When the defendant testified that although he approached the apparent drunk (decoy police officer) with humanitarian intentions, he later decided that if dead the drunk would have no further use of his money, the police agents provided only an opportunity for a thief who was ready and willing and thus entrapment was not present as a matter of law. People v. Walker, 44 Colo. App. 249, 615 P.2d 57 (1980).

Entrapment in narcotics cases. Where released narcotics suspect agrees to make arrangements for undercover police agents to purchase dangerous drugs, and where he notifies police that defendant has LSD for sale and arranges a meeting which results in defendant's selling LSD to police, entrapment is not established. People v. Lee, 180 Colo. 376, 506 P.2d 136 (1973).

Entrapment does not consist of mere act of making sale to person who has offered to purchase narcotics. People v. Lee, 180 Colo. 376, 506 P.2d 136 (1973).

Defense of entrapment is not intended to be escape hatch for those who mistakenly sell narcotics to police officer. When person who has narcotics for sale is ready, willing, and able to effect sale with no more than ordinary persuasion, he has not been entrapped and must suffer consequences for dispensing or selling narcotics. People v. Lee, 180 Colo. 376, 506 P.2d 136 (1973).

Encouragement by police informant for a defendant to import cocaine into this state did not amount to outrageous conduct. People v. Aponte, 867 P.2d 183 (Colo. App. 1993).

Even if undercover police agent sought out drugs and asked defendant if she had any or knew where she could get some, this behavior did not constitute entrapment. People v. Ross, 182 Colo. 267, 512 P.2d 1154 (1973); People v. Bailey, 41 Colo. App. 385, 590 P.2d 508 (1978), aff'd, 630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981).

Fourteenth amendment violated when a jury instruction could lead a jury to believe that it was enough for the prosecution to prove that the defendant has some predisposition to commit the crime. Evans v. People, 706 P.2d 795 (Colo. 1985).

Court did not err in refusing to instruct jury on entrapment as an affirmative defense. Since entrapment is an affirmative defense, it only applies if the defendant admits to committing the crime. In this case, the only contested issue was whether the substance was a controlled substance. Since defendant had to distribute a controlled substance to commit the crime, by disputing that the substance was a controlled substance, defendant did not admit to all elements of the crime. Thus, defendant was not entitled to an entrapment defense instruction. People v. Santana, 240 P.3d 302 (Colo. App. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 255 P.3d 1126 (Colo. 2011).

Evidence held insufficient to establish entrapment. People v. Simmons, 179 Colo. 431, 501 P.2d 119 (1972).

18-1-710. Affirmative defense. The issues of justification or exemption from criminal liability under sections 18-1-701 to 18-1-709 are affirmative defenses.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 412, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-810.

Cross references: For the affirmative defense of impaired mental condition, see §§ 16-8-103.5 and 18-1-803; for other provisions concerning affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407 and 18-1-805; for affirmative defenses to particular crimes, see specific criminal provisions in articles 2 to 18 of this title.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Self-Defense in Colorado", see 24 Colo. Law. 2717 (1995).

If evidence is intended to show entrapment, it should be presented in defendant's case-in-chief, since entrapment is an affirmative defense. People v. McKay, 191 Colo. 381, 553 P.2d 380 (1976).

Heat of passion is not an affirmative defense to first-degree or second-degree murder and no jury instruction regarding heat of passion needs to be given. People v. Carrier, 791 P.2d 1204 (Colo. App. 1989).

Applied in Bailey v. People, 630 P.2d 1062 (Colo. 1981); People v. Rex, 636 P.2d 1282 (Colo. App. 1981).

18-1-711. Immunity for persons who suffer or report an emergency drug or alcohol overdose event - definitions. (1) A person shall be immune from criminal prosecution for an offense described in subsection (3) of this section if:

(a) The person reports in good faith an emergency drug or alcohol overdose event to a law enforcement officer, to the 911 system, or to a medical provider;

(b) The person remains at the scene of the event until a law enforcement officer or an emergency medical responder arrives or the person remains at the facilities of the medical provider until a law enforcement officer arrives;

(c) The person identifies himself or herself to, and cooperates with, the law enforcement officer, emergency medical responder, or medical provider; and

(d) The offense arises from the same course of events from which the emergency drug or alcohol overdose event arose.

(2) The immunity described in subsection (1) of this section also extends to the person who suffered the emergency drug or alcohol overdose event if all of the conditions of subsection (1) are satisfied.

(3) The immunity described in subsection (1) of this section shall apply to the following criminal offenses:

(a) Unlawful possession of a controlled substance, as described in section 18-18-403.5 (2) (a) (I), (2) (b) (I), or (2) (c);

(b) Unlawful use of a controlled substance, as described in section 18-18-404;

(c) Unlawful possession of two ounces or less of marijuana, as described in section 18-18-406 (1); or more than two ounces of marijuana but no more than six ounces of marijuana, as described in section 18-18-406 (4) (a); or more than six ounces of marijuana but no more than twelve ounces of marijuana or three ounces or less of marijuana concentrate as described in section 18-18-406 (4) (b);

(d) Open and public display, consumption, or use of less than two ounces of marijuana as described in section 18-18-406 (3) (a) (I);

(e) Transferring or dispensing two ounces or less of marijuana from one person to another for no consideration, as described in section 18-18-406 (5);

(f) Use or possession of synthetic cannabinoids or salvia divinorum, as described in section 18-18-406.1;

(g) Possession of drug paraphernalia, as described in section 18-18-428; and

(h) Illegal possession or consumption of ethyl alcohol by an underage person, as described in section 18-13-122.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be interpreted to prohibit the prosecution of a person for an offense other than an offense listed in subsection (3) of this section or to limit the ability of a district attorney or a law enforcement officer to obtain or use evidence obtained from a report, recording, or any other statement provided pursuant to subsection (1) of this section to investigate and prosecute an offense other than an offense listed in subsection (3) of this section.

(5) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires, “emergency drug or alcohol overdose event” means an acute condition including, but not limited to, physical illness, coma, mania, hysteria, or death resulting from the consumption or use of a controlled substance, or of alcohol, or another substance with which a controlled substance or alcohol was combined, and that a layperson would reasonably believe to be a drug or alcohol overdose that requires medical assistance.

Source: L. 2012: Entire section added, (SB 12-020), ch. 225, p. 986, § 2, effective May 29.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration in the 2012 act adding this section, see section 1 of chapter 225, Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

PART 8

RESPONSIBILITY

18-1-801. Insufficient age. The responsibility of a person for his conduct is the same for persons between the ages of ten and eighteen as it is for persons over eighteen except to the extent that responsibility is modified by the provisions of the "Colorado Children's Code", title 19, C.R.S. No child under ten years of age shall be found guilty of any offense.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 412, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-901.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For comment, "Arrested Development: An Alternative to Juveniles Serving LIFE Without Parole in Colorado", see 78 U. Colo. L. Rev. 1059 (2007).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-801 is similar to former § 40-1-4, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

An infant is presumed incapable of committing crime because he is presumed not to possess criminal intent. Calkins v. Albi, 163 Colo. 370, 431 P.2d 17 (1967).

An infant under the age of 10 years shall not be found guilty of any offense. Gallegos v. Tinsley, 139 Colo. 157, 337 P.2d 386 (1959); LeCoq ex rel. LeCoq v. Klemme, 28 Colo. App. 590, 476 P.2d 280 (1970).

Although a child under the age of 10 cannot be charged with an offense, it does not necessarily follow that the child cannot violate the law. In enacting the statute, the general assembly determined those persons who could be held responsible for their criminal acts, not that such persons could not commit the acts. People v. Miller, 830 P.2d 1092, (Colo. App. 1991).

18-1-802. Insanity. (1) (a) A person who is insane, as defined in section 16-8-101, C.R.S., is not responsible for his or her conduct defined as criminal. Insanity as a defense shall not be an issue in any prosecution unless it is raised by a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity as provided in section 16-8-103, C.R.S.

(b) This subsection (1) applies to offenses committed before July 1, 1995.

(2) (a) A person who is insane, as defined in section 16-8-101.5, C.R.S., is not responsible for his or her conduct defined as criminal. Insanity as a defense shall not be an issue in any prosecution unless it is raised by a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity as provided in section 16-8-103, C.R.S.

(b) This subsection (2) shall apply to offenses occurring on or after July 1, 1995.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 412, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-902. L. 72: p. 268, § 7. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 5, § 4, effective January 31.

Cross references: (1) For pleading the defense of insanity, see Crim. P. 11(e).

(2) For the legislative intent of the 1996 amendments to this section, see §16-8-101.3.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L.

Minor who is over 14 years of age is accountable for crimes committed by him. Gallegos v. Tinsley, 139 Colo. 157, 337 P.2d 386 (1959).

Though the children's code may not in so many words raise the age below which there can be no criminal responsibility as concerns a felony from 10 to 14 years, in effect, that is exactly what it did. People ex rel. Terrell v. District Court, 164 Colo. 437, 435 P.2d 763 (1967).

Incapacity is a defense. The incapacity of a party, by reason of his tender years, to commit the crime charged may be a good defense on the trial, as it may effectually negative the charge. Mitchell v. People, 24 Colo. 532, 52 P. 671 (1898).

Capacity is not required to be stated in the indictment, and its omission furnishes no ground for arresting the judgment after a verdict against the accused. Mitchell v. People, 24 Colo. 532, 52 P. 671 (1898).

This section is not relevant to a determination of liability for the commission of an intentional tort. LeCoq ex rel. LeCoq v. Klemme, 28 Colo. App. 590, 476 P.2d 280 (1970).

Applied in People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981).

Rev. 167 (1981). For article, "Trauma, Crime and the Affirmative Defense", see 11 Colo. Law.

2401 (1982). For article, "Checklists to Evaluate Vietnam Vet Stress Disorders", see 12 Colo. Law. 273 (1983).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-803 is similar to former § 40-1-5, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

By asserting insanity defense, defendant admits the act charged but denies criminal responsibility for the act. Leick v. People, 322 P.2d 674 (Colo.), cert. denied, 357 U.S. 922, 78 S. Ct. 1363, 2 L. Ed.2d 1366 (1958); People v. Gilliland, 769 P.2d 477 (Colo. 1989).

One insane when he commits act prohibited by law cannot be held guilty of a crime. A statute providing that insanity shall be no defense to a criminal charge would be unconstitutional. Ingles v. People, 92 Colo. 518, 22 P.2d 1109 (1933).

No matter how brutal a homicide may be, a person who is insane at the time of committing it cannot lawfully be convicted of murder, but if found guilty of committing the act must be confined in a state institution under the laws governing that institution. Graham v. People, 95 Colo. 544, 38 P.2d 87 (1934).

At commencement of the trial defendant is presumed to have been sane at the time of the alleged commission of the crime charged. Shank v. People, 79 Colo. 576, 247 P. 559 (1926).

Accused must produce evidence raising reasonable doubt as to sanity. The killing being admitted or proven, an accused who relies upon the absence of sanity as a defense must produce evidence which will at least raise a reasonable doubt of its existence. Shank v. People, 79 Colo. 576, 247 P. 559 (1926).

Burden is on the state to prove sanity. When the question of defendant's sanity is properly raised, the burden is upon the people to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that he was sane at the time he committed the act charged. If the evidence raises in the minds of the jury a reasonable doubt of defendant's sanity at the time of the commission of the crime charged, they must find him not guilty. Ingles v. People, 92 Colo. 518, 22 P.2d 1109 (1933).

The people are not required in the first instance to offer proof of sanity, sanity being presumed in the absence of evidence tending to show the contrary. But when evidence is introduced tending to show insanity, the people have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt the sanity of the defendant. Graham v. People, 95 Colo. 544, 38 P.2d 87 (1934).

Every criminal defendant is presumed sane, but once any evidence of insanity is introduced at trial, the burden of proof is on the people to prove sanity beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Wright, 648 P.2d 665 (Colo. 1982).

Question of reasonable doubt as to sanity is for jury. In a homicide case the question of reasonable doubt as to defendant's sanity is for the jury, and its finding thereon, based on conflicting evidence, is not reviewable. Shank v. People, 79 Colo. 576, 247 P. 559 (1926).

The question of sanity in a criminal case is an issue of fact to be determined by the trier of fact. People v. Wright, 648 P.2d 665 (Colo. 1982).

Accused is entitled to have jury pass on question of his sanity. One accused of a crime is entitled to raise and have a jury pass upon the question of whether he was sane or insane when he committed the act with which he is charged. Ingles v. People, 92 Colo. 518, 22 P.2d 1109 (1933).

Upon the trial for murder, evidence of the insanity of a grandfather and of an aunt of the defendant is competent to show hereditary insanity in the family and proper for the jury to consider with the other evidence in the case as an aid in passing upon the mental condition of the defendant at the time of the homicide. When such evidence has been introduced, an instruction the effect of which is to deprive the defendant of its benefit is erroneous. Jones v. People, 23 Colo. 276, 47 P. 275 (1896).

Where in the trial of an indictment there is evidence tending to show that the accused in committing the act was not mentally accountable, an instruction that withdraws this defense from the jury, or from which the jury may reasonably infer that in the opinion of the court this defense is not in the case, is error. Pribble v. People, 49 Colo. 210, 112 P. 220 (1910).

Defendant's status as a ward of the state was not conclusive evidence of insanity. It does not follow from a commitment to such an institution that one necessarily is incapable of forming an intent to commit a crime. McConnell v. People, 157 Colo. 235, 402 P.2d 75 (1965).

Defendant found sane in separate sanity hearing. The argument that the defendant was incapable of forming the requisite mens rea and, therefore, could not be criminally responsible for his acts, is unpersuasive where the defendant was found sane in a separate sanity hearing prior to trial, and no objection was raised as to the propriety of the proceedings. Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 413, 484 P.2d 110 (1971).

Insanity adjudication results in a presumptive continuation of a state of mental incapacity until it is shown that sanity has been restored. People v. Giles, 662 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1983).

Committed person not incapable of committing crime. An insanity adjudication represents a judicial determination that an accused is not legally responsible for a past criminal act by reason of a mental disease or defect which existed at the time the act was committed. It is simply not true, however, that an insanity adjudication renders a committed person legally incapable of committing future crimes during the period of commitment. People v. Giles, 662 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1983).

Insanity is an affirmative defense to a crime. People v. Serravo, 823 P.2d 128 (Colo. 1992); People v. Hill, 934 P.2d 821 (Colo. 1997).

The “deific-decree” delusion is recognized in Colorado; a defendant may be judged legally insane if the defendant’s cognitive ability to distinguish right from wrong with respect to the act has been destroyed as a result of a psychotic delusion that God has decreed the act. People v. Serravo, 823 P.2d 128 (Colo. 1992).

Applied in Gould v. People, 167 Colo. 113, 445 P.2d 580 (1968); People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981); People v. Chavez, 629 P.2d 1040 (Colo. 1981).

18-1-803. Impaired mental condition. (1) Evidence of an impaired mental condition, as defined in section 16-8-102 (2.7), C.R.S., though not legal insanity may be offered in a proper case as bearing upon the capacity of the accused to form the culpable mental state which is an element of the offense charged.

(2) An intention to assert the affirmative defense of impaired mental condition shall be made pursuant to section 16-8-103.5, C.R.S.

(3) When the affirmative defense of impaired mental condition has been raised, the jury will be given special verdict forms containing interrogatories. The trier of fact shall decide first the question of guilt as to felony charges which are before the court. If the trier of fact concludes that guilt has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt as to one or more of the felony charges submitted for consideration, the special interrogatories shall not be answered. Upon completion of its deliberations on the felony charges as previously set forth in this subsection (3), the trier of fact shall consider any other charges before the court in a similar manner; except that it shall not answer the special interrogatories regarding such charges if it has previously found guilt beyond a reasonable doubt with respect to one or more felony charges. The interrogatories shall provide for specific findings of the jury with respect to the affirmative defense of impaired mental condition in accordance with the Colorado rules of criminal procedure. When the court sits as the trier of fact, it shall enter appropriate specific findings with respect to the affirmative defense of impaired mental condition. If the trier of fact finds that the defendant is not guilty by reason of the affirmative defense of impaired mental condition, the court shall commit the defendant to the department of human services pursuant to section 16-8-103.5 (5), C.R.S.

(4) This section shall apply to offenses committed before July 1, 1995.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 412, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-903. L. 83: Entire section amended, p. 677, § 11, effective July 1. L. 94: (3) amended, p. 2654, § 136, effective July 1. L. 96: (4) added, p. 5, § 5, effective January 31.

Cross references: (1) For affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407 and 18-1-710; for affirmative defenses to particular crimes, see specific criminal provisions in articles 2 to 18 of this title.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code”, see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For article, “Trauma, Crime and the Affirmative Defense”, see 11 Colo. Law. 2401 (1982). For article, “Insanity Defense Reform”, see 11 Colo. Law. 3006 (1982). For article, “Checklists to Evaluate Vietnam Vet Stress Disorders”, see 12 Colo. Law. 273 (1983).

Limitation of defense to specific intent crimes constitutional. Former section which limited the affirmative defense of impaired mental condition to specific intent crimes was a reasonable exercise of legislative power and did not infringe upon a defendant’s due process protections. People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981).

Procedure for submitting defense of impaired mental condition to jury does not violate due process. This section does not prohibit the jury from considering the affirmative defense of impaired mental condition individually with respect to each charge, and instructions requiring such consideration are proper. People v. Collins, 752 P.2d 93 (Colo. 1988).

Former section was premised on the proposition that a mental disease or defect may be less than legal insanity but nonetheless sufficient to negate the requisite mens rea of specific intent. Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983).

No presumption of culpability nor derogation of due process rights. Former section neither created a presumption of culpability for general intent crimes nor derogated an accused's due process right to prosecutorial proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981).

General assembly may establish statutory constituents of criminal culpability. The constitutional mandate requiring the prosecution to establish all essential elements of a crime beyond a reasonable doubt does not impair the general assembly's competence to establish the statutory constituents of criminal culpability for various offenses and to formulate particular rules of justification or excuse for acts that otherwise might be criminally punishable. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981) (decided under former section).

Evidence not restricted to specific intent crimes. Former section did not restrict evidence of impaired mental condition to specific intent crimes. Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983).

Mental impairment evidence is evidence of a mental disease or defect which affects the defendant's cognitive or volitional faculties to the point of rendering him incapable of entertaining the mens rea for the crime charged against him. Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983); People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982) (decided under former section).

Issue of responsibility due to an impaired mental condition is an affirmative defense. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

Unless prosecution raises mental condition issue, defendant must present evidence. Unless the prosecution's evidence raises the issue involving the defendant's impaired mental condition, the defendant must present some credible evidence to raise it. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981) (decided under former section).

Former section did not require evidence of any psychiatric abnormality or independent testimony to analyze the effect of a blow on the defendant's mental state. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Once mental impairment is raised, prosecution must prove defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Once the issue of the defendant's impaired mental condition is raised, the prosecution must prove beyond a reasonable doubt the guilt of the defendant as to that issue — the defendant's capacity to form the requisite intent — as well as all other elements of the offense. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981) (decided under former section).

Instruction on mental condition required if any evidence tends to establish impairment.

An instruction on impaired mental condition is required if there is any evidence tending to establish that a blow to the defendant's head impaired his mental condition sufficiently to preclude formation of a conscious objective to cause the victim's death. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980) (decided under former section).

No affirmative defense to second degree murder. Under former section, the affirmative defense of diminished responsibility due to impaired mental condition was not an affirmative defense to the general intent crime of second degree murder. People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981).

Applied in People v. Cornelison, 192 Colo. 337, 559 P.2d 1102 (1977); People v. Stitt, 40 Colo. App. 355, 575 P.2d 446 (1978); People v. Campbell, 196 Colo. 390, 589 P.2d 1360 (1978); People v. Thompson, 197 Colo. 299, 592 P.2d 803 (1979); People v. Mann, 646 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1982).

18-1-804. Intoxication. (1) Intoxication of the accused is not a defense to a criminal charge, except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, but in any prosecution for an offense, evidence of intoxication of the defendant may be offered by the defendant when it is relevant to negate the existence of a specific intent if such intent is an element of the crime charged.

(2) Intoxication does not, in itself, constitute mental disease or defect within the meaning of section 18-1-802.

(3) A person is not criminally responsible for his conduct if, by reason of intoxication that is not self-induced at the time he acts, he lacks capacity to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law.

(4) "Intoxication", as used in this section means a disturbance of mental or physical capacities resulting from the introduction of any substance into the body.

(5) "Self-induced intoxication" means intoxication caused by substances which the defendant knows or ought to know have the tendency to cause intoxication and which he knowingly introduced or allowed to be introduced into his body, unless they were introduced pursuant to medical advice or under circumstances that would afford a defense to a charge of crime.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 412, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-904.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1-804 is similar to former § 40-1-9, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is declaratory of the common law. Brennan v. People, 37 Colo. 256, 86 P. 79 (1906); Watkins v. People, 158 Colo. 485, 408 P.2d 425 (1965).

Involuntary intoxication and insanity are legally separate and distinct defenses with significantly distinct consequences. People v. Garcia, 113 P.3d 775 (Colo. 2005).

The accountability of one who becomes drunk voluntarily is defined by this section. Watkins v. People, 158 Colo. 485, 408 P.2d 425 (1965).

Intoxication is not an excuse for crime. Brennan v. People, 37 Colo. 256, 86 P. 79 (1906); Martinez v. People, 172 Colo. 82, 470 P.2d 26 (1970); Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972).

This section provides that drunkenness will not be an excuse for any crime where only the general intent is necessary for its commission. Watkins v. People, 158 Colo. 485, 408 P.2d 425 (1965).

Impaired mental state resulting from voluntary intoxication is not a defense to a general intent crime. People v. Roark, 643 P.2d 756 (Colo. 1982).

The mental culpability requirement of both second-degree kidnapping and first-degree sexual assault is "knowingly"; therefore, they are, by statutory definition, general intent crimes and voluntary intoxication is not a defense to either crime. People v. Vigil, 43 Colo. App. 121, 602 P.2d 884 (1979).

Voluntary intoxication may serve to establish an affirmative defense to specific intent crimes. People v. Barnhart, 638 P.2d 814 (Colo. App. 1981) (disapproved of by supreme court in People v. Harlan, 8 P.3d 448 (Colo. 2000)).

Voluntary intoxication does not constitute an affirmative defense. To the extent that prior decisions indicate otherwise, they are disapproved. People v. Harlan, 8 P.3d 448 (Colo. 2000); People v. Lucas, 232 P.3d 155 (Colo. App. 2009).

A criminal defendant who maintains his or her innocence at trial is not automatically barred from seeking jury instructions for a voluntary intoxication defense. If an instruction is given in that case, there must be a rational basis for it in the evidence presented at trial. After a review of the record, there was no rational basis in the evidence for the voluntary intoxication instruction. Brown v. People, 239 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2010).

Claim of innocence does not disentitle defendant to voluntary intoxication offense. The instruction, however, must be supported by evidence at trial. There was no error in failing to instruct the jury on voluntary intoxication because there was no evidence that defendant was intoxicated while committing the crime. Defendant's testimony that he passed out drunk would have made it physically impossible for him to commit the offense. People v. Brown, 218 P.3d 733 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd, 239 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2010).

Subsection (1) is an evidentiary rule permitting the introduction of evidence of voluntary intoxication to negate the requisite specific intent of the charged offense. People v. Harlan, 8 P.3d 448 (Colo. 2000); People v. Lucas, 232 P.3d 155 (Colo. App. 2009).

"After deliberation" is part of the culpable mental state required by first degree murder and may be negated by evidence of voluntary intoxication. People v. Miller, 113 P.3d 743 (Colo. 2005).

Use of term "negate" instead of "negative" in jury instruction concerning voluntary intoxication and specific intent not erroneous. Although "negative" is the term contained in subsection (1), the two terms may be used interchangeably in this context. People v. Souva, 141 P.3d 845 (Colo. App. 2005).

Section applicable in analysis of "voluntary act". This section applies not only to the mental state of a defendant in general intent crimes but is also applicable in the analysis of a "voluntary act", as that phrase is used in the definition of criminal liability in § 18-1-502. People v. Huskey, 624 P.2d 899 (Colo. App. 1980).

Intoxication does not negate culpability element of "knowingly". Evidence of self-induced intoxication is not admissible to negate the culpability element of "knowingly". People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982); People v. Breland, 728 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1986).

Trial court did not err in instructing the jury that it should not consider evidence of intoxication in determining whether the prosecution had proved the mental state of knowingly beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Vanrees, 80 P.3d 840 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 125 P.3d 403 (Colo. 2005).

If evidence of intoxication is presented at trial and the jury is given an instruction on the effect of the evidence, the instruction must incorporate the complete provision in subsection (1) not just the first clause. People v. Vigil, 104 P.3d 258 (Colo. App. 2004).

Consumption of heroin by an addict causes self-induced, not involuntary, intoxication. Tacorante v. People, 624 P.2d 1324 (Colo. 1981).

Voluntary intoxication sufficient to support general intent for crime. One who voluntarily drinks himself into unconsciousness intends whatever the foreseeable consequences or inevitable results of such intoxication are, and that intent is sufficient to supply general intent for second degree murder. Watkins v. People, 158 Colo. 485, 408 P.2d 425 (1965).

Alcohol idiosyncratic intoxication not a defense to general intent crime because, although the result of the ingestion of alcohol may be more severe, the ingestion is still voluntary. People v. Matthews, 717 P.2d 970 (Colo. App. 1985).

"Settled insanity" arising from the long-term use of intoxicants cannot be maintained as a defense. The settled insanity doctrine conflicts with the state's statutory scheme regarding insanity and self-induced intoxication. Bieber v. People, 856 P.2d 811 (Colo. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1054, 114 S. Ct. 716, 126 L. Ed.2d 680 (1994).

Voluntary intoxication not to be considered as a defense or mitigating factor to the crime of extreme indifference murder. Voluntary intoxication only a defense to specific intent crimes such as homicide with deliberation. Extreme indifference murder requires only that defendant have the general intent to act "knowingly". People v. Zekany, 833 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1991); People v. Harlan, 8 P.3d 448 (Colo. 2000).

Or to any other crime having as an element the mental state of "knowingly" or "recklessly". People v. Quintana, 996 P.2d 146 (Colo. App. 1998).

It is admissible to show absence of specific intent. When a particular intent forms the gist of the offense, as distinguished from the intent necessarily entering into every crime, and is made to depend on the state and condition of the mind of the accused at the time with reference to acts committed, intoxication, as a fact affecting the control of the mind, is proper for the consideration of the jury in determining whether the accused was capable of entertaining the positive and particular intent requisite to make out the offense. Brennan v. People, 37 Colo. 256, 86 P.

79 (1906); Martinez v. People, 172 Colo. 82, 470 P.2d 26 (1970).

Voluntary drunkenness is no legal excuse for a crime perpetrated under the influence of intoxicating liquor unless its effect is to destroy the ability of the accused to form a specific intent, the existence of which is an element of the offense charged. Dolan v. People, 168 Colo. 19, 449 P.2d 828 (1969).

Drunkenness can be considered only as bearing upon the ability of a defendant to form the intent necessary to commit the crime charged. Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972).

The actor's intent is an element of the offense of escape and defendant is entitled to introduce evidence to the effect that he was too drunk to form the state of mind required for the commission of the offense. Gallegos v. People, 159 Colo. 379, 411 P.2d 956 (1966).

Under subsection (1), a defendant's voluntary intoxication may be evidence of his inability to entertain the specific intent required for conviction of second-degree murder. People v. Cornelison, 192 Colo. 337, 559 P.2d 1102 (1977); People v. Sepeda, 196 Colo. 13, 581 P.2d 723 (1978).

And in homicide cases to show lesser offense. For the purposes of the defense in a trial for homicide, insanity, intoxication, or any other fact which tends to prove that the prisoner was incapable of deliberation was competent evidence for the jury to weigh. Intoxication is admissible in such cases, not as an excuse for crime, not in mitigation of punishment, but as tending to show that the lesser and not the greater offense was in fact committed. Brennan v. People, 37 Colo. 256, 86 P. 79 (1906).

It is only because of the specific intent required for first degree murder that a voluntary drunkenness is an excuse even for that crime. Watkins v. People, 158 Colo. 485, 408 P.2d 425 (1965).

Limitation on use of defense of voluntary intoxication. The policies adopted by the general assembly in refusing to permit a defense of voluntary intoxication in general intent crimes, defined in the criminal code, apply with equal force to general intent narcotics violation crimes, under part 3 of article 22, title 12. People v. Harfmann, 633 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1981).

Diminished responsibility due to self-induced intoxication is not a defense to murder in the second degree. People v. Vasquez, 148 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2006).

Self-induced intoxication involves moral culpability. Self-induced intoxication, by its very nature, involves a degree of moral culpability. The moral blameworthiness lies in the voluntary impairment of one's mental faculties with knowledge that the resulting condition is a source of potential danger to others. Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo.

1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983).

But involuntary intoxication does not. Involuntary intoxication, in contrast, is without moral culpability and, for this reason, is a complete defense to all crimes. Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983); People v. Turner, 680 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1983).

Involuntary intoxication as an affirmative defense. Where the defendant presented evidence that he was unaware of the effect of ingesting excessive doses of a prescribed drug, it is reversible error not to submit that issue to the jury. People v. Turner, 680 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1983).

A person is involuntarily intoxicated when he or she takes a substance pursuant to medical advice and does not know that he or she is ingesting an intoxicant or ingests a substance which is not known to be an intoxicating substance. People v. Low, 732 P.2d 622 (Colo. 1987); People v. Garcia, 113 P.3d 775 (Colo. 2005).

The medical condition of insulin-induced hypoglycemia may, depending on the particular facts and circumstances involved, constitute the affirmative defense of involuntary intoxication. People v. Garcia, 113 P.3d 775 (Colo. 2005).

Evidence held not to show excuse within terms of this section. Seiwald v. People, 66 Colo. 332, 182 P. 20 (1919); Nieto v. People, 152 Colo. 526, 383 P.2d 321 (1963).

Evidence of addiction not sufficient to support a finding that defendant's drug use was involuntary, therefore defendant could not avail himself of the defense of involuntary intoxication. People v. Grenier, 200 P.3d 1062 (Colo. App. 2008).

Question for jury. Where there was evidence tending to prove drunkenness, it was for the jury to determine whether the defendant was so intoxicated as to be unable to form the deliberate intent necessary. Martinez v. People, 172 Colo. 82, 470 P.2d 26 (1970).

While intoxication may be relevant to a determination of whether the defendant did form or had the capacity to form the requisite specific intent, the issue of intoxication is one for the jury. People v. White, 191 Colo. 353, 553 P.2d 68 (1976).

Jury decision on intoxication affirmed. Where the jury was properly instructed on specific intent and on defendant's affirmative defense of intoxication and where evidence is sufficient to support the jury's conclusion that defendant was not too intoxicated to form a specific intent to commit a crime that decision must be affirmed. People v. Barnhart, 638 P.2d 814 (Colo. App. 1981).

In order to warrant submission of the defense of involuntary intoxication to the jury, the defendant must introduce some credible evidence of involuntary intoxication. People v. Somerville, 703 P.2d 615 (Colo. App. 1985).

Requested instructions covered by given instructions. There is no error in the refusal of the trial court to give a requested instruction as to drunkenness when the law therein contained is fully covered by the instructions given. McPhee v. People, 105 Colo. 539, 100 P.2d 148 (1940), distinguishing Brennan v. People, 37 Colo. 256, 86 P. 79 (1906).

Court may be required to give instruction. Under some circumstances, a court's failure to instruct sua sponte on intoxication may result in reversible error. People v. Mattas, 645 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1982).

The district court committed reversible error in refusing to instruct the jury on defendant's affirmative defense of voluntary intoxication as allowed by this section in a prosecution of second-degree murder. People v. Cornelison, 192 Colo. 337, 559 P.2d 1102 (1977).

Trial court's failure to instruct the jury that voluntary intoxication may apply to sexual assault on a child does not constitute plain error for there is doubt whether the issue is yet settled. People v. O'Connell, 134 P.3d 460 (Colo. App. 2005).

The trial court properly instructed the jury that "any mental illness suffered by defendant is not a defense in this case". Defendant's mental illness does not support the defense of involuntary intoxication since the defense of involuntary intoxication involves a temporary condition, and bipolar is not a temporary condition. Defendant's bipolar condition would have provided evidence for an insanity defense, but defendant did not plead insanity, which requires a special pleading. Therefore, the court properly instructed the jury that mental illness was not a defense in this case. People v. Sommers, 200 P.3d 1089 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applied in People v. Norwood, 37 Colo. App. 157, 547 P.2d 273 (1975); People v. Lundborg, 39 Colo. App. 498, 570 P.2d 1303 (1977); People v. Thompson, 197 Colo. 299, 592 P.2d 803 (1979); People v. DelGuidice, 199 Colo. 41, 606 P.2d 840 (1979); People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981); People v. Frysig 628 P.2d 1004 (Colo. 1981); People v. Brown, 632 P.2d 1025 (Colo. 1981); People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982); People v. Bartowskeski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983); People v. Rivers, 727 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Low, 732 P.2d 622 (Colo. 1987).

18-1-805. Responsibility - affirmative defense. The issue of responsibility under sections 18-1-801 to 18-1-804 is an affirmative defense.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 412, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-905.

Cross references: For other provisions concerning affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407 and 18-1-710; for affirmative defenses to particular crimes, see specific criminal provisions in articles 2 to 18 of this title.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Trauma, Crime and the Affirmative Defense", see 11 Colo. Law. 2401 (1982). For article, "Checklists to Evaluate Vietnam Vet Stress Disorders", see 12 Colo. Law. 273 (1983).

628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981); Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983).

Applied in People v. Cornelison, 192 Colo. 337, 559 P.2d 1102 (1977); People v. Gallegos,

PART 9

DEFINITIONS

18-1-901. Definitions. (1) Definitions set forth in any section of this title apply wherever the same term is used in the same sense in another section of this title unless the definition is specifically limited or the context indicates that it is inapplicable.

(2) The terms defined in section 18-1-104 and in section 18-1-501, as well as the terms defined in subsection (3) of this section, are terms which appear in various articles of this code. Other terms which need definition but which are used only in a limited number of sections of this code are defined in the particular section or article in which the terms appear.

(3) (a) "To aid" or "to assist" includes knowingly to give or lend money or extend credit to be used for, or to make possible or available, or to further the activity thus aided or assisted.

(b) "Benefit" means any gain or advantage to the beneficiary including any gain or advantage to another person pursuant to the desire or consent of the beneficiary.

(c) "Bodily injury" means physical pain, illness, or any impairment of physical or mental condition.

(d) "Deadly physical force" means force, the intended, natural, and probable consequence of which is to produce death, and which does, in fact, produce death.

(e) "Deadly weapon" means any of the following which in the manner it is used or intended to be used is capable of producing death or serious bodily injury:

(I) A firearm, whether loaded or unloaded;

(II) A knife;

(III) A bludgeon; or

(IV) Any other weapon, device, instrument, material, or substance, whether animate or inanimate.

(f) "Deface" means to alter the appearance of something by removing, distorting, adding to, or covering all or a part of the thing.

(g) "Dwelling" means a building which is used, intended to be used, or usually used by a person for habitation.

(h) "Firearm" means any handgun, automatic, revolver, pistol, rifle, shotgun, or other instrument or device capable or intended to be capable of discharging bullets, cartridges, or other explosive charges.

(i) "Government" includes the United States, any state, county, municipality, or other political unit, any branch, department, agency, or subdivision of any of the foregoing, and any corporation or other entity established by law to carry out any governmental function.

(j) "Governmental function" includes any activity which a public servant is legally authorized to undertake on behalf of government.

(k) "Motor vehicle" includes any self-propelled device by which persons or property may be moved, carried, or transported from one place to another by land, water, or air, except devices operated on rails, tracks, or cables fixed to the ground or supported by pylons, towers, or other structures.

(l) Repealed.

(m) "Pecuniary benefit" means benefit in the form of money, property, commercial interests, or anything else, the primary significance of which is economic gain.

(n) "Public place" means a place to which the public or a substantial number of the public has access, and includes but is not limited to highways, transportation facilities, schools, places of amusement, parks, playgrounds, and the common areas of public and private buildings and facilities.

(o) "Public servant" means any officer or employee of government, whether elected or appointed, and any person participating as an advisor, consultant, process server, or otherwise in performing a governmental function, but the term does not include witnesses.

(o.5) "Restorative justice practices" means practices that emphasize repairing the harm caused to victims and the community by offenses. Restorative justice practices include victim-initiated victim-offender conferences, family group conferences, circles, community conferences, and other similar victim-centered practices. Restorative justice practices are facilitated meetings attended voluntarily by the victim or victim's representatives, the victim's supporters, the offender, and the offender's supporters and may include community members. By engaging the parties to the offense in voluntary dialogue, restorative justice practices provide an opportunity for the offender to accept responsibility for the harm caused to the victim and community, promote victim healing, and enable the participants to agree on consequences to repair the harm, to the extent possible, including but not limited to apologies, community service, reparation, restoration, and counseling. Restorative justice practices may be used in addition to any other conditions, consequences, or sentence imposed by the court.

(p) "Serious bodily injury" means bodily injury which, either at the time of the actual injury or at a later time, involves a substantial risk of death, a substantial risk of serious permanent disfigurement, a substantial risk of protracted loss or impairment of the function of any part or organ of the body, or breaks, fractures, or burns of the second or third degree.

(q) "Tamper" means to interfere with something improperly, to meddle with it, or to make unwarranted alterations in its condition.

(r) "Thing of value" includes real property, tangible and intangible personal property, contract rights, choses in action, services, confidential information, medical records information, and any rights of use or enjoyment connected therewith.

(s) "Utility" means an enterprise which provides gas, sewer, electric, steam, water, transportation, or communication services, and includes any carrier, pipeline, transmitter, or source, whether publicly or privately owned or operated.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 413, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-1-1001. L. 73: p. 534, § 1. L. 75: (3)(l) amended, p. 1315, § 8, effective July 14. L. 77: (3)(l) amended, p. 949, § 11, effective August 1. L. 79: (3)(l) amended, p. 1212, § 1, effective June 21; (3)(r) amended, p. 726, § 2, effective July 1; (3)(e) amended, p. 731, § 1, effective October 1. L. 80: (3)(l) amended, p. 531, § 1, effective January 29. L. 81: (3)(e) and (3)(l) amended, p. 972, §§ 2, 3, effective July 1. L. 82: (3)(l) amended, p. 384, § 2, effective April 30. L. 84: (3)(l) amended, p. 921, § 8, effective January 1, 1985. L. 85: (3)(p) amended, p. 664, § 1, effective March 1. L. 86: (3)(l) R&RE, p. 773, § 1, effective July 1; (3)(l)(III) amended, p. 1236, § 45, effective July 1. L. 87: (3)(l)(III) amended, p. 1489, § 1, effective April 30; (3)(l)(IV) amended, p. 817, § 20, effective October 1. L. 88: (3)(l)(II) and (3)(l)(IV) amended and (3)(l)(IV.5) added, pp. 664, 720, §§ 5, 1, effective July 1. L. 89: (3)(l)(II) and (3)(l)(III) amended, p. 888, § 1, effective April 6; (3)(l)(II) amended, p. 890, § 1, effective April 8. L. 90: (3)(l)(IV) and (3)(l)(IV.5)(C) amended, pp. 1613, 565, §§ 8, 38, effective July 1. L. 91: (3)(l)(III) amended, p. 1582, § 7, effective June 4; (3)(p) amended, p. 405, § 8, effective June 6. L. 92: (3)(l)(I), (3)(l)(II), and IP(3)(l)(IV.5) amended, p. 1097, § 6, effective March 6; (3)(l)(II) and (3)(l)(III) amended, p. 431, § 1, effective April 23. L. 93: (3)(l)(IV.5)(A) and (3)(l)(IV.5)(B) amended, p. 56, § 1, effective March 22; (3)(l)(II)(B) amended, p. 1776, § 38, effective June 6; (3)(l)(IV) amended, p. 1236, § 5, effective July 1. L. 94: (3)(l)(III) amended, p. 1731, § 11, effective May 31; (3)(l)(II)(A) amended, p.

1716, § 6, effective July 1; (3)(I)(IV) amended, p. 1311, § 11, effective July 1. L. 95: (3)(I)(II)(A) and (3)(I)(III) amended, p. 870, § 1, effective May 24; (3)(I)(III) amended, p. 109, § 1, effective July 1. L. 96: (3)(I)(III) and (3)(I)(IV) amended, p. 1004, § 10, effective May 23; (3)(I)(IV.5) and (3)(I)(V) amended and (3)(I)(IV.7) added, p. 1574, § 6, effective June 3; (3)(I)(IV) amended, p. 1691, § 24, effective January 1, 1997. L. 97: (3)(I)(III) amended, p. 301, § 12, effective July 1. L. 98: (3)(I)(III) amended, p. 1186, § 3, effective July 1. L. 99: (3)(I)(II)(A) and (3)(I)(III) amended, p. 424, § 4, effective April 30. L. 2000: (3)(I)(II)(A) amended, p. 42, § 1, effective March 10; (3)(I)(II)(A) amended, p. 230, § 4, effective March 29. L. 2002: (3)(I)(I) and (3)(I)(III) amended, p. 839, § 1, effective May 30; (3)(I)(II)(A) amended, p. 1212, § 8, effective June 3; (3)(I)(III) amended, p. 71, § 4, effective August 7; (3)(I)(III) amended, p. 1511, § 181, effective October 1. L. 2003: (3)(I) repealed, p. 1605, § 1, effective August 6. L. 2011: (3)(o.5) added, (HB 11-1032), ch. 296, p. 1402, § 6, effective August 10.

Editor's note: Amendments to subsection (3)(I)(II) in House Bill 89-1236 and Senate Bill 89-66 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (3)(I)(II) in House Bill 92-1192 and House Bill 92-1276 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (3)(I)(III) in House Bill 95-1087 and House Bill 95-1280 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (3)(I)(IV) in Senate Bill 96-176 and House Bill 96-1005 were harmonized, effective January 1, 1997. Amendments to subsection (3)(I)(II)(A) in Senate Bill 00-077 and House Bill 00-1421 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (3)(I)(III) by House Bill 02-1313, House Bill 02-1046, and Senate Bill 02-005 were harmonized.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1992 act amending subsections (3)(I)(I), (3)(I)(II), and IP(3)(I)(IV.5), see section 12 of chapter 167, Session Laws of Colorado 1992. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (3)(I)(III), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "The Definition of 'Deadly Weapon' Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 15 Colo. Law. 1663 (1986).

The term "serious bodily injury" is not facially unconstitutionally vague. Defendant's challenge that "serious bodily injury" included subjective undefined terms making it constitutionally infirm did not show the term was so vague that a person of ordinary intelligence must guess at its meaning and may differ as to its application. The term was also constitutional as applied to the defendant. People v. Summitt, 104 P.3d 232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 132 P.3d 320 (Colo. 2006).

The terms "serious bodily injury" and "bodily injury" do not suffer from an equal protection problem, because they only overlap if serious bodily injury is given an unreasonably broad interpretation. People v. Summitt, 104 P.3d 232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 132 P.3d 320 (Colo. 2006).

Applicability of definition "to aid". The general definition of "to aid" in subsection (3)(a) is applicable to the definition of professional gambling in § 18-10-102(8). People v. Wheatridge Poker Club, 194 Colo. 15, 569 P.2d 324 (1977).

Deadly weapon. A knife is a deadly weapon, as is any weapon which is likely to produce death or great bodily injury from the manner in which it is used. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Ordinarily hands or fists are not means likely to produce death unless used in such manner and under such circumstances as are reasonably calculated to produce death. Smith v. People, 142 Colo. 523, 351 P.2d 457 (1960).

A dangerous weapon is an article of offense which in its intended or easily adaptable use is likely to produce death or serious bodily injury. Hutton v. People, 156 Colo. 334, 398 P.2d 973 (1965).

A simulated pistol, not per se dangerous, may become so factually because of its substance, size, and weight as a bludgeon wielded within striking distance of the person to be robbed. Hutton v. People, 156 Colo. 334, 398 P.2d 973 (1965).

A quart bottle of whiskey is not a bludgeon but it may satisfy the statutory test defining a deadly weapon as a "device, instrument, material, or substance, ... which in the manner it is used ... is capable of producing death or serious bodily injury". Bowers v. People, 617 P.2d 560 (Colo. 1980).

Under the felony menacing statute an unloaded firearm is a deadly weapon. People v. McPherson, 200 Colo. 429, 619 P.2d 38 (1980).

A fist may be considered a deadly weapon in circumstances where the manner of its use is capable of producing death or serious bodily injury. People v. Pennese, 830 P.2d 1085 (Colo.

App. 1991) (declining to follow People v. Ross, 819 P.2d 507 (Colo. App. 1991)).

Fists may be a deadly weapon if in the manner they are used or intended to be used they are capable of producing death or serious bodily injury. Defendant used his fist in a manner capable of producing death or serious bodily injury where defendant admitted striking the victim, as a result of the blow, the victim was admitted to a hospital and treated for major trauma, and the treating physician testified that the victim sustained multiple facial fractures and was at great risk of sustaining severe permanent damage. People v. Ross, 831 P.2d 1310 (Colo. 1992).

In some circumstances, fists may be considered a deadly weapon based on facts at issue, and statute that specifies that a deadly weapon may be any device, material, or substance which in the manner of its use is capable of producing death or serious bodily injury. People v. Pennese, 830 P.2d 1085 (Colo. App. 1991).

BB gun can be a deadly weapon. Testimony that if a person hit with a BB in a vulnerable area of the body, such as the eyes, the BB could cause serious bodily injury was sufficient to prove that the BB gun was a deadly weapon. People in Interest of J.R., 867 P.2d 125 (Colo. App. 1993).

The issue in evaluating whether a device is a deadly weapon is whether, in the manner it was used, the device could have caused death or serious bodily injury. The fact that in this particular case death or serious bodily injury did not occur is irrelevant. People in Interest of J.R., 867 P.2d 125 (Colo. App. 1993).

To be a deadly weapon, an object must be used in connection with assaultive conduct directed toward an intended opponent or adversary. People v. Esparza-Treto, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Any object, including a foot, may be a deadly weapon when used to start an unbroken, foreseeable chain of events capable of producing serious bodily injury or death. The object does not have to be the direct cause of the injury. Where defendant kicked the victim in the back, causing her to fall down a flight of stairs, it was irrelevant that her injuries were caused by the stairs rather than the defendant's foot. The defendant's foot qualified as a deadly weapon because he used it to set in motion a sequence of events causing a serious bodily injury. People v. Saleh, 45 P.3d 1272 (Colo. 2002).

Where there is doubt as to whether an article is a deadly weapon, the question should be left to the jury under an instruction as to what constitutes a deadly weapon. J.D.C. v. District Court 18th Jud. Dist., 910 P.2d 684 (Colo. 1996).

Question of whether automobile constitutes a deadly weapon in the context of the case is a factual question to be determined by a factfinder. J.D.C. v. District Court 18th Jud. Dist., 910 P.2d 684 (Colo. 1996).

The intention to cause death or serious injury is not part of the definition of a deadly weapon; rather, this section requires only that in its actual or intended use the object is capable of producing death or serious injury. Miller v. District Court, 193 Colo. 404, 566 P.2d 1063 (1977).

Subsection (3)(e) prescribes test to determine whether certain items constitute deadly weapons. Subsection (3)(e) expressly prescribes a test to determine whether items other than firearms, knives, and bludgeons are deadly weapons, based not on the intrinsic nature of the items but upon their use or intended use. Bowers v. People, 617 P.2d 560 (Colo. 1980).

A knife is not a deadly weapon per se. A knife is only a deadly weapon when it is used or intended to be used during the commission of another crime. People ex rel. J.W.T., 93 P.3d 580 (Colo. App. 2004).

Certain weapons deadly as matter of law. Certain weapons are by their very design and make so lethal in nature that a trial court should rule as a matter of law that they are deadly weapons. Other instruments or things, though perhaps not deadly weapons per se, are within the meaning of statutory provisions, depending upon the nature of the instrument and the manner in which the instrument or thing is used in accomplishing the assault. Grass v. People, 172 Colo. 223, 471 P.2d 602 (1970).

Otherwise, nature of weapon question for jury. Whether an article used as a weapon is dangerous may be, because of its very character or the circumstances of its use, a matter of doubt, and in such case the question should be left to the jury under an instruction as to what constitutes a dangerous weapon. Hutton v. People, 156 Colo. 334, 398 P.2d 973 (1965).

The trial court did not err in generally instructing the jury that a shoe was not in and of itself a deadly or dangerous weapon, and that in determining whether an instrument, not inherently deadly or dangerous, assumes the characteristics of a deadly weapon the jury should consider the nature of the instrument or thing, the manner of its use, the location on the body of the injuries inflicted, and the extent of such injuries. Grass v. People, 172 Colo. 223, 471 P.2d 602 (1970).

There is an intent element in the consideration of "deadly" physical force. Since defendant's testimony created a dispute about whether he intended to produce death by use of force, defendant is entitled to self-defense instructions related to both ordinary physical force and deadly physical force. People v. Vasquez, 148 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2006).

“Dwelling” construed. The statutory definition of “dwelling” in this section comprehends an entire building. There is no room to exclude from the meaning of “dwelling” those parts of a residence that are not “usually used by a person for habitation”. People v. Jiminez, 651 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1982).

A garage attached to a residence is part of a “dwelling” within the meaning of § 18-4-203 (2), burglary of a dwelling. People v. Jiminez, 651 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1982).

“Dwelling” encompasses the entire residential structure, including an attached garage, within the meaning of § 18-4-502, first degree criminal trespass. People v. Hanna, 981 P.2d 627 (Colo. App. 1998).

“[C]apable or intended to be capable” modifies only “other instrument or device” and, therefore, under subsection (3)(h), a pistol, no matter what its condition, no matter what a defendant’s intent may be with respect to it, is a per se firearm. People v. O’Neal, 228 P.3d 211 (Colo. App. 2009).

Because subsection (3)(h) was enacted prior to § 2-4-214, the court must look to the rules of statutory construction in effect when subsection (3)(h) was enacted in 1971 and, therefore, it is appropriate to rely upon the last antecedent rule. People v. O’Neal, 228 P.3d 211 (Colo. App. 2009).

Under subsection (3)(h), handguns, automatics, revolvers, pistols, rifles, and shotguns qualify as per se firearms, without need of any further inquiry into whether they are capable or intended to be capable of discharging bullets, cartridges, or other explosive charges. People v. O’Neal, 228 P.3d 211 (Colo. App. 2009).

General definition of “government” in subsection (3)(i) is limited by subsection (1). Bailey v. People, 200 Colo. 549, 617 P.2d 549 (1980).

Government includes urban renewal effort. The general definition of “government” in subsection (3)(i) includes corporations such as the Colorado Springs urban renewal effort. Bailey v. People, 200 Colo. 549, 617 P.2d 549 (1980).

Employee of the Colorado Springs urban renewal effort is not a “public servant” performing a “governmental function” on behalf of a “government” as defined in this section. Bailey v. People, 200 Colo. 549, 617 P.2d 549 (1980).

And defendant cannot be convicted of bribing effort’s employee. A defendant cannot be convicted of the bribery of a public servant under § 18-8-302 where the alleged public servant was an employee of the Colorado Springs urban renewal effort. Bailey v. People, 200 Colo. 549, 617 P.2d 549 (1980).

Difference between “serious bodily injury” and “bodily injury”. At least one difference between “serious bodily injury” and “bodily injury” is that of degree. People v. Benjamin, 197 Colo. 188, 591 P.2d 89 (1979).

Serious bodily injury. “Substantial risk” applies only to death, and not to permanent disfigurement or protracted loss or impairment of any part or organ of the body. People v. Sheldon, 198 Colo. 519, 602 P.2d 869 (1979).

“Fractures” carries its common and ordinary meaning of “the breaking of hard tissue (as a bone, tooth, or cartilage)”. Thus, fractures include fractured cartilage under the definition of serious bodily injury. People v. Jaramillo, 183 P.3d 665 (Colo. App. 2008).

Any break or fracture is sufficient to establish “serious bodily injury”. The term “of the second or third degree” refers only to burns and not to breaks or fractures. People v. Daniels, 240 P.3d 409 (Colo. App. 2009).

“Protracted loss or impairment of the function of any part or organ of the body” is applied in People v. Brown, 677 P.2d 406 (Colo. App. 1983).

Determination that injury falls within the meaning of “serious bodily injury” must be made at the time of injury, not at the time of trial. People v. Thompson, 748 P.2d 793 (Colo. 1988).

Whether injury at the time it occurred involved a substantial risk of protracted loss or impairment of the function of any part or organ of the body is a question for the jury. People v. Thompson, 748 P.2d 793 (Colo. 1988).

The fact that a victim healed well and made a good recovery is not relevant to the determination that he suffered a serious bodily injury. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

Evidence sufficient to prove “serious bodily injury”. Gunshot wounds to the leg that involve substantial risk of disfigurement and infection and require surgery satisfy “serious bodily injury”. People v. Whittiker, 181 P.3d 264 (Colo. App. 2006).

Criminal code’s definition of “bodily injury” not applicable to term as used in automobile insurance policy. Lampton v. United Servs. Auto. Ass’n, 835 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in People v. Rice, 37 Colo. App. 346, 551 P.2d 1081 (1976), rev’d on other grounds, 193 Colo. 270, 565 P.2d 940 (1977); People v. Dominguez, 193 Colo. 468, 568 P.2d 54 (1977); People v. Hines, 194 Colo. 331, 572 P.2d 467 (1977); People v. Walters, 39 Colo. App. 119, 568 P.2d 61 (1977); People v. Marshall, 196 Colo. 381, 586 P.2d 41 (1978); People v. Scott, 41 Colo. App. 66, 583 P.2d 939 (1978); People v. Bailey, 41 Colo. App. 252, 595 P.2d 252 (1978); People v. Brake, 196 Colo. 575, 588 P.2d 869 (1979); City & County of Denver v. Waits, 197 Colo. 563, 595 P.2d 248 (1979); People v. Myers, 198 Colo. 295, 599 P.2d 891 (1979); People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo.

1981); People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981); People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981); Stroup v. People, 656 P.2d 680 (Colo. 1982); People v. Castro, 657 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1983); People v. Reed, 695 P.2d 806 (Colo. App.

1985), cert. denied, 701 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1985); People v. Manley, 707 P.2d 1021 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Tyler, 728 P.2d 314 (Colo. 1986).

PART 10

ORDERS AND PROCEEDINGS AGAINST DEFENDANT

Law reviews: For article, “1994 Legislature Strengthens Domestic Violence Protective Orders”, see 23 Colo. Law. 2327 (1994); for article, “Dissolution of Marriage and Domestic Violence: Considerations for the Family Law Practitioner”, see 37 Colo. Law. 43 (October 2008).

18-1-1001. Protection order against defendant. (1) There is hereby created a mandatory protection order against any person charged with a violation of any of the provisions of this title, which order shall remain in effect from the time that the person is advised of his or her rights at arraignment or the person’s first appearance before the court and informed of such order until final disposition of the action. Such order shall restrain the person charged from harassing, molesting, intimidating, retaliating against, or tampering with any witness to or victim of the acts charged. The protection order issued pursuant to this section shall be on a standardized form prescribed by the judicial department and a copy shall be provided to the protected parties.

(2) At the time of arraignment or the person’s first appearance before the court, the court shall inform the defendant of the protection order effective pursuant to this section and shall inform the defendant that a violation of such order is punishable by contempt.

(3) Nothing in this section shall preclude the defendant from applying to the court at any time for modification or dismissal of the protection order issued pursuant to this section or the district attorney from applying to the court at any time for further orders, additional provisions under the protection order, or modification or dismissal of the same. The trial court shall retain jurisdiction to enforce, modify, or dismiss the protection order until final disposition of the action. Upon motion of the district attorney or on the court’s own motion for the protection of the alleged victim or witness, the court may, in cases involving domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1) and cases involving crimes listed in section 24-4.1-302, C.R.S., except those listed in paragraphs (cc.5) and (cc.6) of subsection (1) of that section, enter any of the following further orders against the defendant:

(a) An order to vacate or stay away from the home of the alleged victim or witness and to stay away from any other location where the victim or witness is likely to be found;

(b) An order to refrain from contact or direct or indirect communication with the alleged victim or witness;

(c) An order prohibiting possession or control of firearms or other weapons;

(d) An order prohibiting possession or consumption of alcohol or controlled substances; and

(e) Any other order the court deems appropriate to protect the safety of the alleged victim or witness.

(4) Any person failing to comply with a protection order issued pursuant to this section commits the crime of violation of a protection order and may be punished as provided in section 18-6-803.5.

(5) Before a defendant is released on bail pursuant to article 4 of title 16, C.R.S., the court shall, in cases involving domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), or in cases of stalking pursuant to section 18-3-602, state the terms of the protection order issued pursuant to this section, including any additional provisions added pursuant to subsection (3) of this section, to the defendant on the record, and the court shall further require the defendant to acknowledge the protection order as a condition of any bond for the release of the defendant. The prosecuting attorney shall, in such domestic violence cases or stalking cases, notify the alleged victim, the complainant, and the protected person of the order if such persons are not present at the time the protection order is issued.

(6) The defendant or, in cases involving domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), or in cases of stalking pursuant to section 18-3-602, the prosecuting attorney may request a hearing before the court to modify the terms of a protection order issued pursuant to this section. Upon such a request, the court shall set a hearing and the prosecuting attorney shall send notice of the hearing to the defendant and the alleged victim. At the hearing the court shall review the terms of the protection order and any further orders entered and shall consider the modifications, if any, requested by the defendant or the prosecuting attorney.

(7) The duties of peace officers enforcing orders issued pursuant to this section shall be in accordance with section 18-6-803.5 and any rules adopted by the Colorado supreme court pursuant to said section.

(8) For purposes of this section:

(a) “Court” means the trial court or a designee of the trial court.

(a.5) “Protection order” shall include a restraining order entered pursuant to this section prior to July 1, 2003.

(b) “Until final disposition of the action” means until the case is dismissed, until the defendant is acquitted, or until the defendant completes his or her sentence. Any defendant sentenced to probation or incarceration shall be deemed to have completed his or her sentence upon discharge from probation or incarceration, as the case may be.

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 500, § 3, effective July 1. L. 85: (1) and (2) amended, p. 617, § 10, effective July 1. L. 91: Entire section amended, p. 419, § 3, effective May 31. L. 94: (1) and (3) amended, p. 2023, § 3, effective June 3; (3) amended and (5) and (6) added, p. 2041, § 24, effective July 1; (1) amended and (7) added, p. 2009, § 6, effective January 1, 1995. L. 98: (1) and IP(3) amended and (8) added, p. 1442, § 28, effective July 1. L. 2003: (1), (2), IP(3), (4), (5), and (6) amended and (8)(a.5) added, pp. 1002, 1003, §§ 4, 5, effective July 1. L. 2011: IP(3), (3)(a), (3)(b), and (3)(e) amended, (HB 11-1267), ch. 273, p. 1234, § 1, effective June 2. L. 2012: (5) and (6) amended, (HB 12-1114), ch. 176, p. 632, § 3, effective May 11.

Editor’s note: Amendments to subsection (1) in House Bill 94-1092 and House Bill 94-1090 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (3) in House Bill 94-1092 and House Bill 94-1253 were harmonized.

Cross references: For protection orders against children under the “Colorado Children’s Code”, see § 19-2-707; for additional provisions concerning protection orders, see the “Colorado Victim and Witness Protection Act of 1984”, part 7 of article 8 of this title.

ANNOTATION

Classifying a violation of a criminal restraining order as a crime more serious than the offense of violating a domestic abuse restraining order does not violate equal protection of the laws. This section seeks to protect those who must present evidence in the criminal justice system while § 14-4-102 is designed to protect persons in a volatile domestic setting. People v. Brockelman, 862 P.2d 1040 (Colo. App. 1993).

Section 16-4-105 (1)(o) permits a court to designate persons to prepare information concerning the accused in order to assist the judge in deciding whether to order release on personal recognizance. Pursuant to this statutory authority, the judges of the first judicial district authorized the pretrial service officers, as bond commissioners, to implement the bond schedule of the district. Although the bond schedule did not address temporary restraining orders specifically, in cases involving allegations of domestic violence, the pretrial service officers, acting as bond commissioners, were expected to deliver to the defendant a temporary restraining order pursuant to this section. The court concluded that, as a matter of law, these are judicial acts integral to the judicial process and therefore are cloaked in absolute quasi-judicial immunity. Whitesel v. Sengenberger, 222 F.3d 861 (10th Cir. 2000).

18-1-1002. Criminal contempt proceedings - notice to district attorney. Before a criminal contempt proceeding is heard before the court, notice of the proceedings shall be provided to the district attorney for the district of the court where the proceedings are to be heard and the district attorney for the district of the court where the alleged act of criminal contempt occurred. The district attorney for either district shall be allowed to appear and argue for the imposition of contempt sanctions.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 1717, § 7, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

District attorney need not be notified of criminal contempt hearing against father in arrears in child support. While the general assembly may limit jurisdiction, no statute will be held to limit court power unless the limitation is explicit in the statute. There was no prejudice to the party's substantial rights as the statute was enacted to protect state's interest in prosecution, not for the protection of fathers in arrears in child support. In re Helmich, 937 P.2d 897 (Colo. App. 1997).

Prisoner incarcerated in county jail for punitive contempt is entitled to the benefit of earned good time credit. To the extent that the language of an order purports to limit "good time" credit, it is beyond the power of the court to do so. In re Helmich, 937 P.2d 897 (Colo. App. 1997).

PART 11

PRESERVATION OF DNA EVIDENCE

Editor's note: This part 11 was added in 2008 and was not amended prior to 2009. The substantive provisions of this part 11 were repealed and reenacted in 2009, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For the text of this part 11 prior to 2009, consult the 2008 Colorado Revised Statutes. Former C.R.S. section numbers are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated.

18-1-1101. Definitions. As used in this part 11, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Disposed of" means evidence is destroyed, thrown away, or returned to the owner or his or her designee.

(2) "DNA" means deoxyribonucleic acid.

(3) "DNA evidence" means all evidence collected by law enforcement in a criminal investigation, which evidence may be reasonably believed to contain DNA that is relevant to a disputed issue in the investigation and prosecution of the case.

(4) "DNA profile" means an identifier obtained as a result of a specific DNA analysis.

Source: L. 2009: Entire part R&RE, (HB 09-1121), ch. 20, p. 97, § 1, effective March 18.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-1101 as it existed prior to 2009.

18-1-1102. Scope. (1) The provisions of this part 11 shall apply to the preservation of DNA evidence only when:

(a) The investigation of a felony does not result in or has not resulted in charges being filed; or

(b) The filed charges resulted in a conviction for a class 1 felony or for a sex offense that carries an indeterminate sentence pursuant to section 18-1.3-1004; or

(c) The filed charges resulted in a conviction for a felony not covered by paragraph (b) of this subsection (1); or

(d) The filed charges resulted in a conviction for any offense not covered by paragraphs (b) and (c) of this subsection (1), and at least one of the charges filed involved a sex offense as defined in section 18-1.3-1003 (5).

(2) For purposes of subsection (1) of this section, conviction shall include a verdict of guilty by a judge or jury, a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, or a deferred judgment and sentence. For purposes of paragraph (d) of subsection (1) of this section, conviction shall also include a juvenile delinquent adjudication or deferred adjudication.

(3) This part 11 does not impose a statutory duty to retain or store evidence other than in the situations described in this section.

Source: L. 2009: Entire part R&RE, (HB 09-1121), ch. 20, p. 97, § 1, effective March 18.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-1102 as it existed prior to 2009.

18-1-1103. Duty to preserve DNA evidence. (1) A law enforcement agency that collects DNA evidence in conducting a criminal investigation of a felony that does not result in or has not resulted in charges being filed shall preserve the DNA evidence for the length of the statute of limitations for the felony crime that was investigated.

(2) Except as provided in sections 18-1-1105 to 18-1-1107, a law enforcement agency that collects DNA evidence in conducting a criminal investigation that results in a conviction listed in section 18-1-1102 (1) shall preserve the DNA evidence for the life of the defendant who is convicted.

Source: L. 2009: Entire part R&RE, (HB 09-1121), ch. 20, p. 98, § 1, effective March 18.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-1102 as it existed prior to 2009.

18-1-1104. Manner and location of preservation of DNA evidence. (1) When DNA evidence that is subject to preservation pursuant to section 18-1-1103 is processed for the development of a DNA profile, the DNA profile shall be preserved by the accredited laboratory in Colorado that develops the DNA profile. If the DNA profile is not developed by an accredited laboratory in Colorado, the laboratory that processes the DNA profile shall send the DNA profile to an accredited laboratory in Colorado for preservation.

(2) A law enforcement agency that has custody of DNA evidence that is subject to preservation pursuant to section 18-1-1103 shall preserve the evidence in an amount and manner sufficient to develop a DNA profile, based on the best scientific practices at the time of collection, from the biological material contained in or included on the evidence. If DNA evidence is of such a size, bulk, or physical character as to render retention impracticable, the law enforcement agency shall remove and preserve portions of the evidence likely to contain DNA related to the offense in a quantity sufficient, based on the best scientific practices at the time of collection, to permit future DNA testing. The preserved DNA evidence shall, whenever possible, include a sample sufficient to allow for independent testing by the defendant. After preserving the necessary amount of the DNA evidence, the law enforcement agency may dispose of the remainder of the evidence.

(3) If a law enforcement agency is asked to produce DNA evidence that is subject to preservation pursuant to section 18-1-1103 and cannot produce the evidence, the chief evidence custodian for the law enforcement agency shall provide an affidavit in which he or she describes, under penalty of perjury, the efforts taken to locate the DNA evidence and affirms that the DNA evidence could not be located.

(4) If upon request a law enforcement agency cannot produce DNA evidence that is subject to preservation pursuant to section 18-1-1103, the court shall determine whether the disposal of the DNA evidence violated the defendant's due process rights, and, if so, the court shall order an appropriate remedy.

Source: L. 2009: Entire part R&RE, (HB 09-1121), ch. 20, p. 98, § 1, effective March 18.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-1102 as it existed prior to 2009.

18-1-1105. Law enforcement agency request for permission to dispose of evidence - procedures. (1) A law enforcement agency may not request permission to dispose of DNA evidence in cases described in section 18-1-1102 (1) (a) and (1) (b).

(2) In cases described in section 18-1-1102 (1) (c) and (1) (d), a law enforcement agency may seek to dispose of DNA evidence by providing notice, in the form developed pursuant to section 18-1-1108, to the district attorney that prosecuted the charges arising out of the investigation.

(3) Upon receipt of the notice described in subsection (2) of this section, the district attorney shall determine whether to object to the disposal of the DNA evidence. The district attorney may determine that a portion of the DNA evidence may be disposed of and a portion of the DNA evidence shall be preserved.

(4) (a) If the district attorney determines that the DNA evidence should not be disposed of, the district attorney shall provide notice to the law enforcement agency that the DNA evidence shall be preserved. Upon the receipt of the notice from the district attorney to preserve the DNA evidence, the law enforcement agency shall preserve the DNA evidence until such time as the law enforcement agency is permitted by a court order to dispose of the DNA evidence.

(b) (I) If the district attorney determines that all or a portion of the DNA evidence may be disposed of, he or she shall send notice to the defendant and the law enforcement agency specifying which DNA evidence may be disposed of. Notice to the defendant shall include a copy of the notice form prepared by the law enforcement agency pursuant to subsection (2) of this section.

(II) The defendant shall have ninety-eight days from the date the notice was sent by the district attorney to file a motion to preserve DNA evidence in the court in which the defendant was convicted. The motion shall state specific grounds supporting the preservation of the DNA evidence, and the defendant shall provide copies of the motion to the district attorney and the law enforcement agency.

(III) If no motion is filed within the ninety-eight-day period, the district attorney or the law enforcement agency requesting disposal of the evidence shall file with the court a copy of the notice sent to the defendant pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b), and the court shall forthwith, without hearing, enter an order authorizing disposal of the DNA evidence and provide copies of the order to the defendant, district attorney, and law enforcement agency.

(IV) If the defendant files a motion, the court shall follow the procedure set forth in subsection (6) of this section.

(c) (I) If the law enforcement agency does not receive notice from the district attorney as described in paragraph (a) or (b) of this subsection (4) within a reasonable amount of time or does receive timely notice from the district attorney pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (4), the law enforcement agency may file a motion with the court that entered the conviction in the case in which the evidence was collected, asking for a court order to dispose of the DNA evidence. The motion shall include a copy of the notice the law enforcement agency provided to the district attorney. The law enforcement agency shall provide a copy of the disposal motion to the district attorney and the defendant contemporaneously with the filing of the motion. The law enforcement agency shall specify the DNA evidence for which disposal is requested in the motion.

(II) The defendant or the district attorney shall have ninety-eight days after the disposal motion is sent to file an objection in the court in which the disposal motion was filed. The objection shall state specific grounds supporting the preservation of the DNA evidence. If the district attorney files an objection, the district attorney shall provide copies of the objection to the defendant and the law enforcement agency. If the defendant files an objection, the defendant shall provide copies of the objection to the district attorney and the law enforcement agency.

(5) The defendant, through legal counsel, shall have a reasonable right to review the DNA evidence to prepare the filing of a timely objection to the disposal motion or the district attorney's notice received pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (4) of this section.

(6) (a) Upon receipt pursuant to subparagraph (II) of paragraph (c) of subsection (4) of this section of a timely filed objection, the court may deny the objection without a hearing if it finds on the face of the objection no grounds supporting the request to preserve the DNA evidence. The court shall then enter an order authorizing disposal of the DNA evidence and provide copies of the order to the defendant, district attorney, and law enforcement agency.

(b) If the court determines that a timely filed objection or motion to preserve states adequate grounds to require preservation of the DNA evidence, the court may set a hearing on the objection or motion to preserve, with notice to the district attorney, the law enforcement agency, and the defendant, or the court may deny the disposal motion without a hearing.

(c) In considering an objection or motion to preserve pursuant to this subsection (6), the court shall consider the following factors in determining whether to order preservation of the DNA evidence:

- (I) Whether identification was a disputed issue;
- (II) Whether the evidence contains known DNA;
- (III) Whether it is possible to perform DNA testing on the evidence that has not previously been performed;
- (IV) Whether the defendant has served all of his or her sentence; and
- (V) Whether the defendant has state appellate or collateral attack rights that have not been exhausted, in which case there shall be a presumption that the DNA evidence should be preserved.

(d) Following a hearing on a disposal motion or motion to preserve, the court shall enter an order either authorizing disposal of the DNA evidence or ordering the DNA evidence to be preserved. If the court orders preservation, the order may state the length of time the DNA evidence shall be preserved or establish a condition precedent for the disposition of the DNA evidence.

Source: L. 2009: Entire part R&RE, (HB 09-1121), ch. 20, p. 99, § 1, effective March 18. L. 2012: (4)(b)(II), (4)(b)(III), and (4)(c)(II) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 863, § 104, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 18-1-1103 as it existed prior to 2009.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (4)(b)(II), (4)(b)(III), and (4)(c)(II) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

18-1-1106. Defendant request for disposition of or waiver of preservation of DNA evidence - procedures. (1) In a case described in section 18-1-1102 (1), a defendant may petition the court on his or her own behalf for the disposal of DNA evidence in his or her case. The defendant shall provide a copy of the petition to the district attorney, who may join with or object to the defendant's petition. Upon the filing of the petition, the timing and procedures of section 18-1-1105 shall apply. By filing a petition for disposition of DNA evidence, the defendant waives any right to preservation of that evidence under this part 11. However, a defendant may not be compelled to file a motion under this section in order to obtain a plea or sentence agreement.

(2) In a case described in section 18-1-1102 (1), a defendant may waive his or her right to preservation of DNA evidence under this part 11 at any stage of the proceeding by making a knowing and voluntary waiver. A waiver executed as a part of a plea bargain or sentencing agreement shall be voluntarily agreed to by all parties and shall include a written list describing all evidence to be disposed of.

Source: L. 2009: Entire part R&RE, (HB 09-1121), ch. 20, p. 101, § 1, effective March 18.

18-1-1107. Victim request for disposition of DNA evidence - procedures. In a case described in section 18-1-1102 (1), if DNA evidence is being held that is the property of the victim, as defined in section 24-4.1-302 (5), C.R.S., of the crime, the victim may request the district attorney to review whether the DNA evidence may be returned. If the district attorney determines the DNA evidence may be returned, the district attorney may file a petition with the court for the return of the DNA evidence. The district attorney shall provide notice to the defendant of the petition. Upon the filing of the petition, the timing and procedures of section 18-1-1105 shall apply.

Source: L. 2009: Entire part R&RE, (HB 09-1121), ch. 20, p. 102, § 1, effective March 18.

18-1-1108. Notice - form and sufficiency. (1) Notice to the defendant as required by this part 11 shall be proper if it is sent by United States mail or hand-delivered to the attorney of record for the defendant as defined in rule 44 of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure. If there is no attorney of record, notice to the defendant shall be proper if it is sent by United States mail to the last-known address of the defendant as reflected in the current motor vehicle records or, if no such record exists, the last-known address in the court file. Prior to sending notice by United States mail, however, the district attorney shall first review the department of corrections records to determine whether the defendant is in the physical custody of the department of corrections or on parole. If the defendant is in the physical custody of the department of corrections or on parole, the district attorney shall send notice by United States mail to the correctional facility in which, according to the department's records, the defendant is housed or to the address to which the defendant has been paroled. If the letter is returned because the defendant has been transferred to a different correctional facility, the district attorney shall send notice to the new facility in which the defendant is housed.

(2) The department of public safety, in consultation with state and local law enforcement agencies, shall develop a form to be used by all law enforcement agencies for providing notice to the district attorney and the defendant as described in section 18-1-1105 (2).

Source: L. 2009: Entire part R&RE, (HB 09-1121), ch. 20, p. 102, § 1, effective March 18.

18-1-1109. Court data collection - DNA evidence cases - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2009: Entire part R&RE, (HB 09-1121), ch. 20, p. 102, § 1, effective March 18.

Editor's note: (1) This section was similar to former § 18-1-1104 as it existed prior to 2009.

(2) Subsection (4) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2010. (See L. 2009, p. 102.)

ARTICLE 1.3

Sentencing in Criminal Cases

Editor's note: (1) This article was added with relocations in 2002 containing provisions of some sections formerly located in title 16. Former C.R.S. section numbers are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated. For a detailed comparison of this article, see the comparative tables located in the back of the index.

(2) Amendments made by House Bills 02-1141, 02-1223, 02-1225, 02-1229, 02-1258, and 02-1352 and Senate Bills 02-010, 02-018, 02-019, 02-036, and 02-057 to sections containing criminal sentencing provisions have been harmonized with the provisions of this article pursuant to section 398 of House Bill 02-1046. See the former sections as contained in titles 16, 17, and 18 of the 2001 Colorado Revised Statutes. See the comparative table located in the back of the index.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act enacting this article, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

PART 1			community corrections programs.
ALTERNATIVES IN SENTENCING		18-1.3-302.	Legislative declaration - offenders who may be sentenced to the specialized restitution and community service program.
18-1.3-101.	Deferred prosecution.
18-1.3-102.	Deferred sentencing of defendant.
18-1.3-103.	Deferred sentencing - drug offenders - legislative declaration - demonstration program - repeal. (Repealed)		PART 4
18-1.3-104.	Alternatives in imposition of sentence.	18-1.3-401.	Felonies classified - presumptive penalties.
18-1.3-105.	Authority of sentencing courts to utilize home detention programs.	18-1.3-402.	Felony offenses not classified.
18-1.3-106.	County jail sentencing alternatives - work, educational, and medical release - home detention - day reporting.	18-1.3-403.	Penalty for felony not fixed by statute - punishment.
PART 2		18-1.3-404.	Duration of sentences for felonies.
PROBATION		18-1.3-405.	Credit for presentence confinement.
18-1.3-201.	Application for probation.	18-1.3-406.	Mandatory sentences for violent crimes.
18-1.3-202.	Probationary power of court.	18-1.3-407.	Sentences - youthful offenders - legislative declaration - powers and duties of district court - authorization for youthful offender system - powers and duties of department of corrections - definitions.
18-1.3-203.	Criteria for granting probation.
18-1.3-204.	Conditions of probation - interstate compact probation transfer cash fund - creation.	18-1.3-407.5.	Sentences - young adult offenders - youthful offender system - repeal. (Repealed)
18-1.3-205.	Restitution as a condition of probation.	18-1.3-408.	Determinate sentence of imprisonment imposed by court.
18-1.3-206.	Repayment of crime stopper reward as a condition of probation.
18-1.3-207.	Work and education release programs.		PART 5
18-1.3-208.	Intensive supervision probation programs - legislative declaration.		MISDEMEANOR AND PETTY OFFENSE SENTENCING
18-1.3-209.	Substance abuse assessment required.	18-1.3-501.	Misdemeanors classified - penalties.
18-1.3-210.	Counseling or treatment for alcohol or drug abuse.	18-1.3-502.	Duration of sentences for misdemeanors.
18-1.3-211.	Sentencing of felons - parole of felons - treatment and testing based upon assessment required.	18-1.3-503.	Petty offenses classified - penalties.
18-1.3-212.	Drug testing of offenders by judicial department - pilot program.	18-1.3-504.	Misdemeanors and petty offenses not classified.
PART 3		18-1.3-505.	Penalty for misdemeanor not fixed by statute - punishment.
COMMUNITY CORRECTIONS AND SPECIALIZED RESTITUTION AND COMMUNITY SERVICE PROGRAMS		18-1.3-506.	Payment and collection of fines for class 1, 2, or 3 misdemeanors and class 1 or 2 petty offenses - release from incarceration.
18-1.3-301.	Authority to place offenders in	18-1.3-507.	Community or useful public service - misdemeanors.
		18-1.3-508.	Definite sentence not void.
		18-1.3-509.	Credit for time served on misdemeanor sentences.

PART 6

RESTITUTION

- 18-1.3-601. Legislative declaration.
- 18-1.3-602. Definitions.
- 18-1.3-603. Assessment of restitution - corrective orders.

PART 7

FINES AND COSTS

- 18-1.3-701. Judgment for costs and fines.
- 18-1.3-702. Fines - methods of payment.

PART 8

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS - SENTENCING OF
HABITUAL CRIMINALS

- 18-1.3-801. Punishment for habitual criminals.
- 18-1.3-802. Evidence of former convictions - identity.
- 18-1.3-803. Verdict of jury.
- 18-1.3-804. Habitual burglary offenders - punishment - legislative declaration.

PART 9

SENTENCING OF SEX OFFENDERS

- 18-1.3-901. Short title.
- 18-1.3-902. Applicability of part.
- 18-1.3-903. Definitions.
- 18-1.3-904. Indeterminate commitment.
- 18-1.3-905. Requirements before acceptance of a plea of guilty.
- 18-1.3-906. Commencement of proceedings.
- 18-1.3-907. Defendant to be advised of rights.
- 18-1.3-908. Psychiatric examination and report.
- 18-1.3-909. Report of probation department.
- 18-1.3-910. Termination of proceedings.
- 18-1.3-911. Evidentiary hearing.
- 18-1.3-912. Findings of fact and conclusions of law.
- 18-1.3-913. Appeal.
- 18-1.3-914. Time allowed on sentence.
- 18-1.3-915. Costs.
- 18-1.3-916. Diagnostic center as receiving center.

PART 10

LIFETIME SUPERVISION OF SEX OFFENDERS

- 18-1.3-1001. Legislative declaration.
- 18-1.3-1002. Short title.
- 18-1.3-1003. Definitions.
- 18-1.3-1004. Indeterminate sentence.
- 18-1.3-1005. Parole - intensive supervision program.
- 18-1.3-1006. Release from incarceration - parole - conditions.
- 18-1.3-1007. Probation - intensive supervision program.
- 18-1.3-1008. Probation - conditions - release.
- 18-1.3-1009. Criteria for release from incarceration, reduction in supervision, and discharge.
- 18-1.3-1010. Arrest of parolee or probationer - revocation.
- 18-1.3-1011. Annual report.
- 18-1.3-1012. Applicability of part.

PART 11

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS - PRETRIAL
MOTIONS IN CLASS 1 FELONY CASES ALLEGING THAT A DEFENDANT IS A MENTALLY RETARDED DEFENDANT

- 18-1.3-1101. Definitions.
- 18-1.3-1102. Pretrial motion by defendant in class 1 felony case - determination whether defendant is mentally retarded - procedure.
- 18-1.3-1103. Mentally retarded defendant - death penalty not imposed thereon.
- 18-1.3-1104. Evaluation and report.
- 18-1.3-1105. Evaluation at insistence of defendant.

PART 12

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS - SENTENCING IN CLASS 1 FELONIES

- 18-1.3-1201. Imposition of sentence in class 1 felonies - appellate review.
- 18-1.3-1202. Death penalty inflicted by lethal injection.
- 18-1.3-1203. Genetic testing prior to execution.
- 18-1.3-1204. Implements - sentence executed by executive director.
- 18-1.3-1205. Week of execution - warrant.
- 18-1.3-1206. Execution - witnesses.
- 18-1.3-1207. Record and certificate of execution.

PART 13		PART 14
SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS - APPLICABILITY OF PROCEDURE IN CLASS 1 FELONY CASES FOR CRIMES COMMITTED ON OR AFTER JULY 1, 1988, AND PRIOR TO SEPTEMBER 20, 1991		COMPETENCY OF PERSONS TO BE EXECUTED
18-1.3-1301.	Applicability of procedure for the imposition of sentences in class 1 felony cases.	18-1.3-1401.	Definitions.
18-1.3-1302.	Imposition of sentences in class 1 felonies for crimes committed on or after July 1, 1988, and prior to September 20, 1991 - appellate review.	18-1.3-1402.	Mental competency to be executed - presumptions.
		18-1.3-1403.	Mental incompetency to be executed - filing of motion.
		18-1.3-1404.	Mental incompetency to be executed - examination.
		18-1.3-1405.	Mentally incompetent to be executed - untimely or successive motions.
		18-1.3-1406.	Persons mentally incompetent to be executed - restoration to competency.
		18-1.3-1407.	Appeal of determination of mental incompetency to be executed.

PART 1

ALTERNATIVES IN SENTENCING

18-1.3-101. Deferred prosecution. (1) Except as otherwise provided in section 18-6-801 (4), in any case, the court may, prior to trial or entry of a plea of guilty and with the consent of the defendant and the prosecution, order the prosecution of the offense to be deferred for a period not to exceed two years; except that the period of deferred prosecution may be extended for an additional time up to one hundred eighty-two days if the failure to pay the amounts specified in subsection (2) of this section is the sole condition of supervision which has not been fulfilled, because of inability to pay, and the defendant has shown a future ability to pay. During that time, the court may place the defendant under the supervision of the probation department and may require the defendant to undergo counseling or treatment for the defendant’s mental condition, or for alcohol or drug abuse, or for both such conditions.

(2) Upon the defendant’s satisfactory completion of and discharge from supervision, the charge against the defendant shall be dismissed with prejudice. If the conditions of supervision are violated, the defendant shall be tried for the offense for which he or she is charged. The violation of conditions of supervision shall be determined by a hearing before the court which granted the deferred prosecution. The burden in such hearing shall be upon the district attorney by a preponderance of the evidence to show that a violation has in fact occurred. However, if the alleged violation is the failure to pay court-ordered compensation to appointed counsel, probation fees, court costs, restitution, or reparations, evidence of the failure to pay shall constitute prima facie evidence of a violation. The presiding judge at the hearing may temper the rules of evidence in the exercise of sound judicial discretion.

(3) Upon consenting to a deferred prosecution as provided in this section, the defendant shall execute a written waiver of his or her right to a speedy trial. Consent to a deferred prosecution under this section shall not be construed as an admission of guilt, nor shall such consent be admitted in evidence in a trial for the offense for which he or she is charged.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1365, § 2, effective October 1.

L. 2012: (1) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 863, § 105, effective July 1.

Editor’s note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-7-401 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (1) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-101 is similar to § 16-7-401 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

The obvious legislative intent in passing the deferred prosecution statute was to delay prosecution for a probationary period, which, if completed satisfactorily, would then require that the charge against a defendant be dismissed with prejudice by the trial court. People v. Ybarra, 190 Colo. 409, 547 P.2d 925 (1976).

Defendant alone benefits. In those cases where the trial court approves a defendant's application for deferred prosecution, it is the defendant alone who benefits by this procedure which may result in the dismissal of charges against him. People v. Ybarra, 190 Colo. 409, 547 P.2d 925 (1976).

And the period of any delay in the prosecution of a case is obviously at the instance of the defendant. People v. Ybarra, 190 Colo. 409, 547 P.2d 925 (1976).

Under § 18-1-405(6)(f) of the speedy trial statute, it specifically states that the period of any delay in the prosecution of a case "caused at the instance of the defendant" shall be excluded in computing the time within which the defendant shall be brought to trial. People v. Ybarra, 190 Colo. 409, 547 P.2d 925 (1976).

18-1.3-102. Deferred sentencing of defendant. (1) (a) In any case in which the defendant has entered a plea of guilty, the court accepting the plea has the power, with the written consent of the defendant and his or her attorney of record and the district attorney, to continue the case for the purpose of entering judgment and sentence upon the plea of guilty for a period not to exceed four years for a felony or two years for a misdemeanor or petty offense or traffic offense. The period shall begin to run from the date that the court continues the case.

(b) The period may be extended for an additional time:

(I) Up to one hundred eighty-two days if the failure to pay restitution is the sole condition of supervision which has not been fulfilled, because of inability to pay, and the defendant has shown a future ability to pay. During such time, the court may place the defendant under the supervision of the probation department; or

(II) Up to two years if the deferred judgment is for an offense listed in section 16-11.7-102 (3), C.R.S., good cause is shown, and the district attorney and defendant consent to the extension.

(2) Prior to entry of a plea of guilty to be followed by deferred judgment and sentence, the district attorney, in the course of plea discussion as provided in sections 16-7-301 and 16-7-302, C.R.S., is authorized to enter into a written stipulation, to be signed by the defendant, the defendant's attorney of record, and the district attorney, under which the defendant is obligated to adhere to such stipulation. The conditions imposed in the stipulation shall be similar in all respects to conditions permitted as part of probation. Any person convicted of a crime, the underlying factual basis of which included an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), shall stipulate to the conditions specified in section 18-1.3-204 (2) (b). In addition, the stipulation may require the defendant

Thus failure to execute waiver does not inure to defendant's benefit. The fact that the defendant did not execute a written waiver of her right to a speedy trial as required in the deferred prosecution statute and as she agreed to do in open court does not inure to her benefit. People v. Ybarra, 190 Colo. 409, 547 P.2d 925 (1976).

The prosecutor's consent is a matter of prosecutorial discretion just as is the choice of several possible charges to press or the decision to move for the dismissal of a criminal charge. People v. District Court, 186 Colo. 335, 527 P.2d 50 (1974).

Which is limited by pragmatic factors. A prosecutor's discretion in charging, deferring, or requesting dismissal is limited by pragmatic factors, but not by judicial intervention. People v. District Court, 186 Colo. 335, 527 P.2d 50 (1974).

District court cannot require prosecutor to give reasons for refusing to consent. Because of the doctrine of separation of powers and because the district attorney is a part of the executive branch, the district court can no more require the district attorney to give his reasons for refusing to consent to a deferred prosecution than a court can require a Colorado governor to give his reasons for failing to grant a pardon. People v. District Court, 186 Colo. 335, 527 P.2d 50 (1974).

to perform community or charitable work service projects or make donations thereto. Upon full compliance with such conditions by the defendant, the plea of guilty previously entered shall be withdrawn and the charge upon which the judgment and sentence of the court was deferred shall be dismissed with prejudice. Such stipulation shall specifically provide that, upon a breach by the defendant of any condition regulating the conduct of the defendant, the court shall enter judgment and impose sentence upon such guilty plea. When, as a condition of the deferred sentence, the court orders the defendant to make restitution, evidence of failure to pay the said restitution shall constitute prima facie evidence of a violation. Whether a breach of condition has occurred shall be determined by the court without a jury upon application of the district attorney or a probation officer and upon notice of hearing thereon of not less than seven days to the defendant or the defendant's attorney of record. Application for entry of judgment and imposition of sentence may be made by the district attorney or a probation officer at any time within the term of the deferred judgment or within thirty-five days thereafter. The burden of proof at such hearing shall be by a preponderance of the evidence, and the procedural safeguards required in a revocation of probation hearing shall apply.

(3) When a defendant signs a stipulation by which it is provided that judgment and sentence shall be deferred for a time certain, he or she thereby waives all rights to a speedy trial, as provided in section 18-1-405.

(4) A warrant for the arrest of any defendant for breach of a condition of a deferred sentence may be issued by any judge of a court of record upon the report of a probation officer, or upon the verified complaint of any person, establishing to the satisfaction of the judge probable cause to believe that a condition of the deferred sentence has been violated and that the arrest of the defendant is reasonably necessary. The warrant may be executed by any probation officer or by a peace officer authorized to execute warrants in the county in which the defendant is found.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1366, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: (1) amended, (HB 12-1310), ch. 268, p. 1396, § 11, effective June 7; (1) and (2) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 863, § 106, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-7-403 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Amendments to subsection (1) by House Bill 12-1310 and Senate Bill 12-175 were harmonized.

(3) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (1) and (2) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-102 is similar to § 16-7-403 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Probation-like supervision of a defendant by adult diversion program in a district attorney's office was not a violation of separation of powers. Probation is not a necessary function of the judiciary, and there is no constitutional requirement that defendants on deferred judgment be supervised by the judicial branch. People v. Method, 900 P.2d 1282 (Colo. App. 1994).

The diversion program does not constitute an unconstitutional delegation of power to the district attorney because the probation statutes set forth adequate guidelines for imposing conditions of probation and provide adequate standards and safeguards for imposing conditions of deferred judgment. People v. Bishop, 7 P.3d 184 (Colo. App. 1999).

This section does not limit the broad grant of power to the courts under the probation statutes. People v. Burleigh, 727 P.2d 873 (Colo. App. 1986).

Prohibiting a sex offender from having contact with children including his or her own without approval of the court as a condition of a deferred judgment is permissible. The condition falls under "any other conditions reasonably related to his or her rehabilitation and the purpose of the supervisory period imposed by the court" provision. The condition does not infringe upon the parent's liberty interest in raising his or her children when children are potential victims of the offender. People v. Manzanares, 85 P.3d 604 (Colo. App. 2003).

Beyond reasonable doubt standard of proof. An adult charged with a violation of his deferred sentencing which constitutes a criminal offense has the right to demand that the charge be proven "beyond a reasonable doubt". People v. Van Deusen, 677 P.2d 402 (Colo. App. 1983).

Under the provisions of subsection (2), a defendant who enters into a deferred sentencing agreement "is obligated to adhere to such stipulation." People v. Ward-Garrison, 72 P.3d 423 (Colo. App. 2003); Walker-Lawrence v. District Court of Teller County, 74 P.3d 521 (Colo. App. 2003).

Thus, the general assembly has determined as a matter of public policy that the terms of stipulations are to be enforced. People v. Ward-Garrison, 72 P.3d 423 (Colo. App. 2003).

Because a defendant who enters into a deferred sentencing agreement is obligated to adhere to the stipulation, the trial court must be permitted to review the terms of the agreement to determine whether the defendant is in compliance with those terms. Walker-Lawrence v. District Court of Teller County, 74 P.3d 521 (Colo. App. 2003).

Purpose of the written stipulation is to ensure that the defendant knows prior to the entry of a guilty plea the consequences of violating the conditions of the deferred judgment and sentence. People v. Widhalm, 642 P.2d 498 (Colo. 1982).

District court has jurisdiction to order a deferred judgment and sentence even when defendant appears pro se. The written authorization requirement set forth is not jurisdictional in nature. People v. Loveall, 231 P.3d 408 (Colo. 2010).

Appeal dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. A guilty plea entered pursuant to a deferred judgment and sentence agreement is not subject to review in the same manner as a guilty plea that results in a final conviction or delinquency adjudication. People ex rel. K.W.S., 192 P.3d 579 (Colo. App. 2008).

When a defendant has received the benefit of a bargain made and has at no time objected to any term of the subsequent judgment and stipulation, there is no basis in public policy to permit the defendant to renege on that portion of the agreement expressly waiving the right to request the sealing of the record. People v. Ward-Garrison, 72 P.3d 423 (Colo. App. 2003); Walker-Lawrence v. District Court of Teller County, 74 P.3d 521 (Colo. App. 2003).

Permitting defendant to do so would contravene the language and policy of the statute and could greatly reduce the use of such stipulations in practice. People v. Ward-Garrison, 72 P.3d 423 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court lacks authority under this section to act unilaterally to modify the terms of a stipulation without the district attorney's consent. People v. Ward-Garrison, 72 P.3d 423 (Colo. App. 2003); Walker-Lawrence v. District Court of Teller County, 74 P.3d 521 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court had no authority to order a deferred sentence in absence of written consent of defendant, defendant's attorney, and district attorney under plain language of subsection (1). People v. Appelhanz, 738 P.2d 1182 (Colo. 1987).

Subsection (1) requires the written consent of defense counsel only if the defendant is represented. People v. Loveall, 203 P.3d 540 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd on other grounds, 231 P.3d 408 (Colo. 2010).

Trial court does not have authority to act unilaterally with deferred sentence agreements, including shortening a stipulated length of a deferred sentence and a sentence agreement without the district attorney's consent. People v. C.G., 12 P.3d 861 (Colo. App. 2000).

Court has authority to consider a plea of nolo contendere in circumstances involving plea agreements that contemplate deferred sentences under the statute. People v. Darlington, 105 P.3d 230 (Colo. 2005).

There is no distinction between a plea of nolo contendere and a plea of guilty for sentencing purposes. People v. Darlington, 105 P.3d 230 (Colo. 2005).

Trial court has authority to impose an aggravated range sentence even though it had previously imposed a deferred sentence. Nothing in the plain language of this section suggests that the sentencing range upon imposition of a previously deferred sentence differs in any way from the range that would have applied absent deferral. People v. Lopez, 97 P.3d 223 (Colo. App. 2004).

Evidence from a dismissed revocation complaint of a deferred judgment may not form the basis of a subsequent revocation complaint. People v. Manzanares, 85 P.3d 604 (Colo. App. 2003).

Section mandates that court impose sentence and does not leave such imposition to the court's discretion. People v. Adair, 44 Colo. App. 423, 620 P.2d 46 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 651 P.2d 389 (Colo. 1982).

"Sentence" does not mean imprisonment. A "sentence" generally refers to that part of a judgment which describes the punishment imposed by the court following the defendant's conviction for a criminal offense. To constitute a "sentence", the punishment need not take the form of imprisonment. People v. Turner, 644 P.2d 951 (Colo. 1982).

Although the defendant's sentence to imprisonment and mandatory parole was not inevitable at the time of his pleas and, in fact, could not have been lawfully imposed prior to his subsequent breach of the terms of his deferred sentencing agreement, it was a direct consequence of his plea to burglary and, therefore, the defendant should have been advised of the mandatory parole. People v. Marez, 39 P.3d 1190 (Colo. 2002).

Discretion implicit in sentencing decision is not unrestricted discretion devoid of reason or principle. People v. Watkins, 613 P.2d 633 (Colo. 1980).

Extension of deferred judgment discretionary. While there is not express statutory authority which permits the court to extend the period of a deferred judgment and sentence beyond that initially imposed, such authority is encompassed in the broad discretionary power of the court. People v. Blackorby, 41 Colo. App. 251, 583 P.2d 949 (1978) (decided prior to 1985 amendment to subsection (1)).

However, the court has no jurisdiction to extend the deferral to more than the two-year period in the statute. People v. Perkins, 676 P.2d 711 (Colo. App. 1983) (decided prior to 1985 amendment to subsection (1)); People v. Zabala, 706 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1985).

A deferred judgment is created and authorized by statute and a trial court lacks authority to impose a deferred judgment outside of the statute's limitations. The trial court exceeded its jurisdiction by extending defendant's deferred judgment beyond the statutory limits. People v. Carbajal, 198 P.3d 102 (Colo. 2008).

Once the court imposes a deferred judgment, the four-year time period starts the day defendant entered his or her plea. Judgment and sentence must be entered within four years unless the deferred judgment is revoked or extended for restitution. The statute divests the court of its authority to hear revocation petitions filed more than 30 days after the deferred judgment expires. People v. Carbajal, 198 P.3d 102 (Colo. 2008).

Because the court lacks the authority to enforce an agreed-upon extension of the deferred judgment beyond the statutory time limitations, it also lacks authority to enforce such an extension framed as a stipulation to new supervision requirements. People v. Carbajal, 198 P.3d 102 (Colo. 2008).

The court has discretion to extend the deferral period, subject to the time limitations in this section, in order to give the defendant additional time to pay restitution. People v. Nichols, 140 P.3d 198 (Colo. App. 2006).

Trial court had no authority to revoke a deferred judgment sua sponte. In absence of an application by the district attorney, specifically required by subsection (2), revocation was improper. People v. Berquist, 916 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1996).

District court did not exceed its jurisdiction in granting district attorney's application, entering judgment against defendant for sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, and sentencing defendant to six years of probation. Because the district attorney's application was only withdrawn on condition that the court continue the case for an additional four-year period, which it lacked the authority to do, the application was never abandoned. People v. Simonds, 113 P.3d 762 (Colo. 2005).

Time limit for filing of application for entry of judgment not tolled by order of revocation. Where district attorney did not file application "within the term of the deferred judgment or within thirty days thereafter," as required by subsection (2), such application would not be permitted upon remand. People v. Berquist, 916 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1996).

Constitutional rights somewhat limited. Persons alleged to have violated a condition of a deferred sentence are not entitled to the full panoply of constitutional rights accorded persons who have not admitted guilt of criminal conduct. People v. Boykin, 631 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1981).

But adequate notice deemed minimum right. Consistent with principles of due process, persons alleged to have violated a condition of a deferred sentence must, at a minimum, be given adequate notice of the charges against which they must defend. People v. Boykin, 631 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Allen, 952 P.2d 764 (Colo. App. 1997), rev'd on other grounds, 973 P.2d 620 (Colo. 1999).

Trial court advising defendant and counsel three days before revocation hearing held to be adequate notice of charge against which person had to defend. People v. Galloway, 677 P.2d 1380 (Colo. App. 1983).

Proceedings to revoke deferred judgment are conducted according to procedures used to revoke probation. Thus, the defendant is not entitled to the full range of constitutional rights in a criminal trial. The right to confront witnesses is satisfied by the right to cross examine hearsay statements and presentation of evidence to the contrary. People v. Manzanares, 85 P.3d 604 (Colo. App. 2003).

Corroboration of a confession is not required in deferred judgment. People v. Manzanares, 85 P.3d 604 (Colo. App. 2003).

Nothing in this section or the state or federal constitutions requires the trial court to advise the defendant of his or her right to testify at a deferred judgment revocation proceeding. People v. Allen, 973 P.2d 620 (Colo. 1999).

Counsel not necessary where defendant makes request for extension. Where the defendant requests an extension of the supervisory period, the granting of the extension does not violate due process because he was not represented by counsel, or because the trial court did not make a determination as to whether fundamental fairness required that counsel be appointed to represent him. People v. Blackorby, 41 Colo. App. 251, 583 P.2d 949 (1978).

Revocation hearing is trial-type procedure.

A revocation hearing under this section is a trial-type procedure conducted by the trial court for the purpose of making a factual determination as to whether there has been a failure to abide by the conditions of a deferred sentence. Hallman v. People, 652 P.2d 173 (Colo. 1982).

And 15-day limitation for hearing applies.

Since the 15-day limitation imposed by § 16-11-206 (4) is a procedural safeguard required for probation revocation hearings, it applies to a deferred sentence revocation pursuant to this section. People v. Schoonover, 654 P.2d 1340 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Allen, 952 P.2d 764 (Colo. App. 1997), rev'd on other grounds, 973 P.2d 620 (Colo. 1999).

Since the five-day limitation specified in § 16-11-205 (4) is not a procedural safeguard required in a probation revocation hearing pursuant to § 16-11-206, but rather is a prehearing requirement imposed on the probation officer, it is not within the contemplation of subsection (2). People v. Schoonover, 654 P.2d 1340 (Colo. App. 1982).

Conviction entered upon finding that defendant violated condition. This section requires the court to enter a judgment of conviction upon finding at a revocation hearing that the defendant has violated the condition of a deferred judgment. People v. Widhalm, 642 P.2d 498 (Colo. 1982); People v. Wilder, 687 P.2d 451 (Colo. 1984); People v. Nichols, 140 P.3d 198 (Colo. App. 2006).

Once the trial court finds that a violation has been proven by a preponderance of the evidence, the deferred sentence must be revoked. Adair v. People, 651 P.2d 389 (Colo. 1982).

Scope of revocation hearing. In a revocation hearing, the court need only apprise itself of facts which convince it that the conditions of the deferred sentence have been breached. People v. Adair, 44 Colo. App. 423, 620 P.2d 46 (1980), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 651 P.2d 389 (Colo. 1982).

Standard of proof for violation of deferred sentence. To support a revocation, a violation of the deferred sentence need only be proven by a preponderance of the evidence. Once the proof has been made and the court finds that the terms of the deferred judgment were violated the court must act to revoke the deferred judgment status, enter judgment, and impose sentence upon the defendant's guilty plea. Adair v. People, 651 P.2d 389 (Colo. 1982).

Beyond reasonable doubt standard of proof. An adult charged with a violation of his deferred sentencing which constitutes a criminal offense has the right to demand that the charge be proven "beyond a reasonable doubt". People v. Van Deusen, 677 P.2d 402 (Colo. App. 1983).

Question of whether the defendant failed to cooperate in a treatment program which was a condition of the deferred judgment is one of fact for the trial court. People v. Galloway, 677 P.2d 1380 (Colo. App. 1983).

Statutory standard that defendant had ability to pay restitution but failed to do so was satisfied by the district court finding that defendant had money during the deferral period which he could have paid to the probation department, but which he chose, instead, to pay to his mother. People v. Zabala, 706 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1985).

Defendant's financial ability to pay restitution is a defense to a charge of violating restitution requirement of deferred sentence. People v. Afentul, 773 P.2d 1081 (Colo. 1989).

Procedures and burden of proof established by court for resolving prosecutorial application for entry of judgment and imposition of sentence based on defendant's failure to pay full restitution as part of a deferred sentence. People v. Afentul, 773 P.2d 1081 (Colo. 1989).

Defendant must prove his or her financial inability to pay restitution. Once the prosecution presents evidence of the defendant's failure to pay restitution, the burden shifts to the defendant to prove his or her financial inability to pay restitution. People v. Rivera-Bottzeck, 119 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2004).

Court may grant probation upon revocation of deferred judgment and sentence. As long as a defendant is otherwise eligible for probation, a court may grant him probation upon the revocation of a deferred judgment and sentence. People v. Turner, 644 P.2d 951 (Colo. 1982).

Evidence of defendant's failure to pay restitution is prima facie evidence that defendant has violated the conditions of his deferred sentencing which, if not rebutted or contradicted, will sustain the entry of a judgment of conviction and the imposition of sentence. People v. McPherson, 897 P.2d 923 (Colo. App. 1995).

Defendant's two-year deferred sentence for a traffic violation in Colorado could not be used to enhance his criminal history category under the federal sentencing guidelines for a later conviction involving distribution of cocaine. United States v. Kipp, 10 F.3d 1463 (9th Cir. 1993).

Battery, in violation of Aurora Municipal Code, was an "offense" in violation of stipulation for deferred judgment and sentence. People v. Slayton, 878 P.2d 106 (Colo. App. 1994).

Absence of defendant's signature on joint motion immaterial where defendant received benefits under deferred judgment, signed consent form in interview with probation officer, and made initial payment of restitution. People v. McPherson, 897 P.2d 923 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section does not limit the broad grant of power to the courts under the probation statutes. People v. Burleigh, 727 P.2d 873 (Colo. App. 1986).

As sentence imposed following revocation is within trial court's discretion. When a deferred judgment is revoked in a felony case, sentencing to the penitentiary is not mandatory. The type of sentence to be imposed after the revocation of the deferred sentence is a matter within the discretion of the trial court, and a defendant is entitled to a consideration of all statutory sentencing alternatives at the time the deferred sentence is revoked and judgment of conviction is entered against him. Adair v. People, 651 P.2d 389 (Colo. 1982).

Appeal or review of revocation of deferred sentence available. A defendant may either appeal an order revoking a deferred sentence, pursuant to C.A.R. 1 or file a motion for post-conviction review, pursuant to Crim. P. 35(c). People v. Boykin, 631 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1981).

When revocation of deferred sentence reviewable. The provisions of Crim. P. 33(a), precluding appellate review absent a motion for a new trial, apply to the revocation of a deferred sentence. People v. Hallman, 44 Colo. App. 530, 624 P.2d 347 (1980), aff'd, 652 P.2d 173 (Colo. 1982).

Where two-year limitation on revocation of deferred sentence tolled. Where a complaint and arrest warrant are issued within the statutory period and the defendant is voluntarily absent from the jurisdiction, or is imprisoned on another offense, the two-year limitation on revocation of a deferred sentence is tolled. People v. Peretsky, 44 Colo. App. 270, 616 P.2d 170 (1980).

A revocation petition must be filed within the term of the deferred judgment or within 30 days thereafter, unless the time limitation is tolled. A letter from the investigator to the court and the issuance of a bench warrant during the term of the deferred judgment was not sufficient to toll the time limitation. People v. Guerrero, 26 P.3d 537 (Colo. App. 2001).

Amended revocation petition filed after expiration of the deferred judgment term is proper if initial petition is filed before expiration and effectively tolls the time limitation of this section. People v. Nichols, 140 P.3d 198 (Colo. App. 2006).

Motion for new trial is prerequisite for appellate review of revocation of probation except when the propriety of a sentence is being appealed as provided in C.A.R. 4(c). People v. Hallman, 44 Colo. App. 530, 624 P.2d 347 (1980), aff'd, 652 P.2d 173 (Colo. 1982).

Compliance with the motion for a new trial requirement of Crim. P. 33(a) is a prerequisite for appellate review of a trial court's judgment revoking a deferred sentence and imposing a sentence. Hallman v. People, 652 P.2d 173 (Colo. 1982).

And procedural considerations governing section are analogous to those governing probation. People v. Peretsky, 44 Colo. App. 270, 616 P.2d 170 (1980); People v. Zabala, 706 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1985).

Therefore, filing of the revocation petition by the probation department in no way prejudiced the defendant. People v. Zabala, 706 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1985).

No double jeopardy prohibition was implicated when deferred judgment and sentence for possession of a controlled substance was revoked, where the trial court based its sentencing decision, in part, on the facts of the later vehicular homicide offense. People v. Lopez, 97 P.3d 223 (Colo. App. 2004).

Application for deferred sentencing does not constitute waiver of right to preliminary hearing. Celestine v. District Court, 199 Colo. 514, 610 P.2d 1342 (1980).

Guilty plea accepted by court constitutes jeopardy. A plea of guilty under this section, when accepted by the court, resolves the issue of guilt and constitutes jeopardy. Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981).

So withdrawal or cancellation of deferred sentence affects sentence not conviction. Where the trial court withdraws or cancels the imposition of the deferred sentence, its order affects only the sentence and does not touch the conviction. People v. Peretsky, 44 Colo. App. 270, 616 P.2d 170 (1980).

Deferred judgment revoked but reinstated. Where the commission of a crime charged and the conviction thereof is the sole basis of the revocation of a previous deferred judgment and subsequent imposition of sentence, the validity of the revocation must be tested by the validity of the conviction. Where the conviction is then reversed, and a judgment of acquittal was entered on the criminal charges, defendant is entitled to have the deferred judgment reinstated. People v. Anzures, 670 P.2d 1258 (Colo. App. 1983).

Section not applicable to mandatory sentence. The sentence requirement in § 42-2-206 remains mandatory and is not subject to plea bargaining to obtain a deferred sentence as generally allowed by this section. Walker v. District Court, 199 Colo. 128, 606 P.2d 70 (1980).

Prosecution dismissed under this section not basis for civil action. As a matter of public policy, one who acknowledges his guilt of a criminal act, even though the case is subsequently dismissed under the deferred judgment plan, may not use that criminal prosecution as a basis for a civil malicious prosecution action. Land v. Hill, 644 P.2d 43 (Colo. App. 1981).

Applied in People v. Vollentine, 643 P.2d 800 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Martinez, 657 P.2d 967 (Colo. App. 1982); Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983); Hafelfinger v. District Court, 674 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1984).

18-1.3-103. Deferred sentencing - drug offenders - legislative declaration - demonstration program - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1367, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section was similar to former § 16-7-403.7 as it existed prior to 2002.
(2) Subsection (6) provided for the repeal of this section, effective July 1, 2006. (See L. 2002, p. 1367.)

18-1.3-104. Alternatives in imposition of sentence. (1) Within the limitations of the applicable statute pertaining to sentencing and subject to the provisions of this title, the trial court has the following alternatives in entering judgment imposing a sentence:

(a) The defendant may be granted probation unless any provision of law makes him or her ineligible for probation. The granting or denial of probation and the conditions of probation including the length of probation shall not be subject to appellate review unless probation is granted contrary to the provisions of this title.

(b) Subject to the provisions of section 18-1.3-401, in class 2, class 3, class 4, class 5, and class 6 felonies, the defendant may be sentenced to imprisonment for a definite period of time.

(b.5) (I) Except as otherwise provided by subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b.5), any defendant who, in the determination of the court, is a candidate for an alternative sentencing option and who would otherwise be sentenced to imprisonment pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (1) may, as an alternative, be sentenced to a specialized restitution and community service program pursuant to section 18-1.3-302, which may include restorative justice practices, as defined in section 18-1-901 (3) (o.5), if such defendant is determined eligible and is accepted into such program. To be eligible for restorative justice practices, the defendant shall not have been convicted of unlawful sexual behavior as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., a crime in which the underlying factual basis involves domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), stalking as defined in section 18-3-602, or violation of a protection order as defined in section 18-6-803.5. If the court orders the defendant to attend a restorative justice practices victim-offender conference, the facilitator of the conference shall provide his or her services for a fee of no more than one hundred twenty-five dollars, based on a sliding scale; however, the fee may be waived by the court. Any statements made during the conference shall be confidential and shall not be used as a basis for charging or prosecuting the defendant unless the defendant commits a chargeable offense during the conference.

(II) (A) The court shall consider and may sentence any defendant who is a nonviolent offender as defined in sub-subparagraph (B) of this subparagraph (II) pursuant to subsection (2) of this section.

(B) As used in this section, "nonviolent offender" means a person convicted of a felony other than a crime of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406 (2), one of the felonies set forth in section 18-3-104, 18-4-203, 18-4-301, or 18-4-401 (2) (c), (2) (d), or (5), or a felony offense committed against a child as set forth in articles 3, 6, and 7 of this title, and who is not subject to the provisions of section 18-1.3-801.

(c) The defendant shall be sentenced to death in those cases in which a death sentence is required under section 18-1.3-1201, 18-1.3-1302, or 18-1.4-102.

(d) The defendant may be sentenced to the payment of a fine or to a term of imprisonment or to both a term of imprisonment and the payment of a fine; except that a person who has been twice convicted of a felony under the laws of this state, any other state, or the United States prior to the conviction for which he or she is being sentenced is not eligible to receive a fine in lieu of imprisonment. No fine shall be imposed for conviction of a felony except as provided in sections 18-1.3-401 and 25-15-310, articles 22 to 29 of title 39, or article 3 of title 42, C.R.S.

(e) The defendant may be sentenced to comply with any other court order authorized by law.

(f) The defendant may be sentenced to payment of costs.

(g) The defendant may be sentenced pursuant to part 4 or 5 of this article.

(h) (I) If the defendant is eligible pursuant to section 18-1.3-407.5 or section 19-2-517 (6), C.R.S., the defendant may be sentenced to the youthful offender system in accordance with section 18-1.3-407.

(II) Repealed.

(i) Notwithstanding any provision of this subsection (1) to the contrary, the court shall sentence any person convicted of a sex offense, as defined in section 18-1.3-1003 (5), committed on or after November 1, 1998, pursuant to the provisions of part 10 of this article.

(2) (a) The sentencing court shall consider the following factors in sentencing nonviolent offenders:

(I) The nature and character of the offense;

(II) The character and record of the nonviolent offender, including whether the offender is a first-time offender;

(III) The offender's employment history;

(IV) The potential rehabilitative value of the sentencing alternatives available to the court;

(V) Any potential impact on the safety of the victim, the victim's family, and the general public based upon sentencing alternatives available to the court; and

(VI) The offender's ability to pay restitution to the victim or the victim's family based upon the sentencing alternatives available to the court.

(b) A nonviolent offender may be granted probation pursuant to paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section and, as a condition of probation, be required to participate in an intensive supervision program pursuant to section 18-1.3-208.

(c) The court shall consider and may sentence a nonviolent offender to any one or any combination of the sentences described in this paragraph (c) if, upon consideration of the factors described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), the court does not grant probation pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (2) or does not sentence the offender to the department of corrections as provided under paragraph (d) of this subsection (2):

(I) A community corrections program pursuant to section 18-1.3-301;

(II) A home detention program pursuant to section 18-1.3-105; or

(III) A specialized restitution and community service program pursuant to section 18-1.3-302.

(d) Nothing in this subsection (2) shall be construed as prohibiting a court from exercising its discretion in sentencing a nonviolent offender to the department of corrections based upon, but not limited to, any one or more factors described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2).

(3) (a) In determining the appropriate sentencing alternative for a defendant who has been convicted of unlawful sexual behavior as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), the sentencing court shall consider the defendant's previous criminal and juvenile delinquency records, if any, set forth in the presentence investigation report prepared pursuant to section 16-11-102 (1) (a), C.R.S.

(b) For purposes of this subsection (3), "convicted" means a conviction by a jury or by a court and shall also include a deferred judgment and sentence, a deferred adjudication, an adjudication, and a plea of guilty or nolo contendere.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1368, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: (1)(c) amended, p. 32, § 24, effective October 1. L. 2003: IP(1), (1)(a), and (1)(b) amended, p. 975, § 12, effective April 17. L. 2004: (1)(h)(II) repealed, p. 243, § 1, effective April 5. L. 2009: (1)(h)(I) amended, (HB 09-1122), ch. 77, p. 280, § 3, effective October 1. L. 2010: (1)(h)(I) amended, (HB 10-1413), ch. 264, p. 1204, § 4, effective August 11. L. 2011: (1)(b.5)(I) amended, (HB 11-1032), ch. 296, p. 1402, § 7, effective August 10.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-101 as it existed prior to 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1)(c), see section 16 of chapter 1 of the supplement to the Session Laws of Colorado 2002, Third Extraordinary Session.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For article, "Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986", which discusses a case relating to increased sentence after retrial, see 15 Colo. Law. 1604 (1986). For article, "Criminal Law", which discusses Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with questions of criminal sentencing, see 63 Den. U.L. Rev. 291 (1986).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-104 is similar to § 16-11-101 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Only the general assembly may define crimes and prescribe punishments. People v. Hinchman, 196 Colo. 526, 589 P.2d 917 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 941, 99 S. Ct. 2883, 61 L. Ed.2d 311 (1979).

It is the general assembly's prerogative to define crimes and prescribe punishments; the courts have no jurisdiction to impose sentences not in accord with the minimum and maximum terms specified by statute. People v. Trujillo, 631 P.2d 146 (Colo. 1981).

Trial court had no authority to order alternate sentence in the event that death penalty statute was later found unconstitutional and, therefore, alternate sentence is illegal and void. People v. Corbett, 713 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1985).

The purpose of this section is to give greater flexibility in sentencing. Nugent v. District Court, 184 Colo. 353, 520 P.2d 592 (1974).

Probation is accorded only to a defendant who seeks it or is willing to accept it as a sentence. People v. Rollins, 771 P.2d 32 (Colo. App. 1989).

The court may impose a fine in lieu of incarceration or probation without the consent of the prosecutor where defendant is convicted of a class 2 felony not involving violence or an assault on a firefighter or a peace officer. People v. Thompson, 897 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1994).

Under this section, the trial court may grant probation, if a defendant is eligible for probation, or the trial court may impose a sentence of imprisonment for a definite period of time. Chae v. People, 780 P.2d 481 (Colo. 1989).

Under parole procedures an indeterminate sentence usually results in an earlier release.

It cannot be said to be harsh or excessive so as to require the scrutiny of an appellate court. Nugent v. District Court, 184 Colo. 353, 520 P.2d 592 (1974).

Convicted defendant entitled to indeterminate sentence where act effective prior to conviction. A defendant convicted in a criminal proceeding which was not yet final was entitled to indeterminate sentencing in a Crim. P. 35 proceeding since this section and § 16-11-304 requiring such sentencing became effective after the commission of the crime but prior to the date of conviction and sentencing. People v. Griswold, 190 Colo. 136, 543 P.2d 1251 (1975).

Section 18-1-409 entitled defendant to benefit of this section. Defendant, who was sentenced prior to the effective date of the 1973 amendments to this section and § 16-11-304 — which legislation provided for the imposition of indeterminate sentences for class 4 and class 5 felonies — was entitled to the benefit of this legislation under relief sought by § 18-1-409. People v. Thornton, 187 Colo. 202, 529 P.2d 628 (1974).

A defendant who was sentenced to a term with a fixed minimum and fixed maximum for conviction of a class 4 felony was entitled under § 18-1-409 to the benefits of this section and § 16-11-304. People v. Race, 187 Colo. 204, 529 P.2d 629 (1974).

Repeal of subsection (1)(d) after sentence no ground for relief. Where the effective date (July 1, 1979) of the repeal of § 16-11-101 (1)(d) was more than three months after the defendant was sentenced under its provisions, the repeal did not entitle the defendant to relief under § 18-1-410 (1)(f)(I). People v. Steelman, 200 Colo. 177, 613 P.2d 334 (1980).

Supreme court was without power to alter minimum sentence to indeterminate sentence. Where defendant, who was sentenced to a minimum term of three years for the crime of manslaughter, sought a declaration that he was immediately eligible for parole consideration on the ground that this section and § 16-11-304, enacted subsequent to his sentencing, required that a maximum sentence be imposed but eliminated the minimum sentence for the crime of manslaughter, the supreme court held that it did not have the power to alter defendant's minimum sentence to make the sentence indeterminate. People v. Davis, 186 Colo. 186, 526 P.2d 312 (1974).

Duration of period of probation is limited to maximum term of imprisonment specified for the offense in question, and the provision of § 16-11-202 permitting the court to grant probation "for such a period and upon such terms and conditions as it deems best", does not give the court the authority to extend the terms of probation beyond the maximum term of imprisonment. People v. Knaub, 624 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Benavidez, 58 P.3d 1142 (Colo. App. 2002).

For the period of probation allowable for offenses within the presumptive ranges established by § 18-1-105, see People v. Flenniken, 749 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1988) and People v. Hunter, 757 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1988).

A trial court may not impose a probationary term that is greater than the longest possible period of incarceration for the underlying misdemeanor. People v. Kennaugh, 80 P.3d 315 (Colo. 2003).

The maximum sentences established in § 18-1-105 for imprisonment periods do not apply to probation periods to which a defendant may be sentenced. People v. Flenniken, 749 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1988).

District court possessed jurisdiction to sentence defendant to a term of probation which did not exceed the maximum term of imprisonment in the aggravated range for the crime committed; the term of probation was not limited to the presumptive range for the crime committed. Hunter v. People, 757 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1988).

Incarceration a possible condition of probation. Incarceration, while a sentencing alternative, is also a possible specific condition of probation. People v. Horton, 628 P.2d 117 (Colo. App. 1980).

Sentencing following revocation of deferred judgment. When a deferred judgment is revoked in a felony case, sentencing to the penitentiary is not mandatory. The type of sentence to be imposed after the revocation of the deferred sentence is a matter within the discretion of the trial court, and a defendant is entitled to a consideration of all statutory sentencing alternatives at the time the deferred sentence is revoked and judgment of conviction is entered against him. Adair v. People, 651 P.2d 389 (Colo. 1982).

Court cannot suspend portion of sentence to alter limits of sentence. The court may not circumvent legislative dictates by first sentencing within legislatively prescribed parameters, and then suspending a portion of the minimum and maximum, for to do so would be an invasion of the general assembly's exclusive province to set punishments. People v. Hinchman, 196 Colo.

526, 589 P.2d 917 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 941, 99 S. Ct. 2883, 61 L. Ed.2d 311 (1979).

Trial court may not suspend sentence after denying probation. There are no provisions in this article authorizing the suspension of imposition or execution of sentence apart from a concomitant grant of probation, and a trial court may not circumvent the statutory requirements by denying probation and thereafter undertaking to suspend a sentence validly imposed. People v. Patrick, 38 Colo. App. 103, 555 P.2d 182 (1976).

A trial court, having rejected probation, cannot circumvent legislative dictates by sentencing within prescribed parameters, suspending the sentence, and then imposing conditions which are authorized only in connection with probation. People v. District Court, 673 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1983); People v. Flenniken, 749 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1988).

District court had no statutory authority to suspend the sentence of imprisonment and to impose conditions on that suspension. Chae v. People, 780 P.2d 481 (Colo. 1989).

Decision to deny probation is not subject to appellate review where trial court considered all circumstances and available evidence. People v. Godwin, 679 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Graham, 678 P.2d 1043 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1216, 104 S. Ct. 2660, 81 L. Ed.2d 366 (1984); People v. Robinson, 713 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Emery, 812 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1990).

Appellate court has jurisdiction to review conditions of probation. The appellate court has jurisdiction under subsection (1)(a) to review the conditions of defendant's probation where the argument is that the conditions of probation are contrary to the provisions of this title. People v. Cera, 673 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Brockelman, 916 P.2d 592 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd on other grounds, 933 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1997).

However, the appellate court has no jurisdiction under subsection (1)(a) to review the conditions of probation where the argument is that the conditions of probation are contrary to the provisions of title 17. People v. Smith, 681 P.2d 525 (Colo. App. 1983).

When credit for presentence confinement presumed. Credit for presentence confinement must be presumed when the sentence imposed, plus the presentence confinement, does not exceed the maximum possible sentence. People v. Lobato, 192 Colo. 357, 559 P.2d 224 (1977).

Having initially taken into consideration the presentence confinement, it was not necessary for a court in resentencing to again recite what had been expressly stated before — that presentence confinement had been considered by the court. People v. Lobato, 192 Colo. 357, 559 P.2d 224 (1977).

This section defines the sentencing alternatives that are within a court's jurisdiction which do not include the authority to enter orders modifying parole eligibility. People v. Anaya, 894 P.2d 28 (Colo. App. 1994).

The substance of the principles articulated in the American Bar Association Standards Relating to Sentencing Alternatives and Procedures § 3.5, insofar as they are consistent with the stated general purposes of the Colorado code of criminal procedure, may be deemed to be "authorized by law" within the meaning of paragraph (f) of subsection (1) of this section and Crim. P. 32(b). People v. Lewis, 193 Colo. 203, 564 P.2d 111 (1977).

Applied in People v. Sandoval, 36 Colo. App. 403, 541 P.2d 105 (1975); People v. Soper, 628 P.2d 604 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hotopp, 632 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1981); People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981); People v. Madonna, 651 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1982); People v. Manley, 707 P.2d 1021 (Colo. App. 1985).

18-1.3-105. Authority of sentencing courts to utilize home detention programs.

(1) (a) A sentencing judge is authorized to sentence any offender, as defined in subsection (5) of this section, to a home detention program operated pursuant to a contractual agreement with the department of public safety pursuant to this article for all or part of such offender's sentence.

(b) Prior to sentencing any offender directly to a home detention program, the sentencing judge shall consider the following factors:

- (I) The safety of victims and witnesses of the offender's criminal acts;
- (II) The safety of the public at large;
- (III) The seriousness of any offense committed by the offender together with any information relating to the original charge against the offender;
- (IV) The offender's prior criminal record; and
- (V) The ability of the offender to pay for the costs of home detention and any restitution to victims of his or her criminal acts.

(c) The sentencing judge shall make every reasonable effort to notify the victims of crime that the offender has been sentenced to a home detention program. Such notice shall be sent to the last address in the possession of the court, and the victim of the crime has the duty to keep the court informed of his or her most current address.

(d) An offender who has been convicted of a crime, the underlying factual basis of which was found by the court to include an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), shall not be eligible for home detention in the home of the victim pursuant to this article.

(2) Any offender who is directly sentenced to a home detention program pursuant to subsection (1) of this section and fails to carry out the terms and conditions prescribed by the sentencing court in his or her sentence to a home detention program shall be returned to the court and resentenced as soon as possible.

(3) A sentencing judge is authorized to require any offender, as defined in subsection (5) of this section, as a condition of probation, to serve an appropriate period of time extending from ninety days to one year in a home detention program operated directly by the judicial department, or in a home detention program operated pursuant to a contractual agreement with the department of public safety.

(4) The general assembly hereby declares that this section shall be effective July 1, 1990, only in the counties of Boulder, Larimer, and Pueblo in order to facilitate a pilot program in Boulder, Larimer, and Pueblo counties which shall extend from July 1, 1990, until July 1, 1992.

(5) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Home detention" means an alternative correctional sentence or term of probation supervision wherein a defendant convicted of any felony, other than a class 1 or violent felony, is allowed to serve his or her sentence or term of probation, or a portion thereof, within his or her home or other approved residence. Such sentence or term of probation shall require the offender to remain within his or her approved residence at all times except for approved employment, court-ordered activities, and medical needs.

(b) "Offender" means any person who has been convicted of or who has received a deferred sentence for a felony, other than a class 1 or violent felony.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1371, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 17-27.8-102 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-106. County jail sentencing alternatives - work, educational, and medical release - home detention - day reporting. (1) (a) Any county may provide a program whereby any person sentenced to the county jail upon conviction for a crime, nonpayment of any fine or forfeiture, or contempt of court may be granted by the court the privilege of leaving the jail during necessary and reasonable hours for any of the following purposes:

- (I) Seeking employment;
- (II) Working at his or her employment;
- (III) Conducting his or her own business or other self-employed occupation including housekeeping and attending to the needs of the family;
- (IV) Attendance at an educational institution;
- (V) Medical treatment;
- (VI) Home detention; or
- (VII) Day reporting.

(b) A court may order a person who would otherwise be sentenced to the county jail upon conviction of a crime to be sentenced directly to an available day reporting program if the court deems such a sentence to be appropriate for the offender.

(1.1) For purposes of this section, "home detention" means an alternative correctional sentence or term of legal supervision wherein a defendant charged or convicted of a misdemeanor, felony, nonpayment of any fine, or contempt of court is allowed to serve his or her sentence or term of supervision, or a portion thereof, within his or her home or other approved residence. Such sentence or term of supervision shall cause the defendant to remain within such defendant's approved residence at all times except for approved employment, court-ordered activities, and medical needs. Supervision of the defendant shall include personal monitoring by an agent or designee of the referring unit of government and monitoring by electronic or global positioning devices that are capable of detecting and reporting the defendant's absence or presence within the approved residence.

(1.3) Before a court may grant a person sentenced to the county jail the privilege of leaving the jail to attend a postsecondary educational institution, the court shall first notify the prosecuting attorney and the postsecondary educational institution of its intention to grant the privilege and requesting their comments thereon. The notice shall include all relevant information pertaining to the person and the crime for which he or she was convicted. Both the prosecuting attorney and the postsecondary institution shall reply to the court in writing within fourteen days after receipt of the notification or within such other reasonable time in excess of fourteen days as specified by the court. The postsecondary educational institution's reply shall include a statement of whether or not it will accept the person as a student. Acceptance by a state postsecondary educational institution shall be pursuant to section 23-5-106, C.R.S.

(2) Unless directly sentenced to a day reporting program pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section or unless such privilege is otherwise expressly granted by the sentencing court, the prisoner shall be confined as sentenced. The prisoner may petition the court for such privilege at the time of sentencing or thereafter and, in the discretion of the court, may renew his or her petition. The court may withdraw the privilege at any time by order entered with or without notice.

(3) The sheriff may endeavor to secure employment for unemployed prisoners under this section. If a prisoner is employed for wages or salary, the sheriff may collect the same or require the prisoner to turn over his or her wages or salary in full when received, and the sheriff shall deposit the same in a trust checking account and shall keep a ledger showing the status of the account of each prisoner.

(4) Every prisoner gainfully employed shall be liable for the cost of his or her board in the jail or the cost of the supervision and administrative services if he or she is home-detained, as fixed by the board of county commissioners. If necessarily absent from jail at mealtime, he or she shall, at his or her request, be furnished with an adequate nourishing lunch to carry to work. The sheriff shall charge his or her account, if he or she has one, for such board. If the prisoner is gainfully self-employed, he or she shall pay the sheriff for such board, in default of which his or her privilege under this section shall be automatically forfeited. If the jail food is furnished directly by the county, the sheriff shall account for and pay over such board payments to the county treasurer. The board of county commissioners may, by resolution, provide that the county furnish or pay for the transportation of prisoners employed under this section to and from the place of employment. The sheriff shall reimburse the county or other disbursing agent for all such expenses incurred in accordance with this section and article 26 of title 17, C.R.S., as soon as adequate funds are available in the prisoner's account and in accordance with paragraph (b) of subsection (5) of this section.

(5) By order of the court, the wages or salaries of employed prisoners shall be disbursed by the sheriff for the following purposes, in the order stated:

- (a) Payment of any current child support order;
 - (b) Payment of any child support arrearage;
 - (b.3) Payment of any child support debt order;
 - (c) Payment of any spousal maintenance;
 - (d) Payment of costs for the crime victim compensation fund, pursuant to section 24-4.1-119, C.R.S.;
 - (e) Payment of surcharges for the victims and witnesses assistance and law enforcement fund, pursuant to section 24-4.2-104, C.R.S.;
 - (f) Payment of restitution;
 - (g) Payment of a time payment fee;
 - (h) Payment of late fees;
 - (i) Payment of any other fines, fees, or surcharges;
 - (j) Payment of the board of the prisoner;
 - (k) Payment of the supervision and administrative services provided to the prisoner during his or her home detention;
 - (l) Payment of necessary travel expense to and from work and other incidental expenses of the prisoner;
 - (m) Payment, either in full or ratably, of the prisoner's obligations acknowledged by him or her in writing or which have been reduced to judgment; and
 - (n) The balance, if any, to the prisoner upon his or her discharge.
- (6) The court may by order authorize the sheriff to whom the prisoner is committed to arrange with another sheriff for the employment or home detention of the prisoner in the other's county and, while so employed or so detained, for the prisoner to be in the other's custody but in other respects to be and continue subject to the commitment.

(7) If the prisoner was convicted in a court in another county, the court of record having criminal jurisdiction may, at the request or with the concurrence of the committing court, make all determinations and orders under this section which might otherwise be made by the sentencing court after the prisoner is received at the jail.

(8) The board of county commissioners may, by resolution, direct that functions of the sheriff under either subsection (3) or (5) of this section, or both, be performed by the county department of social services; or, if the board of county commissioners has not so directed, a court of record may order that the prisoner's earnings be collected and disbursed by the clerk of the court. Such order shall remain in force until rescinded by the board or the court, whichever made it.

(9) The county department of social services shall at the request of the court investigate and report to the court the amount necessary for the support of the prisoner's dependents.

(10) The sheriff may refuse to permit the prisoner to exercise his or her privilege to leave the jail as provided in subsection (1) of this section for any breach of discipline or other violation of jail regulations. Any such breach of discipline or other violation of jail regulations shall be reported to the sentencing court.

(11) A prisoner who has been convicted of one of the crimes of violence as defined in section 18-1.3-406 (2), who has been convicted of a sex offense as defined in sections 18-1.3-903 (5) and 18-3-411, who has been convicted of a crime, the underlying factual basis of which was found by the court to include an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), or who has been convicted of a class 1 misdemeanor in which a deadly weapon is used shall not be eligible for home detention pursuant to this section.

(12) Persons sentenced to the county jail as a direct sentence or sentenced to the county jail as a condition of probation who are permitted to participate in work, educational, medical release, home detention, or day reporting programs pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall receive one day credit against their sentences for each day spent in such programs. As used in this section, “day reporting program” means an alternative correctional sentence wherein a defendant is allowed to serve his or her sentence by reporting daily to a central location wherein the defendant is supervised in court-ordered activities.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1372, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2006: (1.1) amended, p. 18, § 2, effective March 8. L. 2008: (5)(d) amended, p. 1888, § 51, effective August 5. L. 2012: (1.3) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 864, § 107, effective July 1.

Editor’s note: (1) This section is similar to former § 17-26-128 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (1.3) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Subsection (4) requires sheriff to charge the trust checking account of an inmate on work release for board only if the inmate has such an account, which is not required. People v. Gallegos, 260 P.3d 15 (Colo. App. 2010).

Sheriff did not take any public moneys or public property pursuant to this section where trust checking accounts are not required. People v. Gallegos, 260 P.3d 15 (Colo. App. 2010).

PART 2

PROBATION

18-1.3-201. Application for probation. (1) (a) A person who has been convicted of an offense, other than a class 1 felony or a class 2 petty offense, is eligible to apply to the court for probation.

(b) Repealed.

(2) (a) The provisions of this subsection (2) shall apply to any person whose application for probation is based on a conviction for a felony, which conviction occurred before May 25, 2010.

(a.5) A person who has been twice or more convicted of a felony under the laws of this state, any other state, or the United States prior to the conviction on which his or her application is based shall not be eligible for probation.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law except the provisions of paragraph (c) of this subsection (2), a person who has been convicted of one or more felonies under the laws of this state, any other state, or the United States within ten years prior to a class 1, 2, or 3 felony conviction on which his or her application is based shall not be eligible for probation.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a.5) of this subsection (2) and subsection (4) of this section, an offender convicted of a violation of section 18-18-403.5 may be eligible for probation upon recommendation of the district attorney.

(d) Repealed.

(2.1) Repealed.

(2.5) (a) The provisions of this subsection (2.5) shall apply to any person whose application for probation is based on a conviction for a felony, which conviction occurred on or after May 25, 2010.

(b) Except as described in paragraph (a) of subsection (4) of this section, a person who has been twice or more convicted of a felony upon charges separately brought and tried and arising out of separate and distinct criminal episodes under the laws of this state, any other state, or the United States prior to the conviction on which his or her application is based shall not be eligible for probation if the current conviction or a prior conviction is for:

- (I) First or second degree murder, as described in section 18-3-102 or 18-3-103;
- (II) Manslaughter, as described in section 18-3-104;
- (III) First or second degree assault, as described in section 18-3-202 or 18-3-203;
- (IV) First or second degree kidnapping, as described in section 18-3-301 or 18-3-302;
- (V) A sexual offense as described in part 4 of article 3 of this title;
- (VI) First degree arson, as described in section 18-4-102;
- (VII) First or second degree burglary, as described in section 18-4-202 or 18-4-203;
- (VIII) Robbery, as described in section 18-4-301;
- (IX) Aggravated robbery, as described in section 18-4-302 or 18-4-303;
- (X) Theft from the person of another, as described in section 18-4-401 (5);
- (XI) Any felony offense committed against a child, as described in article 3, 6, or 7 of this title; or
- (XII) Any criminal attempt or conspiracy to commit any of the offenses specified in this paragraph (b).

(c) Failure to register as a sex offender, as described in section 18-3-412.5, shall not constitute a sexual offense for the purposes of subparagraph (V) of paragraph (b) of this subsection (2.5).

(3) An application for probation shall be in writing upon forms furnished by the court, but, when the defendant has been convicted of a misdemeanor or a class 1 petty offense, the court, in its discretion, may waive the written application for probation.

(4) (a) (I) The restrictions upon eligibility for probation in subsections (2) and (2.5) of this section may be waived by the sentencing court regarding a particular defendant upon recommendation of the district attorney approved by an order of the sentencing court.

(II) Repealed.

(b) Upon entry of an order pursuant to this subsection (4) regarding a particular defendant, such defendant shall be deemed to be eligible to apply to the court for probation pursuant to this section.

(5) For purposes of paragraph (a.5) of subsection (2) of this section and paragraph (a) of subsection (2.5) of this section, “conviction” means a verdict of guilty or the entry of a plea of guilty or nolo contendere. “Conviction” does not include a plea to a deferred judgment and sentence pursuant to section 18-1.3-102 until the deferred judgment and sentence is revoked.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1375, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (2) amended and (2.1) added, p. 2689, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2007: (2)(d) and (2.1) repealed, p. 1689, § 10, effective July 1. L. 2010: (1)(b) and (4)(a)(II) repealed, (2) and (4)(a)(I) amended, and (2.5) added, (HB 10-1338), ch. 257, pp. 1147, 1145, §§ 2, 1, effective May 25; (2)(c) amended, (HB 10-1352), ch. 259, p. 1173, § 16, effective August 11. L. 2012: (5) added, (HB 12-1310), ch. 268, p. 1396, § 12, effective June 7.

Editor’s note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-11-201 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Amendments to subsections (2) and (2)(c) by House Bill 10-1338 and House Bill 10-1352 were harmonized.

Cross references: (1) For procedures relevant to application for probation, see Crim. P. 32.

(2) For the legislative intent contained in the 2003 act amending subsection (2) and enacting subsection (2.1), see section 1 of chapter 424, Session Laws of Colorado 2003.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Colorado Felony Sentencing”, see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For article, “Review of New Legislation Relating to Criminal Law”, see 11 Colo. Law. 2148 (1982). For article, “Criminal Law”, which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with probation proceedings, see 61 Den. L.J. 274 (1984).

Annotator’s note. Since § 18-1.3-201 is similar to § 16-11-201 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is general in nature, and expects only class one felonies and class two petty offenses. People v. Burke, 185 Colo. 19, 521 P.2d 783 (1974).

Misdemeanant may apply for probation. An offense specifically designated by statute as a misdemeanor, although for some purposes might be characterized as a petty offense, comes plainly within the law permitting application for probation. Coffey v. County Court, 177 Colo. 81, 492 P.2d 839 (1972) (decided under repealed § 39-16-3, C.R.S. 1963).

The general assembly did not intend to repeal the mandatory sentencing provision of § 42-2-130, sub silentio, by implication, or otherwise by enactment of this section. People v. Burke, 185 Colo. 19, 521 P.2d 783 (1974).

Subsection (2) cannot be read to exclude persons convicted of two prior felonies from community correctional programs, since such programs are not purely probationary. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 195 Colo. 34, 575 P.2d 4 (1978).

Court may not disregard legislative sentencing mandates. A court is not free to disregard the legislative mandate of §§ 16-11-301 and 16-11-308 and this section, even when it appears to dictate a sentence which the court considers inappropriate to a particular case. People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981).

Unconstitutionally obtained conviction cannot be considered for eligibility for probation. People v. McIntosh, 695 P.2d 795 (Colo. App. 1984).

Subsection (2) prohibits judge from utilizing suspended sentence as means for granting probation. The legislative mandate of subsection (2) is intended to prohibit a trial judge from circumventing the clear wording of the statute by utilizing a suspended sentence as a means for granting probation. The statutory command requires incarceration when any defendant, before the court for imposition of sentence, has been previously convicted of two felonies. Herrman v. District Court, 186 Colo. 350, 527 P.2d 1168 (1974).

Trial court may not suspend sentence after denying probation. There are no provisions in this article authorizing the suspension of imposition or execution of sentence apart from a concomitant grant of probation, and a trial court may not circumvent the statutory requirements by denying probation and thereafter undertaking to suspend a sentence validly imposed. People v. Patrick, 38 Colo. App. 103, 555 P.2d 182 (1976).

Two felonies need not be separately brought and tried for purposes of determining eligibility for probation. People v. Nicholas, 700 P.2d 921 (Colo. App. 1984).

The more restrictive provisions of subsection (4)(a)(II) for placing a defendant twice convicted of a felony on probation do not prevent the court from placing any defendant twice convicted of a felony on probation under the provisions of subsection (4)(a)(I). Chism v. People, 80 P.3d 293 (Colo. 2003).

To interpret subsection (4)(a)(II) as prescribing the exclusive conditions for waiver of the two-felony rule would repeal by implication subsection (4)(a)(I), which clearly permits a broader class of waivers. Constructions that work a repeal by implication are not favored unless unavoidable. Chism v. People, 80 P.3d 293 (Colo. 2003).

The court's duty to fix the amount of restitution is not confined to sentences to probation but applies equally to sentences to imprisonment. People v. Johnson, 780 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1989).

Court agreed with defendant's construction that "conviction" referenced in subsection (2)(a.5) refers to defendant's guilty plea, not the subsequent revocation of defendant's deferred judgment and sentence. Therefore, other felony convictions that occurred before the revocation cannot be considered "prior" felonies under this section, thus allowing probation to be an option. People v. Kiniston, 262 P.3d 942 (Colo. App. 2011).

Defendant who had two prior convictions at the time a third conviction was handed down was ineligible for probation. Defendant's argument that he had only one conviction at the time of commission of the underlying third crime must fail. This section clearly sets the cut-off point for determining the existence of prior convictions at the time of the third conviction. People v. Harvey, 819 P.2d 1087 (Colo. App. 1991).

If prosecution recommends waiver of the two-felony rule prior to sentencing, court may resentence defendant to probation after the revocation hearing without a second recommendation of prosecution to waive the two-felony rule. People v. Nance, 221 P.3d 428 (Colo. App. 2009).

Length of probation term not subject to statutes governing length of prison term. Imposition of prison term of six years is not controlling of length of probation term. People v. Martinez, 844 P.2d 1203 (Colo. App. 1992).

The court may impose a fine in lieu of incarceration or probation without the consent of the prosecutor where the defendant is convicted of a class 2 felony not involving violence or an assault on a firefighter or a peace officer. People v. Thompson, 897 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in People v. Bartsch, 37 Colo. App. 52, 543 P.2d 1273 (1975); People v. Crandall, 37

Colo. App. 220, 544 P.2d 411 (1975); People v. Turner, 644 P.2d 951 (Colo. 1982).

18-1.3-202. Probationary power of court. (1) When it appears to the satisfaction of the court that the ends of justice and the best interest of the public, as well as the defendant, will be served thereby, the court may grant the defendant probation for such period and upon such terms and conditions as it deems best. The length of probation shall be subject to the discretion of the court and may exceed the maximum period of incarceration authorized for the classification of the offense of which the defendant is convicted but shall not exceed five years for any misdemeanor or petty offense. If the court chooses to grant the defendant probation, the order placing the defendant on probation shall take effect upon entry and, if any appeal is brought, shall remain in effect pending review by an appellate court unless the court grants a stay of probation pursuant to section 16-4-201, C.R.S. Unless an appeal is filed that raises a claim that probation was granted contrary to the provisions of this title, the trial court shall retain jurisdiction of the case for the purpose of adjudicating complaints filed against the defendant that allege a violation of the terms and conditions of probation. In addition to imposing other conditions, the court has the power to commit the defendant to any jail operated by the county or city and county in which the offense was committed during such time or for such intervals within the period of probation as the court determines. The aggregate length of any such commitment whether continuous or at designated intervals shall not exceed ninety days for a felony, sixty days for a misdemeanor, or ten days for a petty offense unless it is a part of a work release program pursuant to section 18-1.3-207. That the defendant submit to commitment imposed under this section shall be deemed a condition of probation.

(2) The probation department in each judicial district may enter into agreements with any state agency or other public agency, any corporation, and any private agency or person to provide supervision or other services for defendants placed on probation by the court.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1376, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1) amended, p. 976, § 13, effective April 17.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-202 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-202 is similar to § 16-11-202 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions and repealed § 39-16-6, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

No equal protection violation. This section and the work release statute, § 16-11-212, establish general statutory probation dispositions for all defendants eligible for probation and do not create classifications resulting in disparate treatment. People v. Garberding, 787 P.2d 154 (Colo. 1990).

Probation is a creature of statute. People v. Ray, 192 Colo. 391, 560 P.2d 74 (1977).

Probation is a privilege, not a right, and an order of probation may be revoked if a probationer violates any condition of probation. People v. Colabello, 948 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section is similar to the original federal probation law. People v. Ledford, 173 Colo. 194, 477 P.2d 374 (1970).

Probation is accorded only to a defendant who seeks it or is willing to accept it as a sentence. People v. Rollins, 771 P.2d 32 (Colo. App. 1989).

Subject to the requirement that any conditions imposed as terms of probation must be authorized by the general assembly, trial courts are given wide discretion in imposing conditions upon a sentence of probation. People v. Richards, 795 P.2d 1343 (Colo. 1990).

Trial court has statutory authority to order that a sentence to probation be served consecutively to another sentence. People v. Trujillo, 261 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2010).

Subsection (1) does not preclude deferring commencement of a probationary sentence. People v. Trujillo, 261 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2010).

The trial court has the authority to order domestic violence treatment as a condition of defendant's probation without a jury finding that the defendant committed an "act of domestic violence". Because the court had the authority to attach whatever conditions to probation the court deemed appropriate, the U.S. supreme court's decision in Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), did not require a jury finding of an act of domestic violence before domestic violence treatment was ordered as a condition of probation. People v. Goldfuss, 98 P.3d 935 (Colo. App. 2004).

A trial court has jurisdiction to grant probation either by suspending imposition of sentence or suspending execution of the sentence. Coffey v. County Court, 177 Colo. 81, 492 P.2d 839 (1972).

It acts upon probation report. The court acts pursuant to this section upon all data relating to the applicant for probation submitted to a court in the form of a written report. Logan v. People ex rel. Alamosa County, 138 Colo. 304, 332 P.2d 897 (1958).

A trial court shall give careful consideration to the information supplied by the probation officer. Wolford v. People, 178 Colo. 203, 496 P.2d 1011 (1972).

No automatic stay of probation order pending appeal. Under subsection (1), the trial court retains jurisdiction to modify and terminate probation during the pendency of an appeal unless a stay has been granted. People v. Widhalm, 991 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1999).

The broad grant of power under this section encompassed a deferred judgment procedure. People v. Ray, 192 Colo. 391, 560 P.2d 74 (1977).

Inapplicable to delinquent child. The plain intent of the Colorado Children's Code militates against the application of this section via § 16-11-210 to a delinquent child under the age of 18 years. People in Interest of A.F., 37 Colo. App. 185, 546 P.2d 972 (1975), aff'd, 192 Colo. 207, 557 P.2d 418 (1976).

A juvenile court does not have the statutory authority to impose a limited or partial confinement in county jail as a condition of probation for a juvenile under 18 years of age. People v. A.F., 192 Colo. 207, 557 P.2d 418 (1976).

Although this section does grant courts the authority to condition probation upon service of sentences in city or county jails, such conditions are clearly contravention of numerous expressions of legislative intent in the Children's Code. People v. A.F., 192 Colo. 207, 557 P.2d 418 (1976).

This section applies to sex offender intensive supervision program (SOISP) sentences except where the language conflicts with more specific provisions contained in the statutes governing SOISP sentences. People v. Trujillo, 261 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2010).

Trial court had authority to direct that defendant's SOISP would commence consecutively at the end of his incarceration on another conviction. People v. Trujillo, 261 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2010).

Trial court had jurisdiction to grant probation. Coffey v. County Court, 177 Colo. 81, 492 P.2d 839 (1972).

The maximum sentences in the presumptive ranges established in § 18-1-105 for imprisonment periods do not apply to probation periods to which a defendant may be sentenced. People v. Flenniken, 749 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1988).

The decision of the supreme court in People v. Flenniken will be given retroactive effect. People v. Cagle, 780 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1989).

The minimum sentences established in § 18-1-105 do not establish the minimum period of probation to which a defendant may be sentenced. The length of probation is at the sentencing judge's discretion. People v. Herr, 868 P.2d 1121 (Colo. App. 1993).

Probationary sentence is not illegal because it exceeds the maximum length authorized for a sentence to incarceration. People v. Salas, 42 P.3d 68 (Colo. App. 2001).

But the provisions of this section authorizing a court to grant "probation for such period and upon such terms and conditions as it deems best" does not give the court unlimited discretion to determine the probationary period. A trial court thus exceeds its authority if it sentences a defendant to a probationary term longer than the maximum sentence to incarceration allowed for a misdemeanor offense. People v. Benavidez, 58 P.3d 1142 (Colo. App. 2002).

A trial court may not impose a probationary term that is greater than the longest possible period of incarceration for the underlying misdemeanor. People v. Kennaugh, 80 P.3d 315 (Colo. 2003).

The specific statutory provisions of § 42-4-1301 that contain a mandatory sentencing scheme for alcohol-related driving offenses and which provide for extended treatment of the underlying cause of the criminal conduct, prevail over the general provisions of this section. People v. Martinillie, 940 P.2d 1090 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in People v. Sandoval, 36 Colo. App. 403, 541 P.2d 105 (1975); People v. Horton, 628 P.2d 117 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Martinez, 657 P.2d 967 (Colo. App. 1982).

18-1.3-203. Criteria for granting probation. (1) The court, subject to the provisions of this title and title 16, C.R.S., and having considered the purposes of sentencing described in section 18-1-102.5, in its discretion may grant probation to a defendant unless, having regard to the nature and circumstances of the offense and to the history and character of the defendant, it is satisfied that imprisonment is the more appropriate sentence for the protection of the public because:

(a) There is undue risk that during a period of probation the defendant will commit another crime; or

(b) The defendant is in need of correctional treatment that can most effectively be provided by a sentence to imprisonment as authorized by section 18-1.3-104; or

(c) A sentence to probation will unduly depreciate the seriousness of the defendant's crime or undermine respect for law; or

(d) His or her past criminal record indicates that probation would fail to accomplish its intended purposes; or

(e) The crime, the facts surrounding it, or the defendant's history and character when considered in relation to statewide sentencing practices relating to persons in circumstances substantially similar to those of the defendant do not justify the granting of probation.

(2) The following factors, or the converse thereof where appropriate, while not controlling the discretion of the court, shall be accorded weight in making determinations called for by subsection (1) of this section:

(a) The defendant's criminal conduct neither caused nor threatened serious harm to another person or his or her property;

(b) The defendant did not plan or expect that his or her criminal conduct would cause or threaten serious harm to another person or his or her property;

(c) The defendant acted under strong provocation;

(d) There were substantial grounds which, though insufficient to establish a legal defense, tend to excuse or justify the defendant's conduct;

(e) The victim of the defendant's conduct induced or facilitated its commission;

(f) The defendant has made or will make restitution or reparation to the victim of his or her conduct for the damage or injury which was sustained;

(g) The defendant has no history of prior criminal activity or has led a law-abiding life for a substantial period of time before the commission of the present offense;

(h) The defendant's conduct was the result of circumstances unlikely to recur;

(i) The character, history, and attitudes of the defendant indicate that he or she is unlikely to commit another crime;

(j) The defendant is particularly likely to respond affirmatively to probationary treatment;

(k) The imprisonment of the defendant would entail undue hardship to himself or herself or his or her dependents;

(l) The defendant is elderly or in poor health;

(m) The defendant did not abuse a public position of responsibility or trust;

(n) The defendant cooperated with law enforcement authorities by bringing other offenders to justice, or otherwise.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require explicit reference to these factors in a presentence report or by the court at sentencing.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1377, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2011: IP(1) amended, (HB 11-1180), ch. 96, p. 283, § 3, effective August 10.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-203 as it existed prior to 2002.

Cross references: For provisions concerning the presentence or probation investigation, see § 16-11-102 and Crim. P. 32(a).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-203 is similar to § 16-11-203 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions and repealed § 39-16-6, C.R.S 1963, and § 39-16-6, CRS 53, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The granting of probation involves the exercise of discretion on the part of a trial judge. Logan v. People ex rel. Alamosa County, 138 Colo. 304, 332 P.2d 897 (1958).

It is not a matter of right for a defendant.

It is a matter of grace and suspends conditionally what otherwise would be a harsher decree. Gehl v. People, 161 Colo. 535, 423 P.2d 332 (1967).

Probation is a privilege rather than a right. It suspends conditionally what might be a harsher judgment. It is, in effect, a contract made by the court and sanctioned by the statute with the convicted person. Holdren v. People, 168 Colo. 474, 452 P.2d 28 (1969).

Judge considers community, offense, and offender. A trial judge in the exercise of his discretion in a probation matter considers three facets of the problem - the community, the offense, and the offender, in that order - and if upon consideration of these factors he concludes that the applicant is a worthy risk for probation, he has the power to grant it. Logan v. People ex rel. Alamosa County, 138 Colo. 304, 332 P.2d 897 (1958).

The setting, nature, and circumstances of an offense, particularly as they furnish a clue to the personality of an offender, whether an offense is violent or nonviolent, and the motives actuating a defendant in committing an offense are components which a trial court will evaluate when considering the offense as a factor in the question of granting probation, as well as the background of a defendant and information corroborating or denying the defendant's will to reform and his ability to adjust himself to community life. Logan v. People ex rel. Alamosa County, 138 Colo. 304, 332 P.2d 897 (1958).

The public interest in safety and deterrence, when considered in isolation, might well justify an alternative to sentencing in the case of a first-time offender, at least in crimes not causing or threatening serious harm to the person or property of others. People v. Scott, 200 Colo. 402, 615 P.2d 35 (1980).

Although the absence of a prior felony conviction or significant criminal involvement, by itself, certainly may constitute a mitigating factor worthy of consideration, it is only one factor and is not conclusive on the sentencing decision. People v. Scott, 200 Colo. 402, 615 P.2d 35 (1980).

Trial court did not err in stating that it had considered the factors set forth in this section prior to imposing sentence. This section requires the court to consider factors similar to those allowed under the sentencing statute, and the court did not abuse its discretion in doing so. People v. Roadcap, 78 P.3d 1108 (Colo. App. 2003).

Power to suspend sentence not affected by failure to grant probation. So long as the circumstances would have justified a grant of probation and the defendant was eligible for probation, the fact that the judge did not impose it does not vitiate his power to suspend sentences. People v. Henderson, 196 Colo. 441, 586 P.2d 229 (1978), overruled on other grounds, People v. District Court, 673 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1983).

Surrounding circumstances of defendant's alien status may be relevant to a sentencing court's decision whether to grant or deny probation. Although consideration of defendant's status as a foreign national, in and of itself, is improper, the fact that defendant is in the United States illegally may, under certain circumstances, provide substantial and compelling reasons to depart from sentencing guidelines and deny probation. People v. Hernandez-Clavel, 186 P.3d 96 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applied in People v. Martinez, 657 P.2d 967 (Colo. App. 1982).

18-1.3-204. Conditions of probation - interstate compact probation transfer cash fund - creation. (1) The conditions of probation shall be such as the court in its discretion deems reasonably necessary to ensure that the defendant will lead a law-abiding life and to assist the defendant in doing so. The court shall provide as explicit conditions of every sentence to probation that the defendant not commit another offense during the period for which the sentence remains subject to revocation, that the defendant make restitution pursuant to part 6 of this article and article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S., that the defendant comply with any court orders regarding substance abuse testing and treatment issued pursuant to sections 18-1.3-209 and 18-1.3-211 and article 11.5 of title 16, C.R.S., and that the defendant comply with any court orders regarding the treatment of sex offenders issued pursuant to article 11.7 of title 16, C.R.S. The court shall provide as an explicit condition of every sentence to probation that the defendant not harass, molest, intimidate, retaliate against, or tamper with the victim of or any prosecution witnesses to the crime, unless the court makes written findings that such condition is not necessary.

(1.5) If the defendant is being sentenced to probation as a result of a conviction of a felony offense or a qualifying misdemeanor offense pursuant to the "Interstate Compact for Adult Offender Supervision", part 28 of article 60 of title 24, C.R.S., a condition of probation shall be that the court shall require the defendant to execute or subscribe a written prior waiver of extradition stating that the defendant consents to extradition to this state and waives all formal proceedings in the event that he or she is arrested in another state while at liberty on such bail bond and acknowledging that he or she shall not be admitted to bail in any other state pending extradition to this state. If the offender is returned to the state pursuant to the "Interstate Compact for Adult Offender Supervision", part 28 of article 60 of title 24, C.R.S., a court may not impose the cost of the offender's return on the offender.

(2) (a) When granting probation, the court may, as a condition of probation, require that the defendant:

(I) Work faithfully at a suitable employment or faithfully pursue a course of study or of vocational training that will equip the defendant for suitable employment;

(II) Undergo available medical or psychiatric treatment and remain in a specified institution if required for that purpose. In any case where inpatient psychiatric treatment is indicated, the court shall proceed in accordance with article 65 of title 27, C.R.S., and require the defendant to comply with the recommendation of the professional person in charge of the evaluation required pursuant to section 27-65-105 or 27-65-106, C.R.S.

(III) Attend or reside in a facility established for the instruction, recreation, or residence of persons on probation;

(III.5) Participate in restorative justice practices, as defined in section 18-1-901 (3) (o.5), if available in the jurisdiction, requested by the victim who has been informed about restorative justice practices pursuant to section 24-4.1-303 (11) (g), C.R.S., and the defendant is determined suitable by a designated restorative justice practices facilitator. To be eligible for restorative justice practices, the defendant shall not have been convicted of unlawful sexual behavior as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., a crime in which the underlying factual basis involves domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), stalking as defined in section 18-3-602, or violation of a protection order as defined in section 18-6-803.5. Any statements made during a restorative justice conference shall be confidential and shall not be used as a basis for charging or prosecuting the defendant unless the defendant commits a chargeable offense during the conference. Failure to complete the requirements arising from a restorative justice conference may be considered a violation of probation. Nothing in this subparagraph (III.5) shall be construed to require a victim to participate in a restorative justice victim-offender conference.

(IV) Support the defendant's dependents and meet other family responsibilities, including arranging and fulfilling a payment plan for current child support, child support arrearages, and child support debt due under a court or administrative order through any delegate child support enforcement unit that may have a child support case with the defendant;

(V) Pay reasonable costs of the court proceedings or costs of supervision of probation, or both. The probation supervision fee shall be fifty dollars per month for the length of ordered probation. Notwithstanding the amount specified in this subparagraph (V), the court may lower the costs of supervision of probation to an amount the defendant will be able to pay. The court shall fix the manner of performance for payment of the fee. If the defendant receives probation services from a private provider, the court shall order the defendant to pay the probation supervision fee directly to the provider. The fee shall be imposed for the length of ordered probation.

(VI) Pay any fines or fees imposed by the court;

(VI.5) Repay all or part of any reward paid by a crime stopper organization that led to the defendant's arrest and conviction in accordance with article 15.7 of title 16, C.R.S.;

(VII) Refrain from possessing a firearm, destructive device, or other dangerous weapon unless granted written permission by the court or probation officer;

(VIII) Refrain from excessive use of alcohol or any unlawful use of controlled substances, as defined in section 18-18-102 (5), or of any other dangerous or abusable drug without a prescription;

(IX) Report to a probation officer at reasonable times as directed by the court or the probation officer;

(X) Permit the probation officer to visit the defendant at reasonable times at the defendant's home and elsewhere;

(XI) Remain within the jurisdiction of the court, unless granted permission to leave by the court or the probation officer;

(XII) Answer all reasonable inquiries by the probation officer and promptly notify the probation officer of any change in address or employment;

(XIII) Be subject to home detention as defined in section 18-1.3-106 (1.1);

(XIV) Be restrained from contact with the victim or the victim's family members in cases in which the defendant was convicted of a crime, the underlying factual basis of which included an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1);

(XIV.5) Be subject to electronic or global position monitoring;

(XV) Satisfy any other conditions reasonably related to the defendant's rehabilitation and the purposes of probation.

(b) When granting probation, in addition to the consideration of the provisions set forth in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), the court shall order as a condition of probation in cases in which the defendant was convicted of a crime, the underlying factual basis of which included an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), that the defendant:

(I) Comply with existing court orders regarding family support;

(II) Comply with any existing court orders concerning a proceeding to determine paternity, custody, the allocation of decision-making responsibility, parenting time, or support;

(III) Comply with the terms of any protection order in effect against the defendant during the probation period;

(IV) Refrain from possessing a firearm, destructive device, or other dangerous weapon, unless granted written permission by the court or probation officer which shall not be granted in such domestic violence cases unless:

(A) It is required by the defendant's employment; and

(B) The court finds that the defendant's possession of the weapon does not endanger the victim or the victim's children; and

(C) The weapon is stored away from the home and the yard surrounding the home.

(c) If the court orders counseling or treatment as a condition of probation, unless the court makes a specific finding that treatment in another facility or with another person is warranted, the court shall order that such treatment or counseling be at a facility or with a person:

(I) Approved by the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, established in article 80 of title 27, C.R.S., if the treatment is for alcohol or drug abuse;

(II) Certified or approved by the sex offender management board, established in section 16-11.7-103, C.R.S., if the offender is a sex offender;

(III) Certified or approved by the domestic violence offender management board created in section 16-11.8-103, C.R.S., if the offender was convicted of or the underlying factual basis of the offense included an act of domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3; or

(IV) Licensed or certified by the division of adult parole in the department of corrections, the department of regulatory agencies, the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, the state board of nursing, or the Colorado medical board, whichever is appropriate for the required treatment or counseling.

(d) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (c) of this subsection (2), if the court orders counseling or treatment as a condition of probation for an offender convicted of an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior, as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., the court shall order such treatment or counseling be at a facility or with a person listed in paragraph (c) of this subsection (2), and the court may not make a specific finding that treatment in another facility or with another person is warranted.

(e) If the defendant is convicted of an offense that subjects the defendant to genetic testing pursuant to section 16-11-102.4, C.R.S., the court shall assess to the defendant the cost of collecting and testing a biological substance sample from the defendant as required in section 16-11-102.4, C.R.S.

(2.3) (a) When granting probation, the court may, as a condition of probation, require any defendant who is less than eighteen years of age at the time of sentencing to attend school or an educational program or to work toward the attainment of a high school diploma or a GED, as that term is defined in section 22-33-102 (7), C.R.S.; except that the court shall not require any such juvenile to attend a school from which he or she has been expelled without the prior approval of that school's local board of education.

(b) Following specification of the terms and conditions of probation for a defendant who is less than eighteen years of age at the time of sentencing, where the conditions of probation include the requirement that the defendant attend school, the court shall notify the school district in which the defendant will be enrolled of such requirement.

(2.5) The order of priority for any payments required of a defendant pursuant to subparagraph (IV), (V), (VI), or (VI.5) of paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section shall be as follows:

- (a) Payment of a current child support order;
- (b) Payment of child support arrearage;
- (c) Payment of child support debt order;
- (d) Payment of spousal maintenance;
- (e) Payment of costs for the crime victim compensation fund, pursuant to section 24-4.1-119, C.R.S.;

- (f) Payment of surcharges for the victims and witnesses assistance and law enforcement fund, pursuant to section 24-4.2-104, C.R.S.;

- (g) Payment of restitution;
- (h) Payment of a time payment fee;
- (i) Payment of late fees;
- (i.2) Payment of probation supervision fees;
- (i.4) Payment of a drug offender surcharge pursuant to article 19 of this title;
- (i.6) Payment of a sex offender surcharge pursuant to article 21 of this title;
- (i.7) Payment of a surcharge for a crime against an at-risk person pursuant to section 18-6.5-107;

- (i.8) Payment of collection and chemical testing of a biological substance to determine the genetic markers thereof;

- (i.9) Payment of a surcharge related to the address confidentiality program pursuant to section 24-30-2114, C.R.S.;

- (j) Payment of any other fines, fees, or surcharges; and
- (k) Repayment of all or part of any reward paid by a crime stopper organization that led to the defendant's arrest and conviction.

(3) When a defendant is granted probation, he or she shall be given a written statement explicitly setting forth the conditions on which he or she is being released.

(4) (a) For good cause shown and after notice to the defendant, the district attorney, and the probation officer, and after a hearing if the defendant or the district attorney requests it, the judge may reduce or increase the term of probation or alter the conditions or impose new conditions.

(b) (I) If an offender applies to transfer his or her probation to another state, the offender shall pay a filing fee of one hundred dollars, unless the offender is indigent.

(II) (A) The clerk of the court shall transmit all moneys collected pursuant to this paragraph (b) to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the interstate compact probation transfer cash fund, which fund is hereby created and referred to in this paragraph (b) as the "fund". Beginning January 1, 2013, the moneys in the fund are subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly to the judicial department for the direct and indirect costs associated with returning probationers to Colorado. The state treasurer may invest any moneys in the fund not expended for the purpose of this paragraph (b) as provided by law. The state treasurer shall credit all interest and income derived from the investment and deposit of moneys in the fund to the fund. Any unexpended and unencumbered moneys remaining in the fund at the end of a fiscal year remain in the fund and shall not be credited or transferred to the general fund or another fund.

(B) On or after January 1, 2013, a law enforcement agency may submit to the state court administrator a request to be reimbursed for the costs of returning a probationer pursuant to the “Interstate Compact for Adult Offender Supervision”, part 28 of article 60 of title 24, C.R.S., incurred on or after January 1, 2013. The state court administrator shall, to the extent that funds are available, reimburse reasonable costs incurred by a law enforcement agency for the return of the probationer.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1378, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (2)(a)(V) amended, p. 2016, § 116, effective May 22; (2)(b)(III) amended, p. 1014, § 21, effective July 1. L. 2006: (2)(a)(XIV.5) added, p. 19, § 3, effective March 8; (1.5) added, p. 342, § 4, effective July 1; (2)(e) amended p. 1690, § 9, effective July 1, 2007. L. 2007: (2.5)(i.9) added, p. 1700, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2)(c)(III) and (2.5)(e) amended, p. 1889, § 52, effective August 5. L. 2010: (2)(a)(II) and (2)(c)(I) amended, (SB 10-175), ch. 188, p. 785, § 28, effective April 29; (2)(c)(IV) amended, (HB 10-1260), ch. 403, p. 1987, § 77, effective July 1. L. 2011: (2.5)(i.9) amended, (HB 11-1080), ch. 256, p. 1123, § 6, effective June 2; (2)(a)(III.5) added, (HB 11-1032), ch. 296, p. 1403, § 8, effective August 10; (2)(c)(IV) amended, (HB 11-1303), ch. 264, p. 1157, § 32, effective August 10. L. 2012: (2.3)(a) amended, (HB 12-1345), ch. 188, p. 748, § 37, effective May 19; (1.5) and (4) amended, (HB 12-1310), ch. 268, p. 1396, § 13, effective June 7; (2)(a)(VIII) amended, ch. 281, p. 1618, § 37, effective July 1; (2.5)(i.7) added, (HB 12-1226), ch. 279, p. 1489, § 3, effective August 15.

Editor’s note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-11-204 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 5 of chapter 279, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act adding subsection (2.5)(i.7) applies to convictions on or after August 15, 2012.

Cross references: (1) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act adding subsection (2.5)(i.9), see section 4 of chapter 385, Session Laws of Colorado 2007. For the legislative declaration in the 2012 act amending subsection (2.3)(a), see section 21 of chapter 188, Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

(2) For the legislative declaration stating the purpose of and the provision directing legislative staff agencies to conduct a post-enactment review pursuant to § 2-2-1201 scheduled in 2009, see sections 4 and 6 of chapter 385, Session Laws of Colorado 2007. To obtain a copy of the review, once completed, view Colorado Legislative Council’s web site.

(3) For the legislative declaration stating the purpose of and the provision directing legislative staff agencies to conduct a post-enactment review pursuant to § 2-2-1201 scheduled in 2016, see sections 21 and 46 of chapter 188, Session Laws of Colorado 2012. To obtain a copy of the review, once completed, view Colorado Legislative Council’s web site.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “The Problem of Compelling Fathers to Support their Dependent Children”, see 27 Dicta 442 (1950). For article, “New Legislation Concerning the Mentally Disabled”, see 11 Colo. Law. 2131 (1982). For article, “Review of New Legislation Relating to Criminal Law”, see 11 Colo. Law. 2148 (1982). For article, “Criminal Procedure”, which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with extension of probation, see 62 Den. U.L. Rev. 187 (1985).

Annotator’s note. Since § 18-1.3-204 is similar to § 16-11-204 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions and repealed §§ 39-16-6 and 39-16-7, C.R.S 1963, and §§ 39-16-6 and 39-16-7, CRS 53, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The purpose of probation is educational and reconstructive rather than primarily punitive or oppressive. Logan v. People ex rel. Alamosa County, 138 Colo. 304, 332 P.2d 897 (1958); People v. Ledford, 173 Colo. 194, 477 P.2d 374 (1970).

The basic purpose of probation is to provide a program which offers an offender the opportunity to rehabilitate himself without confinement, under the tutelage of a probation officer and under the continuing power of the court to impose a sentence for the original offense. People v. Ledford, 173 Colo. 194, 477 P.2d 374 (1970).

By its very nature and definition, probation means and signifies liberty under certain imposed conditions. People v. Ledford, 173 Colo. 194, 477 P.2d 374 (1970).

Probationary conditions serve the dual purpose of enhancing the reintegration of the offender into a responsible life style and affording society a measure of protection against recidivism. People v. Ressin, 620 P.2d 717 (Colo. 1980).

Void for vagueness doctrine applies to conditions of probation. Court will apply the same constitutional standards to conditions of probation as to statutes. There was nothing vague in the requirement that defendant actively participate and successfully complete treatment to the satisfaction of the probation officer and treatment provider. People v. Firth, 205 P.3d 445 (Colo. App. 2008).

Surrounding circumstances of defendant's alien status may be relevant to a sentencing court's decision whether to grant or deny probation. Although consideration of defendant's status as a foreign national, in and of itself, is improper, the fact that defendant is in the United States illegally may, under certain circumstances, provide substantial and compelling reasons to depart from sentencing guidelines and deny probation. People v. Hernandez-Clavel, 186 P.3d 96 (Colo. App. 2008).

Trial courts have a wide discretion in imposing certain conditions upon a probationer. People v. Ledford, 173 Colo. 194, 477 P.2d 374 (1970).

Psychosexual evaluation may be required as a condition of probation. Defendant charged with attempted first degree sexual assault who pleads guilty to the lesser offense of third degree misdemeanor assault may be required to undergo a psychosexual evaluation as a condition of probation. People v. Fleming, 3 P.2d 449 (Colo. App. 1999).

A court may impose a variety of monetary conditions in connection with granting probation, including a requirement to make a charitable contribution. People v. Burleigh, 727 P.2d 873 (Colo. App. 1986).

Probation supervision fee need not be refunded. Unlike fines and surcharges, which are primarily punitive in nature, probation supervision fees are part of the rehabilitative process, from which a defendant benefits. People v. Noel, 134 P. 3d 484 (Colo. App. 2005).

The trial court's power to revoke an individual's probation for failure to pay restitution does not extend beyond the expiration of the probation term imposed. The restitution statute cannot be read as automatically extending a probation term for collection of restitution checks. People v. Gore, 774 P.2d 877 (Colo. 1989).

Clear purpose of subsection (3) is to provide criminal defendant with notice of terms of his probation. People v. Zimmerman, 616 P.2d 997 (Colo. App. 1980).

But failure to comply with subsection (3) did not require reversal of revocation in and of itself. People v. Zimmerman, 616 P.2d 997 (Colo. App. 1980).

Noncompliance with subsection (4), by failing to provide defendant notice of changes in probation conditions, is improper. People v. Frye, 997 P.2d 1223 (Colo. App. 1999).

The terms of probation must be derived from this section, as probation is purely a statutory creation. People v. Ledford, 173 Colo. 194, 477 P.2d 374 (1970).

The program of probation should envisage only such terms and conditions as are clearly and specifically spelled out in the statutes, and such other conditions as fit the probationer by education and rehabilitation to take his place in society. Logan v. People ex rel. Alamosa County, 138 Colo. 304, 332 P.2d 897 (1958); People v. Ledford, 173 Colo. 194, 477 P.2d 374 (1970).

If an applicant is worthy, his release on probation should not be weighted with terms and conditions having nothing to do with the purpose and policy of probation laws. Logan v. People ex rel. Alamosa County, 138 Colo. 304, 332 P.2d 897 (1958).

Condition of making charitable contribution was reasonably related to defendant's rehabilitation and to general purposes of probation. People v. Burleigh, 727 P.2d 873 (Colo. App. 1986).

Conditions of probation may impinge on defendant's constitutional right to freedom of association when those conditions bear a reasonable relationship to the goals of probation. Trial court was within its discretion in imposing conditions that prohibited defendant, convicted of second degree assault on a client by a psychotherapist, not only from continuing to practice as a psychotherapist, but also from engaging in any type of counseling of at-risk persons or contacting former psychotherapy clients. People v. Bolt, 984 P.2d 1181 (Colo. App. 1999).

Condition of probation imposed by probation officer that limited defendant's discussion in therapy, when defendant was not a therapist or a psychologist licensed to ascertain the appropriate subject matter for sex offender treatment, was not reasonably related to defendant's rehabilitation. People v. Harmon, 3 P.3d 480 (Colo. App. 2000).

The absence of an authorizing law or condition of probation does not necessarily render unconstitutional a warrantless search of a probationer's residence if based on a reasonable suspicion. The totality of all other relevant circumstances may render such a search reasonable. The defendant's status as a probationer on intensive supervised probation greatly reduced his reasonable expectation of privacy in his residence, and, combined with the other circumstances of the situation, justified the search by his probation officer. People v. Samuels, 228 P.3d 229 (Colo. App. 2009).

Defendant presumed to know that violation may result in revocation. Probation is a privilege, and a criminal defendant is presumed to know that the violation of any term of his probation may result in revocation. People v. Zimmerman, 616 P.2d 997 (Colo. App. 1980).

A court may require a defendant to make restitution or reparation to the victim of his transgression, and to pay court costs and expenses of supervision by the probation office. Logan v. People ex rel. Alamosa County, 138 Colo. 304, 332 P.2d 897 (1958).

Defendant must have ability to pay restitution. The reason for requiring that ability to pay restitution be established before probation can be revoked is to allow revocation only where the probationer unreasonably or willfully fails to comply with the terms of his probation, because before revocation of probation for failure to make ordered restitution payments can be effected, the trial court must find that the defendant had the ability to pay at the time the payments should have been made. Strickland v. People, 197 Colo. 488, 594 P.2d 578 (1979).

Before revoking probation the court must make a finding of present ability to pay under subsection (2)(e). People v. Romero, 192 Colo. 106, 559 P.2d 1101 (1976); Strickland v. People, 197 Colo. 488, 594 P.2d 578 (1979).

It is required that one have the present ability to pay which contemplates that: (1) A job for which the probationer is qualified is available; (2) the job would produce an income adequate to meet his obligations; and (3) the probationer unjustifiably refuses to take it. People v. Romero, 192 Colo. 106, 559 P.2d 1101 (1976); Strickland v. People, 197 Colo. 488, 594 P.2d 578 (1979).

Absent such finding, probation to be reinstated. If the court finds that the defendant did not have the ability to pay at the time of the revocation hearing, it shall reinstate defendant's probation. People v. Romero, 196 Colo. 102, 559 P.2d 1101 (1976).

Court may require defendant to make child support payments. People v. Silcott, 177 Colo. 451, 494 P.2d 835 (1972).

But may not require posting of appearance bond. Nothing in the statutory law on probation expressly or implicitly clothes a trial court with the discretionary power to require the posting of an appearance bond as a condition of probation. Whether a prisoner is worthy of probation should not hinge on his ability to furnish a bond. To permit a court to require such a bond as a condition of probation would enlarge the punitive powers of a court beyond that contemplated by the laws of this state. Logan v. People ex rel. Alamosa County, 138 Colo. 304, 332 P.2d 897 (1958).

Probation cannot be contingent upon partial service of sentence in penitentiary. Since this section does not include a provision for service of a portion of a sentence in the state penitentiary as a condition of probation, a court is not free to impose as a condition of probation any period of incarceration in the state penitentiary nor may any period of incarceration in a county jail exceed the prescribed time limits. People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 197 Colo. 481, 593 P.2d 1372 (1979).

The court may not change the conditions of probation, including the payment of restitution, without notice and an opportunity for a hearing. People v. Stephenson, 12 P.3d 266 (Colo. App. 1999).

Court cannot order as a condition of probation that a qualified retirement plan be liquidated to pay restitution. People v. Stephenson, 12 P.3d 266 (Colo. App. 1999).

To read this section harmoniously with § 16-11-206, the proper standard of proof is a preponderance of the evidence when it is alleged that a condition of probation has been breached, even though the breaching conduct also may have constituted a criminal offense. People v. Moses, 64 P.3d 904 (Colo. App. 2002).

The costs of probation supervision assessed against the defendant should be for the period actually served before revocation, and not based on the probationary period originally imposed. People v. Howell, 64 P.3d 894 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where supervisory period extended by defendant's request. Although this section requires notice, a hearing, and a showing of good cause before a supervisory period is increased, the provisions of this section in this respect are not applicable when an extension of the period of supervision is granted at the defendant's own request. People v. Blackorby, 41 Colo. App. 251, 583 P.2d 949 (1978).

When a defendant agrees to an extension of probation, the defendant does not have a due process right to be advised of or receive the right to counsel before signing the extension. People v. Hotle, 216 P.3d 68 (Colo. App. 2008).

When a defendant agrees to an extension of probation, the defendant does not have a sixth amendment right to be advised of or receive the right to counsel before signing the extension. A motion to extend probation is not a critical stage of the proceeding requiring the right to counsel because the defendant is not faced with a consequential significant deprivation of liberty and is not entitled to a hearing in the absence of such a request. People v. Hotle, 216 P.3d 68 (Colo. App. 2008).

When a defendant agrees to an extension of probation, the statutory provisions concerning notice, a hearing, and a showing of good cause are not applicable. People v. Hotle, 216 P.3d 68 (Colo. App. 2008).

Where defendant consents to an extension of the period of probation, there is no requirement for a hearing or other proceeding designed to assure that defendant is making a knowing and voluntary decision. The due process protections afforded in a probation revocation hearing do not apply to an extension of probation. People v. Conner, 148 P.3d 235 (Colo. App. 2006).

Trial court did not lose jurisdiction over defendant's case when it did not enter the order extending defendant's probation until one day after defendant's probation term had ended. The procedures to extend defendant's probationary period were initiated before defendant's probationary term ended, which included the filing of a motion with the court that satisfied the requirements of subsection (4) while defendant was still on probation. People v. Romero, 198 P.3d 1209 (Colo. App. 2007).

No presentence confinement credit for time spent in halfway house. Where residency in a community corrections facility is imposed as a condition of probation, it does not involve confinement as contemplated by § 16-11-306; thus no presentence confinement credit may be given for time spent at a community corrections halfway house. People v. Radar, 652 P.2d 1085 (Colo. App. 1982).

Condition that probationer not impose his religious beliefs on other people while performing public service during probationary period is neither necessary to ensure that the defendant lead a law-abiding life, nor does it enhance the probationer's rehabilitation. People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

The trial court has broad discretion in setting the terms and conditions of restitution orders, and it did not abuse its discretion in ordering that restitution include the amount paid by the victim in reward money. The court found that payment of the reward was reasonable under the circumstances and would not have occurred but for the defendant's actions. The fact that the victim had no legal obligation to offer a reward and may not have been contractually bound to pay the award was immaterial. People v. Dillingham, 881 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1994).

To determine whether a specific geographic restriction is reasonably related to the statutory purposes of probation, the following factors should be considered: (1) Whether the restriction is reasonably related to the underlying offense; (2) whether the restriction is punitive to the point of being unrelated to rehabilitation; (3) whether the restriction is unduly severe and restrictive because the defendant resides in the area and is forced to relocate or is employed or anticipates employment in the area; (4) whether the defendant may petition the court to lift the restriction temporarily when necessary; and (5) whether less restrictive means are available. People v. Brockelman, 933 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1997).

These factors are not exhaustive but are helpful tools which, at a minimum, should form a basis to guide trial courts in imposing a geographic restriction as a condition of probation. People v. Brockelman, 933 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1997).

Factors applied and a nexus found to exist between the underlying offense and the probation condition imposed. People v. Brockelman, 933 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1997); People v. Bolt, 984 P.2d 1181 (Colo. App. 1999).

A district court may, as a condition of probation, prohibit a defendant from having unsupervised contact with his or her children. The court properly considered defendant's parenting history, the severity of her offense, and the necessity to assist her in leading a law-abiding life while affording society and her young children a measure of protection against recidivism. People v. Forsythe, 43 P.3d 652 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court had the authority under former §§ 16-11-204 (4) and 17-27-105 (1)(h) (now §§ 18-1.3-204 (4) and 18-1.3-301 (1)(h)) to modify defendant's community corrections sentence before it expired. The court retained this authority after defendant's release date passed because re-sentencing proceedings were initiated prior to that date. People v. Knott, 83 P.3d 1147 (Colo. App. 2003).

18-1.3-205. Restitution as a condition of probation. As a condition of every sentence to probation, the court shall order that the defendant make full restitution pursuant to the provisions of part 6 of this article and article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S. Such order shall require the defendant to make restitution within a period of time specified by the court. Such restitution shall be ordered by the court as a condition of probation.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1382, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-204.5 as it existed prior to 2002.

Cross references: For administrative proceedings to compensate victims of crime, see article 4.1 of title 24; for restitution as a condition of parole, see § 17-2-201 (5)(c); for restitution to victims of crime generally, see article 28 of title 17; for charges for bad checks received as a restitution payment ordered as a condition of a plea agreement, see § 16-7-304; for charges for bad checks received as a restitution payment ordered as a condition of a deferred prosecution or deferred sentence, see § 16-7-404; for restitution by delinquent children under the "Colorado Children's Code", see § 19-2-918.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-205 is similar to § 16-11-204.5 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

The legislative purpose underlying the statutory scheme is obvious from the statutory test: In all cases in which a convicted defendant's criminal conduct causes pecuniary damages to a victim, the sentencing court is obliged to order the defendant to pay restitution to the victim or the victim's immediate family and to fix the amount of such restitution as part of the judgment, whether the sentence be to probation or to a term of incarceration. People v. Johnson, 780 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1989).

Restitution is intended to make the victim whole. People v. King, 648 P.2d 173 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Catron, 678 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Engel, 746 P.2d 60 (Colo. App. 1987).

Replacement value should be the measure of restitution when the plaintiff demonstrates that they will have to replace an item that is not readily available at fair market value. Where restitution is sought for "anticipated future expense" there is the possibility that the plaintiff will reap a windfall. Nonetheless, a victim who anticipates incurring future expenses is entitled to be placed in the same financial position he or she would have been in had the wrong not been committed. People v. Stafford, 93 P.3d 572 (Colo. App. 2004).

Restitution is not a substitute for a civil action to recover damages. People v. King, 648 P.2d 173 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Catron, 678 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1983).

Mere pendency of civil suit between criminal and victim does not vitiate trial court's duty to order restitution. People v. Smith, 754 P.2d 1168 (Colo. 1988).

A release from liability obtained in a civil settlement cannot limit a criminal court's authority to order restitution equivalent to actual pecuniary damages. A contrary conclusion would violate the plain language of this section and would frustrate the rehabilitative purposes of probation by permitting criminal defendants to avoid financial responsibility for their conduct. People v. Maxich, 971 P.2d 268 (Colo. App. 1998).

Application of 1985 amendment at 1994 restitution hearing not additional punishment within meaning of ex post facto prohibition of state constitution. People v. Stewart, 926 P.2d 105 (Colo. App. 1996).

Restitution provisions of this section do not apply where defendant, who pleaded guilty to theft by receiving, was not sentenced to probation, but trial court could impose restitution under statutes requiring restitution as a condition of parole (§§ 16-11-104 (4) and 17-2-201 (5)(c)(I)). People v. Schmidt, 700 P.2d 925 (Colo. App. 1985).

The court's duty to fix the amount of restitution is not confined to sentences to probation but applies equally to sentences to imprisonment. People v. Johnson, 780 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1989).

The fact that the victim might have filed a civil claim for damages against the convicted offender, or intends to do so in the future does not dispense with the courts obligation to order the offender to pay restitution and to fix the amount of the restitution at the time of sentencing. People v. Johnson, 780 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1989).

"Victim" construed. The term "victim", as it appears in this section, refers to the party immediately and directly aggrieved by the criminal act, and not to others who suffer loss because of some relationship, contractual or otherwise, to the directly aggrieved party. People v. King, 648 P.2d 173 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Catron, 678 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Jones, 701 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1984) (all cases decided prior to 1985 amendment).

Towing company is a "victim" for purposes of restitution because it sustained a pecuniary loss as a result of defendant's criminal conduct and is therefore a person aggrieved by the offender's conduct. People v. Clay, 74 P.3d 473 (Colo. App. 2003).

A decedent's minor children are not "victims" within the meaning of the statute even though it is obvious that minor children suffer a loss at the death of a parent. People v. Catron, 678 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Quinonez, 701 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 735 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1987) (both cases decided prior to 1985 amendment).

Where the crime results in death, the "victim" for purposes of restitution is the decedent. The decedent's personal representative may properly be designated to receive, as restitution, such damages suffered by the victim as the trial court may order to be paid as a condition of probation. People v. Catron, 678 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1983) (decided prior to 1985 amendment).

The term "victim" refers to the person named in the charge of which defendant was convicted and not to persons named in charges which were dismissed. People v. Canseco, 689 P.2d 673 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Quinonez, 701 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 735 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1987).

County department of human services is not a "victim" for purposes of restitution because an essential element of the underlying crime in the case requires wrongful conduct against a child pursuant to § 18-6-401 (1)(a) and (7)(b)(I). Accordingly, the court erred in imposing restitution to the county department, and any expenses the department incurred were incidental to its duties. People v. Padilla-Lopez, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2010).

An insurance carrier may be considered a victim pursuant to this section since it includes within the definition of "victim" parties "who have suffered losses because of a contractual relationship". People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Lunsford, 43 P.3d 629 (Colo. App. 2001).

If a party sustains damages as a result of defendant's conduct, the damages are recoverable regardless of whether the party was named as a victim in the prosecution. People v. Lunsford, 43 P.3d 629 (Colo. App. 2001).

The defendant's son was a victim of the crime of contributing to the delinquency of a minor where the defendant was convicted of using her son to shoplift video games. People v. Miller, 830 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1991).

The minor child is the victim of the crime of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Therefore, he is entitled to restitution. People v. Miller, 830 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1991).

Under the definition of "victim" in effect when the crime took place, an insurance company could not be reimbursed. Court order allocating restitution payments to insurance company under new definition of "victim" did not violate ex post facto clause. Under either version of the statute the court was authorized to order full restitution, therefore, there is no change in the quantum of punishment. People v. Woodward, 11 P.3d 1090 (Colo. 2000).

This statute does not limit monetary conditions of probation only to restitution and a court may impose a variety of monetary conditions in connection with granting probation, including a requirement to make a charitable contribution. People v. Burleigh, 727 P.2d 873 (Colo. App. 1986).

This section specifically provides for restitution to be made for the actual pecuniary damage incurred by the victim as the direct result of the defendant's conduct. People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986).

Restitution is part of the criminal sentence rather than merely a debt between the defendant and the victim. Trial courts are required to impose restitution in an amount equal to the actual pecuniary damages sustained by the victim, regardless of the defendant's ability to pay. People v. Salas, 42 P.3d 68 (Colo. App. 2001).

Section contemplates restitution for losses resulting only from criminal conduct by the defendant. People v. Estes, 923 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1996).

Because post-judgment interest on the restitution amount awarded has the statutory purpose to encourage speedy payment of the restitution order, which is different from the purpose of pre-judgment interest, a trial court must impose both pre-judgment interest and post-judgment interest in probationary restitution orders. Roberts v. People, 130 P.3d 1005 (Colo. 2006).

The trial court is prohibited from ordering restitution for losses attributed to conduct that was not prosecuted because of the applicable statute of limitations. People v. Davalos, 30 P.3d 841 (Colo. App. 2001).

Restitution order should not include payment for future counseling for victim where nothing in the victim impact statement justified the need for future counseling. People v. Miller, 830 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1991).

Absent evidence supporting the need for future counseling, the trial court erred in entering an order for undetermined future counseling expenses. People v. Estes, 923 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1996).

Payment of restitution is authorized only as to the victim of a defendant's conduct and only for the actual pecuniary damage the victim sustained as the direct result of the defendant's conduct. People v. Miller, 830 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1991).

Because this section authorizes payment of restitution in the amount of the actual pecuniary damages sustained by the victim, an order of restitution in the amount paid by the victim to repair the stolen vehicle was reasonable even though it exceeded the fair market value of the vehicle before it was stolen. People v. Courtney, 868 P.2d 1126 (Colo. App. 1993).

An order of restitution should be limited to the difference between the total amount of the victim's actual, pecuniary damages and any proceeds attributable to those damages received by the victim from the settlement of the civil claim. People v. Acosta, 860 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1993).

"Actual pecuniary damages" are not limited to out-of-pocket expenditures, but encompass other losses or injuries that can be reasonably calculated and recompensed in money. Thus, the value of employees' time spent in conducting inventories for missing goods and installing and using security devices was recompensable under this section, regardless of whether any funds in addition to regular salaries were expended by the victim company. People v. Duvall, 908 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1995).

Restitution is not limited to the value of the damaged item. It may include repair costs, even if those costs exceed the damage object's value. People v. Smith, 181 P.3d 324 (Colo. App. 2007).

Defendant's financial ability to pay restitution is a defense to a charge of violating restitution requirement of deferred sentence. People v. Afentul, 773 P.2d 1081 (Colo. 1989).

If the victim has suffered a pecuniary loss, full restitution is to be ordered regardless of the defendant's ability to pay. Ordering restitution regardless of the defendant's ability to pay is not imposing an excessive fine, because restitution is not a fine. A fine is solely a monetary penalty where restitution is to make the victim whole. People v. Stafford, 93 P.3d 572 (Colo. App. 2004).

Interest on the unpaid balance of the restitution amount does not constitute actual pecuniary loss caused by the defendant's conduct. People v. Engel, 746 P.2d 60 (Colo. App. 1987).

Defendant has the right to an opportunity to ascertain the amount of the injury sustained as a result of his conduct. People v. Engel, 746 P.2d 60 (Colo. App. 1987).

Where a defendant's conduct requires a victim to borrow funds to cover losses, both the principal and the interest constitute actual pecuniary damage and are properly includable in a restitution order. People v. Engel, 746 P.2d 60 (Colo. App. 1987).

Victim's loss of the use of money can be, under appropriate circumstances, pecuniary damage and interest may be awarded as compensation for that damage. People v. Acosta, 860 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Stewart, 926 P.2d 105 (Colo. App. 1996).

Payments may be ordered to cover costs incurred by nonsurviving victims. Expenses relating to items such as medical care, funeral arrangements, and property damage caused by the defendant's criminal conduct may be the basis for an order of restitution to the estate or appropriate representatives of a decedent. People v. Deadmond, 683 P.2d 763 (Colo. 1984); People v. Quinonez, 735 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1987).

Trial court properly included in restitution to be paid to insurer the costs incurred by the insurer in processing the case, including adjustment expenses, investigation costs, and attorney fees. People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986).

Noneconomic damages may be included in restitution as long as the damages are actual pecuniary damages sustained by a party entitled to restitution. An insurance company may recover pain and suffering damages as a part of a restitution order. People v. Lunsford, 43 P.3d 629 (Colo. App. 2001).

Section does not prescribe a maximum restitution amount. Therefore, the rule set forth in Apprendi and Blakely concerning prescribed statutory maximum sentences does not apply to restitution orders in Colorado. Restitution is not limited by the jury's findings, but rather includes any pecuniary losses suffered by the victim as a proximate cause of the offender's conduct. People v. Smith, 181 P.3d 324 (Colo. App. 2007).

Awarding interest is compensation for actual, pecuniary damage suffered by the victim incidental to the defendant's crime of fraudulently obtaining funds because the victim loses the use of the money involved. Interest is awarded as restitution to compensate the victim for such loss of use, it is not intended to reimburse the victim for interest that otherwise would have been earned on the funds. Valenzuela v. People, 893 P.2d 97 (Colo. 1995).

Interest payable for fraudulently obtained food stamps accrues from the time the state reimburses the federal government for the fraudulently obtained food stamps. Interest should accrue only from the time of the actual injury and the state suffer actual loss only when it reimburses the federal government. Valenzuela v. People, 893 P.2d 97 (Colo. 1995).

As part of restitution for fraudulently obtained AFDC funds, court properly included interest from the time of the theft. Valenzuela v. People, 893 P.2d 97 (Colo. 1995).

When viewed in its entirety, the statute requires pre-judgment interest as part of the restitution amount to compensate fully the victim, and it also requires post-judgment interest for as long as the victim has not been paid in full. Nothing in the post-judgment interest provision precludes imposing pre-judgment interest. Roberts v. People, 130 P.3d 1005 (Colo. 2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering that restitution include the amount paid by the victim in reward money. The court found that payment of the reward was reasonable under the circumstances and would not have occurred but for the defendant's actions. The fact that the victim had no legal obligation to offer a reward and may not have been contractually bound to pay the award was immaterial. People v. Dillingham, 881 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1994).

As part of restitution for fraudulently obtained food stamps in violation of § 26-2-128, the court properly included interest calculated in accordance with § 5-12-102. People v. Valenzuela, 874 P.2d 420 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 893 P.2d 97 (Colo. 1995).

A governmental entity may qualify as a victim to whom restitution is payable. People v. Cera, 673 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Witt, 15 P.3d 1109 (Colo. App. 2000).

Costs incurred by the county department of social services in investigating fraudulently obtained food stamps constituted out-of-pocket losses resulting from that conduct and were properly includable in restitution. People v. Witt, 15 P.3d 1109 (Colo. App. 2000).

Fact that victim's loss was partially covered by insurance was irrelevant to a determination of the defendant's restitution obligation imposed as a condition of parole. People v. Jewett, 693 P.2d 381 (Colo. App. 1984).

Trial court erred in ordering defendant mother to pay restitution for her son's future counseling sessions where mother was found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of her minor son but there was no testimony in the record at sentencing about the need for future counseling sessions. People v. Miller, 830 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1991).

Terms and conditions of probation are statutory. Cumhuriyet v. People, 200 Colo. 466, 615 P.2d 724 (1980); People v. Deadmond, 683 P.2d 763 (Colo. 1984).

This section mandates that the court provide that the defendant make restitution as a condition of every sentence to probation, therefore insurer's contractual waiver of its right to recover pursuant to the insurance policy had no effect on insurer's statutory right to criminal restitution. People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986).

Victim's injury must result from defendant's conduct. This section requires that the injury of the victim be sustained as a result of the conduct of the defendant. Cumhuriyet v. People, 200 Colo. 466, 615 P.2d 724 (1980).

Restitution, which is intended to make the victim whole, means that a defendant should not be forced to repay a victim when there has been no indication that the damage or injury sustained by the victim was inflicted by the defendant. Cumhuriyet v. People, 200 Colo. 466, 615 P.2d 724 (1980).

Defendant can be subject to criminal liability only for the loss that was the result of his criminal conduct. People v. Brigner, 978 P.2d 163 (Colo. App. 1999).

And more than speculation is required for defendant to bear responsibility for the injury the victim sustained. Cumhuriyet v. People, 200 Colo. 466, 615 P.2d 724 (1980).

The people bear the burden of proving that the restitution sought is attributable to the defendant's conduct. People v. Engel, 746 P.2d 60 (Colo. App. 1987).

Sentencing court not barred by collateral estoppel and double jeopardy principles from considering acquitted conduct in determining an award of restitution. People v. Pagan, 165 P.3d 724 (Colo. App. 2006).

Preponderance of the evidence is the proper burden of persuasion to establish restitution in criminal cases. People v. Carpenter, 885 P.2d 334 (Colo. App. 1994).

Burden of proof for establishing amount of restitution owed is a preponderance of the evidence. People v. Smith, 181 P.3d 324 (Colo. App. 2007).

Victim need not be specifically named as party in criminal indictment or information. If there is sufficient evidence in the record to determine that an individual is directly and immediately aggrieved by the defendant's conduct, then restitution shall be paid to that individual. People v. Jones, 701 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where defendant agrees to pay restitution to "victims" named in dismissed counts but not named in counts to which the defendant pleads guilty as part of a plea bargain, a restitution order issued as a condition of sentence is valid. However, a defendant who did not agree to pay restitution to victims of counts other than those to which he pled guilty until after his plea has been taken could not be ordered to pay restitution to unnamed victims. People v. Quinonez, 735 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1987).

Payments not dischargeable in bankruptcy. The purpose evidenced by the statutory language in this section is rehabilitative. The general assembly did not intend restitution to be a method of debt collection and did not intend to create a debtor-creditor relationship between the victim and the defendant or the state and the defendant. Therefore, restitution payments ordered by the court cannot be discharged under a federal Chapter 13 plan. In re Johnson, 32 Bankr. 614 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

The fact that a debtor will remain obligated to make restitution payments does not make his bankruptcy plan nonconfirmable under 11 U.S.C. § 1325, provided that all the statutory requirements, especially good faith and feasibility, are satisfied. In re Johnson, 32 Bankr. 614 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

Restitution is appropriately imposed following a conviction for selling securities without a license, and is not precluded by the discharge in bankruptcy of defendant's liability on any civil claim arising out of the discharged debt. People v. Milne, 690 P.2d 829 (Colo. 1984).

Failure of trial court to make express findings regarding the defendant's ability to pay restitution is not reversible error where defendant's own testimony during trial and the presentence report showed the defendant was in a sufficient financial position to meet the restitution obligation imposed. People v. Phillips, 732 P.2d 1226 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Estes, 923 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1996).

In ordering a defendant to pay restitution to the state for fraudulently obtained food stamps, it was error for a court to consider only the victim's pecuniary loss and not the defendant's ability to pay. People v. Valenzuela, 874 P.2d 420 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 893 P.2d 97 (Colo. 1995).

When the record was unclear as to whether the defendant had or had not been ordered to pay restitution as a condition of his probation, the defendant's refusal to acknowledge such a non-specific condition did not provide sufficient grounds for the revocation of his probation. People v. Dirgo, 773 P.2d 621 (Colo. App. 1989).

When, at the time of the revocation hearing, there was no order directing defendant to make any installment payments of restitution in any specific amount, other than for the first six months and the evidence was undisputed that defendant complied with that order, a revocation order based upon defendant's failure to comply with the court's order to pay restitution cannot be affirmed. People v. Frye, 997 P.2d 1223 (Colo. App. 1999).

In setting amount of restitution, trial court should consider the factors set out in subsection (1) but need not make express findings with respect to such factors. People v. Powell, 748 P.2d 1355 (Colo. App. 1987).

Defendant was appropriately ordered to pay restitution for thefts that were not specifically included in her guilty plea. People v. Borquez, 814 P.2d 382 (Colo. 1991).

A codefendant is jointly responsible for restitution when he is also a complicitor in the crime. People v. Fichtner, 869 P.2d 539 (Colo. 1994).

Codefendants were participants and complicitors in the same criminal acts, therefore, each is responsible for the damage he caused and also for the damage caused by the other. People v. Fichtner, 869 P.2d 539 (Colo. 1994).

Subsection (2) provides no right to offender to present evidence of ability to pay restitution during revocation hearing when hearing is based on other grounds. People v. McCarty, 851 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 874 P.2d 394 (Colo. 1994).

Defendant's act of stealing a vehicle was the proximate cause of the towing company's losses because, without it, such losses would not have been sustained. While the police department's failure to impound the vehicle on its own lot and the vehicle owner's failure to retrieve the vehicle earlier may have contributed to the towing company's losses, there is no evidence that these events were not reasonably foreseeable. People v. Clay, 74 P.3d 473 (Colo. App. 2003).

Applied in Cross v. District Court, 643 P.2d 39 (Colo. 1982); People v. Cheek, 734 P.2d 654 (Colo. App. 1987).

18-1.3-206. Repayment of crime stopper reward as a condition of probation.

(1) As a condition of every sentence to probation where information received through a crime stopper organization led to the arrest and felony conviction of a defendant, the court may require such defendant, as a condition of probation, to repay all or part of any reward paid by such organization. The amount of such repayment shall not exceed the actual reward paid by any crime stopper organization and shall be used solely for paying rewards. The court shall fix the manner and time of repayment.

(2) In the event the defendant fails to repay the crime stopper reward in accordance with an order of the court, the defendant shall be returned to the sentencing court and the court, upon proof of failure to pay, may:

- (a) Modify the amount of the repayment;
- (b) Extend the period of probation;
- (c) Order the defendant committed to jail with work release privileges; or
- (d) Revoke probation and impose the sentence otherwise required by law.

(3) When, as a result of a plea bargain agreement, a defendant is ordered to repay a reward pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, the department or agency supervising the collection of such repayment may assess a charge of fifteen dollars to the defendant for collection of each bad check or each bad check received as a repayment.

(4) Any order for the repayment of all or part of a crime stopper reward as a condition of probation shall be prioritized in accordance with section 18-1.3-204 (2.5).

(5) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Bad check" has the same meaning provided in section 16-7-404.

(b) "Crime stopper organization" has the same meaning provided in section 16-15.7-102 (1), C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1382, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-204.6 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-207. Work and education release programs. (1) As a specific condition of probation for a person convicted of a felony or misdemeanor, the court may require the probationer to participate for a period not to exceed two years or the term to which he or she might be sentenced for the offense committed, whichever is less, in a supervised work release or education release program. Utilization of the county jail, a municipal jail, or any other facility may be used for the probationer's full-time confinement, care, and maintenance, except for the time he or she is released for scheduled work or education.

(1.1) Before a final ruling by the court authorizing a probationer to participate in a supervised education release program, the court shall notify the prosecuting attorney and the postsecondary educational institution requesting their comments on the pending release. The notice shall include all relevant information pertaining to the probationer and to the nature of the crime for which he or she was convicted. Both the prosecuting attorney and the postsecondary educational institution shall reply to the court in writing within fourteen days after receipt of the notification or within such other reasonable time in excess of fourteen days as specified by the court. The postsecondary educational institution's reply shall include a statement of whether or not it will accept the probationer as a student. Acceptance by a state postsecondary educational institution shall be pursuant to section 23-5-106, C.R.S.

(2) All employment income of a probationer participating in a work release program shall be received and deposited by the probation officer in the registry of the court. The court shall order disbursement of the funds so deposited in payment of the following items which are listed in the order of their priority:

- (a) Any current child support order;
- (b) Any child support arrearage;
- (c) Any child support debt order;
- (d) Any spousal maintenance;
- (e) Costs for the crime victim compensation fund, pursuant to section 24-4.1-119, C.R.S.;
- (f) Surcharges for the victims and witnesses assistance and law enforcement fund, pursuant to section 24-4.2-104, C.R.S.;
- (g) Restitution;
- (h) A time payment fee;
- (i) Late fees;
- (j) Any other fines, fees, or surcharges;
- (k) Room, board, and work supervision inside and outside the county jail or other facility; and
- (l) The probationer.

(3) Any acts by the probationer in violation of the conditions of probation under subsection (1) of this section may be asserted as a basis for revocation of probation as provided in sections 16-11-205 and 16-11-206, C.R.S., and any willful failure to return to the jail or other facility may be punishable as an escape under section 18-8-208.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1383, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2008: (2)(e) amended, p. 1889, § 53, effective August 5. L. 2012: (1.1) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 865, § 108, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-11-212 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (1.1) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-207 is similar to § 16-11-212 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Illegal sentences. The combination of a sentence for a definite period with a work-release program which is only permitted as a condition of probation results in an illegal sentence. People v. District Court, 673 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1983).

Probation cannot be contingent upon partial service of sentence in penitentiary. This section does not include a provision for service of a portion of a sentence in the state penitentiary as a condition of probation. A court, therefore, is not free to impose as a condition of probation any period of incarceration in the state penitentiary nor may any period of incarceration in a county jail exceed the prescribed time limits. People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 197 Colo. 481, 593 P.2d 1372 (1979).

Where trial court commits a probationer to a county or municipal jail as a facility utilized in conjunction with a work release program, upon revocation of probation, the probationer is entitled to presentence confinement credit for the actual time confined to the county or municipal jail. People v. Lee, 678 P.2d 1030 (Colo. App. 1983).

No equal protection violation. This section and § 16-11-202, relating to probation establish general statutory probation dispositions for all defendants eligible for probation and do not create classifications resulting in disparate treatment. People v. Garberding, 787 P.2d 154 (Colo. 1990).

Imposition of a two-year jail term as part of a work release program is not contingent upon an offender having compensated employment or being enrolled in educational courses at the time of sentencing. People v. Simpson, 969 P.2d 751 (Colo. App. 1998).

Applied in People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981).

18-1.3-208. Intensive supervision probation programs - legislative declaration.

(1) The general assembly finds and declares that intensive supervision probation programs are an effective and desirable alternative to sentences to imprisonment or community corrections. It is the purpose of this section to encourage the judicial department to establish programs for the intensive supervision of selected probationers. It is the intent of the general assembly that such programs be formulated so that they protect the safety and welfare of the public in the community where the programs are operating and throughout the state of Colorado.

(2) The judicial department may establish an intensive supervision probation program in any judicial district or combination of judicial districts in order to provide an alternative to the sentencing of selected offenders to the department of corrections. When establishing such programs, the judicial department shall seek the counsel of the chief judge of the district court, the office of the district attorney, the state public defender or his or her designee, the county sheriff, the chief probation officer in the judicial district, the department of corrections, the local community corrections board, and members of the public at-large.

(3) The judicial department shall require that offenders in the program receive at least the highest level of supervision that is provided to probationers. Such programs are to include highly restricted activities, daily contact between the offender and the probation officer, monitored curfew, home visitation, employment visitation and monitoring, drug and alcohol screening, treatment referrals and monitoring, and restitution and community service and shall minimize any risk to the public.

(4) The court may sentence any offender who is otherwise eligible for probation and who would otherwise be sentenced to the department of corrections to an intensive supervision probation program if the court determines that such offender is not a threat to society. For purposes of this section, "offender" shall have the same meaning as that set forth in section 17-27-102 (6), C.R.S.

(5) The judicial department shall have the power to establish and enforce standards and criteria for the administration of intensive supervision probation programs.

(6) (a) It is the intent of the general assembly in enacting this subsection (6) to address a portion of the projected state inmate bedspace requirements through expansion of intensive supervision probation programs authorized by this section.

(b) The judicial department is directed to implement a three-phase expansion of intensive supervision probation programs in fiscal years 1995-96 and 1996-97 to include an additional seven hundred fifty participants over the number of participants in such programs on July 1, 1995.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1384, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-213 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-209. Substance abuse assessment required. (1) Each person convicted of a felony committed on or after July 1, 1992, and each person convicted of a misdemeanor or petty offense on or after July 1, 2008, who is to be considered for probation or a deferred judgment and sentence that includes supervision by the probation department, shall be required to submit to an assessment for the use of controlled substances or alcohol developed pursuant to section 16-11.5-102 (1) (a), C.R.S., as part of the presentence or probation investigation required pursuant to section 16-11-102, C.R.S., or, if the investigation is waived pursuant to section 16-11-102 (4), C.R.S., and the person is sentenced to probation or supervised by a probation officer, then as a part of intake.

(2) The court shall order each person required to submit to an assessment pursuant to subsection (1) of this section to comply with the recommendations of the alcohol and drug assessment. If the person is sentenced to probation, a deferred judgment and sentence that includes supervision by the probation department, or any other sentence except a sentence only to jail, the person shall be ordered to comply with the recommendations as a condition or as part of the sentence imposed, at the person's own expense, unless the person is indigent.

(3) The assessment required by subsection (1) of this section shall be at the expense of the person assessed, unless the person is indigent.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1385, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2008: Entire section amended, p. 1714, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2011: (1) amended, (HB 11-1200), ch. 158, p. 544, § 1, effective August 10.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11.5-103 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-210. Counseling or treatment for alcohol or drug abuse. (1) In any case in which treatment or counseling for alcohol or drug abuse is authorized in connection with a deferred prosecution, deferred judgment and sentence, or probation, the court may require the defendant to obtain counseling or treatment for the condition. If the court orders the counseling or treatment, the court shall order that the counseling or treatment be obtained from a treatment facility or person approved by the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, established in article 80 of title 27, C.R.S., unless the court makes a finding that counseling or treatment in another facility or with another person is warranted. If the defendant voluntarily submits himself or herself for such treatment or counseling, the district attorney and the court may consider his or her willingness to correct his or her condition as a basis for granting deferred prosecution or deferred judgment and sentence.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, in any case in which treatment or counseling for alcohol or drug abuse is authorized and ordered by the court in connection with a deferred prosecution, deferred judgment and sentence, or probation for an offense involving unlawful sexual behavior, as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., the court shall order that the counseling or treatment be obtained from a treatment facility or person approved by the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, established in article 80 of title 27, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1385, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2008: Entire section amended, p. 1715, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2010: Entire section amended, (SB 10-175), ch. 188, p. 785, § 29, effective April 29.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-7-402 as it existed prior to 2002.

Cross references: For the duties of the division of alcohol and drug abuse in the department of human services concerning alcohol and drug abuse, see article 80 of title 27.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Review of New Legislation Relating to Criminal Law", see 11 Colo. Law. 2148 (1982).

18-1.3-211. Sentencing of felons - parole of felons - treatment and testing based upon assessment required. (1) Each person sentenced by the court for a felony committed on or after July 1, 1992, shall be required, as a part of any sentence to probation, community corrections, or incarceration with the department of corrections, to undergo periodic testing and treatment for substance abuse that is appropriate to such felon based upon the recommendations of the assessment made pursuant to section 18-1.3-209, or based upon any subsequent recommendations by the department of corrections, the judicial department, or the division of criminal justice of the department of public safety, whichever is appropriate. Any such testing or treatment shall be at a facility or with a person approved by the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, established in article 80 of title 27, C.R.S., and at such felon's own expense, unless such felon is indigent.

(2) Each person placed on parole by the state board of parole on or after July 1, 1992, shall be required, as a condition of such parole, to undergo periodic testing and treatment for substance abuse that is appropriate to such parolee based upon the recommendations of the assessment made pursuant to section 18-1.3-209 or any assessment or subsequent reassessment made regarding such parolee during his or her incarceration or any period of parole. Any such testing or treatment shall be at a facility or with a person approved by the unit in the department of human services that administers behavioral health programs and services, including those related to mental health and substance abuse, established in article 80 of title 27, C.R.S., and at such parolee's own expense, unless such parolee is indigent.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1385, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2010: Entire section amended, (SB 10-175), ch. 188, p. 786, § 30, effective April 29.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11.5-104 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-212. Drug testing of offenders by judicial department - pilot program. The judicial department is hereby authorized and directed to develop as soon as possible a pilot program for the drug testing of persons during presentence investigation and on probation. Such program shall include testing of persons during presentence investigation and may include random drug testing when an offender is assigned to specialized treatment and rehabilitation programs.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1386, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-102.5 as it existed prior to 2002.

PART 3

COMMUNITY CORRECTIONS AND SPECIALIZED RESTITUTION AND
COMMUNITY SERVICE PROGRAMS

18-1.3-301. Authority to place offenders in community corrections programs. (1) (a) Any judge of a district court may refer any offender convicted of a felony to a community corrections program unless such offender is required to be sentenced pursuant to section 18-1.3-406 (1) or a sentencing provision that requires a sentence to the department of corrections. If an offender who is sentenced pursuant to section 18-1.3-406

(1) has such sentence modified upon the finding of unusual and extenuating circumstances pursuant to such section, such offender may be referred to a community corrections program if such offender is otherwise eligible for such program and is approved for placement pursuant to section 17-27-103 (5), C.R.S., and section 17-27-104 (3), C.R.S. For the purposes of this article, persons sentenced pursuant to the provisions of sections 19-2-908 (1) (a) (I) and (1) (c) (I) (B) and 19-2-910 (2), C.R.S., shall be deemed to be offenders.

(b) In making a direct sentence to a community corrections program, the sentencing court may impose a sentence to community corrections which includes terms, lengths, and conditions pursuant to section 18-1.3-401. The sentencing court may also refer any offender to a community corrections program as a condition of probation pursuant to section 18-1.3-202. Any placement of offenders referred as a direct sentence or as a condition of probation shall be subject to approval pursuant to section 17-27-103 (5), C.R.S., and section 17-27-104 (3), C.R.S.

(b.5) As a condition of every placement in a community corrections program, the court shall require the offender, as a condition of placement, to execute or subscribe a written prior waiver of extradition stating that the offender consents to extradition to this state and waives all formal procedures incidental to extradition proceedings in the event that the offender is arrested in another state upon an allegation that the offender has violated the terms of his or her community corrections placement, and acknowledging that the offender shall not be admitted to bail in any other state pending extradition to this state.

(c) A probation officer, in making a presentence report to the court pursuant to section 16-11-102, C.R.S., or in making a report to the court after a probation violation, may recommend the utilization of a community corrections program in sentencing or resentencing an offender.

(d) If an offender is rejected by a community corrections board or a community corrections program before placement in a program, the court shall promptly resentence the offender. If a sentence to the department of corrections was imposed upon the offender prior to the referral of the offender to community corrections, the resentence shall not exceed the sentence which was originally imposed upon the offender.

(e) If an offender is rejected after acceptance by a community corrections board or a community corrections program, the court may resentence the offender without any further hearing so long as the offender's sentence does not exceed the sentence which was originally imposed upon the offender.

(f) The probation department of the judicial district in which a community corrections program is located shall have jurisdiction over all offenders sentenced directly to a community corrections program. Such probation department shall initiate arrest warrants, process reports or other official documents regarding offenders at the direction of the court, coordinate with community corrections boards and community corrections programs, review offender supervision and treatment, authorize offender transfers between residential and nonresidential phases of placement, and carry out such other duties as the court directs.

(g) The sentencing court may make appropriate orders for the detention, transfer, or resentencing of any offender whose placement in a community corrections program is terminated pursuant to section 17-27-103 (7), C.R.S., or section 17-27-104 (5), C.R.S. As to any offender held pursuant to section 17-27-104 (6), C.R.S., in a jail operated by a unit of local government in a county other than where the offender's original conviction occurred, the sentencing court shall order the transfer of the offender to the jail of the county where the original conviction occurred as soon as possible. The sentencing court is not required to provide the offender with an evidentiary hearing pertaining to the rejection of placement in a community corrections program prior to resentencing.

(h) (I) The sentencing court shall have the authority to modify the sentence of an offender who has been directly sentenced to a community corrections program in the same manner as if the offender had been placed on probation.

(II) A defendant who successfully completes the residential phase of a community corrections sentence, has paid the costs of the residential program in full, and is being supervised on nonresidential status at either a minimum or administrative level is eligible for consideration for early termination of his or her community corrections sentence by the court.

(III) When the defendant has met the eligibility criteria enumerated in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (h), the defendant's probation officer shall submit a petition for early termination of sentence to the court and notify the district attorney and the defendant.

(IV) If victim notification is required, the probation officer shall provide victim notification pursuant to part 3 of article 4.1 of title 24, C.R.S.

(V) In determining whether to grant or deny the petition, the court may consider the following factors:

- (A) The defendant's assessed risk of reoffense;
- (B) Victim input, if any;
- (C) The defendant's compliance with the terms and conditions of the sentence or community corrections program;
- (D) Completion of any treatment required by the court or community corrections program; and
- (E) Other factors deemed relevant by the court.

(VI) The fact that the defendant owes restitution, costs, fees, fines, or surcharges shall not prohibit the court from granting the motion for early termination if the court finds the motion otherwise appropriate.

(i) (I) An offender sentenced directly to a community corrections program by the sentencing court pursuant to this subsection (1) shall be eligible for time credit deductions from the offender's sentence not to exceed ten days for each month of placement upon a demonstration to the program administrator by the offender that the offender has made consistent progress in the following categories:

- (A) Maintenance of employment, education, or training, including attendance, promptness, performance, cooperation, care of materials, and safety;
- (B) Development and maintenance of positive social and domestic relations;
- (C) Compliance with rules, regulations, and requirements of residential or nonresidential program placement;
- (D) Completion and compliance with components of the individualized program plan; and
- (E) Demonstration of financial responsibility and accountability.

(II) The administrator of each community corrections program shall develop objective standards for measuring progress in the categories listed in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (i), shall apply such standards consistently to evaluations of all such offenders, and shall develop procedures for recommending the award of time credits to such offenders.

(III) The administrator of each community corrections program shall review the performance record of each offender directly sentenced to such program. Such review shall be conducted at intervals to be determined by each program administrator. Such reviews shall be conducted at least once every six months, but may be conducted at more frequent intervals as determined by the program administrator. If the program administrator determines that the offender engaged in criminal activity during the time period for which the time credits were granted, the program administrator may withdraw the time credits granted during such period. Prior to the time of the offender's release, the program administrator shall submit to the sentencing court the time credit deductions granted, withdrawn, or restored consistent with the provisions of this paragraph (i). Such time credit deductions shall be submitted on standardized forms prepared by the division of criminal justice of the department of public safety that include verification by the program administrator that the time credit deductions are true and accurate. The sentencing court shall certify such time credit deductions as part of the offender's permanent record. Any time credits authorized under this paragraph (i) shall vest upon certification of time credit deductions by the sentencing court at the time of the offender's release from the program.

(IV) An offender shall not be credited with more than one-half the allowable time credits for any month or portion thereof unless the offender was employed, was unable to be employed due to a disability waiver, or was participating in training, education, or treatment programs which precluded the ability to remain employed. This subparagraph (IV) shall not apply to those offenders excused from such employment or training by the program administrator or for medical reasons.

(V) No time credit deductions shall be granted to any offender for time spent in jail, whether awaiting sentencing, placement in the program, disciplinary action, or as a result of a subsequent arrest, unless such time spent in jail was a prearranged component of the offender's individualized program plan and the offender has made consistent progress in the categories listed in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (i).

(VI) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2011, (SB 11-254), ch. 274, p. 1236, § 1, effective June 2, 2011.)

(j) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (k) of this subsection (1), any offender sentenced to the department of corrections subsequent to placement in a community corrections program is entitled to credit against the term of confinement as described in section 17-27-104 (9), C.R.S. The court shall make a finding of the amount of such time credits and include such finding in the mittimus that orders the offender to be placed in the custody of the department of corrections. The department of corrections shall apply credits for residential and nonresidential time completed in a community corrections program in the same manner as credits for time served in a department of corrections facility.

(k) Any offender who escapes from a residential community corrections program or who absconds from a nonresidential community corrections program shall forfeit any time credit deductions earned pursuant to paragraph (i) of this subsection (1) and shall not be credited with any time on escape or absconder status. Within thirty-five days after an offender's escape or abscondment, the program administrator shall submit to the sentencing court a statement on the form described in subparagraph (III) of paragraph (i) of this subsection (1) of the time credit deductions that would have been earned by the offender.

(2) (a) Initial referral. The executive director of the department of corrections may transfer any offender who is eligible pursuant to this subsection (2) to a community corrections program if such offender is accepted for placement by a community corrections board pursuant to section 17-27-103, C.R.S., and a community corrections program pursuant to section 17-27-104, C.R.S.

(b) Unless the offender has an active felony warrant or detainer or has refused community placement, the executive director of the department of corrections shall refer an offender who has displayed acceptable institutional behavior for placement in a community corrections program according to the following timeline:

(I) No more than twenty-eight months prior to the offender's parole eligibility date for any offender who successfully completes a regimented inmate discipline program pursuant to article 27.7 of title 17, C.R.S.;

(II) No more than sixteen months prior to the offender's parole eligibility date for any offender who is not serving a sentence for an offense referred to in section 18-1.3-406; and

(III) No more than one hundred eighty days prior to the parole eligibility date for any other offender not described in subparagraph (I) or (II) of this paragraph (b).

(c) Prior to placement of an offender in any community corrections program, the executive director of the department of corrections shall give the first right to refuse placement of such offender to the community corrections board and community corrections programs in the community where the offender intends to reside after release from custody of the department of corrections or parole by the state board of parole.

(d) As to any offender held in a county jail pursuant to section 17-27-104 (6), C.R.S., the executive director of the department of corrections shall order transfer of such offender to a facility of the department of corrections as soon as possible.

(e) Subsequent referrals. For an offender who is serving a sentence for a class 1 or 2 felony that constitutes a crime of violence under section 18-1.3-406, excluding escape, and whose parole hearing has been deferred for at least thirty-six months, the executive director of the department of corrections shall not refer the offender for placement in community corrections earlier than six months prior to the date of the offender's second or any subsequent parole hearing.

(3) The state board of parole may refer any parolee for placement in a community corrections program. Such placement, if approved by the community corrections board pursuant to section 17-27-103, C.R.S., and the community corrections program pursuant to section 17-27-104, C.R.S., may be made a condition of release on parole or as a modification of the conditions of an offender's parole after release or upon temporary revocation of parole pursuant to section 17-2-103 (11), C.R.S.

(4) District courts, county courts, and other local criminal justice officials may enter into agreements with community corrections programs which include the use of such programs to supervise offenders awaiting trial for felony or misdemeanor offenses, offenders convicted of misdemeanors, or offenders under deferred judgments. Such agreements are subject to review and approval by the community corrections board of the jurisdiction in which any community corrections program making such agreement is located. Any such use of a community corrections program may be supported with funding from local governments, public or private grants, offender fees, and other sources other than the state general fund.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1386, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1)(a) amended, p. 1429, § 14, effective April 29. L. 2006: (1)(b.5) added, p. 342, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2011: (1)(h), IP(1)(i)(I), (1)(i)(IV), (1)(i)(VI), (1)(j), and (1)(k) amended, (SB 11-254), ch. 274, pp. 1237, 1236, §§ 3, 1, effective June 2; (2)(b) amended and (2)(e) added, (HB 11-1085), ch. 48, p. 124, § 1, effective August 10. L. 2012: (1)(k) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 865, § 109, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 17-27-105 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (1)(k) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For article, "Review of New Legislation Relating to Criminal Law", see 11 Colo. Law. 2148 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-301 is similar to § 17-27-105 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Two prior felony convictions do not foreclose a court from sentencing a defendant to a community correctional program. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 195 Colo. 34, 572 P.2d 483 (1977) (decided under repealed § 27-27-105).

Individual sentenced pursuant to § 42-2-206 (1) may be considered for community correctional program. People v. Scott, 200 Colo. 365, 615 P.2d 680 (1980).

Where defendant is serving three concurrent sentences, one of which is for a violent crime, the defendant is not eligible for community corrections placement more than six months before his parole eligibility date. People v. Santisteven, 868 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1993).

The parole board, not a parole officer, has the authority to direct that an offender attend a community corrections program as a condition of parole. People v. Lanzieri, 996 P.2d 156 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 25 P.3d 1170 (Colo. 2001).

Sentence to community correctional facility is not the same as a sentence to probation. People v. Johnson, 42 Colo. App. 350, 594 P.2d 601 (1979); People v. Kastning, 738 P.2d 807 (Colo. App. 1987).

"Original sentence" construed. Where court suspended the execution, but not the imposition, of a four-year term in the department of corrections on condition that defendant serve two years in a community corrections facility, the court was not thereafter precluded from re-sentencing defendant to four years in the department because the "original sentence" was four years, not two. People v. Seals, 899 P.2d 359 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court cannot increase original sentence. There is nothing in this article which authorizes the court to increase the length of the original sentence. People v. Johnson, 42 Colo. App. 350, 594 P.2d 601 (1979).

For this reason, a defendant is entitled to credit for time served in community corrections on direct sentence if he is later rejected. People v. Washington, 709 P.2d 100 (Colo. App. 1985).

Trial court is without jurisdiction to reimpose a sentence that extends beyond the length of the original sentence. People v. Herrera, 734 P.2d 136 (Colo. App. 1986); Downing v. People, 895 P.2d 1046 (Colo. 1995).

Where the defendant originally received a sentence to three years of probation, which was revoked, followed by a sentence to six years of community corrections, from which the defendant was rejected, the "original sentence" referred to in subsection (1)(e) means the sentence to community corrections. Since this section deals only with resentencing following the failure of community corrections placement, the sentence “originally imposed”, referred to in subsection (1)(e), is the sentence to community corrections, not any prior sentence to probation. Because the defendant received a hearing and representation of counsel when he was resentenced to community corrections, he was not entitled to a further hearing or counsel when the community corrections sentence was revoked and he received a sentence to the department of corrections, which did not exceed the length of the sentence to community corrections. People v. McPherson, 53 P.3d 679 (Colo. App. 2001).

Effect of changing a sentence from concurrent to consecutive because of defendant's escape was not extending the sentence beyond the length originally ordered. Defendant who escaped from community corrections program while serving concurrent sentences, who subsequently completed one sentence but failed to clear the second arrest warrant, was subject to being sentenced to the department of corrections for the length of the original sentence. People v. Taylor, 7 P.3d 1030 (Colo. App. 2000).

When the court revokes an offender's sentence to community corrections, subsection (1)(e) read in conjunction with subsection (1)(h) authorizes the sentencing court to increase the offender's sentence, provided that the court holds a hearing. Romero v. People, 179 P.3d 984 (Colo. 2007).

Imposing a sentence increase under subsection (1)(e) does not violate the double jeopardy clauses of the United States and Colorado constitutions because defendant lacked a legitimate expectation of finality in the sentence. Romero v. People, 179 P.3d 984 (Colo. 2007).

Because subsection (1)(h) authorizes the trial court, following defendant's termination from community corrections, to sentence him or her in the “same manner as if [he or she] had been placed on probation”, the trial court, under such circumstances, is authorized to run a defendant's sentence consecutively to the sentence in the other case. People v. Adams, 128 P.3d 260 (Colo. App. 2005).

Term “offender's sentence” in subsection (1)(e) refers to the length of time the trial court sentences an offender to the department of corrections and does not include any period of mandatory parole that attaches to that sentence by operation of § 18-1-105 (1)(a)(V). People v. Johnson, 13 P.3d 309 (Colo. 2000).

The mandatory period of parole is not included in calculating the length of a defendant's term of imprisonment to which he is resentenced after termination from community corrections and, therefore, does not exceed the original sentence. People v. Snare, 7 P.3d 1025 (Colo. App. 1999).

Trial court did not violate this section when it imposed the six-year department of corrections sentence, even though that sentence requires an additional mandatory three-year period of parole. People v. McGraw, 30 P.3d 835 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court had the authority under former §§ 16-11-204 (4) and 17-27-105 (1)(h) (now §§ 18-1.3-204 (4) and 18-1.3-301 (1)(h)) to modify defendant's community corrections sentence before it expired. The court retained this authority after defendant's release date passed because re-sentencing proceedings were initiated prior to that date. People v. Knott, 83 P.3d 1147 (Colo. App. 2003).

Because defendant's post-release supervisory period was imposed at a sentence reduction hearing and not at original sentencing, such period is not counted as part of the original sentence for the purpose of resentencing a person pursuant to this section. People v. Carroll, 779 P.2d 1375 (Colo. App. 1989).

The reference to “time credits” in subsection (1)(j) is intended to include both “earned time” and “good time” credits. People v. McCreadie, 938 P.2d 528 (Colo. 1997).

Subsection (1)(j) requires the sentencing court to include the written summary prepared by the administrator of a community corrections program in the mittimus or attach it thereto. People v. Lopez, 961 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1998).

If an offender violates a rule or condition of community corrections placement while on nonresidential status, the offender is not entitled upon resentencing to credit for time served while on nonresidential status. People v. Hoecher, 822 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1991) (overruling People v. Herrera, 734 P.2d 136 (Colo. App. 1986)); People v. Galvin, 835 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992).

Time served on direct sentence to community corrections is the equivalent of time served in the custody of the department of corrections, therefore once the defendant is sentenced to a state correctional facility, all time served in residential community corrections must be credited to the defendant's sentence. People v. Galvin, 835 P.2d 603 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendant has no statutory right to a mandatory resentencing hearing after termination from a direct placement at community corrections, as the legislative history supports the conclusion that general assembly intended to prevent duplication of the sentencing hearing. The legislative history also indicates that the term “evidentiary” was added to distinguish judicial hearing from any administrative hearings conducted by community corrections. People v. Abdul, 935 P.2d 4 (Colo. 1997) (decided under law in effect prior to the 1993 repeal and reenactment of this article).

Defendant's due process claim was without merit since subsection (1)(g) expressly states that the sentencing court is not required to provide the offender with an evidentiary hearing prior to resentencing and, therefore, there is no right or justifiable expectation created by state law. The defendant could have had no reasonable expectation that he would be transferred only for misbehavior because the statute very clearly gives the community correctional facility discretion to reject the defendant before or after acceptance for any reason. People v. Wilhite, 817 P.2d 1017 (Colo. 1991); People v. Abdul, 935 P.2d 4 (Colo. 1997) (decided under law in effect prior to the 1993 repeal and reenactment of this article).

Direct placement offender who was denied an evidentiary hearing was not treated differently from transitional offenders and thereby denied equal protection of the laws since subsection (1)(g) does not deny such a hearing but makes it discretionary rather than mandatory; and direct placement offenders and transitional offenders are not similarly situated for purposes of equal protection analysis. People v. Wilhite, 817 P.2d 1017 (Colo. 1991).

The denial of a resentencing hearing under subsection (1)(e) has been found to be constitutional under Wilhite, and this section does not violate defendant's right to due process and specifically, his rights to confrontation and to assistance of counsel. People v. James, 940 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1996).

Subsection (2) does not allow for a hearing or other determination as to whether an individual poses a flight risk notwithstanding the existence of a detainer. Rivera-Bottzeck v. Ortiz, 134 P.3d 517 (Colo. App. 2006).

The word "felony" does not modify the word "detainer" in the phrase "felony warrant or detainer" in subsection (2)(b); thus, an inmate with an active immigration and naturalization service detainer cannot be referred for placement in a community corrections program under subsection (2)(b). Rivera-Bottzeck v. Ortiz, 134 P.3d 517 (Colo. App. 2006).

Trial court did not err in summarily resentencing defendant to the custody of the department of corrections since, although the trial court retains its discretion to grant a hearing at the time of resentencing, and such may be the better practice in appropriate cases, the granting of a hearing is not constitutionally required. People v. James, 940 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in People v. Abila, 670 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Patrick, 683 P.2d 801 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Rodriguez, 55 P.3d 173 (Colo. App. 2002).

18-1.3-302. Legislative declaration - offenders who may be sentenced to the specialized restitution and community service program. (1) The general assembly hereby finds that:

(a) The taxpayer costs to incarcerate nonviolent offenders, most of whom have committed property-related offenses, usually outbalances the need to incarcerate such persons to protect the public's safety and that imprisonment generally renders offenders less able to compensate their victims. Therefore, the general assembly declares that the purpose for enacting this article regarding specialized restitution and community service programs is to increase the cost-efficiency and the effectiveness of Colorado corrections. This article authorizes the establishment of an intermediate sanction whereby nonviolent offenders, at less taxpayer cost than imprisonment, would be required to work under strict supervision in a highly structured program in order to compensate their victims and society for the damage they have caused; and

(b) Using incarceration as a routine punishment for nonviolent offenders, either upon sentencing or upon the revocation of parole or probation, punishes Colorado's taxpayers. The general assembly finds that limiting the pool of offenders eligible for the specialized restitution and community service program to first-time offenders unreasonably restricts entrance into the program and that the level of supervision mandated for repeat offenders by this article is adequate to ensure public safety from such offenders. The general assembly further finds that the vast majority of repeat offenders do not possess the requisite skills to obtain legitimate employment and that the specialized restitution and community service program will train such repeat offenders for legitimate employment. Therefore, it is in the best interests of the people of the state of Colorado to allow nonviolent repeat offenders and offenders with technical violations of parole or probation into such program.

(2) Any offender shall be eligible to be placed in a specialized restitution and community service program if:

(a) The offender is not eligible for probation pursuant to section 18-1.3-201, and has been convicted of an offense other than a crime of violence, as described in section 18-1.3-406 (2) (a), or any felony offense committed against a child set forth in articles 3,

6, and 7 of this title, or an offense that requires incarceration or imprisonment in the department of corrections or community corrections, or any sexual offense as defined in section 18-1.3-1003; and

(b) (I) A determination is made by the court that the offender would be incarcerated, either pursuant to section 18-1.3-104 (1) (b) or pursuant to a probation revocation, if such offender is not placed in the specialized restitution and community service program; or

(II) A determination is made by the parole board that the offender would be incarcerated pursuant to a parole violation.

(3) Prior to sentencing an eligible offender to a specialized restitution and community service program pursuant to this section, the court shall make the determinations required in subsection (2) of this section and such offender must have been accepted by both of the following:

(a) The provider of the specialized restitution and community service program in which it is proposed that the offender be placed; and

(b) The community corrections board, as defined in section 17-27-102 (2), C.R.S., of the community in which the program is located.

(4) If an eligible offender is accepted by a provider pursuant to subsection (3) of this section, the court may sentence an offender to pay restitution or perform community service, or both, in an amount commensurate with the seriousness of the crime and to the custody of any specialized restitution and community service program adopted pursuant to this section or article 27.9 of title 17, C.R.S. Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, a minimum of full restitution may be imposed in an amount that exceeds any actual losses or damages suffered by a victim of the crime. An offender shall be supervised in accordance with and subject to the provisions of article 27 of title 17, C.R.S.

(5) The parole board may place parole violators who meet the eligibility criteria of subsection (2) of this section and who have been accepted pursuant to paragraphs (a) and (b) of subsection (3) of this section in specialized restitution and community service programs. Such parole violators shall be supervised in accordance with and subject to the provisions of article 27 of title 17, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1390, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (2)(a) amended, p. 1430, § 15, effective April 29.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former §§ 17-27.9-101 and 17-27.9-103 as they existed prior to 2002.

PART 4

SENTENCES TO IMPRISONMENT

18-1.3-401. Felonies classified - presumptive penalties. (1) (a) (I) As to any person sentenced for a felony committed after July 1, 1979, and before July 1, 1984, felonies are divided into five classes which are distinguished from one another by the following presumptive ranges of penalties which are authorized upon conviction:

Class	Presumptive Range
1	Life imprisonment or death
2	Eight to twelve years plus one year of parole
3	Four to eight years plus one year of parole
4	Two to four years plus one year of parole
5	One to two years plus one year of parole

(II) As to any person sentenced for a felony committed on or after July 1, 1984, and before July 1, 1985, felonies are divided into five classes which are distinguished from one another by the following presumptive ranges of penalties which are authorized upon conviction:

Class	Presumptive Range
1	Life imprisonment or death
2	Eight to twelve years
3	Four to eight years
4	Two to four years
5	One to two years

(III) (A) As to any person sentenced for a felony committed on or after July 1, 1985, except as otherwise provided in sub-subparagraph (E) of this subparagraph (III), in addition to, or in lieu of, any sentence to imprisonment, probation, community corrections, or work release, a fine within the following presumptive ranges may be imposed for the specified classes of felonies:

Class	Minimum Sentence	Maximum Sentence
1	No fine	No fine
2	Five thousand dollars	One million dollars
3	Three thousand dollars	Seven hundred fifty thousand dollars
4	Two thousand dollars	Five hundred thousand dollars
5	One thousand dollars	One hundred thousand dollars
6	One thousand dollars	One hundred thousand dollars

(A.5) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, any person who attempts to commit, conspires to commit, or commits against an elderly person any felony set forth in part 4 of article 4 of this title, part 1, 2, 3, or 5 of article 5 of this title, article 5.5 of this title, or section 11-51-603, C.R.S., shall be required to pay a mandatory and substantial fine within the limits permitted by law. However, all moneys collected from the offender shall be applied in the following order: Costs for crime victim compensation fund pursuant to section 24-4.1-119, C.R.S.; surcharges for victims and witnesses assistance and law enforcement fund pursuant to section 24-4.2-104, C.R.S.; restitution; time payment fee; late fees; and any other fines, fees, or surcharges. For purposes of this sub-subparagraph (A.5), an “elderly person” or “elderly victim” means a person sixty years of age or older.

(B) Failure to pay a fine imposed pursuant to this subparagraph (III) is grounds for revocation of probation or revocation of a sentence to community corrections, assuming the defendant’s ability to pay. If such a revocation occurs, the court may impose the maximum sentence allowable in the given sentencing ranges.

(C) Each judicial district shall have at least one clerk who shall collect and administer the fines imposed under this subparagraph (III) and under section 18-1.3-501 in accordance with the provisions of sub-subparagraph (D) of this subparagraph (III).

(D) All fines collected pursuant to this subparagraph (III) shall be deposited in the fines collection cash fund, which fund is hereby created. The general assembly shall make annual appropriations out of such fund for administrative and personnel costs incurred in the collection and administration of said fines. All unexpended balances shall revert to the general fund at the end of each fiscal year.

(E) Notwithstanding the provisions of sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (III), a person who has been twice convicted of a felony under the laws of this state, any other state, or the United States prior to the conviction for which he or she is being sentenced shall not be eligible to receive a fine in lieu of any sentence to imprisonment, community corrections, or work release but shall be sentenced to at least the minimum sentence specified in subparagraph (V) of this paragraph (a) and may receive a fine in addition to said sentence.

(IV) As to any person sentenced for a felony committed on or after July 1, 1985, but prior to July 1, 1993, felonies are divided into six classes which are distinguished from one another by the following presumptive ranges of penalties which are authorized upon conviction:

Class	Minimum Sentence	Maximum Sentence
1	Life imprisonment	Death
2	Eight years imprisonment	Twenty-four years imprisonment
3	Four years imprisonment	Sixteen years imprisonment
4	Two years imprisonment	Eight years imprisonment
5	One year imprisonment	Four years imprisonment
6	One year imprisonment	Two years imprisonment

(V) (A) As to any person sentenced for a felony committed on or after July 1, 1993, felonies are divided into six classes which are distinguished from one another by the following presumptive ranges of penalties which are authorized upon conviction:

Class	Minimum Sentence	Maximum Sentence	Mandatory Period of Parole
1	Life imprisonment	Death	None
2	Eight years imprisonment	Twenty-four years imprisonment	Five years
3	Four years imprisonment	Twelve years imprisonment	Five years
4	Two years imprisonment	Six years imprisonment	Three years
5	One year imprisonment	Three years imprisonment	Two years
6	One year imprisonment	Eighteen months imprisonment	One year

(B) Any person who is paroled pursuant to section 17-22.5-403, C.R.S., or any person who is not paroled and is discharged pursuant to law, shall be subject to the mandatory period of parole established pursuant to sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (V). Such mandatory period of parole may not be waived by the offender or waived or suspended by the court and shall be subject to the provisions of section 17-22.5-403 (8), C.R.S., which permits the state board of parole to discharge the offender at any time during the term of parole upon a determination that the offender has been sufficiently rehabilitated and reintegrated into society and can no longer benefit from parole supervision.

(C) Notwithstanding sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (V), the mandatory period of parole for a person convicted of a felony offense committed prior to July 1, 1996, pursuant to part 4 of article 3 of this title, or part 3 of article 6 of this title, shall be five years. Notwithstanding sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (V), and except as otherwise provided in sub-subparagraph (C.5) of this subparagraph (V), the period of parole for a person convicted of a felony offense committed on or after July 1, 1996, but prior to July 1, 2002, pursuant to part 4 of article 3 of this title, or part 3 of article 6 of this title, shall be set by the state board of parole pursuant to section 17-2-201 (5) (a.5), C.R.S., but in no event shall the term of parole exceed the maximum sentence imposed upon the inmate by the court.

(C.3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, p. 124, § 1, effective March 26, 2002.)

(C.5) Notwithstanding the provisions of sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (V), any person sentenced for a sex offense, as defined in section 18-1.3-1003 (5), committed on or after November 1, 1998, shall be sentenced pursuant to the provisions of part 10 of this article.

(C.7) Any person sentenced for a felony committed on or after July 1, 2002, involving unlawful sexual behavior, as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S., or for a felony, committed on or after July 1, 2002, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior, and who is not subject to the provisions of part 10 of this article, shall be subject to the mandatory period of parole specified in sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (V).

(D) The mandatory period of parole imposed pursuant to sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (V) shall commence immediately upon the discharge of an offender from imprisonment in the custody of the department of corrections. If the offender has been granted release to parole supervision by the state board of parole, the offender shall be deemed to have discharged the offender's sentence to imprisonment provided for in sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (V) in the same manner as if such sentence were discharged pursuant to law; except that the sentence to imprisonment for any person sentenced as a sex offender pursuant to part 10 of this article shall not be deemed discharged on release of said person on parole. When an offender is released by the state board of parole or released because the offender's sentence was discharged pursuant to law, the mandatory period of parole shall be served by such offender. An offender sentenced for nonviolent felony offenses, as defined in section 17-22.5-405 (5), C.R.S., may receive earned time pursuant to section 17-22.5-405, C.R.S., while serving a mandatory parole period in accordance with this section, but not while such offender is reincarcerated after a revocation of the mandatory period of parole. An offender who is sentenced for a felony committed on or after July 1, 1993, and paroled on or after January 1, 2009, shall be eligible to receive any earned time while on parole or after reparole following a parole revocation. The offender shall not be eligible for earned time while the offender is reincarcerated after revocation of the mandatory period of parole pursuant to this subparagraph (V).

(E) If an offender is sentenced consecutively for the commission of two or more felony offenses pursuant to sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (V), the mandatory period of parole for such offender shall be the mandatory period of parole established for the highest class felony of which such offender has been convicted.

(VI) Any person sentenced for a class 2, 3, 4, or 5 felony, or a class 6 felony that is the offender's second or subsequent felony offense, committed on or after July 1, 1998, regardless of the length of the person's sentence to incarceration and the mandatory period of parole, shall not be deemed to have fully discharged his or her sentence until said person has either completed or been discharged by the state board of parole from the mandatory period of parole imposed pursuant to subparagraph (V) of this paragraph (a).

(b) (I) Except as provided in subsection (6) and subsection (8) of this section and in section 18-1.3-804, a person who has been convicted of a class 2, class 3, class 4, class 5, or class 6 felony shall be punished by the imposition of a definite sentence which is within the presumptive ranges set forth in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1). In imposing the sentence within the presumptive range, the court shall consider the nature and elements of the offense, the character and record of the offender, and all aggravating or mitigating circumstances surrounding the offense and the offender. The prediction of the potential for future criminality by a particular defendant, unless based on prior criminal conduct, shall not be considered in determining the length of sentence to be imposed.

(II) As to any person sentenced for a felony committed on or after July 1, 1985, a person may be sentenced to imprisonment as described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) or to pay a fine that is within the presumptive ranges set forth in subparagraph (III) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) or to both such fine and imprisonment; except that any person who has been twice convicted of a felony under the laws of this state, any other state, or the United States prior to the conviction for which he or she is being sentenced shall not be eligible to receive a fine in lieu of any sentence to imprisonment as described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) but shall be sentenced to at least the minimum sentence specified in subparagraph (V) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) and may receive a fine in addition to said sentence.

(II.5) Notwithstanding anything in this section to the contrary, any person sentenced for a sex offense, as defined in section 18-1.3-1003 (5), committed on or after November 1, 1998, may be sentenced to pay a fine in addition to, but not instead of, a sentence for imprisonment or probation pursuant to section 18-1.3-1004.

(III) Notwithstanding anything in this section to the contrary, as to any person sentenced for a crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406, committed on or after July 1, 1985, a person may be sentenced to pay a fine in addition to, but not instead of, a sentence for imprisonment.

(IV) If a person is convicted of assault in the first degree pursuant to section 18-3-202 or assault in the second degree pursuant to section 18-3-203 and the victim is a peace officer or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties, as defined in section 18-1.3-501 (1.5) (b), notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (III) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) and subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b), the court shall sentence the person to the department of corrections. In addition to a term of imprisonment, the court may impose a fine on such person pursuant to subparagraph (III) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1).

(c) Except as otherwise provided by statute, felonies are punishable by imprisonment in any correctional facility under the supervision of the executive director of the department of corrections. Nothing in this section shall limit the authority granted in part 8 of this article to increase sentences for habitual criminals. Nothing in this section shall limit the authority granted in parts 9 and 10 of this article to sentence sex offenders to the department of corrections or to sentence sex offenders to probation for an indeterminate term. Nothing in this section shall limit the authority granted in section 18-1.3-804 for increased sentences for habitual burglary offenders.

(2) (a) A corporation which has been found guilty of a class 2 or class 3 felony shall be subject to imposition of a fine of not less than five thousand dollars nor more than fifty thousand dollars. A corporation which has been found guilty of a class 4, class 5, or class 6 felony shall be subject to imposition of a fine of not less than one thousand dollars nor more than thirty thousand dollars.

(b) A corporation which has been found guilty of a class 2, class 3, class 4, class 5, or class 6 felony, for an act committed on or after July 1, 1985, shall be subject to imposition of a fine which is within the presumptive ranges set forth in subparagraph (III) of paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section.

(3) Every person convicted of a felony, whether defined as such within or outside this code, shall be disqualified from holding any office of honor, trust, or profit under the laws of this state or from practicing as an attorney in any of the courts of this state during the actual time of confinement or commitment to imprisonment or release from actual confinement on conditions of probation. Upon his or her discharge after completion of service of his or her sentence or after service under probation, the right to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit shall be restored, except as provided in section 4 of article XII of the state constitution.

(4) (a) A person who has been convicted of a class 1 felony shall be punished by life imprisonment in the department of corrections unless a proceeding held to determine sentence according to the procedure set forth in section 18-1.3-1201, 18-1.3-1302, or 18-1.4-102, results in a verdict that requires imposition of the death penalty, in which event such person shall be sentenced to death. As to any person sentenced for a class 1 felony, for an act committed on or after July 1, 1985, and before July 1, 1990, life imprisonment shall mean imprisonment without the possibility of parole for forty calendar years. As to any person sentenced for a class 1 felony, for an act committed on or after July 1, 1990, life imprisonment shall mean imprisonment without the possibility of parole.

(b) (I) Notwithstanding the provisions of sub-subparagraph (A) of subparagraph (V) of paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section and notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (4), as to a person who is convicted as an adult of a class 1 felony following direct filing of an information or indictment in the district court pursuant to section 19-2-517, C.R.S., or transfer of proceedings to the district court pursuant to section 19-2-518, C.R.S., the district court judge shall sentence the person to a term of life imprisonment with the possibility of parole after serving a period of forty calendar years. Regardless of whether the state board of parole releases the person on parole, the person shall remain in the legal custody of the department of corrections for the remainder of the person's life and shall not be discharged.

(II) The provisions of this paragraph (b) shall apply to persons sentenced for offenses committed on or after July 1, 2006.

(5) In the event the death penalty as provided for in this section is held to be unconstitutional by the Colorado supreme court or the United States supreme court, a person convicted of a crime punishable by death under the laws of this state shall be punished by life imprisonment. In such circumstance, the court which previously sentenced a person to death shall cause such person to be brought before the court, and the court shall sentence such person to life imprisonment.

(6) In imposing a sentence to incarceration, the court shall impose a definite sentence which is within the presumptive ranges set forth in subsection (1) of this section unless it concludes that extraordinary mitigating or aggravating circumstances are present, are based on evidence in the record of the sentencing hearing and the presentence report, and support a different sentence which better serves the purposes of this code with respect to sentencing, as set forth in section 18-1-102.5. If the court finds such extraordinary mitigating or aggravating circumstances, it may impose a sentence which is lesser or greater than the presumptive range; except that in no case shall the term of sentence be greater than twice the maximum nor less than one-half the minimum term authorized in the presumptive range for the punishment of the offense.

(7) In all cases, except as provided in subsection (8) of this section, in which a sentence which is not within the presumptive range is imposed, the court shall make specific findings on the record of the case, detailing the specific extraordinary circumstances which constitute the reasons for varying from the presumptive sentence.

(8) (a) The presence of any one or more of the following extraordinary aggravating circumstances shall require the court, if it sentences the defendant to incarceration, to sentence the defendant to a term of at least the midpoint in the presumptive range but not more than twice the maximum term authorized in the presumptive range for the punishment of a felony:

(I) The defendant is convicted of a crime of violence under section 18-1.3-406;

(II) The defendant was on parole for another felony at the time of commission of the felony;

(III) The defendant was on probation or was on bond while awaiting sentencing following revocation of probation for another felony at the time of the commission of the felony;

(IV) The defendant was under confinement, in prison, or in any correctional institution as a convicted felon, or an escapee from any correctional institution for another felony at the time of the commission of a felony;

(V) At the time of the commission of the felony, the defendant was on appeal bond following his or her conviction for a previous felony;

(VI) At the time of the commission of a felony, the defendant was on probation for or on bond while awaiting sentencing following revocation of probation for a delinquent act that would have constituted a felony if committed by an adult.

(b) In any case in which one or more of the extraordinary aggravating circumstances provided for in paragraph (a) of this subsection (8) exist, the provisions of subsection (7) of this section shall not apply.

(c) Nothing in this subsection (8) shall preclude the court from considering aggravating circumstances other than those stated in paragraph (a) of this subsection (8) as the basis for sentencing the defendant to a term greater than the presumptive range for the felony.

(d) (I) If the defendant is convicted of the class 2 or the class 3 felony of child abuse under section 18-6-401 (7) (a) (I) or (7) (a) (III), the court shall be required to sentence the defendant to the department of corrections for a term of at least the midpoint in the presumptive range but not more than twice the maximum term authorized in the presumptive range for the punishment of that class felony.

(II) In no case shall any defendant sentenced pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (d) be eligible for suspension of sentence or for probation or deferred prosecution.

(e) (I) If the defendant is convicted of the class 2 felony of sexual assault in the first degree under section 18-3-402 (3), commission of which offense occurs prior to November 1, 1998, the court shall be required to sentence the defendant to a term of at least the midpoint in the presumptive range but not more than twice the maximum term authorized in the presumptive range for the punishment of that class of felony.

(II) In no case shall any defendant sentenced pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (e) be eligible for suspension of sentence or probation.

(III) As a condition of parole under section 17-2-201 (5) (e), C.R.S., a defendant sentenced pursuant to this paragraph (e) shall be required to participate in a program of mental health counseling or receive appropriate treatment to the extent that the state board of parole deems appropriate to effectuate the successful reintegration of the defendant into the community while recognizing the need for public safety.

(e.5) If the defendant is convicted of the class 2 felony of sexual assault under section 18-3-402 (5) or the class 2 felony of sexual assault in the first degree under section 18-3-402 (3) as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, commission of which offense occurs on or after November 1, 1998, the court shall be required to sentence the defendant to the department of corrections for an indeterminate sentence of at least the midpoint in the presumptive range for the punishment of that class of felony up to the defendant's natural life.

(f) The court may consider aggravating circumstances such as serious bodily injury caused to the victim or the use of a weapon in the commission of a crime, notwithstanding the fact that such factors constitute elements of the offense.

(g) If the defendant is convicted of class 4 or class 3 felony vehicular homicide under section 18-3-106 (1) (a) or (1) (b), and while committing vehicular homicide the defendant was in immediate flight from the commission of another felony, the court shall be required to sentence the defendant to the department of corrections for a term of at least the midpoint in the presumptive range but not more than twice the maximum term authorized in the presumptive range for the punishment of the class of felony vehicular homicide of which the defendant is convicted.

(9) The presence of any one or more of the following sentence-enhancing circumstances shall require the court, if it sentences the defendant to incarceration, to sentence the defendant to a term of at least the minimum in the presumptive range but not more than twice the maximum term authorized in the presumptive range for the punishment of a felony:

(a) At the time of the commission of the felony, the defendant was charged with or was on bond for a felony in a previous case and the defendant was convicted of any felony in the previous case;

(a.5) At the time of the commission of the felony, the defendant was charged with or was on bond for a delinquent act that would have constituted a felony if committed by an adult;

(b) At the time of the commission of the felony, the defendant was on bond for having pled guilty to a lesser offense when the original offense charged was a felony;

(c) The defendant was under a deferred judgment and sentence for another felony at the time of the commission of the felony;

(c.5) At the time of the commission of the felony, the defendant was on bond in a juvenile prosecution under title 19, C.R.S., for having pled guilty to a lesser delinquent act when the original delinquent act charged would have constituted a felony if committed by an adult;

(c.7) At the time of the commission of the felony, the defendant was under a deferred judgment and sentence for a delinquent act that would have constituted a felony if committed by an adult;

(d) At the time of the commission of the felony, the defendant was on parole for having been adjudicated a delinquent child for an offense which would constitute a felony if committed by an adult.

(10) (a) The general assembly hereby finds that certain crimes which are listed in paragraph (b) of this subsection (10) present an extraordinary risk of harm to society and therefore, in the interest of public safety, for such crimes which constitute class 3 felonies, the maximum sentence in the presumptive range shall be increased by four years; for such crimes which constitute class 4 felonies, the maximum sentence in the presumptive range shall be increased by two years; for such crimes which constitute class 5 felonies, the maximum sentence in the presumptive range shall be increased by one year; for such crimes which constitute class 6 felonies, the maximum sentence in the presumptive range shall be increased by six months.

(b) Crimes that present an extraordinary risk of harm to society shall include the following:

(I) to (VIII) Repealed.

(IX) Aggravated robbery, as defined in section 18-4-302;

(X) Child abuse, as defined in section 18-6-401;

(XI) Unlawful distribution, manufacturing, dispensing, sale, or possession of a controlled substance with the intent to sell, distribute, manufacture, or dispense, as defined in section 18-18-405;

(XII) Any crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406;

(XIII) Stalking, as described in section 18-9-111 (4), as it existed prior August 11, 2010, or section 18-3-602;

(XIV) Sale or distribution of materials to manufacture controlled substances, as described in section 18-18-412.7; and

(XV) Felony invasion of privacy for sexual gratification, as described in section 18-3-405.6.

(c) Repealed.

(11) When it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court that the ends of justice and the best interest of the public, as well as the defendant, will be best served thereby, the court shall have the power to suspend the imposition or execution of sentence for such period and upon such terms and conditions as it may deem best; except that in no instance shall the court have the power to suspend a sentence to a term of incarceration when the defendant is sentenced pursuant to a sentencing provision that requires incarceration or imprisonment in the department of corrections, community corrections, or jail. In no instance shall a sentence be suspended if the defendant is ineligible for probation pursuant to section 18-1.3-201, except upon an express waiver being made by the sentencing court regarding a particular defendant upon recommendation of the district attorney and approval of such recommendation by an order of the sentencing court pursuant to section 18-1.3-201 (4).

(12) Every sentence entered under this section shall include consideration of restitution as required by part 6 of this article and by article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

(13) (a) The court, if it sentences a defendant who is convicted of any one or more of the offenses specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (13) to incarceration, shall sentence the defendant to a term of at least the midpoint, but not more than twice the maximum, of the presumptive range authorized for the punishment of the offense of which the defendant is convicted if the court makes the following findings on the record:

(I) The victim of the offense was pregnant at the time of commission of the offense; and

(II) The defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the victim of the offense was pregnant.

(III) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2003, p. 2163, § 3, effective July 1, 2003.)

(b) The provisions of this subsection (13) shall apply to the following offenses:

(I) Murder in the second degree, as described in section 18-3-103;

(II) Manslaughter, as described in section 18-3-104;

(III) Criminally negligent homicide, as described in section 18-3-105;

(IV) Vehicular homicide, as described in section 18-3-106;

(V) Assault in the first degree, as described in section 18-3-202;

(VI) Assault in the second degree, as described in section 18-3-203;

(VII) Vehicular assault, as described in section 18-3-205.

(c) Notwithstanding any provision of this subsection (13) to the contrary, for any of the offenses specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (13) that constitute crimes of violence, the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406.

(14) The court may sentence a defendant to the youthful offender system created in section 18-1.3-407 if the defendant is an eligible young adult offender pursuant to section 18-1.3-407.5.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1392, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: (4) amended, p. 15, § 8, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1)(b)(IV), (4), (8)(d)(I), (8)(e.5), (8)(g), (10)(c), and (11) amended, pp. 1425, 1435, 1429, §§ 4, 32, 13, effective April 29; (1)(a)(VI) amended, p. 2679, § 5, effective July 1; (8)(a)(VI), (9)(a.5), (9)(c.5), and (9)(c.7) amended, p. 1431, § 18, effective July 1;

(13)(a)(II) and (13)(a)(III) amended, p. 2163, § 3, effective July 1; (10)(b)(XII) and (10)(b)(XIII) amended and (10)(b)(XIV) added, p. 2387, § 3, effective July 1, 2004. L. 2004: (10)(b)(I) to (10)(b)(VIII) and (10)(c) repealed, p. 633, § 1, effective August 4. L. 2006: (4) amended, p. 1052, § 2, effective May 25. L. 2008: (1)(a)(V)(D) amended, p. 1757, § 6, effective July 1; (1)(a)(III)(A.5) amended, p. 1889, § 54, effective August 5. L. 2009: (14) added, (HB 09-1122), ch. 77, p. 280, § 4, effective October 1. L. 2010: (10)(b)(XIII) amended, (HB 10-1233), ch. 88, p. 296, § 5, effective August 11; (10)(b)(XIII) and (10)(b)(XIV) amended and (10)(b)(XV) added, (SB 10-128), ch. 415, p. 2046, § 5, effective July 1, 2012.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 18-1-105 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) This section was amended in 2002 prior to its relocation on October 1, 2002. For that history, see the source note to § 18-1-105.

(3) Amendments to subsection (10)(b)(XIII) by House Bill 10-1233 and Senate Bill 10-128 were harmonized, effective July 1, 2012.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (4), see section 16 of chapter 1 of the supplement to the Session Laws of Colorado 2002, Third Extraordinary Session. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2003 act amending subsections (10)(b)(XII) and (10)(b)(XIII) and enacting subsection (10)(b)(XIV), see section 1 of chapter 360, Session Laws of Colorado 2003. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2003 act amending subsections (13)(a)(II) and (13)(a)(III), see section 1 of chapter 340, Session Laws of Colorado 2003. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2006 act amending subsection (4), see section 1 of chapter 228, Session Laws of Colorado 2006.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Disbarment for Crime in Colorado", see 10 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 203 (1938). For article, "Criminal Prosecutions under the Colorado Securities Act", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 233 (1976). For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing an Update", see 14 Colo. Law. 2163 (1985). For article, "Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986", which discusses cases relating to the death penalty, see 15 Colo. Law. 1596 (1986). For article, "Sentencing Dilemmas", see 29 Colo. Law. 67 (October 2000). For article, "Criminal Sentencing in Colorado After Blakely v. Washington", see 34 Colo. Law. 85 (January 2005).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-401 is similar to § 18-1-105 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions and former § 39-10-17, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutionality of death penalty. The imposition and carrying out of the death penalty was held to constitute cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the eighth and fourteenth amendments of the U.S. Constitution. Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed.2d 346 (1972).

Subsection (6) is not unconstitutionally vague and does not deprive a defendant of due process and equal protection on the grounds that no standards are set out in the statute to guide the trial court on what are extraordinary, aggravating or mitigating circumstances. People v. Phillips, 652 P.2d 575 (Colo. 1982).

Although the phrase "aggravating or mitigating circumstances" is not defined in the legislative act, that failure does not render the statute unconstitutionally vague. People v. Phillips, 652 P.2d 575 (Colo. 1982).

Subsection (6) is not unconstitutionally vague because it allegedly fails to indicate precise standards for imposition of an enhanced sentence. People v. Wright, 672 P.2d 518 (Colo. 1983).

Due process requirements for enhanced sentence imposed because of defendant's status at time of offense are met if defendant is given reasonable notice that he is subject to enhanced sentencing and the prosecution proves such status by a preponderance of the evidence if such fact is contested. People v. Reed, 723 P.2d 1343 (Colo. 1986); People v. Simmons, 723 P.2d 1350 (Colo. 1986); People v. Anderson, 784 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1989).

Discretionary aggravated range sentence imposed under subsection (6) does not violate due process requirement announced in U.S. supreme court decision, Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 120 S. Ct. 2348, 147 L. Ed.2d 435 (2000), if defendant was exposed to such sentence when charged with the substantive offense. Trial court, therefore, properly denied post-conviction relief as to 32-year maximum aggravated range sentence imposed for sexual assault on child. People v. Salinas, 55 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2002).

Under the mandates of the U.S. supreme court decisions Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 124 S. Ct. 2531, 159 L. Ed.2d 403 (2004), and Apprendi v. New Jersey, a discretionary aggravated range sentence may be imposed only when a jury has determined the aggravating factors or when the defendant has admitted them. The fact that the defendant waived the right to a jury determination of the aggravating factors by pleading guilty to the charged offense is irrelevant where no aggravating factors were charged in the information and the defendant did not stipulate to any. People v. Barton, 121 P.3d 230 (Colo. App. 2004).

Sentence in the aggravated range proper when based upon a prior conviction even after U.S. supreme court decision in Blakely v. Washington. People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006).

A defendant's failure to object to facts in a presentence report does not constitute admission for purposes of Blakely v. Washington unless defendant makes a constitutionally sufficient waiver of his or her right to a jury trial on the facts contained in the report. A sentencing court may not use defendant's admissions to sentence him or her in the aggravated range unless defendant knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently waives his or her sixth amendment right to have a jury find the facts that support the aggravated sentence. People v. Isaacks, 133 P.3d 1190 (Colo. 2006).

Aggravated sentence proper under People v. Isaacks. Defendant's guilty plea to a single count that named two victims constituted a knowing, voluntary, and intelligently waived right to a jury trial on those facts. Aggravated sentence based upon multiple victims receiving serious bodily injuries was constitutional. People v. Watts, 165 P.3d 707 (Colo. App. 2006).

Sentence enhancement statute not violative of procedural due process provided that defendant receives adequate notice that he is subject to enhanced punishment and the prosecution meets its burden of proof concerning defendant's status as a parolee. People v. Henderson, 729 P.2d 1028 (Colo. App. 1986), cert. denied, 752 P.2d 93 (Colo. 1988).

Although this section does not set forth the procedural framework that must be followed when a defendant is charged with violating the conditions of a suspended sentence, minimum due process protections must be afforded to a person facing revocation of such a suspended sentence. These requirements include: (1) Written notice of the claimed violations; (2) disclosure to the defendant of evidence against him or her; (3) a fair opportunity to be heard in person and to present witnesses and documentary evidence; (4) the right to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses, unless there is good cause to deny such a right; (5) a neutral and detached hearing officer or judge; and (6) a written statement by the fact finder as to the evidence relied on and reasons for the revocation. People v. Scura, 72 P.3d 431 (Colo. App. 2003).

Equal protection does not require same procedural safeguards as are contained in crimes of violence statute since cases involving crimes of violence involve more complicated factual situations than the mere determination of defendant's status at the time of the offense. People v. Simmons, 723 P.2d 1350 (Colo. 1986).

No equal protection violation where conviction for child abuse resulting in death under this section is interpreted to preclude a sentence reduction below the mandatory minimum as compared to a reduction or modification of a mandatory crime of violence sentence. People v. Smith, 992 P.2d 635 (Colo. App. 1999).

No equal protection violation where person convicted of class 4 felony theft is punished more severely than a class 4 felony sex offender. Felony classes do not themselves create "classes" for purposes of equal protection analysis; defendant is only "similarly situated" with defendants who commit the same or similar acts. People v. Friesen, 45 P.3d 784 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Walker, 75 P.3d 722 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Fritschler, 87 P.3d 186 (Colo. App. 2003).

No equal protection violation where felony first degree murder carries a greater punishment than aggravated vehicular homicide. These offenses are distinguished by the level of intent, the actus reus (commission or omission), the requirement that the actor operate or drive a motor vehicle for vehicular homicide, and the predicate felonies. People v. Prieto, 124 P.3d 842 (Colo. App. 2005).

This section is not unconstitutional for lack of a provision regarding proof of probationary status by the prosecutor. Such proof is only required to be proven by a preponderance of the evidence if the defendant contests his alleged probationary status. People v. Lacey, 723 P.2d 111 (Colo. 1986); People v. Murphy, 722 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1986).

A sentence in the aggravated range under subsection (6) violates the sixth amendment right to trial by jury, unless the facts found by the trial court to support the sentence, including the ultimate finding that these facts are extraordinary: (1) Are reflected in the jury's verdict; (2) were admitted by the defendant for purposes of sentencing; or (3) involve prior criminality, to the extent permitted by Appendi. People v. Moon, 121 P.3d 218 (Colo. App. 2004).

Mandatory parole provision does not violate the constitutional protection against double jeopardy since the general assembly has mandated a period of parole for all convicted felons, in addition to a sentence to the department of corrections, and therefore the defendant has not been subjected to separate proceedings for the imposition of his sentence. People v. Mayes, 981 P.2d 1106 (Colo. App. 1999); People v. Xiong, 10 P.3d 719 (Colo. App. 2000).

Mandatory period of parole for consecutive sentencing of two or more felony offenses pursuant to subsection (1)(a)(V)(A) not unconstitutionally overbroad, because it does not proscribe any conduct constitutionally protected and it has a rational relationship to a legitimate governmental interest of promoting the rehabilitation and reintegration of defendants while recognizing the need for public safety. People v. Boyd, 23 P.3d 1242 (Colo. App. 2001).

Mandatory parole is part of a sentence imposed by the court. Even though the parole board may administer the parole, that does not mean that the board imposes it; hence there is no separate penalty imposed in a separate proceeding and thus, no violation of double jeopardy. People v. Xiong, 10 P.3d 719 (Colo. App. 2000).

Retrospective application of mandatory parole provisions in subsection (1)(a)(V) not violative of ex post facto clause where defendant had pleaded guilty to underlying offense with stipulation that the offense occurred within a time frame that happened to include time periods both prior and subsequent to the date such provisions were enacted. People v. Flag, 18 P.3d 792 (Colo. App. 2000).

1988 amendment establishing lower mandatory aggravated ranged sentencing applicable to offenses committed on or after July 1, 1988 inapplicable to defendant who committed offenses in April and May of 1988, regardless of fact that the amendment had taken effect prior to the time defendant was sentenced. Defendant was properly sentenced under higher mandatory range in effect on dates offenses were committed. Riley v. People, 828 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1992).

1988 amendment to former subsection (1)(b)(VII) applicable to post conviction sentence reduction proceedings which provided for retroactive application of reduced sentences was applicable only to persons eligible for presumptive range sentencing. Riley v. People, 828 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1992) (decided under law as it existed prior to June 7, 1990 repeal of subsection).

Classification does not create substantive offense. A classification of felony does not in and of itself create a substantive offense; it merely establishes the boundaries within which a court may impose a sentence. People v. Beigel, 646 P.2d 948 (Colo. App. 1982).

Retroactive application. This section is to be given retroactive application because a defendant is entitled to the benefits of amendatory legislation which mitigates penalties for crimes when the relief is sought before finality has attached to the judgment of conviction. Salas v. District Court, 190 Colo. 447, 548 P.2d 605

(1976); People v. Johnson, 638 P.2d 61 (Colo. 1981).

Court should not apply Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 120 S. Ct. 2348, 147 L. Ed.2d 435 (2000), retroactively to convictions that were already final when the U.S. supreme court issued its opinion. A new rule of criminal procedure is not applied retroactively unless it forbids criminal punishment of certain kinds of conduct or is a "watershed" rule. Apprendi does not represent a "watershed" rule, that is, a rule that implicates the fundamental fairness of the trial. People v. Bradbury, 68 P.3d 494 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Hall, 87 P.3d 210 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Shepard, 98 P.3d 905 (Colo. App. 2004); People v. Alexander, 129 P.3d 1051 (Colo. App. 2005).

The U.S. supreme court held in Apprendi that, other than the fact of a prior conviction, any fact that increases the penalty for a crime beyond the prescribed statutory maximum must be submitted to a jury, and proved beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Bradbury, 68 P.3d 494 (Colo. App. 2002).

1979 amendment inapplicable where crime committed before July 1, 1979. Where acts for which defendants were convicted occurred well in advance of July 1, 1979, the effective date of H.B. 1589, it was not error to refuse to sentence under the provisions of that legislation. People v. Lopez, 624 P.2d 1301 (Colo. 1981).

Since the crime for which a defendant was sentenced was committed well before the effective date of either the 1977 or 1979 version of House Bill 1589, he is not entitled to be resentenced under the provisions of those acts. People v. Stewart, 626 P.2d 685 (Colo. 1981).

In resentencing a defendant originally convicted before the 1979 reduction in the sentencing range for class 3 felonies, the trial court may consider the new sentencing range, but is not bound by it. People v. Watkins, 684 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1984).

For sentencing under H.B. 1589, see People v. Montoya, 647 P.2d 1203 (Colo. 1982).

1981 amendments not irreconcilable. The two 1981 amendments, S.B. 304 and H.B. 1156, are not irreconcilable. They can be harmonized by recognizing that nonadversary reviews under former § 18-1-409.5 and C.A.R. 4(d), no longer exist with respect to sentences imposed for the conviction of a felony committed on or after July 1, 1981. People v. Rafferty, 644 P.2d 102 (Colo. App. 1982).

Since § 16-11-802(1)(b) (now § 18-1.3-1302 (1)(b)) has a later effective date, was later enacted, and operates in an ameliorative manner for criminal defendants, it controls and that portion of § 18-1-105(4) (now § 18-1.3-401 (4)) which provides for no possibility of parole for persons sentenced to life imprisonment following conviction for class 1 felony offenses occurring during the period from July 1, 1990, until September 19, 1991, is abrogated by this later enactment. Thus, § 16-11-103(1)(b) (now § 18-1.3-1201 (1)(b)), as amended by House Bill 91S-1001, controls parole eligibility for convictions and sentences to life imprisonment based on class 1 felony offenses occurring on or after September 20, 1991, and § 16-11-802(1)(b) (now § 18-1.3-1302 (1)(b)) controls parole eligibility for class 1 felony offenses occurring during the period from July 1, 1990, until September 19, 1991. People v. District Court, 834 P.2d 236 (Colo. 1992).

Legislative intent of subsection (9)(c) is to encourage careful consideration by the trial judge of all relevant factual matters developed during the course of proceedings prior to selecting an appropriate sentence. People v. Sanchez, 769 P.2d 1064 (Colo. 1989).

When the court misapprehends the sentencing range, the sentence must be vacated and defendant must be re-sentenced within the correct range. Defendant's class 4 felony conspiracy conviction was subject to enhanced sentencing under subsection (8)(a)(III), requiring a sentence between four to 12 years, but the court erred in believing the range was 10 to 32 years. People v. Linares-Guzman, 195 P.3d 1130 (Colo. App. 2008).

Sentencing is a discretionary decision which requires weighing of various factors and striking a fair accommodation between the defendant's need for rehabilitation or corrective treatment and society's interest in safety and deterrence. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980); People v. Reed, 43 P.3d 644 (Colo. 2001).

The discretion implicit in the sentencing decision is not an unrestricted discretion devoid of reason or principle. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Sentencing is discretionary and a judge has wide latitude in arriving at a synthesis which is reflective of the interests of society and the defendant. People v. Hotopp, 632 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1981); People v. Swepston, 822 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1991).

In determining an appropriate sentence, the trial court may conduct a broad inquiry, largely unlimited as to the kinds of information it may consider, and it has wide discretion in determining what sentence is appropriate, and sentences imposed within statutory limits are generally not subject to review. People v. Graham, 678 P.2d 1043 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1216, 104 S. Ct. 2660, 81 L. Ed.2d 366 (1984).

Sentencing involves an exercise in judicial discretion and, accordingly, a sentencing judge has wide latitude in arriving at a final decision. People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980).

Sentencing is by its very nature a discretionary decision, and many factors must be considered in arriving at a decision that protects the rights of society and the defendant. People v. Horne, 657 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1983).

In imposing a sentence, the trial court must weigh many factors, including the nature of the offense and the record of the offender, and must impose a definite sentence within the presumptive range unless it concludes that extraordinary mitigating or aggravating factors are present. People v. Clements, 732 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1986).

No abuse of discretion found. See People v. Sellers, 762 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1988).

Where trial court discussed its reasoning thoroughly and took into account a variety of factors, it did not abuse its discretion in imposing maximum aggravated sentences. People v. Robinson, 874 P.2d 453 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where trial court considered the nature of the offense, the character of the defendant, the public interest in safety and deterrence, and mitigating and aggravating circumstances, and imposed a sentence within the range prescribed by law, based on appropriate considerations and factually supported by the circumstances, there was no abuse of discretion. People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Martinez, 179 P.3d 23 (Colo. App. 2007).

The sentencing court's consideration of defendant's role in the crimes that later led to the murders was not tantamount to punishing him for crimes of which he was acquitted, rather the court properly evaluated the overall circumstances of the crimes of which he was convicted and of the serious risks that attend such crimes. People v. Le, 74 P.3d 431 (Colo. App. 2003).

It is not improper for the sentencing court, on its own volition, to sentence contrary to the district attorney's recommendation, when the court considered aggravating factors and its consideration of mitigating factors was implicit in the court's selection of a sentence to a term in the lower end of the presumptive range. People v. Fell, 832 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1991).

Sentencing decision should reflect rational selection from various sentencing alternatives in a manner consistent with the dominant aims of the sentencing process. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Proper and fair sentence is one that can be reasonably explained. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

The range of punishments available to a trial court is determined by the applicable law as of the date of the offense and the factors to be considered by the court in sentencing are those factors existing on the date of sentencing. People v. Wieghard, 743 P.2d 977 (Colo. App. 1987).

Factors considered in sentencing. Some of the more common factors to be considered in sentencing are: The gravity of the offense in terms of harm to person or property, or in terms of the culpability requirement of the law; the defendant's history of prior criminal conduct; the degree of danger the defendant might present to the community if released forthwith; the likelihood of future criminality in the absence of corrective incarceration or treatment; the prospects for rehabilitation under some less drastic sentencing alternative, such as probation; and the likelihood of depreciating the seriousness of the offense were a less drastic sentencing alternative chosen. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Factors to be considered in imposing sentence include the nature of the offense, the character of the offender, the public interest, and whether the record establishes a clear justification for the sentence imposed. People v. Hotopp, 632 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1981).

The factors which should be considered in sentencing include the nature of the offenses, the prior record of the defendant, his probability of rehabilitation, his age, and the criminal justice goals of punishment, deterrence, and protection of society. People v. Soper, 628 P.2d 604 (Colo. 1981).

Some factors to be considered in sentencing decision include gravity of offense, defendant's societal history, the risk of future criminal conduct, and the potential for effective rehabilitation. People v. Swepston, 822 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in sentencing defendant to the maximum sentence since the sentence was within the presumptive range, was based on appropriate considerations in the record, and was factually supported by the circumstances of the case. People v. Gagnon, 997 P.2d 1278 (Colo. App. 1999).

No abuse of discretion in sentencing defendant in the aggravated range. People v. Heimann, 186 P.3d 77 (Colo. App. 2007).

It was not improper for trial court to consider during sentencing that violent crimes have a greater public impact in small rural communities than in larger urban ones since a sentencing court should always consider the interests of the public involved and this factor was not decisive of the court's decision. People v. Palmer, 888 P.2d 348 (Colo. App. 1994).

Consideration of prior criminal record in sentencing. A defendant's criminal record may be considered by a court as "extraordinary mitigating or aggravating circumstances" as that term is used in subsection (6). People v. Gonzales, 44 Colo. App. 411, 613 P.2d 905 (1980); People v. Cantwell, 636 P.2d 1313 (1981); People v. Romero, 694 P.2d 1256 (Colo. 1985).

The trial court properly considered the defendant's prior criminal history in its determination of extraordinary circumstances. Flower v. People, 658 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1983); People v. Hernandez-Luis, 879 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994).

A defendant's record may be a basis for sentencing beyond the presumptive range. People v. Gonzales, 44 Colo. App. 411, 613 P.2d 905 (1980).

The lack of a prior criminal record is only one consideration in determining whether to impose a maximum sentence. People v. Naranjo, 200 Colo. 1, 612 P.2d 1099 (1980).

Prior convictions are an appropriate consideration in sentencing outside the presumptive range. People v. Ward, 673 P.2d 47 (Colo. App. 1983).

Defendant's prior criminal record is an appropriate factor in sentencing outside presumptive range. People v. Abbott, 690 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1984).

There is no sixth amendment violation when the sentencing court's conclusion that an enhanced sentence is warranted is based solely upon a factual determination of the defendant's prior convictions. People v. Orth, 121 P.3d 256 (Colo. App. 2005).

A prior conviction in violation of a constitutional right of the accused cannot be used to enhance punishment in a subsequent criminal proceeding. Watkins v. People, 655 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1982).

A court may consider the failure of a defendant to comply with a previous sentence even if such sentence may be constitutionally defective. People v. Carabajal, 720 P.2d 991 (Colo. App. 1986).

But, where defendant's previous conviction was under another jurisdiction's youthful offender statute which specified that a youthful offender adjudication was not a judgment of conviction for a crime, such previous conviction could not be considered an aggravating circumstance justifying sentence beyond the presumptive range. People v. Pellien, 701 P.2d 1244 (Colo. App. 1985).

Trial court properly considered serious criminal convictions which occurred between the original sentencing and the resentencing after appeal when the court increased the sentence of the defendant upon remand. People v. Wieghard, 743 P.2d 977 (Colo. App. 1987).

A trial court may properly consider an adult's juvenile record as a factor when imposing a sentence within the presumptive range. People v. Cisneros, 745 P.2d 262 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. McGregor, 757 P.2d 1082 (Colo. App. 1987).

Guilty plea constitutes a conviction within the meaning of subsection (9). Defendant, who had pled guilty to a separate offense and was out on bond, asserted that because he or she had not yet been sentenced for the prior felony at the time the trial court for the latter offense sentenced him or her, he or she was not yet "convicted". Defendant's guilt of a prior felony, not the punishment sentenced or received, is what is relevant for the purpose of defining "conviction” under subsection (9)(a). People v. French, 141 P.3d 856 (Colo. App. 2005), cert. granted in part and denied in part, judgment vacated, and case remanded to the Colorado court of appeals for reconsideration in light of People v. Isaacks, 133 P.3d 1190 (Colo. 2006), and People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006), aff’d, 165 P.3d 836 (Colo. App. 2007).

The maximum and minimum sentences of imprisonment prescribed in subsection (1)(a)(V)(A) were clearly not intended to be sentences exclusively to the custody of the executive director of the department of corrections. The reference in any specific sentencing provision to the ranges authorized by this section, without more, therefore does not prohibit a sentence to a community corrections program. Shipley v. People, 45 P.3d 1277 (Colo. 2002).

Mandatory parole is a direct consequence of a guilty plea, and defendant must be advised of this requirement. However, when the total sentence imposed, including mandatory parole, was less than the potential sentence of which defendant was advised in accepting the plea, the trial court’s failure to advise defendant correctly of the mandatory parole term does not invalidate the guilty plea. People v. Montaine, 7 P.3d 1065 (Colo. App. 1999).

Although the defendant’s sentence to imprisonment and mandatory parole was not inevitable at the time of his pleas and, in fact, could not have been lawfully imposed prior to his subsequent breach of the terms of his deferred sentencing agreement, it was a direct consequence of his plea to burglary and, therefore, the defendant should have been advised of the mandatory parole. People v. Marez, 39 P.3d 1190 (Colo. 2002).

Court may not eliminate one-year parole. While subsection (1)(a)(I) authorizes a trial judge to impose a sentence below the minimum presumptive range, it does not authorize a trial court to eliminate the requirement of one year of parole. People v. McKnight, 628 P.2d 628 (Colo. App. 1981).

A sentencing court may not waive or suspend a period of mandatory parole under subsection (1)(a)(V)(B) and such a parole period is a required part of defendant’s sentence. People v. Calderon, 992 P.2d 1201 (Colo. App. 1999).

The trial court’s failure to enter the mandatory period of parole on the mittimus does not affect the requirement that it be served. The mittimus may be corrected by the sentencing court to reflect the required period of parole. People v. Snare, 7 P.3d 1025 (Colo. App. 1999).

Case remanded for entry of a corrected mittimus to reflect that defendant is subject to a one-year period of mandatory parole. People v. Ramos, 53 P.3d 1178 (Colo. App. 2002).

Court may not impose parole as part of sentence under subsection (1)(a)(II). Sentencing court exceeded its jurisdiction by imposing parole as part of the sentence for an offense committed after July 1, 1984, and before July 1, 1985. Qureshi v. District Court, 727 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1986); People v. McGregor, 757 P.2d 1082 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Swepton, 822 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1991).

No conflict between this section and § 18-18-405. In § 18-18-405, the general assembly defined the elements of the crime of possession with intent to distribute and incorporated the presumptive range found in subsection (1)(a) of this section. Section 18-18-405 does not preclude the finding that an offense is an extraordinary risk crime and does not preclude the application of subsection (10) of this section to increase the presumptive range found in subsection (1)(a). People v. Hinojos-Mendoza, 140 P.3d 30 (Colo. App. 2005), aff’d in part and rev’d in part on other grounds, 169 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2007).

The provisions of § 17-2-201 (5)(a) and subsection (1)(a)(V)(C) of this section are in conflict. Section 17-2-201 (5)(a) is a specific provision related to the parole of sex offenders while subsection (1)(a)(V)(C) of this section is the general sentencing statute for all felonies. As such, applying the statutory construction rule that the specific provision prevails over the general provision, § 17-2-201 (5)(a) shall be given effect for all sex offender parole for crimes committed before July 1, 1996. Martin v. People, 27 P.3d 846 (Colo. 2001); People v. Pauley, 42 P.3d 57 (Colo. App. 2001).

Section 17-2-201(5)(a.5) is a specific provision related to the parole of sex offenders while subsection (1)(a)(V) of this section is the general sentencing statute for all felonies. As such, applying the statutory construction rule that the specific provision prevails over the general provision, § 17-2-201 (5)(a.5) shall be given effect for all sex offender parole for crimes committed between July 1, 1996, and July 1, 1998. People v. Cooper, 27 P.3d 348 (Colo. 2001).

Sex offenders convicted of offenses occurring between July 1, 1993, and July 1, 1998, are subject to discretionary parole pursuant to § 17-2-201 (5)(a), and not mandatory parole pursuant to subsection (1)(a)(V)(C) of this section. People v. Koehler, 30 P.3d 694 (Colo. App. 2000).

Habitual offenders are subject to a period of discretionary parole rather than a period of statutory mandatory parole. The provisions of § 17-2-201 (5)(a) and § 17-2-213 irreconcilably conflict with the provisions of § 17-22.5-403 (7) and subsection (1)(a)(V). Thus, the specific provision of § 17-2-201 (5)(a) and § 17-2-213 prevail over the general provisions of § 17-22.5-403 (7) and subsection (1)(a)(V). People v. Falls, 58 P.3d 1140 (Colo. App. 2002).

While the parole period in subsection (1)(a)(V)(A) is mandatory, the minimum and maximum sentences are “presumptive ranges.” Bullard v. Dept. of Corr., 949 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1997).

Felony sex offenders who committed crimes between July 1, 1996, and November 1, 1998, and who were sentenced to a term of imprisonment were subject to discretionary parole, not mandatory parole. People v. Jones, 992 P.2d 710 (Colo. App. 1999).

A sentencing court may not waive or suspend a period of mandatory parole under subsection (1)(a)(V)(A) and thus the two-year period of mandatory parole was a required part of defendant's original sentence. People v. Barth, 981 P.2d 1102 (Colo. App. 1999); People v. Espinoza, 985 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1999).

The period of mandatory parole that attaches by operation of subsection (1)(a)(V) is an incidental and distinct element of the defendant's sentence, separate from the term of incarceration imposed by the trial court. People v. Johnson, 13 P.3d 309 (Colo. 2000).

While an offender subject to discretionary parole will never be confined for a period greater than the original sentence imposed, an offender subject to mandatory parole faces a sentence to prison, a period of parole, and possibly another period of confinement not necessarily limited to the original term of incarceration imposed. People v. Hall, 87 P.3d 210 (Colo. App. 2003).

A period of confinement attributable to parole revocation was not a “period of mandatory parole”. When a person is reincarcerated on a parole revocation, he is no longer serving his original sentence. Therefore, when a person is sentenced for the crime of escape during a period of mandatory parole for another offense, ordering such a sentence to run consecutive with the period of incarceration for the parole revocation did not violate sub-subparagraph (1)(a)(V)(E). People v. Luther, 58 P.3d 1013 (Colo. 2002).

Once paroled, a mandatory parolee has discharged his prison sentence as a matter of law. However, the mandatory parole period is a component of an offender's sentence. People v. Norton, 49 P.3d 344 (Colo. App. 2001), rev'd on other grounds, 63 P.3d 339 (Colo. 2003).

A discharge of the sentence to imprisonment under subsection (1)(a)(V)(D) is not equivalent to the satisfaction and discharge of mandatory parole. People v. Taylor, 74 P.3d 396 (Colo. App. 2002).

The maximum sentences in the presumptive ranges set out in this section do not establish maximum periods of probation to which a defendant may be sentenced under part 2 of article 11 of title 16. People v. Flenniken, 749 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1988).

The minimum sentences established under this section do not establish the minimum period of probation to which a defendant may be sentenced under § 16-11-202. The length of probation is at the sentencing judge's discretion. People v. Herr, 868 P.2d 1121 (Colo. App. 1993).

District court possessed jurisdiction to sentence defendant to a term of probation which did not exceed the maximum term of imprisonment in the aggravated range for the crime committed; the term of probation was not limited to the presumptive range for the crime committed. Hunter v. People, 757 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1988).

When charges against defendant are not supported by identical evidence, trial court has discretion in imposing either consecutive or concurrent sentences. People v. Corbett, 713 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1985).

No automatic conversion of a death sentence to a life sentence when death penalty statute is held unconstitutional. People v. Corbett, 713 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1985).

This section did not put defendants on notice that death was a possible penalty for first degree murder, where death penalty statute is found unconstitutional, this section gives notice that maximum penalty is life imprisonment. Retroactive application of new death penalty statute would violate ex post facto laws. People v. Aguayo, 840 P.2d 336 (Colo. 1992).

Legislatively prescribed parameters on sentencing may not be circumvented by suspending part of the sentence. People v. Hinchman, 196 Colo. 526, 589 P.2d 917 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 941, 99 S. Ct. 2883, 61 L. Ed.2d 311 (1979); People v. White, 679 P.2d 602 (Colo. 1984).

Effect of conviction for felony. By subsection (2)(now subsection (3)), the consequences resulting from a conviction of a felony are made much more serious than those arising from a conviction of a misdemeanor. Brooks v. People, 14 Colo. 413, 24 P. 553 (1890).

This section declares that a person convicted of a felony shall also suffer an additional penalty therefor, namely, that he be disqualified from holding any office of honor, trust, or profit under the laws of this state, and that he be also disqualified from practicing as an attorney in any of our state courts. This latter disqualification constitutes a part of the total penalty prescribed by the general assembly for anyone convicted of a felony. People v. Buckles, 167 Colo. 64, 453 P.2d 404 (1968).

Section consistent with separation of powers. The statute disqualifying a convicted felon of holding an office of trust or practicing as an attorney in nowise interferes with the exclusive right of the supreme court to determine the rules and regulations which shall govern those seeking admission to our bar. Nor does the statute impinge in any real sense the judicial right to discipline those licensed to practice law. Rather, this is an effort by the general assembly under its police power to bar convicted felons from practicing law in the courts. The general assembly has the power to do so, and this section does not violate the separation of powers doctrine. People v. Buckles, 167 Colo. 64, 453 P.2d 404 (1968).

For disqualification from practice of law for conviction of felony, see People ex rel. Colo. Bar Ass'n v. Bryce, 36 Colo. 125, 84 P. 816 (1906); People v. Warren, 91 Colo. 99, 12 P.2d 348 (1932); People ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Brayton, 100 Colo. 92, 65 P.2d 1438 (1937).

For conviction of felony outside Colorado, see People ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Laska, 101 Colo. 221, 72 P.2d 693 (1937).

Relief from a sentence validly imposed may not be obtained through the judiciary after final conviction. People v. Rupert, 185 Colo. 288, 523 P.2d 1406 (1974).

Court order held within power of court. Court order authorizing a sentence to run concurrently with another sentence, to be served at an out-of-state institution, was within the power and jurisdiction of the sentencing court. People v. Lewis, 193 Colo. 203, 564 P.2d 111 (1977).

Sentence may be imposed to run consecutively to sentence already imposed. A sentencing court has discretion to impose a sentence to be served concurrently with or consecutively to a sentence already imposed upon a defendant. People v. Flower, 644 P.2d 64 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 658 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1983); People v. Martinez, 179 P.3d 23 (Colo. App. 2007).

Multiple sentences may be imposed to run as one continuous sentence with a single period of mandatory parole where defendant is sentenced under subsection (1)(a)(V)(E), and this section is read together with § 17-22.5-101. People v. Starcher, 107 P.3d 1127 (Colo. App. 2004).

A trial court may not require a sentence otherwise properly imposed to be served consecutively to some other sentence not yet imposed in another pending case. People v. Flower, 644 P.2d 64 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 658 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1983).

Termination of a first sentence has no effect on a second sentence, and first court cannot modify sentence of second, where sentences are concurrent. Bullard v. Dept. of Corr., 949 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1997).

When offender's mandatory parole is revoked, the offender is no longer serving parole, but rather incarceration, therefore imposing a consecutive sentence plus another period or mandatory parole does not violate subsection (1)(a)(V)(E). The mandatory parole from the first conviction is extinguished so there are no longer two sentences of mandatory parole. People v. Perea, 74 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2002).

Plain language of subsection (1)(a)(V)(E) requires a defendant sentenced to consecutive felony offenses to serve the period of mandatory parole for the highest class felony; the order that the defendant serves the consecutive sentences is irrelevant to the determination of the period of mandatory parole. People v. Boyd, 23 P.3d 1242 (Colo. App. 2001).

Credit required for presentence confinement. A sentencing judge is constitutionally required to give an indigent defendant credit for time served in presentence confinement, even where the total of the presentence confinement and the sentence imposed after trial is less than the maximum sentence allowed for the offense. Godbold v. Wilson, 518 F. Supp. 1265 (D. Colo. 1981).

However, trial court's consideration of the effect of presentence confinement credit on defendant's actual incarceration time does not constitute an infringement on defendant's constitutional rights to due process and fundamental fairness. People v. Reed, 43 P.3d 644 (Colo. 2001).

Applicability of requirement of specific findings. The requirement to have specific findings on the record of the case in justification of a sentence outside the presumptive range is applicable to all sentences which do not come under the exceptions listed in subsection (9). People v. Rafferty, 644 P.2d 102 (Colo. App. 1982).

Trial court has obligation under subsection (7) to make specific findings when the sentence-enhancing factors contained in subsection (9.5) are present. People v. Blackmon, 20 P.3d 1215 (Colo. App. 2000).

Trial court did not erroneously apply the general sentence enhancer in subsection (8)(a)(IV) of this section to defendant's assault conviction under § 18-3-203 (1)(f.5). Application of the sentence enhancement provisions of this section did not have the effect of raising the class of felony for which defendant was convicted. Plus, the elemental statute under which defendant was charged did not contain specific sentencing requirements that would have superseded the provisions of the sentencing statute. People v. Wylie, 260 P.3d 57 (Colo. App. 2010).

"Prior criminal conduct", as used in this section, does not require proof of a prior criminal conviction, but may consist of a record of juvenile offenses or other criminal conduct which has not been the subject of prior prosecution. People v. McGregor, 757 P.2d 1082 (Colo. App. 1987).

Subsection (1)(b)(I) does not limit consideration of "criminal conduct" to felony convictions. People v. McGregor, 757 P.2d 1082 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Hernandez-Luis, 879 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining defendant's sentence by relying on facts from another case before the same court in which defendant was acquitted of first and second degree murder. A trial court may consider a wide range of evidence in determining a defendant's sentence, including facts relating to charges of which the defendant has been acquitted. People v. Beatty, 80 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2003).

Where record contains no indication of prior criminal conduct by defendant, trial court improperly predicted potential for future criminality of defendant. People v. Garciadealba, 736 P.2d 1240 (Colo. App. 1986).

Sentence must be supported by reasons in record. When the maximum or near-maximum sentence is imposed, it must be supported by sound reasons in the record. People v. Naranjo, 200 Colo. 1, 612 P.2d 1099 (1980).

In felony convictions involving the imposition of a sentence to a correctional facility, the sentencing judge must state on the record the basic reasons for the imposition of sentence. The statement need not be lengthy, but should include the primary factual considerations bearing on the judge's sentencing decision. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

Where a sentence is imposed for an extended term, the record must clearly justify the action of the sentencing judge. People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980); People v. Tijerina, 632 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1981).

There must be sufficient facts in the record to support the trial court's final decision. People v. Walters, 632 P.2d 566 (Colo. 1981).

When sentence is in presumptive range, court need only set forth the basic reasons and primary factual considerations bearing on the court's sentencing decision. People v. Hughes, 946 P.2d 509 (Colo. App. 1997).

The trial court is required to state on the record the basic reasons for imposing a sentence in a particular case. There is no ritualistic format for placing in the record the trial court's justification of the imposed sentence; however, appellate review of the propriety of a sentence outside the presumptive range requires sufficient findings by the trial court to demonstrate a threshold consideration of the factors set forth in subsection (1)(b), supplemented by sufficient findings pursuant to subsection (6). People v. Piro, 671 P.2d 1341 (Colo. App. 1983).

When a court imposes an aggravated sentence that is not based on a factor set forth in subsection (9)(a), the court must make specific findings, supported by evidence in the record of the sentencing hearing or the presentence report, detailing the extraordinary aggravating factors present. People v. O'Dell, 53 P.3d 655 (Colo. App. 2001).

When a sentence outside the presumptive range is imposed, the court is required to place on the record its findings as to the aggravating or mitigating circumstances that justify variation from the presumptive range. People v. Vela, 716 P.2d 150 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Hernandez-Luis, 879 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994).

However, it is not necessary for the sentencing court to refer explicitly to each of the factors. To the extent that People v. Piro (671 P.2d 1341) may suggest otherwise, it is disapproved. People v. Walker, 724 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1986); People v. Powell, 748 P.2d 1355 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Sudduth, 991 P.2d 315 (Colo. 1999); People v. Bradbury, 68 P.3d 494 (Colo. App. 2002).

A plea agreement that does not constrain the sentencing court's discretion cannot be construed to limit the possible sentence to the presumptive range. People v. Moriarity, 8 P.3d 566 (Colo. App. 2000).

The court's statutory authority to sentence a defendant to the department of corrections does not expressly include the authority to dictate the conditions of confinement. The management, supervision, and control of department facilities are exclusively vested in its director. People v. Harris, 934 P.2d 882 (Colo. App. 1997).

A trial court may impose a sentence outside the applicable presumptive range only if extraordinary aggravating and mitigating circumstances are present based on evidence in the record of the sentencing hearing and the presentence report. People v. Walker, 724 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1986); People v. Hernandez-Luis, 879 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994); People v. O'Dell, 53 P.3d 655 (Colo. App. 2001).

Subsection (5) conflicts with the provisions of § 18-1.4-102 (8) and (9). Subsection (5) of this section requires the court to impose a life sentence on a defendant sentenced to death under an unconstitutional death penalty scheme. In contrast, § 18-1.4-102 (8) and (9) allow the supreme court to review the death sentence or remand for a new sentencing hearing. Subsection (5) is a mandatory provision and therefore it applies over the discretionary provision. Woldt v. People, 64 P.3d 256 (Colo. 2003).

Subsection (6), properly applied, is constitutional in light of Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), and Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296 (2004). A constitutional aggravated sentence based on subsection (6) must rely on one of four kinds of facts: (1) Facts found by a jury beyond a reasonable doubt; (2) facts admitted by the defendant; (3) facts found by the judge after the defendant stipulates to judicial fact-finding for sentencing purposes; (4) facts regarding prior convictions. The first three are "Blakely-compliant" facts, and the fourth is a "Blakely-exempt" fact. Defendant's aggravated sentence was based in part on a prior conviction; therefore, the sentence was constitutional. Lopez v. People, 113 P.3d 713 (Colo. 2005); People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006); People v. Smith, 183 P.3d 726 (Colo. App. 2008).

A conviction for an offense that occurs after the offense that the court is applying aggravated sentencing to may be a “prior conviction” for “Blakely-exempt” purposes if the conviction is entered before the sentencing on the aggravated sentence offense. Lopez v. People, 113 P.3d 713 (Colo. 2005); People v. Smith, 183 P.3d 726 (Colo. App. 2008).

All convictions obtained in accordance with the sixth and fourteenth amendments of the federal constitution fall within the prior-conviction exception to Apprendi and Blakely. People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006).

The exception extends beyond the fact of conviction to facts regarding prior convictions. People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006).

A defendant’s prior-conviction-related probation or supervision falls within the exception. The prior-conviction exception extends to facts regarding prior convictions that are contained in conclusive judicial records. Because a defendant’s sentence to probation or supervision can be found in the judicial record, a trial court may properly consider this fact without violating the defendant’s Blakely rights. People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006).

A single “Blakely-compliant” fact or “Blakely-exempt” fact is sufficient to support an aggravated sentence. Lopez v. People, 113 P.3d 713 (Colo. 2005); DeHerrera v. People, 122 P.3d 992 (Colo. 2005); People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006).

The sentence is constitutional even if the court relies on facts that satisfy Blakely and facts that violate Blakely. Lopez v. People, 113 P.3d 713 (Colo. 2005); DeHerrera v. People, 122 P.3d 992 (Colo. 2005).

Court erred in aggravating the kidnapping sentence based upon the jury’s finding that defendant used a deadly weapon during the sexual assault. Because the jury did not specifically find that defendant used the weapon during the kidnapping, the weapon’s use was neither a “Blakely-compliant” nor a “Blakely-exempt” fact. People v. Glasser, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

Prior conviction exception includes prior misdemeanor convictions. Reliance on defendant’s prior misdemeanor convictions to enhance defendant’s sentence does not violate defendant’s constitutional rights under Apprendi v. New Jersey and Blakely v. Washington. People v. Martinez, 128 P.3d 291 (Colo. App. 2005).

Prior conviction exception includes prior juvenile adjudications. Under Apprendi and Blakely, a sentencing court may determine facts regarding juvenile adjudications and use them as a basis to impose an aggravated range sentence despite the lack of a right to a jury trial in delinquency proceedings. People v. Mazzoni, 165 P.3d 719 (Colo. App. 2006).

Extraordinary aggravating circumstances in subsection (6) are the normal circumstances a trial court considers in imposing a sentence, including the character and history of the defendant and the particular circumstances of the offense, which become “extraordinary” because of their quantity or quality. They are not specified facts or considerations that, if found, mandate an increased penalty range or class of the offense. People v. Allen, 78 P.3d 751 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Trujillo, 75 P.3d 1133 (Colo. App. 2003).

Sentence of twice the maximum term authorized in the presumptive range not abuse of court’s discretion pursuant to subsection (6) where trial court identified a number of extraordinary circumstances beyond those which constituted elements of the offense with which defendant was charged. People v. Jones, 851 P.2d 247 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Allen, 78 P.3d 751 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Kitsmiller, 74 P.3d 376 (Colo. App. 2002).

Sentence found excessive. Defendant’s sentence of a minimum of 32 years exceeded what is authorized by subsection (6), since the minimum sentence is greater than twice the 12-year presumptive maximum for a class 3 felony. People v. Clark, 214 P.3d 531 (Colo. App. 2009), aff’d on other grounds, 232 P.3d 1287 (Colo. 2010).

To impose a sentence beyond the presumptive range, the court must make a specific finding on the record that the Blakely-compliant or Blakely-exempt fact is extraordinarily aggravating. Although a court may rely on facts that are not Blakely-compliant or Blakely-exempt to further justify its imposition of an aggravated sentence, it may do so only if it has found a Blakely-compliant or Blakely-exempt fact to be extraordinarily aggravating. People v. Fiske, 194 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2008).

The determination whether Blakely-compliant or Blakely-exempt facts are extraordinarily aggravating circumstances remains within the discretion of the trial court. People v. Fiske, 194 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2008).

A sentence based on extraordinary aggravating factors, subsection (6), does not require an Apprendi jury finding. The sentence was based on unenumerated and unspecified factors frequently considered in sentencing decisions. Those are not the types of factors considered in Apprendi and its progeny. People v. Rivera, 62 P.3d 1056 (Colo. App. 2002).

Judicial finding of extraordinary aggravating circumstances not unlawful under Apprendi. People v. Lopez, 97 P.3d 223 (Colo. App. 2004).

Particularly where sentence involves restrictive form of deprivation. Requirement that sentencing judge state on the record the basic reasons for imposing a sentence is particularly essential in those cases where the sentence involves a very restrictive form of deprivation, such as a term of confinement to a correctional facility. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

If plea agreement does not acknowledge presence of aggravating factors, Apprendi is applicable, and no sentence beyond the presumptive range may be imposed unless the facts relied upon to aggravate the sentence have been submitted to and determined by a jury. People v. Misenhelter, 121 P.3d 230 (Colo. App. 2004).

While defendant admitted at providency hearing and in written plea agreement that prior misdemeanor conviction constituted a Blakely-exempt fact that widened the sentencing range and that the court could consider to impose an aggravated sentence, defendant did not admit that the prior misdemeanor was an extraordinary aggravating fact. Because the court imposed a sentence beyond the presumptive range without determining whether the sole Blakely-exempt fact was an extraordinarily aggravating fact that supported an aggravated sentence, the sentence was vacated and the case remanded for resentencing. People v. Fiske, 194 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2008).

Defendant's right to a jury determination of aggravating factors is not waived by pleading guilty to the charged offense. A guilty plea cannot be interpreted as a waiver of the right to have a jury determine factors exposing a defendant to greater punishment than otherwise authorized by the sentencing statute. A sentence beyond the relevant statutory maximum may be imposed only if a jury has determined the aggravating factors or the defendant has admitted them. People v. Solis-Martinez, 121 P.3d 215 (Colo. App. 2004).

Colorado law does not contemplate an increase in the statutory maximum sentence to which a defendant has subjected himself by pleading guilty, based on subsequent jury findings, which are the functional equivalent of elements of a greater offense than the one to which he pled. People v. Lopez, 148 P.3d 121 (Colo. 2006).

Allowing consideration of subsequent jury findings to increase a defendant's statutory maximum sentence would violate the requirement of Crim. P. 11 that the defendant understand the elements of the offense to which he pleads and the effects of his plea before his plea can be accepted. People v. Lopez, 148 P.3d 121 (Colo. 2006).

Defendant has no constitutional right to a jury trial to determine whether or not he or she has a prior conviction. That is an inquiry and finding the trial judge is entitled to make.

People v. French, 141 P.3d 856 (Colo. App. 2005), cert. granted in part and denied in part, judgment vacated, and case remanded to the Colorado court of appeals for reconsideration in light of People v. Isaacks, 133 P.3d 1190 (Colo. 2006), and People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006), aff'd, 165 P.3d 836 (Colo. App. 2007).

The statutory maximum for purposes of applying Apprendi and Blakely is the maximum in the presumptive range. People v. Moon, 121 P.3d 218 (Colo. App. 2004).

If the court resentences an offender to prison after rejection by community corrections, it is not a new sentence (requiring new findings for a sentence outside the presumptive range) unless the offender would suffer some substantial procedural prejudice. The court found no prejudice because the length of the original sentence was not changed and the offender received full credit for time served in community corrections. People v. Kitsmiller, 74 P.3d 376 (Colo. App. 2002).

Failure to state reasons creates obstacle to appellate review. The failure of a sentencing judge to state on the record the basic reasons for the selection of a particular sentence creates a burdensome obstacle to effective and meaningful appellate review of sentences. People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980).

When the defendant stipulates to a sentence in the aggravated range as part of a plea agreement, the defendant also stipulates that sufficient facts exist to warrant an aggravated sentence, thus the trial court must not make additional findings on the record to comply with subsection (7). People v. Shepard, 98 P.3d 905 (Colo. App. 2004).

Trial court was not required to make specific findings detailing its reasons for varying from the presumptive range. People v. Roy, 948 P.2d 99 (Colo. App. 1977).

Trial court not required to discuss each factor enumerated in sentencing statute. People v. Bustamante, 694 P.2d 879 (Colo. App. 1984).

When written findings of specific extraordinary circumstances not necessary at sentencing. The fact that the court did not enter written findings of the specific extraordinary circumstances justifying a sentence beyond the presumptive stage until a week after the sentencing did not invalidate the sentence, where the judge had stated the reasons for the sentence orally at the time it was imposed. People v. Cantwell, 636 P.2d 1313 (Colo. App. 1981).

The decision of the trial court to sentence consecutively for separate offenses is discretionary and, in general, courts are free to impose concurrent or consecutive sentences as the situation warrants. People v. Wieghard, 743 P.2d 977 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Williams, 33 P.3d 1187 (Colo. App. 2001).

And in determining the appropriateness of the sentence, the trial court relies on the sentencing factors set forth in § 18-1-102.5. People v. King, 765 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd, 785 P.2d 596 (Colo 1990).

No abuse of discretion in the sentence imposed under subsection (7) where trial court sufficiently separated its findings of extraordinary aggravating circumstances in the two cases and gave due consideration to all relevant sentencing factors. People v. Lopez, 97 P.3d 223 (Colo. App. 2004).

The aggravator for committing a felony while on probation applies to a defendant on probation in another state. People v. Fogle, 116 P.3d 1227 (Colo. App. 2004).

When defendant admits the fact that is the basis for the enhanced sentence, the defendant's sentence was not illegal under Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000). Even though it was defense counsel that represented the defendant was on probation during the commission of the felony, the defendant did not object to this statement. Thus, the statement was an admission of the defendant. People v. Fogle, 116 P.3d 1227 (Colo. App. 2004).

Court may aggravate sentence pursuant to subsection (8)(a)(III) based on the judge-found fact that defendant was on probation at the time of the crime. People v. Roberts, 179 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2007).

If a fact admitted by a defendant is a Blakely-compliant factor, it is sufficient to support imposition of an aggravated sentence. People v. Blinderman, 148 P.3d 232 (Colo. App. 2006).

Imposition of an aggravated range sentence pursuant to subsection (8)(a)(II) satisfies Blakely where defense counsel admitted that defendant had been on parole at the time of the offense and defendant did not object to counsel's statement or dispute the truth of it. People v. Scott, 140 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2005); People v. Blinderman, 148 P.3d 232 (Colo. App. 2006).

Where controlled substance offenses were reclassified as class 2 felonies, it was proper for court to apply sentence enhancers of subsection (8)(a)(II). People v. Robinson, 187 P.3d 1166 (Colo. App. 2008).

The general sentence aggravator in subsection (8)(a)(IV) of this section does not apply to the crime of second degree assault on a correctional officer. Section 18-3-203 (1)(f) defines second degree assault on a correctional officer and contains its own aggravator. Therefore, the specific aggravator applies, not the general one. People v. Willcoxon, 80 P.3d 817 (Colo. App. 2004).

Nothing in the language of subsection (8)(g) of this section or § 18-3-106 suggests a legislative intent to preempt the felony murder statute. People v. Prieto, 124 P.3d 842 (Colo. App. 2005).

An aggravated range sentence has both a qualitative and a quantitative dimension. The sentencing court makes a qualitative decision to depart from the presumptive range, which is subject to sixth amendment scrutiny under Blakely. The court then makes a quantitative decision of where to sentence within the aggravated range, which is not subject to further sixth amendment challenge. These two dimensions make exclusion of a constitutionally impermissible factor articulated in support of the sentence especially difficult, unless the record clearly shows that this factor was considered only to determine placement within the aggravated range. People v. Moon, 121 P.3d 218 (Colo. App. 2004).

A sentence within the aggravated range is mandated whenever any of the extraordinary aggravating circumstances specifically enumerated in subsection (9)(a) are present. People v. District Court, 713 P.2d 918 (Colo. 1986); People v. Leonard, 755 P.2d 447 (Colo. 1988); People v. Chavez, 764 P.2d 356 (Colo. 1988); People v. French, 141 P.3d 856 (Colo. App. 2005), cert. granted in part and denied in part, judgment vacated, and case remanded to the Colorado court of appeals for reconsideration in light of People v. Isaacks, 133 P.3d 1190 (Colo. 2006), and People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006), aff'd, 165 P.3d 836 (Colo. App. 2007).

Prior felony conviction that was the event that triggered enhanced sentencing falls within the prior conviction exception to the Apprendi rule. People v. Ramirez, 140 P.3d 169 (Colo. App. 2005).

Where defendant committed second degree kidnapping while on bond for a felony charge for which he was subsequently convicted by the time of the sentencing hearing for kidnapping, trial court was obligated to impose sentence pursuant to subsection (9)(a). People v. Ramirez, 140 P.3d 169 (Colo. App. 2005).

Extraordinary circumstances required in findings. Sentence vacated and case remanded for sentencing where trial court failed to make specific findings on the record detailing extraordinary circumstances to vary from the presumptive range. People v. Leonard, 872 P.2d 1325 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Blankenship, 30 P.3d 698 (Colo. App. 2000).

Mandatory sentencing of defendant on parole status under subsection (9) is a definite, immediate, and automatic consequence of plea which defendant must understand. People v. Chippewa, 713 P.2d 1311 (Colo. App. 1985).

Guilty plea constitutes a conviction within the meaning of subsection (9). Defendant, who had pled guilty to a separate offense and was out on bond, asserted that because he or she had not yet been sentenced for the prior felony at the time the trial court for the latter offense sentenced him or her, he or she was not yet “convicted”. Defendant’s guilt of a prior felony, not the punishment sentenced or received, is what is relevant for the purpose of defining “conviction” under subsection (9)(a). People v. French, 141 P.3d 856 (Colo. App. 2005), cert. granted in part and denied in part, judgment vacated, and case remanded to the Colorado court of appeals for reconsideration in light of People v. Isaacks, 133 P.3d 1190 (Colo. 2006), and People v. Huber, 139 P.3d 628 (Colo. 2006), aff’d, 165 P.3d 836 (Colo. App. 2007).

Escape from confinement while on probation required sentencing in aggravated range. People v. Herman, 767 P.2d 752 (Colo. App. 1988).

Due process requires that defendant be given reasonable notice that he is subject to enhanced sentencing under subsection (9)(a)(III) of this section. People v. Lacey, 723 P.2d 111 (Colo. 1986); People v. Murphy, 722 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1986).

Because defendant was convicted of a per se crime of violence under § 16-11-309, the trial court was required to sentence him under the enhanced sentence provisions of subsection (9) of this section. The prosecution was not required to charge a crime of violence separately and the jury was not required to determine its existence in order for the trial court to sentence defendant under the provisions of subsections (9) and (9.7). People v. Lee, 989 P.2d 777 (Colo. App. 1999); People v. Hoang, 13 P.3d 819 (Colo. App. 2000). But see People v. Banks, 9 P.3d 1125 (Colo. 2000).

Subsection (9)(a)(III) does not violate equal protection for lack of express provisions concerning the rights to reasonable notice and to have the prosecution prove the asserted probationary status where those rights exist independently of the statute. People v. Lacey, 723 P.2d 111 (Colo. 1986); People v. Murphy, 722 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1986); People v. Herman, 767 P.2d 752 (Colo. App. 1988).

Subsection (9)(a)(IV) does not violate defendant’s equal protection rights since there is a reasonable basis for the classification. People v. Anderson, 784 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1989).

Subsection (9)(a)(V) did not apply to the crime of escape and attempted escape where the general assembly had provided for enhanced punishment for the crimes of escape elsewhere, specifically in §§ 18-8-208.1 and 18-8-209, and where the general assembly did not amend this section to make it specifically applicable to escape crimes. People v. Andrews, 871 P.2d 1199 (Colo. 1994).

The prohibition against the suspension of a sentence for felony child abuse contained in subsection (9)(d)(II) is an exception to the general rule for suspending sentences in subsection (10). Subsection (9)(d)(II) is the more specific statute and subsection (10) is a statute of broader scope. People v. Smith, 932 P.2d 830 (Colo. App. 1996).

Subsection (9)(a)(III) is a sentence enhancement statute to which procedural safeguards attach. People v. Lacey, 723 P.2d 111 (Colo. 1986).

Subsection (9)(a)(III) applies to persons on probation for felonies committed outside of Colorado. This provision was intended to subject all felony probationers sentenced to incarceration to a sentence in the aggravated range, regardless of the jurisdiction in which the felony conviction was entered and, if deemed a felony in another state, irrespective of the offense classification in this state. People v. Sellers, 762 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1988).

The language of subsection (9)(a)(III) is not ambiguous. The felony for which a defendant is on probation need not be the same felony offense for which he or she is being sentenced. People v. Moltrier, 983 P.2d 810 (Colo. App. 1999).

The provisions of subsection (9)(a)(III) that increase the minimum sentence to a point within the original presumptive range do not implicate Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 120 S. Ct. 2348, 147 L. Ed.2d 435 (2000). Thus the allegation of whether defendant was on probation at the time of the offenses need not be submitted to the jury and proved beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Gardner, 55 P.3d 231 (Colo. App. 2002).

Subsection (9)(a)(V) does not require the imposition of a sentence beyond the presumptive range upon conviction of the crime of escape under § 18-8-208. People v. Jackson, 703 P.2d 618 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Russell, 703 P.2d 620 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Brewer, 720 P.2d 583 (Colo. App. 1985).

Nor does subsection (9)(a)(V) require the imposition of such a sentence upon conviction of the crime of attempted escape under § 18-8-208. People v. Martinez, 703 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1985).

Nor does subsection (9)(a)(V) require the imposition of such a sentence upon conviction of criminal attempt to commit escape under § 18-2-101. People v. Lobato, 703 P.2d 623 (Colo. App. 1985).

Subsection (9)(a)(V) did not apply to the crime of second-degree burglary where defendant had been charged with, but not convicted of, another felony at the time of commission of the burglary. People v. Nichols, 920 P.2d 901 (Colo. App. 1996).

Phrase “at least” in § 18-1-105 (9) does not require the court to set the minimum length of the indeterminate sentence at the midpoint of the presumptive range. The court may impose a minimum length to the indeterminate sentence that is greater than the midpoint of the presumptive range. People v. Becker, 55 P.3d 246 (Colo. App. 2002).

Sections 16-11-309 (1)(c) and 18-1-105 (9)(e.5) conflict irreconcilably with § 16-13-804 (1)(b). The phrase “up to the defendant’s natural life” in §§ 16-11-309 (1)(c) and 18-1-105 (9)(e.5) conflicts with the phrase “a maximum of the sex offender’s natural life” in § 16-13-804 (1)(b). Statutory construction calls for § 16-13-804 (1)(b) to prevail, requiring the court to set the maximum length of the indeterminate sentence at the defendant’s natural life. People v. Becker, 55 P.3d 246 (Colo. App. 2002).

Escapee properly sentenced in the aggravated range pursuant to subsection (9.5) when the felony escape occurred while the defendant was charged with a previous felony, and was convicted of that previous felony. People v. Phillips, 885 P.2d 359 (Colo. App. 1994).

The intent of the general assembly in enacting subsection (9.5)(b) is to discourage the recidivism by subjecting those persons who are on bond and subsequently convicted of a felony to sentencing in the aggravated range. People v. Saucerman, 926 P.2d 130 (Colo. App. 1996).

A defendant who commits a felony while on bond after having pled guilty to a lesser offense is subject to the sentence-enhancing provisions of this statute. People v. Saucerman, 926 P.2d 130 (Colo. App. 1996).

Aggravated sentence based upon element which was also element of substantive offense did not offend equal protection or create double jeopardy. Aggravated sentence was permissible where defendant’s confinement in correctional facility was both element of controlled substances offense and circumstance requiring sentence in aggravated range under subsection (9)(a)(V). People v. Leonard, 755 P.2d 447 (Colo. 1988).

An aggravated sentence is allowed where the defendant’s confinement in correctional facility was both an element of attempt to introduce contraband into a detention facility and a circumstance requiring sentence in aggravated range under subsection (9)(a)(V). People v. Chavez, 764 P.2d 356 (Colo. 1988).

Aggravated sentence allowed where the defendant’s confinement in a detention facility was an element of unlawful possession of marihuana in a detention facility and the confinement as a convicted felon was a circumstance requiring a sentence in the aggravated range under what is now subsection (8)(a)(IV). People v. Nitz, 104 P.3d 240 (Colo. App. 2004).

Violent crime sentence enhancer cannot apply to first degree heat of passion assault. People v. Harris, 797 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1990).

Constitutional bar to subjecting defendant to greater penalty for causing serious bodily injury with deadly weapon than if defendant had caused death of victim. People v. Harris, 797 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1990).

The term “under confinement”, for purposes of subsection (9)(a)(V), includes a sentence to community corrections for a prior felony, even if the defendant had been transferred to nonresidential status at community corrections, and such a defendant must be sentenced within the aggravated range. People v. Miller, 747 P.2d 12 (Colo. App. 1987).

Parole statutes may be considered as aggravating circumstances. People v. Romero, 694 P.2d 1256 (Colo. 1985).

Sentence supported by finding of “aggravating circumstances”. A finding of “aggravating circumstances” justifies the imposition of a sentence at the higher end of the presumptive range, pursuant to subsection (1)(b), but cannot be the basis for a sentence outside of the presumptive range, because such a finding is not specific enough to satisfy the requirements of subsection (7). People v. Maldonado, 635 P.2d 240 (Colo. App. 1981).

There was ample support for the aggravated sentence imposed where the court properly considered the defendant’s prior criminal record. The fact that the court found aggravating factors more compelling than mitigating factors does not constitute an abuse of discretion or indicate that the court did not consider mitigating factors. People v. Loomis, 857 P.2d 478 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Hernandez-Luis, 879 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994).

Sentencing error where extraordinary aggravating circumstances not found. Judge erred in sentencing a 19-year old beyond the presumptive range because extraordinary aggravating circumstances justifying the sentence were not found even though the defendant was accused of committing five felonies in a nine-month period, including an arrest while on probation. People v. Jenkins, 674 P.2d 981 (Colo. App. 1983).

Where the court justified variation from the presumptive sentencing range solely upon the harm done to the victim and as a deterrent to others in the community, the trial court erred and is reversed. People v. Manley, 707 P.2d 1021 (Colo. App. 1985).

When reviewing sentences for excessiveness, appellate courts must consider the nature of the offense, the character of the offender, and the public interest in safety and deterrence. People v. Ramos, 53 P.3d 1178 (Colo. App. 2002).

Appellate courts must also accord considerable deference to a sentence imposed by the trial court because of that court’s familiarity with the circumstances of the case. People v. Fuller, 791 P.2d 702 (Colo. 1990); People v. Ramos, 53 P.3d 1178 (Colo. App. 2002).

No error where trial court considered defendant’s presentation of perjured testimony in imposing the maximum aggravated sentence for his felony conviction. People v. Ramos, 53

P.3d 1178 (Colo. App. 2002) (citing United States v. Dunnigan, 507 U.S. 87, 113 S. Ct. 1111, 122 L. Ed.2d 445 (1993)).

Trial court considered defendant's presentation of perjured testimony only in determining the appropriate penalty within the sentencing range mandated by statute, rather than making any factual determination that altered the applicable sentencing range. People v. Ramos, 53 P.3d 1178 (Colo. App. 2002) (distinguishing Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 120 S. Ct. 2348, 147 L. Ed.2d 435 (2000)).

Sentencing beyond presumptive range not justified where defendant was under supervision of probation department at time of commission of felony and not under confinement or in an institution as required by statute. People v. Wells, 691 P.2d 361 (Colo. App. 1984).

The presumptive range for a class 6 felony could not be doubled and then the sentence quadrupled because the defendant was also considered an habitual offender. The defendant was convicted of stalking while the defendant was on parole from prison. The stalking offense qualified the defendant as an habitual offender. Stalking is a class 6 felony. This section requires the doubling of the presumptive range of the conviction for offenses that occur while on parole. Section 16-13-101 (2) requires the quadrupling of offenses committed by habitual offenders. Section 16-13-101 (2), however, does not authorize the quadrupling of a sentence that is already increased. People v. Bastian, 981 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1998).

Person must be convicted of same felony for which charged for court to find extraordinary aggravating circumstance. Conviction of criminal impersonation when sexual assaults were committed did not constitute an aggravating circumstance. People v. Tuck, 937 P.2d 810 (Colo. App. 1996).

However, for the extraordinary aggravating circumstance described in subsection (9)(a)(III) to apply, the felony for which a defendant is on probation need not be the same felony offense for which he or she is being sentenced. People v. Moltrier, 983 P.2d 810 (Colo. App. 1999).

Where defendant was on probation for another felony at the time of the commission of a felony, the failure of the court to sentence the defendant to a term greater than the presumptive range due to the presence of an extraordinary aggravating circumstance was error. People v. Garcia, 698 P.2d 801 (Colo. 1985).

Cost to the taxpayers of the defendant's trials and the fact defendant acted alone are not aggravating sentencing factors and were improperly considered in sentencing. People v. Arguello, 737 P.2d 436 (Colo. App. 1987).

Factor which constitutes an element of the substantive crime could not constitute an extraordinary aggravating circumstance. Peo- ple v. Garciasdealba, 736 P.2d 1240 (Colo. App. 1986).

However, factual matters relevant to particular elements of an offense but that do not actually establish any elements may be considered by the trial court as extraordinary aggravating circumstances. People v. Sanchez, 769 P.2d 1064 (Colo. 1989); People v. Hernandez-Luis, 879 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994).

Subsection (9)(c) permits the sentencing court to consider aggravating factors other than those specifically set forth in statute when imposing an extraordinary aggravated sentence. People v. Hernandez-Luis, 879 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994).

Subsection (10) does not apply to crimes of violence that are sexual offenses. People v. Tillery, 231 P.3d 36 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. People v. Simon, 266 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2011).

Aggravated sentence supported by appropriate factors and sufficient findings where the court found that the offense was extremely violent, the victim lay helpless and unconscious through most of the attack, the victim in no way provoked the attack, the defendant denied his involvement in the attack, and the defendant had consumed alcohol the night of the incident. People v. Moore, 902 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1994).

Defendant's argument that the use of force in committing assault was an essential element of the crime and should not be considered as an aggravating factor was without merit. People v. Silva, 782 P.2d 846 (Colo. App. 1989).

Defendant's argument that, before a court can consider psychological or other adverse impacts of a crime on victims and their families as an extraordinary aggravating circumstance, there must be evidence that the impact is greater than that which is "normally" experienced by other victims of crime was found to be without merit. Such a requirement would be inconsistent with the legislative intent that sentencing courts be granted broad discretion in distinguishing between "ordinary" and "extraordinary" circumstances depending upon the specific facts of each case. People v. Leske, 957 P.2d 1030 (Colo. 1998).

Sentence modified on appeal only if trial court abused discretion. The trial court has great leeway in imposing sentence and, absent a clear abuse of discretion, the trial court's decision will not be modified on appeal. People v. McKenna, 199 Colo. 452, 611 P.2d 574 (1980); People v. Clements, 732 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1986).

Proof of clear abuse of discretion needed to overturn sentencing decision. The trial court's sentencing decision will not be overturned on appeal absent a showing that the trial court's wide latitude is marked by a clear abuse of discretion. People v. Hotopp, 632 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1981).

Factors considered in appellate review of sentence. On review of the propriety of a sentence, the Colorado supreme court considers three factors: (1) The nature of the offense; (2) the public interest in safety and deterrence; and (3) the character of the offender. People v. Naranjo, 200 Colo. 1, 612 P.2d 1099 (1980); People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980); People v. Colasanti, 626 P.2d 1136 (Colo. 1981); People v. Magee, 626 P.2d 1139 (Colo. 1981); People v. Walters, 632 P.2d 566 (Colo. 1981); People v. Tijerina, 632 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1981).

Felonies committed before July 1, 1981. The requirement for written findings survives for felonies committed before July 1, 1981. People v. Sanchez, 644 P.2d 95 (Colo. App. 1982).

Sentence upheld. Sentence of 15 to 30 years for second-degree murder was not an abuse of discretion. People v. La Plant, 670 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1983).

Minimum sentence within presumptive range for criminally negligent child abuse resulting in death was proper when it was supported by the evidence, reflected a proper balancing of mitigating and aggravating factors, and did not give undue weight to any one factor. People v. Clements, 732 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1986).

Fifteen-year sentence for second-degree arson committed while defendant was on parole did not constitute abuse of discretion by trial court. People v. Swepston, 822 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1991).

Sentence of 40 years' imprisonment for defendant convicted of child abuse resulting in death did not constitute abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court. The sentence was within the range required by subsection (9)(d)(I), and the trial court made extensive and detailed findings in imposing the sentence, took into consideration the sentencing factors set forth in § 18-1-102.5, and appropriately considered mitigating and aggravating factors in imposing the sentence. People v. Garcia, 964 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1998), rev'd on other grounds, 997 P.2d 1 (Colo. 2000).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing an aggravated sentence that was not based on a factor specified in subsection (9)(a) where the court made written findings that defendant posed a danger to society, that defendant had inflicted substantial emotional and psychological harm on his victims, that the victims were extremely vulnerable, that defendant was likely to reoffend, and that the jury had determined that one of the counts was a crime of violence. People v. Gholston, 26 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2000).

In light of the requirement that defendant receive an enhanced sentence if sentenced to a term of imprisonment, the trial court did not err in failing to consider a suspended sentence as a sentencing option. People v. Nastiuk, 914 P.2d 421 (Colo. App. 1995).

Sentence vacated and case remanded for re-sentencing where defendant was sentenced in an enhanced range for being on bond for an offense which was later dismissed. People v. Bachofer, 192 P.3d 454 (Colo. App. 2008).

Statutory authority of court to suspend sentences applicable to both misdemeanor and felony offenses. People v. Schwartz, 823 P.2d 1386 (Colo. App. 1991).

When a defendant receives two convictions and challenges only one of the convictions, the trial court has no authority to alter the sentence for the unchallenged conviction. People v. Wiegand, 743 P.2d 977 (Colo. App. 1987).

Under subsection (6), since defendant knew that failure to meet conditions of probation might constitute extraordinary aggravating circumstances which would justify sentencing beyond the presumptive range, the court was justified in doubling of presumptive range of sentence when defendant met neither the community service nor the restitution condition of probation. Montoya v. People, 864 P.2d 1093 (Colo. 1993); People v. Smith, 183 P.3d 726 (Colo. App. 2008).

Trial court properly related aggravating factors to defendant and the circumstances of the crime for conviction as an accessory. People v. Preciado-Flores, 66 P.3d 155 (Colo. App. 2002).

Consideration of request for reduction of sentence for a crime committed after a certain date by a person sentenced after the date that sentences for that crime was increased does not require that such a sentence be reduced, but rather leaves the matter to the discretion of the trial court. People v. Gallegos, 789 P.2d 461 (Colo. App. 1989) (decided under law in effect prior to 1989 repeal of subsection (1)(b)(VII)).

Persons convicted of child abuse resulting in death are eligible for sentence modification pursuant to § 17-27.7-104 upon successful completion of the regimented inmate training program, but the sentencing court's discretion is limited by the relevant mandatory sentencing limits. People v. Smith, 971 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1999).

"Incarceration", for purposes of subsection (9)(a), includes a direct sentence to community corrections. People v. Saucedo, 796 P.2d 11 (Colo. App. 1990).

Conspiracy to distribute a controlled substance is not an extraordinary risk crime. A plain reading of the statute does not include inchoate crimes. People v. Valenzuela, 216 P.3d 588 (Colo. 2009).

Where the defendant was convicted of "extraordinary risk of harm" crime and adjudicated as a habitual criminal, trial court properly calculated defendant's sentence by increasing the maximum presumptive range sentence pursuant to subsection (9.7) and then multiplying it by three pursuant to § 16-13-101(1.5). People v. Hoefer, 961 P.2d 563 (Colo. App. 1998).

The trial court appropriately increased the maximum presumptive penalty based on subsection (9.7)(a) before applying the presumptive penalty provisions applicable to crimes of violence under § 16-11-309. Thus, § 16-11-309 permits a doubling of the maximum penalty that is already increased under subsection (9.7)(a) for certain extraordinary risk crimes. People v. Greymountain, 952 P.2d 829 (Colo. App. 1997).

The extraordinary risk sentencing provisions of subsection (9.7) do not apply unless the defendant is actually charged with and convicted of a crime of violence, as described in § 16-11-309. In situations in which the defendant is convicted of a crime, such as second degree assault against a police officer under § 18-3-203 (2)(c), that mandates the same enhanced presumptive sentencing range as applies to a crime of violence, the defendant is not subject to the additional sentence enhancing provisions specified in subsection (9.7) unless the prosecution has specifically alleged and proved the elements of a crime of violence, as described in § 16-11-309. People v. Banks, 9 P.3d 1125 (Colo. 2000).

Because defendant was convicted of a per se crime of violence under § 16-11-309, the defendant was subject to an increase in the sentencing range under the extraordinary risk crime provisions of subsection (9.7); the prosecution was not required to charge a crime of violence separately and the jury was not required to determine its existence in order for the trial court to sentence defendant under the provisions of subsections (9) and (9.7). People v. Lee, 989 P.2d 777 (Colo. App. 1999). But see People v. Banks, 9 P.3d 1125 (Colo. 2000).

Imposition of a 25-year sentence for second degree murder committed in the heat of passion was not abuse of discretion and was within the range prescribed by law, because it is a per se crime of violence under § 16-11-309 and an extraordinary risk of harm crime pursuant to subsection (9.7); thus, the presumptive sentencing range was 10 to 32 years and the trial court was required to sentence defendant to a term of incarceration of at least the midpoint in the presumptive range, but not more than twice the maximum presumptive term for the offense. People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2001).

Because defendant's sentence for felony murder was not based on the habitual criminal statutes and because defendant's conviction for robbery, which was based on habitual criminal statutes, was vacated, the habitual criminal convictions must be vacated as well. People v. Cook, 22 P.3d 947 (Colo. App. 2000).

Subsection (10) allows the trial court only to suspend the imposition or execution of a sentence, not the length of the sentence, and in light of the mandatory language of § 18-18-107, the trial court was required to sentence the defendant within the range set forth in the statute. People v. Delgado, 832 P.2d 971 (Colo. App. 1991).

Distinction between imposition and execution of a sentence under subsection (10). Where court suspended the execution, but not the imposition, of a four-year term in the department of corrections on condition that defendant serve two years in a community corrections facility, the court was not thereafter precluded from resentencing defendant to four years in the department. People v. Seals, 899 P.2d 359 (Colo. App. 1995).

Prison sentence originally imposed becomes final notwithstanding suspension of the sentence. Suspension does not result in withdrawal of the original sentence, but in the suspension of the execution of the sentence subject to express conditions. If a condition is violated, the suspension may be vacated, and execution of the original sentence can be carried out. In such a circumstance, the pronouncement of a new sentence is both unnecessary and improper. People v. Frye, 997 P.2d 1223 (Colo. App. 1999).

Amendment to subsection (10), requiring recommendation for suspended sentence, applies prospectively and is inapplicable to defendant who committed crime prior to date amendment was enacted. People v. Munoz, 857 P.2d 546 (Colo. App. 1993).

The court may impose a fine in lieu of incarceration or probation without the consent of the prosecutor where the defendant is convicted of a class 2 felony not involving violence or an assault on a firefighter or a peace officer. People v. Thompson, 897 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1994).

Former § 18-1-105 (10) does not authorize a court to suspend a statutorily enhanced sentence where mandatory minimum sentence was applicable to defendant who was on probation at the time of offense. People v. Munoz, 857 P.2d 546 (Colo. App. 1993).

Pursuant to the plain language of former § 18-1-105 (10) (now recodified with amendments under subsection (11)), if a defendant is sentenced pursuant to a mandatory sentencing provision, the sentencing court has no power to suspend either the imposition or execution of the sentence. People v. Hummel, 131 P.3d 1204 (Colo. App. 2006).

The statutory authority to impose a sentence is determined by the sentencing scheme in effect on the date of the offense. To the extent People v. Hummel annotated above suggests otherwise, the appellate court declined to follow it. People v. Wolfe, 213 P.3d 1035 (Colo. App. 2009).

Court not bound to apply original sentence upon revocation of probation. Because suspension of a sentence is in conjunction with, rather than contradistinction to, the imposition of a statutorily prescribed alternative to imprisonment, the sentencing court's resentencing options upon revocation were dictated by statutory provisions governing revocation of probation. Fierro v. People, 206 P.3d 460 (Colo. 2009).

Defendant was incorrectly sentenced under the extraordinary risk enhancement provision in subsection (10) because it is inapplicable to offenses committed after November 1, 1998. People v. Kyle, 111 P.3d 491 (Colo. App. 2004).

The presumptive sentencing range for the class 4 felony offense of attempted unlawful distribution of a schedule II controlled substance is two years to six years, pursuant to subsection (1)(a)(V)(A). Such an attempt does not constitute a crime that presents an extraordinary risk of harm to society as defined in the legislative intent stated in subsection (10)(a). Thus, the maximum sentence in the presumptive range shall neither be increased nor be subject to subsection (10)(b)(XI). People v. Blinderman, 148 P.3d 232 (Colo. App. 2006).

Not illegal sentence when court first increased maximum presumptive sentence for extraordinary risk enhancement pursuant to subsection (10) for felony child abuse and then applied mandatory language of subsection (8)(d). People v. Ortega, 266 P.3d 424 (Colo. App. 2011).

Applied in People ex rel. Dunbar v. Moore, 125 Colo. 571, 245 P.2d 467 (1952); People v. Peters, 151 Colo. 409, 378 P.2d 205 (1963); People v. Alvarez, 187 Colo. 290, 530 P.2d 506 (1975); People v. Bruebaker, 189 Colo. 219, 539 P.2d 1277 (1975); People v. Marchese, 37 Colo. App. 65, 541 P.2d 1264 (1975); People v. Lobato, 192 Colo. 357, 559 P.2d 224 (1977); People v. Smith, 195 Colo. 404, 579 P.2d 1129 (1978); People v. Lake, 195 Colo. 454, 580 P.2d 788 (1978); People v. Montoya, 196 Colo. 111, 582 P.2d 673 (1978); People v. Burns, 197 Colo. 284, 593 P.2d 351 (1979); People v. Mikkleson, 42 Colo. App. 77, 593 P.2d 975 (1979); People v. Toomer, 43 Colo. App. 343, 604 P.2d 1180 (1979); People v. Malacara, 199 Colo. 243, 606 P.2d 1300 (1980); People v. Wylie, 605 P.2d 494 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Hostetter, 606 P.2d 80 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Abila, 606 P.2d 80 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980); People v. Hall, 619 P.2d 492 (Colo. 1980); People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981); People v. Martinez, 628 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1981); Smith v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1981); People v. Moody, 630 P.2d 74 (Colo. 1981); People v. Marcis, 630 P.2d 82 (Colo. 1981); People v. Valencia, 630 P.2d 85 (Colo. 1981); People v. Scott, 630 P.2d 615 (Colo. 1981); People v. Macias, 631 P.2d 584 (Colo. 1981); People v. Beland, 631 P.2d 1130 (Colo. 1981); People v. Lucero, 632 P.2d 585 (Colo. 1981); People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981); People v. Christian, 632 P.2d 1031 (Colo. 1981); People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hamling, 634 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981); People v. Reynolds, 638 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1981); People v. Lowery, 642 P.2d 515 (Colo. 1982); People v. Mattas, 645 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1982); People v. Williams, 651 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1982); People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983); People v. Castro, 657 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1983); People v. Turman, 659 P.2d 1368 (Colo. 1983); People v. Dunoyair, 660 P.2d 890 (Colo. 1983); Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983); People v. Bridges, 662 P.2d 161 (Colo. 1983); People v. Espinoza, 669 P.2d 142 (Colo. App. 1983), aff'd, 712 P.2d 476 (Colo. 1985); People v. Piro, 701 P.2d 878 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Jenkins, 710 P.2d 1157 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Lucero, 714 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Broga, 750 P.2d 59 (Colo. 1988); People v. Flores, 757 P.2d 159 (Colo. App. 1988); People v. Wilson, 819 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1991); Patton v. People, 35 P.3d 124 (Colo. 2001).

18-1.3-402. Felony offenses not classified. (1) Any felony defined by state statute without specification of its class shall be punishable as provided in the statute defining it. For felony offenses committed on or after July 1, 1993, if the sentencing court sentences an offender to incarceration pursuant to the provisions of this section, the sentencing court shall also impose a mandatory period of parole of two years.

(2) Every sentence entered under this section shall include consideration of restitution as required by part 6 of this article and by article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1402, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-108 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Prosecutions under the Colorado Securities Act", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 233 (1976).

Applied in People v. Spann, 37 Colo. App. 152, 549 P.2d 427 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 193 Colo. 53, 561 P.2d 1268 (1977) (decided prior to 2002 relocation of § 18-1-108).

18-1.3-403. Penalty for felony not fixed by statute - punishment. (1) In all cases where an offense is denominated by statute as being a felony and no penalty is fixed in the statute therefor, the punishment shall be imprisonment for not more than five years in a correctional facility, as defined in section 17-1-102, C.R.S., or a fine of not more than fifteen thousand dollars, or both such imprisonment and fine. For offenses committed on or after July 1, 1985, a fine of not more than one hundred thousand dollars may be levied. For offenses committed on or after July 1, 1993, if the sentencing court sentences an offender to incarceration pursuant to the provisions of this section, the sentencing court shall also impose a mandatory period of parole of two years.

(2) Every sentence entered under this section shall include consideration of restitution as required by part 6 of this article and by article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1402, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-109 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-404. Duration of sentences for felonies. (1) Unless otherwise provided by law and except as otherwise provided in the "Colorado Children's Code", title 19, C.R.S., courts sentencing any person for the commission of a felony to the custody of the executive director of the department of corrections shall fix a definite term as provided by section 18-1.3-401. The persons so sentenced shall be imprisoned and discharged as provided by other applicable statutes. No person sentenced to a correctional facility for the commission of a felony shall be subjected to imprisonment for a term exceeding the term provided by the statute fixing the length of the sentence for the crime of which the person was convicted and for which the person was sentenced.

(2) (a) If a court sentences a defendant to the custody of the department of corrections, the court shall, after fixing a definite term of imprisonment, read the following statement:

"The defendant may spend less time incarcerated than the term announced here today. The actual time served will be influenced by a number of factors including, but not limited to, previous criminal activities, eligibility for earned time for good behavior, correctional education program earned time, credit for time served, or community corrections eligibility."

(b) By requiring the court to read the statement contained in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), the general assembly does not intend to grant any additional rights to the defendant. Failure of a court to comply with the requirements of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall not be grounds for a defendant to withdraw a guilty plea or in any way gain a reversal of a conviction or reduction in sentence.

(3) (a) Nothing in subsection (2) of this section shall be construed to affect the duties otherwise imposed by law on the court or on the executive director of the department of corrections.

(b) Nothing in subsection (2) of this section shall be construed to limit, expand, or otherwise affect any provision of law concerning the availability, administration, entitlement, or award of good time credits and earned time credits.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1403, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-302 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Commitment of Misdemeanants to the Colorado State Reformatory", see 29 Dicta 294 (1952).

18-1.3-405. Credit for presentence confinement. A person who is confined for an offense prior to the imposition of sentence for said offense is entitled to credit against the term of his or her sentence for the entire period of such confinement. At the time of sentencing, the court shall make a finding of the amount of presentence confinement to which the offender is entitled and shall include such finding in the mittimus. The period of confinement shall be deducted from the sentence by the department of corrections. A person who is confined pending a parole revocation hearing is entitled to credit for the entire period of such confinement against any period of reincarceration imposed in the parole revocation proceeding. The period of confinement shall be deducted from the period of reincarceration by the department of corrections. If a defendant is serving a sentence or is on parole for a previous offense when he or she commits a new offense and he or she continues to serve the sentence for the previous offense while charges on the new offense are pending, the credit given for presentence confinement under this section shall be granted against the sentence the defendant is currently serving for the previous offense and shall not be granted against the sentence for the new offense.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1403, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2009: Entire section amended, (HB 09-1263), ch. 105, p. 383, § 3, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-306 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For article, "Criminal Procedure", which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with the time credited on sentences, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 188 (1985). For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing — an Update", see 14 Colo. Law 2163 (1985). For article, "Criminal Sentencing in Colorado After Blakely v. Washington", see 34 Colo. Law. 85 (January 2005).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-405 is similar to § 16-11-306 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutionality. The provisions of this section, giving discretionary power to a sentencing court in granting credit for presentence confinement, are not unconstitutional. People v. Dennis, 649 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1982).

There is no constitutional right to receive credit for presentence confinement. People v. Martinez, 192 Colo. 388, 559 P.2d 228 (1977); Godbold v. District Court, 623 P.2d 862 (Colo. 1981) (decided under former law); People v. Corbett, 713 P.2d 1340 (Colo. App. 1985) (decided under law in effect prior to 1979 repeal and reenactment).

Constitutional right to credit for presentence confinement. A sentencing judge is constitutionally required to give an indigent defendant credit for time served in presentence confinement, even where the total of the presentence confinement and the sentence imposed after trial is less than the maximum sentence allowed for the offense. Godbold v. Wilson, 518 F. Supp. 1265 (D. Colo. 1981) (decided under former law).

Without legislation, credit for presentence confinement is not a matter of right, since there is no constitutional right to credit. People v. Jones, 176 Colo. 61, 489 P.2d 596 (1971) (decided under § 40-1-303 (1)); People v. White, 623 P.2d 868 (Colo. 1981) (decided under former law); People v. Emig, 676 P.2d 1156 (Colo. 1984).

This should specifically include credit for time spent in custody prior to trial, during trial, pending sentence, pending the resolution of an appeal, and prior to arrival at the institution to which the defendant has been committed. People v. Jones, 176 Colo. 61, 489 P.2d 596 (1971) (decided under § 40-1-303 (1)).

Section is applicable even though defendant was sentenced prior to the time for which he seeks credit. People v. McGraw, 30 P.3d 835 (Colo. App. 2001).

Defendant should advise judge of time to be credited. If, at the time of sentencing, a defendant or his counsel has any reason to believe that the trial judge is unaware of the length of time the defendant was in custody or is not considering presentence confinement in arriving at a sentence, such information should be presented to the judge, along with other mitigating factors. People v. Jones, 176 Colo. 61, 489 P.2d 596 (1971) (decided under § 40-1-303 (1)).

And record should reflect credit. A well prepared mittimus and record should reflect the actual time spent in custody prior to the imposition of sentence and should direct that credit be allowed for the time spent in custody prior to imposition of sentence. People v. Jones, 176 Colo. 61, 489 P.2d 596 (1971) (decided under § 40-1-303 (1)).

No distinction between confinement within and without state. The statute does not distinguish between confinement within Colorado and confinement outside of the state, but instead requires credit for all presentence time that a defendant is confined on the charge for which he is ultimately sentenced. People v. Hardman, 653 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1982).

Section does not apply to offenses committed prior to July 1, 1979. Godbold v. District Court, 623 P.2d 862 (Colo. 1981).

Under the plain meaning of this section and § 17-22.5-104, prisoners are entitled to credit against their life sentences for time spent in presentence confinement. Inmate, therefore, was entitled to a parole eligibility date that was calculated to include 329 days of presentence confinement credit. Fields v. Suthers, 984 P.2d 1167 (Colo. 1999) (overruling People v. Payseno, 954 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1997)).

Section does not apply to life sentences. People v. Payseno, 954 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1997), overruled in Fields v. Suthers, 984 P.2d 1167 (Colo. 1999).

Section does not refer to the date of eligibility for parole. People v. Payseno, 954 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1997), overruled in Fields v. Suthers, 984 P.2d 1167 (Colo. 1999).

Duty to assure credit against sentence. This section removes from the trial court the discretion whether to grant or deny a defendant credit against his sentence from presentence confinement time, and imposes upon the department of corrections a duty to assure that credit is given in every case. People v. Dempsey, 624 P.2d 374 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Hardman, 653 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Patrick, 683 P.2d 801 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Massey, 707 P.2d 1038 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 736 P.2d 19 (Colo. 1987).

The court, when crediting a defendant for presentencing confinement, shall award the defendant full, but not duplicative, credit for time served. Court abused its discretion by awarding defendant only sixty days out of his eighty-nine days served. People v. Smith, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

Because the trial court chose to exercise its discretion to give defendant credit for the presentence confinement, the court was required to ensure that defendant received full credit for his confinement. People v. Smith, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

Confinement must result from same transaction as sentence. In order for defendant to be given credit for presentence confinement, that confinement must be a result of the same transaction for which he is to be sentenced. People v. Saiz, 660 P.2d 2 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Freeman, 705 P.2d 528 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 735 P.2d 879 (Colo. 1987) (decided prior to 1986 amendment); People v. Etts, 725 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Saathott, 728 P.2d 367 (Colo. App. 1986).

When a defendant is confined prior to sentencing for a different transaction from that for which he is to be sentenced, he is not entitled to credit. People v. Matheson, 671 P.2d 968 (Colo. App. 1983).

A defendant is entitled to credit for the time served as the result of the charge for which the sentence is imposed or the time served as the result of the conduct on which such charge is based, whichever is longer. Schubert v. People, 698 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1985); Torand v. People, 698 P.2d 797 (Colo. 1985); People v. Saathott, 728 P.2d 367 (Colo. App. 1986).

There must be a substantial nexus between the charge or conduct and the period of confinement for which credit is sought. Schubert v. People, 698 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1985); People v. Etts, 725 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Murray, 805 P.2d 1175 (Colo. App. 1990); People v. Bray, 819 P.2d 528 (Colo. App. 1991); People v. Finley, 141 P.3d 911 (Colo. App. 2006).

Where defendant has not proven, and the record does not establish, that there was a substantial nexus between the first county's charges and the defendant's imprisonment in the second county jail or that the issuance of the first county's arrest warrant was the actual cause of his confinement in the second county, presentence confinement credit cannot be awarded. People v. Freeman, 735 P.2d 879 (Colo. 1987) (decided prior to 1986 amendment).

There was no substantial nexus, as matter of law, between the Colorado charges upon which defendant was being sentenced and defendant's confinement in an English prison prior to the date the extradition warrant was served. People v. Bray, 819 P.2d 528 (Colo. App. 1991).

Plain meaning of section indicates that any presentence confinement credit earned as a result of being reincarcerated on a parole violation must be applied against the previous offense. People v. Norton, 63 P.3d 339 (Colo. 2003); People v. Wallin, 167 P.3d 183 (Colo. App. 2007).

The plain language of the section coupled with legislative intent lead to the conclusion that such an application is the only means by which courts can avoid granting duplicative credit to offenders. People v. Norton, 63 P.3d 339 (Colo. 2003).

Mandatory parole was intended to be included in the scope of an offender's "sentence" when the sentencing scheme was amended in 1993. Parole is a clear infringement on an offender's liberty and thus logically part of his or her sentence. People v. Norton, 63 P.3d 339 (Colo. 2003).

"Sentence" incorporates both the incarceration component and the mandatory parole component of an offender's penalty. People v. Norton, 63 P.3d 339 (Colo. 2003).

Section 17-2-103 (6)(c) does not negate or change the general rule for applying presentence confinement credit set forth in this section, which provides that a defendant receive presentence confinement credit on his or her original sentence and not on the new sentence. Rather, the filing of a parole revocation complaint merely provides jurisdiction to the parole board, but once the parole board makes its decision, the time starts running again from the date of the complaint whether the complaint is dismissed or parole is revoked. People v. Wallin, 167 P.3d 183 (Colo. App. 2007).

Section creates a right to credit only with respect to the presentence confinement served in connection with the charge or conduct for which a particular sentence is ultimately imposed. Santisteven v. Johnson, 751 P.2d 621 (Colo. 1988) (decided under section as it existed prior to 1986 amendment).

Defendant, who escaped while serving concurrent sentences, was not entitled to credit for presentence confinement for serving one of the sentences while an arrest warrant was still outstanding for the other. Confinement did not result from the same transaction as the sentence. People v. Taylor, 7 P.3d 1030 (Colo. App. 2000).

Service in Cenikor program does not constitute "confinement" so the defendant was not entitled to credit for such service against his sentence. People v. Beecroft, 862 P.2d 973 (Colo. App. 1993).

Service in work release as a condition of probation is a form of "confinement" deserving of presentence confinement credit. People v. Widhalm, 991 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1999).

"Substantial nexus" required between charges filed in one judicial district and periods of presentence confinement in another in order for defendant to be entitled to an award of presentence confinement credit against his sentence in the first district. Massey v. People, 736 P.2d 19 (Colo. 1987).

"Substantial nexus" found between defendant's charges in case and presentence confinement. Although defendant had also been confined on probation violation warrant from a prior case, the defendant would have remained confined on the charges in the other case in the same judicial district in the absence of the prior case. Defendant, therefore, was entitled to presentence confinement for all incarceration time after the arrest. People v. Brown, 119 P.3d 486 (Colo. App. 2004).

Credit not mandatory where sentence is to county jail. This section does not mandate a sentencing judge to credit a defendant with time spent in presentence confinement when the sentence is to a county jail. Castro v. District Court, 656 P.2d 1283 (Colo. 1982); People v. Smith, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

Additional credit not required to be awarded when sentence on menacing conviction ordered to run concurrently with a previously imposed sentence. Defendant was already serving a sentence as a result of independent criminal conduct in another case and the menacing charge was not the cause of that confinement, so he was not entitled to receive additional credit for his presentence imprisonment on the menacing charge. People v. Taylor, 886 P.2d 302 (Colo. App. 1994).

Credit not mandatory where sentence is to a facility not under the supervision of the department of corrections. However, the trial court must make a finding that the facility is operated by another entity if credit is denied. People v. Lachicotte, 713 P.2d 408 (Colo. App. 1985).

The credit for presentence confinement mandated by this section applies only where a defendant is sentenced to a facility under the supervision of the department of corrections. People v. Garcia, 757 P.2d 1110 (Colo. App. 1988).

Although the statute does not specifically limit its applicability to sentences to a state correctional facility, the language requiring the department of corrections to deduct the period of pre-sentence confinement from the sentence implies that credit for pre-sentence confinement is mandated only when the sentence is to be served in a state correctional facility. Castro v. District Court, 656 P.2d 1283 (Colo. 1982); People v. Johnson, 776 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 797 P.2d 1296 (Colo. 1990); People v. Smith, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

If an offender violates a rule or condition of community correctional placement while on nonresidential status, the offender is not entitled upon resentencing to credit for time served while on nonresidential status. People v. Hoecher, 822 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1991) (overruling People v. Herrera, 734 P.2d 136 (Colo. App. 1986)).

A trial court is not statutorily required to give any pre-sentence confinement credits against any misdemeanor sentence. However, a sentencing court may, in the exercise of its discretion, credit the length of any presentence confinement against a misdemeanor sentence. Castro v. District Court, 656 P.2d 1283 (Colo. 1982); People v. Johnson, 776 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 797 P.2d 1296 (Colo. 1990).

Trial court has discretion to credit presentence confinement credit to a misdemeanor sentence to county jail rather than to a consecutive felony sentence to a state correctional facility. People v. Johnson, 797 P.2d 1296 (Colo. 1990).

Where trial court imposed both a felony sentence to which this section was applicable and a misdemeanor sentence to which the statute did not apply, the discretion which the court might otherwise have exercised did not exist and the court was required to credit the pre-sentence confinement time against the sentence imposed upon defendant for his conviction of felony. People v. Johnson, 776 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 797 P.2d 1296 (Colo. 1990).

Supervised period following release from community correction facility is not confinement within the meaning of this section. Thus, defendant was not entitled to presentence confinement credit. People v. Carroll, 779 P.2d 1375 (Colo. App. 1989).

A suspended sentence subject to the condition that an offender receive treatment for drug abuse does not constitute "confinement" under this section. Defendant was not entitled to presentence confinement credit. Beecroft v. People, 874 P.2d 1041 (Colo. 1994).

Duplicative credit. Where defendant was arrested based on separate felony warrants arising from both of two counties, time served in either first county jail or second county jail between date of arrest until he was placed on probation in the second county case related to both of these charges, and thus any days for which the defendant had already received presentence credit under the second county's mittimus could not also be credited against the first county offense. People v. Massey, 707 P.2d 1038 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 736 P.2d 19 (Colo. 1987).

Defendant not entitled to duplicative credit for time served. People v. Etts, 725 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Garcia, 757 P.2d 1110 (Colo. App. 1988); People v. Johnson, 776 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 797 P.2d 1296 (Colo. 1990).

Original offense and subsequent probation violation are the same transaction. When defendant is confined due to parole revocation, he is entitled to presentence confinement credit for all periods of confinement relating to the original charge, as well as time served for violation of probation terms. People v. Myles, 702 P.2d 292 (Colo. App. 1985).

This section requires credit to be applied to any existing continuing sentence from a prior offense, not against a sentence for a new offense committed by the same defendant, when the defendant was serving a sentence or was on parole for a previous offense at the time he committed the new offense. People v. Ostuni, 58 P.3d 531 (Colo. 2002); People v. Dixon, 133 P.3d 1176 (Colo. 2006).

A probationer is entitled to presentence confinement credit for the actual time confined to the county or municipal jail, where the trial court committed the probationer to a county or municipal jail as a facility utilized in conjunction with a work release program pursuant to § 16-11-212 (1). People v. Lee, 678 P.2d 1030 (Colo. App. 1983).

No statutorily mandated deduction of the period of presentence confinement from a term of probation. As with incarceration in a county jail a grant of probation does not put the defendant under the supervision of the department of correction, nor is there a statutorily mandated deduction of the period of presentence confinement from a term of probation. People v. Freeman, 705 P.2d 528 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 735 P.2d 879 (Colo. 1987) (decided prior to 1986 amendment).

No credit for time spent at halfway house. Where residency in a community corrections facility is imposed as a condition of probation, it does not involve confinement as contemplated by this section, thus no credit may be given for time spent at a community corrections halfway house. People v. Radar, 652 P.2d 1085 (Colo. App. 1982).

Confinement for first conviction not pretrial confinement for second offense. Where a pretrial defendant is incarcerated pursuant to the sentence imposed in connection with his earlier conviction and he is receiving credit on that sentence for that time period, this confinement is not attributable to a second charge and he is not entitled to pretrial confinement credit on the second offense. People v. Loggins, 628 P.2d 111 (Colo. 1981) (decided under former law).

Sentence for life imprisonment. When the penalty provided by statute is a sentence for life imprisonment, there is no authority in the sentencing court at the time of sentencing thereafter to make the sentence anything but life imprisonment. Consideration of presentence confinement in fixing sentence would be without purpose or result. People v. Jones, 198 Colo. 578, 604 P.2d 679 (1979) (decided under former law).

Where defendant is convicted under death penalty statute later held unconstitutional and court is required to resentence defendant to life imprisonment, there is no authority in sentencing court to award presentence confinement credit for time spent on death row prior to resentencing. People v. Corbett, 713 P.2d 1340 (Colo. App. 1985) (decided under law in effect prior to 1979 repeal and reenactment).

In the case of concurrent sentences, the period of presentence confinement should be credited against each sentence. Schubert v. People, 698 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1985); People v. Etts, 725 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Roy, 252 P.3d 24 (Colo. App. 2010).

When consecutive sentences are imposed, crediting the period of presentence confinement against one of the sentences will assure the defendant full credit against the total term of imprisonment. Schubert v. People, 698 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1985).

If only one sentence is ultimately imposed and the other concurrently filed counts or charges are dismissed, then the entire period of presentence confinement should be credited against the sentence imposed. Schubert v. People, 698 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1985).

But if the case on which the defendant is sentenced has been only recently filed, and the defendant has been confined for a much longer period of time on an older case which relates to a separate criminal transaction and which is to be dismissed as part of a plea agreement, then the defendant is entitled to credit only for that period of confinement attributable to the case resulting in the sentence. The parties may nevertheless agree as part of a sentence concession that credit should be given for the entire period of presentence confinement. Schubert v. People, 698 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1985).

If defendant's parole is revoked during presentence confinement for pending charges, and defendant thereupon resumes service of sentence unrelated to pending charges, then, with respect to such pending charges, defendant is entitled to credit for presentence confinement prior to, but not following, revocation of his parole. Torand v. People, 698 P.2d 797 (Colo. 1985).

An annotation of "credit for time served" on a mittimus must be construed as an order for a specific amount of credit to which the defendant is entitled by statute, not a specific method for applying that credit to the entire sentence or for calculating the defendant's ultimate parole eligibility or mandatory release dates. People v. Ostuni, 58 P.3d 531 (Colo. 2002).

Writ of habeas corpus not appropriate. An order of one district court concerning presentence confinement credit may not be challenged by prosecution of a writ of habeas corpus in a district court of another judicial district. Pipkin v. Brittain, 713 P.2d 1358 (Colo. App. 1985).

Retroactive reduction of sentence and parole date does not entitle defendant to presentence confinement credit for offenses committed in different transaction even though practical effect of such reduction was that defendant was confined beyond parole date for separate transaction. People v. Lepine, 744 P.2d 81 (Colo. App. 1987).

To receive presentence confinement credit, an offender must have been actually confined, and there must have been a substantial nexus between the confinement and the charge for which the sentence is ultimately imposed. People v. Chavez, 122 P.3d 1036 (Colo. App. 2005).

No credit is allowed where defendant not incarcerated or confined but only supervised. People v. Winters, 789 P.2d 1120 (Colo. App. 1990).

No credit is allowed while defendant was on bond despite being subject to electronic monitoring and a curfew do not so limit liberty as to constitute confinement under this section. People v. Chavez, 122 P.3d 1036 (Colo. App. 2005).

Defendant who is on parole at the time of the commission of a new offense is not entitled to receive presentence confinement credit for the new offense, and it is not necessary to revoke the defendant's parole in order for the defendant to be ineligible for such presentence confinement credit. People v. Hays, 817 P.2d 546 (Colo. App. 1991).

An offender who has earned presentence confinement credit is entitled to have that credit deducted from his mandatory parole if the offender is no longer serving a sentence of confinement. Edwards v. People, 196 P.3d 1138 (Colo. 2008).

Trial court has no authority to retain jurisdiction over a defendant after sentencing for the reason that the law may be changed by a subsequent court decision even though the court, at the time of sentencing, is aware of a case appealed to the state supreme court which may change the interpretation of statute regarding credit against the sentence for presentence confinement. People v. Mortensen, 856 P.2d 45 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981); People v. Lowery, 642 P.2d 515 (Colo. 1982); People v. Lopez, 961 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1998).

18-1.3-406. Mandatory sentences for violent crimes. (1) (a) Any person convicted of a crime of violence shall be sentenced pursuant to the provisions of section 18-1.3-401

(8) to the department of corrections for a term of incarceration of at least the midpoint in, but not more than twice the maximum of, the presumptive range provided for such offense in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a), as modified for an extraordinary risk crime pursuant to section 18-1.3-401 (10), without suspension; except that, within ninety-one days after he or she has been placed in the custody of the department of corrections, the department shall transmit to the sentencing court a report on the evaluation and diagnosis of the violent offender, and the court, in a case which it considers to be exceptional and to involve unusual and extenuating circumstances, may thereupon modify the sentence, effective not earlier than one hundred nineteen days after his or her placement in the custody of the department. Such modification may include probation if the person is otherwise eligible therefor. Whenever a court finds that modification of a sentence is justified, the judge shall notify the state court administrator of his or her decision and shall advise said administrator of the unusual and extenuating circumstances that justified such modification. The state court administrator shall maintain a record, which shall be open to the public, summarizing all modifications of sentences and the grounds therefor for each judge of each district court in the state. A person convicted of two or more separate crimes of violence arising out of the same incident shall be sentenced for such crimes so that sentences are served consecutively rather than concurrently.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), any person convicted of a sex offense, as defined in section 18-1.3-1003 (5), committed on or after November 1, 1998, that constitutes a crime of violence shall be sentenced to the department of corrections for an indeterminate term of incarceration of at least the midpoint in the presumptive range specified in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a) (V) (A) up to a maximum of the person's natural life, as provided in section 18-1.3-1004 (1).

(2) (a) (I) "Crime of violence" means any of the crimes specified in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (a) committed, conspired to be committed, or attempted to be committed by a person during which, or in the immediate flight therefrom, the person:

(A) Used, or possessed and threatened the use of, a deadly weapon; or

(B) Caused serious bodily injury or death to any other person except another participant.

(II) Subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) applies to the following crimes:

(A) Any crime against an at-risk adult or at-risk juvenile;

(B) Murder;

(C) First or second degree assault;

(D) Kidnapping;

(E) A sexual offense pursuant to part 4 of article 3 of this title;

(F) Aggravated robbery;

(G) First degree arson;

(H) First degree burglary;

(I) Escape; or

(J) Criminal extortion.

(b) (I) "Crime of violence" also means any unlawful sexual offense in which the defendant caused bodily injury to the victim or in which the defendant used threat, intimidation, or force against the victim. For purposes of this subparagraph (I), "unlawful sexual offense" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 18-3-411 (1), and "bodily injury" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 18-1-901 (3) (c).

(II) The provisions of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) shall apply only to felony unlawful sexual offenses.

(c) As used in this section, "at-risk adult" has the same meaning as set forth in section 18-6.5-102 (1), and "at-risk juvenile" has the same meaning as set forth in section 18-6.5-102 (1.5).

(3) In any case in which the accused is charged with a crime of violence as defined in subsection (2) (a) (I) of this section, the indictment or information shall so allege in a separate count, even though the use or threatened use of such deadly weapon or infliction of such serious bodily injury or death is not an essential element of the crime charged.

(4) The jury, or the court if no jury trial is had, in any case as provided in subsection (3) of this section shall make a specific finding as to whether the accused did or did not use, or possessed and threatened to use, a deadly weapon during the commission of such crime or whether such serious bodily injury or death was caused by the accused. If the jury or court finds that the accused used, or possessed and threatened the use of, such deadly weapon or that such injury or death was caused by the accused, the penalty provisions of this section shall be applicable.

(5) In any case in which the accused is charged with a crime of violence as defined in subsection (2) (a) (II) of this section, the indictment or information shall so allege in a separate count, even though the use of threat, intimidation, or force or the infliction of bodily injury is not an essential element of the crime charged.

(6) The jury, or the court if no jury trial is had, in any case as provided in subsection (5) of this section shall make a specific finding as to whether the accused did or did not use threat, intimidation, or force during the commission of such crime or whether such bodily injury was caused by the accused. If the jury or court finds that the accused used threat, intimidation, or force or that such bodily injury was caused by the accused, the penalty provisions of this section shall be applicable.

(7) (a) In any case in which the accused is charged with a crime of violence as defined in this section and the indictment or information specifies the use of a dangerous weapon as defined in sections 18-12-101 and 18-12-102, or the use of a semiautomatic assault weapon as defined in paragraph (b) of this subsection (7), upon conviction for said crime of violence, the judge shall impose an additional sentence to the department of corrections of five years for the use of such weapon. The sentence of five years shall be in addition to the mandatory sentence imposed for the substantive offense and shall be served consecutively to any other sentence and shall not be subject to suspension or probation.

(b) For the purposes of this subsection (7), “semiautomatic assault weapon” means any semiautomatic center fire firearm that is equipped with a detachable magazine with a capacity of twenty or more rounds of ammunition.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1403, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1), (2)(a)(II)(E), and (7)(a) amended, pp. 1424, 1432, §§ 3, 21, effective April 29. L. 2004: (1) amended, p. 634, § 2, effective August 4. L. 2012: (1)(a) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 865, § 110, effective July 1.

Editor’s note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-11-309 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (1)(a) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

Cross references: For the sentencing of a defendant for multiple counts arising from the same act, see § 18-1-408 (3).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Colorado Felony Sentencing”, see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For article, “Review of New Legislation Relating to Criminal Law”, see 11 Colo. Law. 2148 (1982). For article, “Colorado Felony Sentencing — an Update”, see 14 Colo. Law. 2163 (1985). For article, “Pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court Relating to the Criminal Law Field: 1985-1986”, which discusses a case relating to mandatory sentencing, see 15 Colo. Law. 1605 (1986). For article, “The Definition of ‘Deadly Weapon’ Under the Colorado Criminal Code”, see 15 Colo. Law. 1663 (1986). For article, “Sentencing Dilemmas”, see 29 Colo. Law. 67 (October 2000). For article, “Criminal Sentencing in Colorado After Blakely v. Washington”, see 34 Colo. Law. 85 (January 2005).

Annotator’s note. Since § 18-1.3-406 is similar to § 16-11-309 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Under former language of subsection (1)(a) and (b) which existed prior to 1988, subsection (1)(a) and (b) was constitutional, and did not violate equal protection clause since the two paragraphs could be harmonized and the difference between the two paragraphs was rationally related to a legitimate state interest in preventing crimes of violence and crimes against the elderly and handicapped. People v. Wells, 775 P.2d 563 (Colo. 1989), cert. denied, 783 P.2d 1223 (Colo. 1989).

1988 amendment to subsection (1)(a), changing “two” to “two or more,” worked a substantive change in the law and did not merely clarify intent of prior version of statute. Robles v. People, 811 P.2d 804 (Colo. 1991).

The general assembly intended that this section define sentencing standards rather than create a substantive offense by its placement among other sections relating to sentencing. Brown v. District Court, 194 Colo. 45, 569 P.2d 1390 (1977).

The general assembly intended subsection (1) to authorize only one sentence reduction by the court, after its receipt of the diagnostic report filed by department of corrections upon the defendant's placement there. People v. Belgard, 58 P.3d 1077 (Colo. App. 2002).

More than one sentence reduction is not permitted by this section read in conjunction with Crim. P. 35. Although multiple sentence reductions are permitted under Crim. P. 35 if the sentence is reduced to a term within statutory limits, more than one sentence reduction under this section would be outside the statutory limits. People v. Belgard, 58 P.3d 1077 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where a person is initially sentenced pursuant to this section to a term of incarceration greater than the maximum in the presumptive range as the result of the conviction of such person of a crime of violence, such sentence may nonetheless be modified below the maximum presumptive terms if the court finds that “unusual and extenuating circumstances” justify such modification. People v. Beyer, 793 P.2d 644 (Colo. App. 1990) (decided under prior law).

The defendant is convicted of “separate” crimes when guilt for each crime is established by different evidence. In such case, the court must impose consecutive, rather than concurrent, sentences. People v. Hahn, 813 P.2d 782 (Colo. App. 1991).

When each crime is a separate crime of violence, this section requires the court to impose consecutive sentences for each offense. People v. Trujillo, 114 P.3d 27 (Colo. App. 2004).

In addition to consecutive sentences for separate crimes of violence, the court, pursuant to subsection (7), is required to impose an additional five-year sentence for each crime of violence involving the use of a semiautomatic assault weapon. People v. Trujillo, 114 P.3d 27 (Colo. App. 2004).

Trial court is required to impose consecutive sentences for defendant's convictions of first and second degree assault where convictions do not merge and the evidence supporting the respective convictions was not identical. People v. Martinez, 1 P.3d 192 (Colo. App. 1999).

When determining whether to sentence two crimes of violence consecutively or concurrently in relation to § 18-4-108, the determining factor is whether the evidence supporting the convictions is identical. If the evidence supporting the convictions is not identical, the sentences are consecutive. People v. Jurado, 30 P.3d 769 (Colo. App. 2001).

Imposition of consecutive sentences proper when defendant shot multiple victims in one incident since each separate shot warranted separate counts of attempted first degree extreme indifference murder and defendant was convicted of two counts of attempted first degree extreme indifference murder. People v. Ellis, 30 P.3d 774 (Colo. App. 2001).

Imposition of consecutive sentences improper. The trial court erred in imposing consecutive rather than concurrent sentences when jury may have relied upon the same evidence to convict defendant on each charge. People v. Page, 907 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1995), overruled in People v. Muckle, 107 P.3d 380 (Colo. 2005).

When a defendant is convicted of two or more crimes of violence arising out of the same incident, the court must sentence the defendant to consecutive sentences. People v. Hogan, 114 P.3d 42 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section does not require consecutive sentences unless the defendant is convicted of two separate crimes of violence, charged and proven as separate counts. The court was not required to impose consecutive sentences when one of the crimes of violence was proven as a predicate offense for the other. People v. Halstead, 881 P.2d 401 (Colo. App. 1994).

Court not required to impose consecutive sentences under this section when it is unclear whether convictions for four counts of sexual assault on a child occurred during a single incident or multiple incidents. People v. Woellhaf, 87 P.3d 142 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005); People v. Simon, 100 P.3d 487 (Colo. App. 2004).

The imposition of concurrent sentences circumvents the requirement of this section that the sentences run consecutively. People v. Beyer, 793 P.2d 644 (Colo. App. 1990).

Court is not required to impose consecutive sentences under this section if the crimes do not arise out of the same incident. Where there were two different victims in offenses separated both by time and physical location, the crimes did not arise out of the same incident. People v. Smith, 881 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1994).

“Incident” refers to events that are not separated by time or an intervening event. People v. Woellhaf, 87 P.3d 142 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

The evidence tends to show the individual acts of sexual contact occurred over a long period of time, thus the court erred in finding they were part of the same incident and required consecutive sentencing. People v. Bobrik, 87 P.3d 865 (Colo. App. 2003).

Statute only requires imposition of two consecutive sentences. It is within the trial court's discretion to decide whether a defendant convicted of more than two separate crimes of violence should serve more than two of the sentences consecutively. People v. Luu, 813 P.2d 826 (Colo. App. 1991).

When the defendant requests a proportionality review of consecutive sentences imposed under this section, the court is required to review the proportionality of each individual sentence, not the cumulative sentence. The cumulative sentence is not reviewable in the aggregate. Since each sentence represents punishment for a distinct and separate crime, it follows that a separate proportionality review should be completed for each sentence, even though the defendant is required to serve the sentences consecutively. Close v. People, 48 P.3d 528 (Colo. 2002).

Where defendant was convicted of multiple crimes of violence, the court of appeals was required to conduct a proportionality review, upon the defendant's request, of the consecutive sentence imposed for the crimes of violence, even though the statute mandates that the sentences be consecutive. Because the statutory mandate strips the trial court of discretion in sentencing and removes the trial court's ability to assess the proportionality of the sentences imposed, the court of appeals must conduct a separate abbreviated proportionality review. Close v. People, 48 P.3d 528 (Colo. 2002).

Given the requirement that the court give great deference to legislatively mandated sentencing schemes and given the nature of the defendant's crimes and the sentences imposed, the court found no inference of gross disproportionality and upheld defendant's 60-year sentence for aggravated robbery and assault. The 10-year sentence imposed for each count of aggravated robbery did not give rise to an inference of gross disproportionality where aggravated robbery is a per se grave or serious offense. The court found that the crime of assault was grave or serious where the defendant, using a stick, caused bruises and lacerations requiring stitches. The legislatively mandated sentence of five years for each count of assault was also not grossly disproportional to the offense. Close v. People, 48 P.3d 528 (Colo. 2002).

No preliminary hearing is required for a charge under this section. Brown v. District Court, 194 Colo. 45, 569 P.2d 1390 (1977).

Mandatory sentences for violent crimes do not violate separation of powers doctrine; the judiciary is not granted the absolute right to determine punishment in every case. People v. Childs, 199 Colo. 436, 610 P.2d 101 (1980).

Nor equal protection clause. The statute providing mandatory sentences for violent crimes does not violate the equal protection clause by exempting attempted crimes from its enhanced penalties. The general assembly could rationally determine that since an attempt normally involves less severe consequences than are typical of a completed crime, attempts should not be included. People v. Childs, 199 Colo. 436, 610 P.2d 101 (1980).

A sentence imposed beyond the presumptive range for a defendant convicted of both first degree sexual assault with a deadly weapon and a crime of violence does not deny equal protection of law since it cannot be said that the sentencing statutes permit different degrees of punishment for persons in the defendant's situation. People v. Haymaker, 716 P.2d 110 (Colo. 1986).

A rational distinction exists in the sentencing scheme for people convicted of first degree sexual assault with a deadly weapon in contrast to convictions of the same crime without a deadly weapon since the legislature could rationally perceive that use of a deadly weapon during the course of such an assault is more reprehensible and dangerous than commission of such a crime without a deadly weapon. People v. Haymaker, 716 P.2d 110 (Colo. 1986).

Defendant's sentencing in the aggravated range for a crime of violence based on the use of a deadly weapon during the commission of first degree assault does not violate the guarantee of equal protection of the laws. People v. Collins, 730 P.2d 293 (Colo. 1986); People v. Montoya, 736 P.2d 1208 (Colo. 1987).

Mandating sentencing requirement for the crime of violence specified in this section does not deny the defendant his right to equal protection because the sentencing requirement does not permit different degrees of punishment for persons in defendant's situation. People v. Chavez, 730 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1986).

Enhanced crime of violence sentence on conviction for pattern of sexual assault on a child does not violate defendant's due process and equal protection guarantees. Prosecution not required to charge and prove a separate crime of violence count pursuant to subsections (4) and (5) for per se crimes of violence even though the elements of the pattern sentence enhancer do not overlap with the elements of a crime of violence. People v. Brown, 70 P.3d 489 (Colo. App. 2002).

When the crime of violence statute is superimposed on convictions for both aggravated robbery and simple robbery, there are real differences between the two forms of robbery. These differences provide substantial support for the disparate penalty applicable to a crime of violence finding which is superimposed on a conviction for aggravated robbery, and such does not violate equal protection of the laws. People v. Young, 758 P.2d 667 (Colo. 1988).

Since the general assembly could have rationally decided that violent crimes committed as part of the same incident pose a greater threat to society than the same criminal conduct committed separately in different violent criminal episodes and since differing punishments have a reasonable relationship to the prevention of crime, the consecutive sentencing provision of subsection (1)(a) does not violate the constitutional requirements of equal protection of the law. People v. Fuller, 791 P.2d 702 (Colo. 1990).

Convictions for violent crime and underlying offense not double jeopardy. Conviction for "crime of violence" for use of deadly weapon during commission of substantive offenses, in addition to conviction of substantive crimes, did not violate double jeopardy clause because legislature intended to authorize punishment for crime of violence cumulative to punishment for underlying substantive offense. People v. Goodman, 733 P.2d 1204 (Colo. 1987).

Defendant's aggravated sentence did not violate Apprendi principles. Although the sentencing range was beyond the maximum, the enhancement did not require any proof beyond the elements of the charged offenses which were necessarily proved beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Hogan, 114 P.3d 42 (Colo. App. 2004).

Increase in penalty imposed pursuant to § 18-3-202 does not violate equal protection. Mandatory sentencing beyond the presumptive range in § 18-3-202, imposed pursuant to this section, does not violate equal protection even though one of the elements of first degree assault was use of deadly weapon. People v. Montoya, 736 P.2d 1208 (Colo. 1987).

The trial court appropriately increased the maximum presumptive penalty based on § 18-1-105 (9.7)(a) before applying the presumptive penalty provisions applicable to crimes of violence under this section. Thus, this section permits a doubling of the maximum penalty that is already increased under § 18-1-105 (9.7)(a) for certain extraordinary risk crimes. People v. Greymountain, 952 P.2d 829 (Colo. App. 1997).

The legislature's intent was to treat this section not as a sentence-enhancing statute but as a presumptive penalty statute. People v. Terry, 791 P.2d 374 (Colo. 1990).

Imposition of a 25-year sentence for second degree murder committed in the heat of passion was not abuse of discretion, because it is a per se crime of violence under subsection (1) and an extraordinary risk of harm crime pursuant to § 18-1-105 (9.7); thus, the presumptive sentencing range was 10 to 32 years and the trial court was required to sentence defendant to a term of incarceration of at least the midpoint in the presumptive range, but not more than twice the maximum presumptive term for the offense. People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2001).

Court did not erroneously permit the jury to consider the crime of violence count after it found the defendant guilty of second degree murder committed in the heat of passion. Second degree murder is a per se crime of violence, even if committed in the heat of passion and defendant was properly sentenced according to this section. People v. Roadcap, 78 P.3d 1108 (Colo. App. 2003).

Stipulation by attorney that a guilty verdict to aggravated robbery also established that the defendant was guilty of a crime of violence did not violate the defendant's rights in that the jury returned a verdict form which showed it found the defendant placed another in fear by use of a deadly weapon and in that defendant failed to show how a special interrogatory could have produced a different result. People v. McMullen, 738 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1986).

Violent crime sentencing for patterned enhanced counts of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust only apply to offenses committed on or after July 1, 1998. People v. Bobrik, 87 P.3d 865 (Colo. App. 2003).

Although a conviction for sexual assault on a child as part of a pattern of abuse requires violent crime sentencing, that fact does not make it a violent crime as defined in this section. People ex rel. A.B.-B., 215 P.3d 1205 (Colo. App. 2009).

Where the defendant is not convicted of a crime of violence, the enhanced sentencing provisions of this section are not applicable. People v. Van Patrick, 789 P.2d 199 (Colo. App. 1989).

When the statute defining an offense does not prescribe crime of violence sentencing for the offense, the prosecution must meet the pleading and proof requirements specified in subsections (4) and (5) in order for the defendant to be sentenced for a crime of violence. If the statute defining the offense specifically requires crime of violence sentencing, the prosecution need not allege and prove the elements of a crime of violence, as described in this section. People v. Banks, 9 P.3d 1125 (Colo. 2000).

Where the defendant is sentenced for a crime of violence and the prosecution has not been required to comply with subsections (4) and (5) due to mandatory sentencing provisions in the statute describing the crime, the defendant is not subject to the extraordinary risk sentencing provisions of § 18-1-105 (9.7). Extraordinary risk sentencing applies only where the defendant is convicted of a crime of violence, as described in this section. This means that the prosecution must have followed the requirements of subsections (4) and (5). People v. Banks, 9 P.3d 1125 (Colo. 2000).

When defendant is convicted of a crime of violence under this section for a crime that also constitutes an extraordinary risk crime, the presumptive range is first increased pursuant to § 18-1-105 (9.7)(a) before it is doubled pursuant to this section. People v. Mata, 56 P.3d 1169 (Colo. App. 2002).

Separate sentence improper. A separate sentence imposed for the crime of violence is improper and must be vacated. People v. Espinoza, 669 P.2d 142 (Colo. App. 1983), aff'd, 712 P.2d 476 (Colo. 1985).

This statute is not ambiguous. It clearly mandates that a defendant's sentences, whatever length they may be, must run consecutively to each other. People v. Lanari, 926 P.2d 116 (Colo. App. 1996).

Sentencing is discretionary act that is not subject to scientific precision. People v. Warren, 200 Colo. 110, 612 P.2d 1124 (1980).

Public interest in safety and deterrence is proper focal point of sentencing decision in crimes of grave personal violence or abuse, particularly when committed by a repeat-offender. People v. Warren, 200 Colo. 110, 612 P.2d 1124 (1980).

Extended sentence must be clearly justified. When a sentence of an extended duration is imposed, the record must establish a clear justification in fact for the trial judge's action. People v. Warren, 200 Colo. 110, 612 P.2d 1124 (1980).

Robbery as used in violent offender statute includes both simple robbery (§ 18-4-301) and aggravated robbery (§ 18-4-302). People v. Eggers, 196 Colo. 349, 585 P.2d 284 (1978).

Second degree murder is a per se crime of violence, even if committed in the heat of passion. People v. Darbe, 62 P.3d 1006 (Colo. App. 2002).

Criminally negligent homicide is not a per se crime of violence and merely alleging use of a deadly weapon as part of the factual basis does not satisfy the requirement of the crime of violence statute. People v. Vickers, 168 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2007).

Discretionary sentencing of juveniles not affected. The general assembly did not automatically intend to repeal the special provision for discretionary sentencing of juveniles, § 19-1-104, by the enactment of this section. People v. District Court, 196 Colo. 249, 585 P.2d 913 (1978).

Accessory may be punished as principal. An accessory to a crime of violence as defined by subsection (2) may be charged, tried and punished as a principal. People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981).

Requirement of specific findings by jury. An instruction by the trial court regarding the elements of a crime of violence, combined with a general verdict form does not meet the requirement of this section. Where the statute requires the jury to make specific findings, the court must submit special interrogatories, which elicit the required findings. People v. Grable, 43 Colo. App. 518, 611 P.2d 588 (1979).

The special finding serves as the basis for the mandatory sentence which must be imposed on the defendant's conviction for the separately charged offense, and does not constitute a separate felony conviction. People v. Russo, 713 P.2d 356 (Colo. 1986).

Focus of subsection (5) is on whether the instructions and verdict forms adequately inform the jury that it must find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the underlying substantive offense and used, or possessed and threatened to use, a deadly weapon during the commission or attempted commission of the offense. People v. Griffin, 867 P.2d 27 (Colo. App. 1993).

Requirement of specific findings not applied retroactively. Where defense counsel did not object to the verdict forms and there is no showing of harm from the form of the verdict, the requirement that the court submit special interrogatories to the jury will not be applied retroactively. People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981).

The holding of People v. Swanson that the special interrogatory requirement would not be applied retroactively is extended to the area of postconviction relief. Stroup v. People, 656 P.2d 680 (Colo. 1982).

Unusual and extenuating circumstances warranting sentence reduction found where record showed evidence of defendant's abusive family situation and mental problems, and where defendant had no previous convictions, had been a model prisoner, and with regular medical drug treatment, could lead a normal life. People v. Byrum, 784 P.2d 817 (Colo. App. 1989).

Court not required to hold hearing to modify a sentence. This section does not mandate a specific review procedure. People v. Olivas, 911 P.2d 675 (Colo. App. 1995).

It was not improper for trial court to consider during sentencing that violent crimes have a greater public impact in small rural communities than in larger urban ones since a sentencing court should always consider the interests of the public involved and this factor was not decisive of the court's decision. People v. Palmer, 888 P.2d 348 (Colo. App. 1994).

There are no conditions sufficient for a finding of aggravating circumstances in a criminal sentencing where evidence only shows each element of the crime charged. People v. Janke, 720 P.2d 613 (Colo. App. 1986).

When enhancement of sentence is plain error. Where a defendant is convicted of first-degree murder, and the mittimus reads that he was found to have committed a "crime of violence", but the jury was not instructed on the elements of crime of violence nor given a separate verdict form or interrogatory as required, enhancement of sentence for having committed a crime of violence would be plain error. The cause must be remanded for correction of the mittimus to show conviction of first-degree murder only, and for imposition of sentence on that crime only. People v. Thrower, 670 P.2d 1251 (Colo. App. 1983).

When the trial court properly instructs the jury regarding the required, specific finding of fact under the crime-of-violence statute, but the verdict form fails to contain the mandatory language, the jury's resulting finding is inconclusive and inconsistent, and this incongruity constitutes trial error. Because the verdict form misstated an element of the crime-of-violence offense and there was contested evidence at trial, there is a reasonable possibility that the error in the verdict form contributed to the defendant's sentence. Lehnert v. People, 244 P.3d 1180 (Colo. 2010).

Penalty for first degree assault committed in "heat of passion". Where a defendant charged with first degree assault can establish that he acted in the "heat of passion", he cannot constitutionally receive a greater penalty than he would have received had he been convicted of manslaughter. People v. Grable, 43 Colo. App. 518, 611 P.2d 588 (1979); People v. Harris, 797 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1990).

Defendant waived notice pursuant to subsection (4) when defendant tendered an instruction for a lesser included offense which was a crime of violence. People v. Williams, 23 P.3d 1229 (Colo. App. 2000).

Verdict of not guilty of "crime of violence" not inconsistent with guilty verdicts on other charges. Guilty verdicts on the charges of first-degree sexual assault, sexual assault on a child and aggravated incest are not inconsistent as a matter of law with a jury finding of not guilty on a charge of "crime of violence". People v. Fierro, 199 Colo. 215, 606 P.2d 1291 (1980).

Burden of proof. Like charges under the habitual criminal statute, the people bear the burden of proving the material elements of violent crime beyond a reasonable doubt and a jury should be so instructed. People v. Russo, 677 P.2d 386 (Colo. App. 1983), rev'd on other grounds, 713 P.2d 356 (Colo. 1986).

Mere threatened use of deadly weapon is not sufficient evidence for successful prosecution for violent crime. People v. Janke, 720 P.2d 613 (Colo. App. 1986).

The term "participant", for purposes of subsection (2)(a)(I), refers to a person who culpably engages in the offensive conduct and not to the victim of the criminal act. People v. Chavez, 730 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1986).

Crime of violence may be committed by use of a deadly weapon during the commission of a second-degree assault, and by causing serious bodily injury to another other than the defendant or another participant during the commission or attempted commission of second-degree assault or during the immediate flight therefrom. People v. Chavez, 730 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1986).

Sufficient finding by jury regarding use of deadly weapon to support conviction under violent crime statute. People v. Powell, 716 P.2d 1096 (Colo. 1986).

Conviction for conspiracy to commit aggravated robbery, as defined in § 18-4-302 (1)(b), necessarily requires crime of violence sentencing. People v. Terry, 961 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 977 P.2d 145 (Colo. 1999).

Fifteen- to 20-year sentence was not excessive for aggravated robbery and a crime of violence. People v. Colasanti, 626 P.2d 1136 (Colo. 1981).

Under § 18-2-201 (4.5), conspiracy to commit a per se crime of violence is itself a crime of violence to which the sentence enhancing provisions of this section apply. Terry v. People, 977 P.2d 145 (Colo. 1999).

Defendant convicted of conspiracy cannot be sentenced pursuant to this section because conspiracy is not specifically included among offenses statutorily defined as crimes of violence. People v. Flores, 757 P.2d 159 (Colo. App. 1988) (decided prior to the enactment of subsection (4.5)).

Attempted first degree murder is not a statutory crime of violence, therefore, without either a guilty verdict on a separate crime of violence pursuant to this section or a finding of statutory aggravating factors pursuant to §§ 18-1-105 (6), 18-1-105 (7), and 18-1-105 (9), the imposition of an aggravated range sentence for the class 2 felony of attempted first degree murder was error. People v. Webster, 987 P.2d 836 (Colo. App. 1998).

Using section as a basis for sentencing a defendant convicted of a crime not enumerated in section is error. People v. Hare, 782 P.2d 831 (Colo. App. 1989), aff'd on other grounds, 800 P.2d 1317 (Colo. 1990).

Where both the violent crimes statute and the habitual criminal statute apply, the sentencing provisions of both statutes apply and a judge must impose the defendant's sentences to run consecutively. People v. Pena, 794 P.2d 1070 (Colo. App. 1990).

If different evidence is required to establish guilt of each of the multiple offenses, they are "separate" crimes for purposes of this statute. People v. Wilson, 841 P.2d 337 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where information charged only one crime of violence and did not include a separate crime of violence count for each of the three victims but did inform the defendant that enhanced sentencing was sought and alleged sufficient facts for defendant to prepare an adequate defense, the information was sufficient to support the imposition of three consecutive life sentences. People v. Pena, 794 P.2d 1070 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where defendant did not challenge the sufficiency of the information, jury completed only one verdict form finding that defendant did use or possess and threaten the use of a deadly weapon during the commission of the crime of criminal attempt first degree murder or criminal attempt second degree murder, and only one crime of violence count was plead and proven but defendant was convicted of two counts of criminal attempt to commit first degree extreme indifference murder, defendant waived right to challenge the sufficiency of the language in the information and was not entitled to resentencing. People v. Ellis, 30 P.3d 774 (Colo. App. 2001).

The term "incident" in subsection (1) means an occurrence taking place as part of a larger continuum or happening or related group of happenings subordinate to a main plot, including a series of acts committed in close proximity or a chain of events forming a part of a schematic whole. People v. Beyer, 768 P.2d 746 (Colo. App. 1988); People v. Trujillo, 860 P.2d 542 (Colo. App. 1992).

Remand for resentencing was required where the trial court, which imposed 20-year consecutive sentences for each robbery, failed to determine whether two aggravated robberies were separate incidents. People v. Trujillo, 860 P.2d 542 (Colo. App. 1992).

Phrase "at least" in § 16-11-309 (1) does not require the court to set the minimum length of the indeterminate sentence at the midpoint of the presumptive range. The court may impose a minimum length to the indeterminate sentence that is greater than the midpoint of the presumptive range. People v. Becker, 55 P.3d 246 (Colo. App. 2002).

Sections 16-11-309 (1)(c) and 18-1-105 (9)(e.5) conflict irreconcilably with § 16-13-804 (1)(b). The phrase "up to the defendant's natural life" in §§ 16-11-309 (1)(c) and 18-1-105 (9)(e.5) conflicts with the phrase "a maximum of the sex offender's natural life" in § 16-13-804 (1)(b). Statutory construction calls for § 16-13-804 (1)(b) to prevail, requiring the court to set the maximum length of the indeterminate sentence at the defendant's natural life. People v. Becker, 55 P.3d 246 (Colo. App. 2002).

Whether inmate is convicted of any crime enumerated in subsection (2) of this section is determinative as to how inmate is classified for eligibility for referral to community corrections pursuant to § 17-27-106 (4). McKinney v. Kautzky, 801 P.2d 508 (Colo. 1990).

Jury finding that burglary and sexual assault were crimes of violence made this section applicable and court imposition of mandatory sentence correct. People v. Fishback, 829 P.2d 489 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd, 851 P.2d 884 (Colo. 1993).

Definition of "crime of violence" in § 16-11-309 applies in determining when a convicted person is eligible for parole under § 17-22.5-303.3 (1). Busch v. Gunter, 870 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1993).

Crimes of violence include attempts of the crimes listed in subsection (2)(a)(II). People v. Laurson, 70 P.3d 564 (Colo. App. 2002).

Even though defendant was not charged with a crime of violence under this section, the trial court found sufficient aggravating factors to support an enhanced, 48-year sentence for second degree kidnapping. People v. Smith, 881 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1994).

In bringing a motion for reduction of sentence under this section, defendant is subject to the procedures and time frames set forth in rule 35 of the criminal rules of procedure. This section alone merely authorizes a court to reduce a mandatory sentence imposed for a crime of violence, but a motion for reduction of sentence is not separately authorized in statute and is therefore subject to the provisions of rule 35. People v. Williams, 908 P.2d 1157 (Colo. App. 1995).

Applied in People v. Smith, 195 Colo. 404, 579 P.2d 1129 (1978); People v. Warren, 196 Colo. 75, 582 P.2d 663 (1978); People v. Girard, 196 Colo. 68, 582 P.2d 666 (1978); People v. Vigil, 43 Colo. App. 121, 602 P.2d 884 (1979); People v. Swain, 43 Colo. App. 343, 607 P.2d 396 (1979); People in Interest of R.R., 43 Colo. App. 208, 607 P.2d 1013 (1979); People v. Martinez, 43 Colo. App. 419, 608 P.2d 359 (1979); Watson v. District Court, 199 Colo. 76, 604 P.2d 1165 (1980); People v. Hardin, 199 Colo. 229, 607 P.2d 1291 (1980); People v. Cabral, 629 P.2d 575 (Colo. 1981); People v. Lichtenstein, 630 P.2d 70 (Colo. 1981); People v. Francis, 630 P.2d 82 (Colo. 1981); People v. Valencia, 630 P.2d 85 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jones, 631 P.2d 1132 (Colo. 1981); People v. Flowers, 644 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1982); People v. Gallegos, 644 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1982); People v. Constant, 645 P.2d 843 (Colo. 1982); People v. Garries, 645 P.2d 1306 (Colo. 1982); People v. Bookman, 646 P.2d 924 (Colo. 1982); People v. Bueno, 646 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1982); People v. Hogan, 649 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1982); People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982); People v. Ferguson, 653 P.2d 725 (Colo. 1982); Watkins v. People, 655 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1982); People v. Dillion, 655 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1982); People v. Cooper, 662 P.2d 478 (Colo. 1983); People v. District Court, 663 P.2d 616 (Colo. 1983); People v. Smith, 709 P.2d 4 (Colo. App. 1985); Rocha v. People, 713 P.2d 350 (Colo. 1986); People v. Sanders, 717 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1986); People v. Wiegard, 743 P.2d 977 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Zapata, 759 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd on other grounds, 779 P.2d

1307 (Colo. 1989); People v. Guevara, 775 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 786 P.2d 411 (Colo. 1989); People v. O'Shaughnessy, ___ P.3d

___ (Colo. App. 2010), aff'd, 2012 CO 9, 269 P.3d 1233.

18-1.3-407. Sentences - youthful offenders - legislative declaration - powers and duties of district court - authorization for youthful offender system - powers and duties of department of corrections - definitions. (1) (a) It is the intent of the general assembly that the youthful offender system established pursuant to this section shall benefit the state by providing as a sentencing option for certain youthful offenders a controlled and regimented environment that affirms dignity of self and others, promotes the value of work and self-discipline, and develops useful skills and abilities through enriched programming.

(b) It is the further intent of the general assembly in enacting this section that female and male offenders who are eligible for sentencing to the youthful offender system pursuant to section 18-1.3-407.5 or section 19-2-517 (6) or 19-2-518 (1) (d) (II), C.R.S., receive equitable treatment in sentencing, particularly in regard to the option of being sentenced to the youthful offender system. Accordingly, it is the general assembly's intent that necessary measures be taken by the department of corrections to establish separate housing for female and male offenders who are sentenced to the youthful offender system without compromising the equitable treatment of either.

(c) It is the intent of the general assembly that offenders sentenced to the youthful offender system be housed and serve their sentences in a facility specifically designed and programmed for the youthful offender system and that offenders so sentenced be housed separate from and not brought into daily physical contact with inmates sentenced to the department of corrections who have not been sentenced to the youthful offender system, except as specifically provided under subsection (5) of this section. The facility that houses offenders sentenced to the youthful offender system shall be limited to two hundred fifty-six beds.

(d) It is the intent of the general assembly that offenders sentenced to the youthful offender system be sentenced as adults and be subject to all laws and department of corrections rules, regulations, and standards pertaining to adult inmates, except as otherwise provided in this section.

(2) (a) (I) A juvenile may be sentenced to the youthful offender system created pursuant to this section under the circumstances set forth in section 19-2-517 (6) (a) (II) or 19-2-518 (1) (d) (II), C.R.S. A young adult offender may be sentenced to the youthful offender system created pursuant to this section under the circumstances set forth in section 18-1.3-407.5. In order to sentence a juvenile or young adult offender to the youthful offender system, the court shall first impose upon such person a sentence to the department of corrections in accordance with section 18-1.3-401. The court shall thereafter suspend such sentence conditioned on completion of a sentence to the youthful offender system, including a period of community supervision. The court shall impose any such sentence to the youthful offender system for a determinate period of not fewer than two years nor more than six years; except that a juvenile or young adult offender convicted of a class 2 felony may be sentenced for a determinate period of up to seven years. In imposing such sentence, the court shall grant authority to the department of corrections to place the offender under a period of community supervision for a period of not fewer than six months and up to twelve months any time after the date on which the offender has twelve months remaining to complete the determinate sentence. The court may award an offender sentenced to the youthful offender system credit for presentence confinement; except that such credit shall not reduce the offender's actual time served in the youthful offender system to fewer than two years. The court shall have a presentence investigation conducted before sentencing a juvenile or young adult offender pursuant to this section. Upon the request of either the prosecution or the defense, the presentence report shall include a determination by the warden of the youthful offender system whether the offender is acceptable for sentencing to the youthful offender system. When making a determination, the warden shall consider the nature and circumstances of the crime; the age, circumstances, and criminal history of the offender; the available bed space in the youthful offender system; and any other appropriate considerations.

(II) Upon the successful completion of the determinate sentence to the youthful offender system, including the mandatory period of community supervision, the suspended sentence pursuant to section 18-1.3-401 shall have been completed. Whenever an offender is returned to the district court for revocation pursuant to subsection (5) of this section, the court shall impose the original sentence following the revocation of the sentence to the youthful offender system, except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of subsection (5) of this section.

(III) For the purposes of this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(A) "Juvenile" means a person who is under eighteen years of age when the crime is committed and under twenty-one years of age at the time of sentencing pursuant to this section.

(B) "Young adult offender" means a person who is at least eighteen years of age but under twenty years of age when the crime is committed and under twenty-one years of age at the time of sentencing pursuant to this section.

(C) "Youthful offender" or "offender" means a juvenile or a young adult offender who has been sentenced to the youthful offender system or who is eligible for sentencing to the youthful offender system.

(IV) As used in this section, "community supervision" shall not be construed to mean a community corrections program, as defined in section 17-27-102, C.R.S.

(a.5) During any period of incarceration under the youthful offender system, privileges including, but not limited to, televisions, radios, and entertainment systems, shall not be available for an offender unless such privileges have been earned under a merit system.

(b) Article 22.5 of title 17, C.R.S., concerning time credits, shall not apply to any person sentenced to the youthful offender system; except that an offender whose sentence to the youthful offender system is revoked pursuant to subsection (5) of this section may receive one day of credit against the suspended sentence imposed by the court following revocation of the sentence to the youthful offender system for each day the offender served in the youthful offender system, excluding any period of time during which the offender was under community supervision.

(2.1) (a) As originally enacted, this section applied only to offenses committed by juveniles on or after September 13, 1993. For purposes of extending the availability of sentencing options, a juvenile who meets the criteria set forth in section 19-2-517 (6) (a) (II), C.R.S., may be sentenced to the youthful offender system pursuant to this section, under the following circumstances:

(I) The juvenile is sentenced on or after June 3, 1994, for an offense committed prior to, on, or after September 13, 1993;

(II) The juvenile committed an offense prior to September 13, 1993, and was sentenced for the offense on or after September 13, 1993, but prior to June 3, 1994. Such a juvenile may only be resentenced to the youthful offender system if a court, in its discretion, so orders in response to a motion filed in accordance with rule 35 of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure.

(b) A juvenile who committed an offense prior to September 13, 1993, and who was sentenced prior to September 13, 1993, shall not be eligible to be sentenced to the youthful offender system.

(c) A juvenile described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2.1) may be sentenced pursuant to this section only if the juvenile meets the age requirement set forth in subparagraph (III) of paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section.

(3) The department of corrections shall develop and implement a youthful offender system for offenders sentenced in accordance with subsection (2) of this section. The youthful offender system shall be under the direction and control of the executive director of the department of corrections. The youthful offender system shall be based on the following principles:

(a) The system should provide for teaching offenders self-discipline by providing clear consequences for inappropriate behavior;

(b) The system should include a daily regimen that involves offenders in physical training, self-discipline exercises, educational and work programs, and meaningful interaction, with a component for a tiered system for swift and strict discipline for noncompliance;

(c) The system should use staff models and mentors to promote within an offender the development of socially accepted attitudes and behaviors;

(d) The system should provide offenders with instruction on problem-solving skills and should incorporate methods to reinforce the use of cognitive behavior strategies that change offenders' orientation toward criminal thinking and behavior;

(e) The system should promote among offenders the creation and development of new group cultures which result in a transition to prosocial behavior; and

(f) The system should provide offenders the opportunity to gradually reenter the community while demonstrating the capacity for self-discipline and the attainment of respect for the community.

